QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

REJOINDER OF MR. B. G. HORNIMAN TO THE CHARGES MADE AGAINST HIM BY THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

1572. Mr. Chaman Lall: (a) Has Government's attention been drawn to Mr. B. G. Horniman's rejoinder to the charges officially made against him?

(b) Do Government still insist on refusing to recommend that a passport be granted to Mr. B. G. Horniman?

(c) Are Government prepared to withdraw the charges or insinuations made against Mr. B. G. Horniman in view of his rejoinder as published in the Bombay Chronicle, dated 21st May, 1924?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: (a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) and (c). The Government of India do not propose to take any action with regard to the article referred to.

Mr. Chaman Lall: Are the Government aware that very serious charges have been made by Mr. Horniman against the official who defamed him? Is it not necessary for Government to justify their conduct?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: No, Sir.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : Are Government prepared to prosecute Mr. Horniman for libel ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : No, Sir.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : Why not ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : Because I am not aware that there is a case against him.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Is the Government's silence to be construed as consent ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : No, Sir.

Mr. Chaman Lal: Are the Government aware that a specific charge was levelled against Mr. Horniman, that he was guilty of causing a strike and damage to the machinery, and Mr. Horniman has replied to that charge saying it was absolutely false ?

Further, are Government aware that a charge was levelled against Mr. Horniman that his violent writings were the cause of the disturbances in Gujerat and in Bombay, and that he has given a categorical denial to that charge ?

Do Government intend to take any action in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : No, Sir.

PRICE OF SALT IN THE PUNJAB.

1573. Mr. Chaman Lall: (a) Are Government aware that exorbitant rates are being charged for salt to the average consumer in the Punjab out of all proportion to its actual price ?

(b) Are Government prepared to take immediate steps to bring in an Anti-Profiteering Bill in order to protect the consumer?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The answer to both parts of the question is in the negative.

SIMLA IMPERIAL CIRCLE, PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

1574. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state under what orders and circumstances the Simla Imperial Circle, P. W. D., was created and what is the annual cost of the maintenance of establishment of the Circle ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the total strength of the Circle with the salaries of executive and ministerial staff ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state for what period the Circle has been sanctioned and whether it is intended to extend the life of the Circle on the expiry of the present sanction ?

(d) Are the Government prepared to consider the making over of the Circle to the P. W. D., Delhi, with a view to effecting economy and putting the whole Circle in charge of an Executive Engineer and the sub-divisions under Sub-Divisional Officers ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state under what circumstances Mr. Brebner holds a collateral charge of the duties of Superintending Engineer, Imperial Circle and Under Secretary to the Government of India, P. W. D. ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) The Simla Imperial Circle was created originally in April 1919, under the orders of the Government of India to provide for the superintendence of the construction and maintenance of properties in Simla appertaining to the Central Government, and cognate matters. The continuance of the Circle has since been sanctioned by the Secretary of State. The estimated cost of the maintenance of its establishment during the current financial year is shown in the statement laid on the table.

(b) The statement referred to in (a) above gives the information required.

(c) The existing sanction to the Circle expires on the 31st March 1925. No decision has yet been reached as to whether or not an extension will be necessary.

(d) The Honourable Member's suggestion will be considered.

(e) With the abolition of the posts of Secretary and Under Secretary to the Government of India in the Public Works Department it was found convenient to entrust to the Superintending Engineer certain of the technical and estate work which formerly devolved upon those appointments.

Statement referred to in reply to question bearing Legislative Assembly Register No. 2401.

Mr. K. Ahmed: How long has Mr. Brebner been holding this dubious position of diabolical character, Sir ? May I ask, for how long Mr. Brebner has been holding this dual position ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee: About a year, I think.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are Government aware that it will be contrary to the principle of service rules and public policy to appoint the same officer, who is supposed to be the higher officer, as Under Secretary and to allow him to act as Superintending Engineer, a subordinate officer, just as if my Honourable friend Mr. Chatterjee becomes the Secretary of his Department; and at the same time acts as Member in charge of it ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I do not think there is any analogy between the two cases mentioned by my Honourable friend.

QUALIFICATIONS OF MR. CHINTAMANI PANT, EXECUTIVE ENGINEER, SIMLA IMPERIAL WEST DIVISION.

1575. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : What are the special qualifications of Mr. Chintamani Pant for his being appointed as Executive Engineer of the Imperial West Division ? Is it a fact that he was a junior S. D. O. in 1921 ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Mr. Chintamani Pant was a Sub-Divisional Officer in one of the Imperial Divisions in Simla in 1921, but reverted subsequently to his substantive appointment in the United Provinces Engineering Service. When the post of Executive Engineer, Simla Imperial West Division, fell vacant, Mr. Chintamani Pant, with his previous experience of Simla, was selected as a suitable officer to fill it.

PROMOTION OF LALA MITHAN LAL TO BE A SUB-DIVISIONAL OFFICER.

1576. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Are the Government aware that L. Mithan Lal was a very junior overseer before he was promoted to be a S. D. O. ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Mr. Mithan Lal is a passed Sub-Engineer of the Roorkee College, and was considered the officer best qualified for promotion when the vacancy in which he was promoted occurred.

CLASS I OFFICERS OF THE SURVEY OF INDIA.

1577. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that the Class I officers of the Survey of India do not receive any special training for this work before they are attached to the department in India ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Class I officers of the Survey of India do practically the same work which is done by the Class II officers ?

(c) Is it a fact that the average of pay of the Class I and Class II officers of the Survey of India is Rs. 1,330 and Rs. 476, respectively ?

(d) Do the Government propose to reduce the number of Class I officers and increase that of Class II in order to secure economy ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : (a) No. All directly appointed Class I officers have a considerable survey training before joining the Survey of India, in addition to a sound general and military education, which is a most important foundation for the proper direction and control of survey work.

(b) No. They discharge more responsible administrative duties.

(c) The more correct figures are 1132 and 499, respectively.

(d) The matter is under consideration.

PAYMENT OF COMPENSATION TO THE WIDOW OF KANIHYA LALL CHOUBEY, LATE GUARD OF THE OUDH AND ROHILKHAND RAILWAY.

1578. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to state if any compensation was awarded to the widow of one Kanihya Lall Choubey, a guard on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway, who lost his life in the performance of his duty at the Bechupur collision ? If not, why not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Yes, the Agent, Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway on the 22nd of May 1924 sanctioned the grant of 12 months' emoluments of the deceased at the time of his death to the widow of the late Kanihya Lall Choubey, Guard, Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway.

TRAVELLING ALLOWANCE OF MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

1579. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub: (a) Are the Government aware that the members of the Provincial Legislative Councils still receive their travelling allowance at the rate of double first class fare, while the travelling allowance of the Members of the Legislative Assembly has been reduced to $1\frac{3}{5}$ths first class fare ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state what is the reason of this difference ?

Sir Henry Moncrieff Smith: The circumstances in which the travelling allowance admissible to Members of the Legislative Assembly was reduced to $1\frac{3}{5}$ fares were explained in my reply to Dr. Gour's question No. 167 on the 5th February last. The Government of India have no information regarding the reasons for the alleged maintenance of the double fare rate for Members of Provincial Legislative Councils.

Pandit Shamlal Nehru : Are the Government aware that in the United Provinces the Government have reduced the fare from double first class to $1\frac{3}{5}$ths now ?

Sir Henry Moncrieff Smith : I am not aware of that.

WAGON REPAIRS IN RAILWAY WORKSHOPS.

1580. Mr. W. S. J. Willson : With reference to the answer given to unstarred question No. 206 on 17th March 1924, will the Government be pleased to state the number of wagons in railway workshops on 31st March 1924 awaiting repairs and the number awaiting repairs a year ago ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : As a statistical figure of wagons awaiting repairs on any particular day is of little practical value this figure is no longer being maintained on railways, but monthly figures showing the average number of unserviceable wagons on the line daily and the percentage which this bears to the total number of wagons on the line are maintained instead.

The figures for Class I Railways for March 1924 as compared with October 1923, when these figures were first compiled, are shown in the statement which I place on the table.

Statement showing:—(i) Average number of unserviceable wagons on the line daily, and (ii) Percentage unserviceable to the average number of wagons on the line daily, on Class I Railways for the months October 1923 and March 1924.

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

1531. *Mr. Chaman Lall: (a) Has a note making serious allegations against the administration of the B., B. and C. I. Railway published in the Voice of India, dated 25th March 1924, been brought to the notice of the Government?

(b) What steps do Government intend to take in the matter?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: (a) Government have seen the note.

(b) The matter is one between the Agent and his staff in which Government do not interfere. Moreover, one of the complainants has filed a suit against the Railway and the case is at present sub judice.

SCOPE OF INQUIRY OF THE TAXATION INQUIRY COMMITTEE.

1532. *Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar: With reference to the Resolution No. 1412-F., published in the Gazette of India Extraordinary dated 26th May 1924:

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state why the intention of the Government to institute an inquiry into the scientific system of Indian taxation was not announced in the Legislative Assembly for an expression of its views thereon?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Taxation Inquiry Committee appointed under the said Resolution will be competent to base its report on the total abandonment of liquor and opium revenue by the Imperial as well as Local Governments?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state why the services of Sir Percy Thomson, K.B.E., Deputy Chairman of the Board of Inland Revenue in England are necessary?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state why the Committee is prevented from reporting on the systems of settlement regarding land revenue?

(e) Is it competent for the Committee to inquire into the incidence of taxation both direct and indirect as also the incidence of income per head?

(f) Is the Committee authorised to have co-opted members when they conduct inquiry in each province?

(g) What is the approximate expenditure that is expected to be incurred over this Committee?

(h) Why is a wider economic inquiry reserved for another Committee?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett: It would appear that the Honourable Member was unaware of the proceedings of the Standing Finance Committee on the 21st February 1924 or of the debate in the Council of State on the 4th February 1924. I do not think I can add anything to what was there stated and what is stated in the Resolution.

Baba Ujagar Singh Bedi : Will Government be pleased to explain the fundamental policy on which the land settlement is based, and the land revenue demanded or claimed. Is it one throughout British India, or different in different Provinces ? What is the maximum demand under this policy with regard to land revenue, and what is now in force, or being realised in the different Provinces ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I think the Honourable Member who will have to supply that information will require notice of that question.

Baba Ujagar Singh Bedi : Will the Honourable Member take it as notice and supply the information, when available ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I cannot answer on behalf of the Honourable Member in charge.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : Perhaps the Honourable Member will answer when the debate on the subject comes on.

EDUCATION OF AGRICULTURISTS IN THE USE OF SULPHATE OF AMMONIA AS MANURE.

1583. *Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar : With reference to the observations of the Tariff Board in their Report on sulphur in paragraph 6 of their Report :

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps have been taken by the Imperial and Provincial Governments to educate the agriculturists in the use of " sulphate of ammonia."

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether any and, if so, how many demonstrative farms have been opened where the use of sulphate of ammonia was demonstrated to the agriculturists ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : (a) The manurial value of sulphate of ammonia has been tested in every province in India. In sulphate of ammonia the cost per unit of nitrogen is considerably higher than it is in other available manures such as oil-cakes and cattle manures. It does not, therefore, ordinarily pay to use sulphate of ammonia except in tracts such as the cane-growing areas in the Bombay Presidency where cultivation is intense, and where other manures are not obtainable in sufficient quantities.

(b) The manurial value of sulphate of ammonia has been tested on almost every experimental farm in India ; but for the reasons given above its use has been demonstrated only on a small number of farms such as those in the cane areas in the Bombay Presidency.

EXTRACTION OF SULPHUR FROM COKING COAL IN ASSAM.

1584. *Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar : With reference to Dr. Pascoe's remarks in paragraph 9 of his letter to the Tariff Board, will the Government be pleased to state whether any and, if so, what steps have been taken to discover a method of removing sulphur from coking coal in Assam ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Recent experiments in the Geological Survey of India have proved that sulphur in the coal of Assam is, as has always been suspected, not present in the form of pyrites, but is organically united to the coal substance. All attempts, therefore, to remove it by washing or by froth flotation have failed. The question of removal of sulphur in coal is not limited to the Assam occurrences, but is of world-wide importance. The Director of the Geological Survey of India is keeping a watch upon all published attempts to solve this problem. I may add that the suitability of Assam coal for smelting purposes in the ironfields of Bihar and Orissa depends not only upon the removal of the sulphur content, but also upon the solution of the transport problem.

ASSISTANCE RENDERED TO INDUSTRIAL FIRMS BY THE GEOLOGICAL SURVEY DEPARTMENT.

1585. *Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar: With reference to the various remarks of Dr. Pascoe in his letter to the Tariff Board as to want of information:

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state how long the Geological Survey Department has been working at the discovery of coking coal obtainable in India?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state when approximately more definite information will be furnished by the Geological Survey Department?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state what help the Department has been rendering to the Indian industrial firms as regards the mineral resources of India?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee: (a) The Geological Survey has devoted continuous attention to the subject, but coking experiments on a large scale are frequently necessary to determine the value of coals for coking purposes, and such experiments can scarcely be conducted by the Survey.

(b) A re-survey of all the important coalfields is being undertaken at once. It will probably take four or five years to complete.

(c) The Department publishes in its Records and Memoirs all available information regarding the mineral resources of India. It also supplies information to inquirers and introduces firms to private prospectors and geologists.

INDIAN, NON-INDIAN AND MIXED FIRMS ENGAGED IN THE IRON AND STEEL INDUSTRIES IN INDIA.

1586. *Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar: (a) Will the Government be pleased to state how many firms in India carrying on iron or steel industries are (1) purely Indian, (2) purely non-Indian, (3) mixed (Indian and non-Indian capital).

(b) As regards non-Indian firms, will the Government be pleased to state how many were registered in India with rupee capital?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes: Government have no information beyond what is contained in the volume on Joint Stock Companies in British India and in certain Indian States which is published by the Commercial Intelligence Department. There is a copy in the Library.

1587. *Lala Hans Raj : With reference to the reply given on the 3rd March to the question by Pandit Krishna Kant Malaviya that the suggestion of adding elected members of the Assembly and the Council of State to the present Governing Body of the Lady Hardinge Medical College will be considered, will the Government be pleased to state what consideration of the suggestion has been made, and if not, why ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : The Governing Body have intimated to the Government of India that they will be glad to add to their numbers Members of the Legislative Assembly and the Council of State.

1588. *Lala Hans Raj : With reference to the question to which a reply was given on the 3rd March that Indian Professors will be employed in the vacancies in the Lady Hardinge Medical College which were advertised, will the Government be pleased to state the names of the Indians employed, and if not, why ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : It is the policy of the Governing Body to appoint suitably qualified Indians whenever such are available. Only recently they advertised for lecturers in Chemistry and Biology and have selected Miss Sushila Ram for the post of lecturer in Chemistry. No suitable applications were received for the other post.

ANNUAL GRANT TO THE LADY HARDINGE MEDICAL COLLEGE, DELHI.

1589. *Lala Hans Raj : Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the rules under which the annual grant of Rs. 2 lakhs is given to the institution ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : There are no rules governing the annual grant of Rs. 2 lakhs given to the Lady Hardinge Medical College.

(a) Audit inspection note for the period ending the 30th September 1923 ;

(b) Audit objection statements for the same period (with replies against each of the objections) ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : A copy of the audit inspection report and the audit objection statements has been placed in the Library of the Assembly.

INSPECTION REPORT RELATING TO THE LADY HARDINGE MEDICAL COLLEGE, DELHI.

1591. *Lala Hans Raj : With reference to the reply given on the 24th March that the Director of Tropical Medical Schools, Calcutta, has finished the inspection and examination of the internal management of the Lady Hardinge Medical College, will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the inspection report submitted by the Director with the action taken by the Governing Body of the Institution ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : A copy of the report submitted by the Director, School of Tropical Medicine and Hygiene, Calcutta, has been placed in the Library of the Assembly. In consequence of this report the Governing Body have addressed an appeal for further financial assistance to the Government of India.

DELAY IN THE PUBLICATION OF THE LAST QUINQUENNIAL REPORT OF THE LADY HARDINGE MEDICAL COLLEGE, DELHI.

1592. Lala Hans Raj : (a) With reference to a reply given on the 24th March 1924 that the quinquennial report of the Lady Hardinge Medical College is under preparation, will the Government be pleased to lay it on the table if it is published ? If not, why ?

(b) Is it a fact that the last quinquennial report of the institution was published in 1918 as was stated in a reply on the 24th March 1924, and the second similar report was due in 1923 ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state reasons why the subsequent report was not published in due time ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : (a) The Quinquennial report on the Lady Hardinge Medical College will be published shortly and a copy will be placed in the Library of the Assembly.

(b) Yes. The Government of India are not primarily concerned with the publication of this report.

CLASSIFICATION OF THE LADY HARDINGE MEDICAL COLLEGE, DELHI, AS A PRIVATE INSTITUTION.

1593. Lala Hans Raj : With reference to the reply given on the 3rd March 1924 that the Lady Hardinge Medical College is a private concern with an independent audit read together with the letter of the Honorary Secretary published in the debate copy of the 24th March in response to a similar question, will the Government be pleased to state more definitely if this institution can still be treated as a private institution under the circumstances when its accounts are audited by the Government Auditors appointed by the Local Fund Examiner of the Punjab, and when it is entirely managed and controlled by the Government officials ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : The Honourable Member will observe from the letter of the Honorary Secretary that the request for the accounts of the College being audited by the Examiner of Local Fund Accounts was made in the interests of efficiency and economy. The official character of the auditing agency employed cannot affect the character of the Governing Body which having been duly registered under Act XXI of 1860 is an autonomous corporation. I have already informed the Honourable Member that the Governing Body have intimated their desire to add non-official Members to their numbers.

NAMES OF INDIAN MEMBERS ON THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE COUNTESS OF DUFFERIN FUND.

1594. Lala Hans Raj : (a) Is it a fact that the Countess of Dufferin Fund receives an annual grant from the Assembly ranging between 4 to 5 lakhs of rupees ?

(b) And is it a fact that this grant is given merely to provide medical aid for Indian women ?

(c) If the replies to (a) and (b) are in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state the names of the Indian Members who are acting on the management of the said Countess of Dufferin Fund ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : (a) An annual grant of Rs. 3,70,000 is given.

(b) The grant is given towards the maintenance of a Woman's Medical Service for India.

(c) The following are the Indian members of the Governing Body:

(1) Khan Bahadur Amin-ul-Islam.
(2) The Honourable Sir Maneckji Dadabhoy.
(3) Nawab Sahibzada Sir Abdul Qayyum Khan.
(4) Lady Shafi.
(5) Mr. K. C. Roy.
(6) Mr. Mohan Lal, M.L.C.
(7) The Honourable Raja Sir Harnam Singh.
(8) Diwan Bahadur Tiruvenkata Rangachariar, M.L.A.
(9) Mr. K. C. Neogy, M.L.A.

REPRESENTATION OF THE CENTRAL LEGISLATURE ON THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE COUNTESS OF DUFFERIN FUND.

1595. Lala Hans Raj: Is it a fact that at present there is no elected Indian Member of the Legislative Assembly or the Council of State on the Executive Committee of the Countess of Dufferin Fund ? If so, are the Government prepared to take steps to have a prominent element of Indian elected Members on the said Committee ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : No. There are three elected Members of the Indian Legislature on the Governing Body, namely, the Honourable Sir Manekji Dadabhoy, Diwan Bahadur Tiruvenkata Rangachariar and Mr. K. C. Neogy. The latter part of the question does not therefore arise.

FREE REDIRECTION OF TELEGRAMS.

1596. Dr. H. S. Gour : With reference to the Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee's reply, dated the 1st February 1924, to my question No. 211, (a) is it a fact that the revenue derived from the redirection of bearing telegrams would approximately be Rs. 2,800 a year ? (b) In view of the small revenue so derived, will the Government be pleased to see that all telegrams are redirected free of charge ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) Yes, but a considerable amount of additional work will be entailed for which staff will be necessary if all telegrams were redirected by wire free of charge.

(b) As telegrams are redirected or readdressed only on the authority of the addressee or on that of an agent of the addressee who is responsible for any charge that may be incurred, Government do not propose to make any change in the present system.

Dr. H. S. Gour : Is it not a fact that telegrams were previously readdressed free of charge ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I do not know all the ancient history of the Department.

RENTAL OF HOUSES OWNED BY THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA IN SIMLA.

1597. Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally : (a) Will Government please lay on the table a statement in regard to landed estate belonging to the Government of India at Simla let on hire, in the following form ?

No.	Name of property.	Book value.	Gross rental realised.	Cost of repairs, taxes, supervision, etc.	Nett rental.	Percentage.

(b) A similar statement in regard to furniture supplied with these houses.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : In view of the very large number of Government properties in Simla, the collection of the information required would involve an amount of labour which would be incommensurate with the value of the information when collected.

Baba Ujagar Singh Bedi : Is there no list kept for such things ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Oh yes, there is a list, but not in this form.

SIMLA RENTS AND FURNITURE SUB-DIVISIONS.

1598. Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally : (a) Are there separate sub-divisions at Simla for the recovery of rents, and for the supply of furniture ?

(b) What is the salary and allowances of the officers in charge of these offices ?

(c) Are the officers in charge Indian, Anglo-Indian or European ?

(d) What is the total cost per year of these offices ?

(e) Do Government propose to do away with these offices, recover rents by retrenchment from the salary bills of the officers occupying these houses, and ask such tenants to make their own arrangements for furniture ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) There is no separate sub-division for the recovery of rents, but there is an independent furniture sub-division.

(b) The officer in charge of the furniture sub-division draws Rs. 500 per mensem.

(d) Rs. 13,510.

(e) The furniture sub-division has been constituted only as a temporary measure. Rents are already recovered by deductions from salary bills. It is not proposed to discontinue the present arrangements regarding the supply of furniture.

Pandit Shamlal Nehru : May I know, if the rents are recovered from salary bills, what is the need for a Rs. 500 officer ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I thought I had indicated that he deals with furniture and not with salary bills.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, why Government, when they have a separate officer for furniture, should ask Members of this Assembly, when they want a few articles of furniture, to make their own arrangements ? Recently I was asked, when I wanted a few articles of furniture, to make my own arrangements.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I believe furniture was supplied to the Honourable Member. If he wants furniture on a very large or different scale, he must find it for himself.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I only wanted two or three chairs more, and I do not consider that extravagant.

SALE OF GOVERNMENT PROPERTY IN SIMLA TO PRIVATE CAPITALISTS.

1599. Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally : Do Government propose to sell these properties to private capitalists with the condition attached that they will offer these houses on rent to Government servants in the first instance ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : The answer is in the negative

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it a fact, Sir, that some Members of this Assembly applied for quarters on an annual rent and they were not given to them ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I shall be greatly obliged if the Honourable Member will furnish me with detailed particulars and I shall inquire into the matter.

Pandit Shamlal Nehru : Is it not a fact, Sir, that these quarters are rented to officials at practically half the rent that is charged to Members of this Assembly, although they do not take it for the full season ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I should like notice of the question. I am inclined to think the Honourable Member has been misinformed.

Pandit Shamlal Nehru : If the Honourable Member will see the books he will find that I am right.

RENTS OF QUARTERS AT LONGWOOD, THE CART ROAD AND SUMMER HILL.

1600. Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally : (a) What is the rent charged at Longwood, Cart Road, and Summer Hill to Members of the Assembly and to other Government servants respectively for the same rooms ?

(b) Is it a fact that Government officers occupying Longwood quarters have the use of drawing rooms, garden, tennis courts, etc. ?

(c) Do officers pay separately for these ?

(d) Is it a fact that Members occupying the Range have no such use ?

(e) Is it a fact that the Range is in urgent need of replacement or very special repairs ?

(f) Are the rooms at Longwood available to Members or other non-officials on the same terms as officers for the season ? If so, will the fact be so notified ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) As regards Longwood, the figures asked for were given by me in reply to a question asked by Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan on the 8th March last. Members of the Assembly are charged from Rs. 140 to Rs. 150 for the quarters on the Cart Road ; these quarters are not ordinarily available for Government officers. Members are charged Rs. 110 per mensem for the Summer Hill quarters ; Government servants are charged an annual rental of Rs. 688 for these quarters.

(b) Yes.

(c) No, the charge is included in the rent. As regards the tennis court, all accessories required for the game, e.g., screens, nets, etc., are provided by the residents using the court.

(d) It is not a fact.

(e) No.

(f) In reply to a supplementary question by Mr. K. Ahmed, asked on the 8th March last, I stated that the rooms at Longwood were available for Members on the same terms as officers, if the former were prepared to pay the rent for the whole season. They are not available for other non-officials. No further notification appears necessary.

APPOINTMENT OF A SUPERINTENDENT OF QUARTERS IN SIMLA ALLOTTED TO MEMBERS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATURE.

1601. Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally: (a) Is it a fact that during the past three years there was a Superintendent of quarters in charge of all Members' quarters whose duty it was to look after the convenience and comfort of Members ?

(b) Are Government aware that in the May-June session there was no such officer in charge ?

(c) That in consequence Members were put to inconvenience ?

(d) Do Government propose to detail an officer on duty during the August-September session ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) Yes.

(b) There is an officer in charge, though not a whole-time officer as in previous years.

(c) Government are not aware that any serious inconvenience has been experienced on this account.

(d) The arrangement now in force will probably continue.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Was the inconvenience not experienced by Government or by the Members ? I know the Members have been greatly inconvenienced.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I am surprised to see, Sir, that a Member representing Labour wants an officer to look after his comforts regarding furniture.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Do Government make any differentiation between Labour and other Members ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : None, but I do not think that any Member here expects a whole-time officer to look after his comforts.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Was not there such an officer in the last Delhi session and his name was Mr. Smythe ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is the Honourable Member in charge of the Department aware—I repeat the same question as I put to his predecessor who was officiating for my Honourable friend while he was away—that the drawing or sitting room in the Longwood Hotel is now turned into a stable or something near it and all the beautiful furniture, or part of it at least, has been removed and it is very bad now for the use of Honourable Members of the Assembly that the very object of acquiring the Longwood property as their residence at Longwood Hotel has been frustrated, in view of the fact that after misrepresentation of the matter was made in this Assembly by saying that it was for Members of the Indian Legislature lakhs and lakhs of rupees were sanctioned by us when the Budget was passed and the amount of money as the price of it was granted by the Assembly, inasmuch as the Government have not allotted all the quarters for them and kept some reserved for outsiders against our wishes ?

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member kindly put that question down ?

MEDICAL INSPECTION AND DISINFECTION OF HAJ PILGRIMS AT KARACHI.

1602. Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally : (a) Are Government aware that the medical inspection and disinfection at Karachi for the Haj pilgrims is held far away from the camp ?

(b) If so, what is the distance between the Haji camp and the disinfection camp ?

(c) Are Government aware that there is a general complaint that Hajis are put to great trouble, inconvenience and privation while under medical inspection and disinfection at Karachi ?

(d) What time are Hajis required to be at the disinfection camp ?

(e) What time are they set free to go on board ?

(f) What time do they reach on board ?

(g) Do they have anything to eat during the interval ?

(h) Is it a fact that generally pilgrims arrive at the camp a number of days before the date of sailing of a boat, and also pass some days on the journey ?

(i) Do Government propose to remove the disinfection camp to the vicinity of the Haji camp for the convenience of the pilgrims ?

(j) Do Government propose to issue orders that the disinfection and medical inspection be spread over a number of days before the day of sailing in order to minimise the troubles and inconveniences of Hajis ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : (a) and (b). Government are aware that the medical inspection and disinfection take place at Kiamari or about 3 miles from the camp. Everything possible is done to reduce the inconvenience. There is no privation.

(c) No. The Collector has personally supervised the arrangements three or four times this season and has introduced various improvements with the approval of the Haj Committee.

(d) This varies according to the number of pilgrims but the usual time is about four hours before sailing.

(e) To prevent a rush at the ships' gangways the pilgrims are passed out from the disinfection station in batches. The first batch begins to embark about three quarters of an hour after the time fixed for the commencement of the medical inspection ; the last batch about two hours later.

(f) This part of the question is not very clear, but if the Honourable Member means how long it takes to get from the disinfection shed to the steamer, the answer is about seven minutes.

(g) They are allowed to eat if they wish to do so and the Haj Committee provide iced drinks.

(h) Yes.

(i) No. The disinfection station is for the whole shipping of the port ; not only for pilgrims.

(j) No. This would be contrary to disinfection rules and recognised disinfection and medical inspection procedure.

Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally: Is it a fact that these pilgrims are required to be in the disinfection camp early in the morning and do not go on board ship till the afternoon ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : I have said, Sir, that the normal period for which they are required to be in the disinfection shed is about four hours.

Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally : Then it is not a fact that they are required to be in the disinfection camp early in the morning and do not go on board ship till about the afternoon ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : The information I have is, as stated by me, Sir.

Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally : Is it a fact that there was serious difficulty about water during the last season at the disinfection camp ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : I have no information on that point, Sir, but, if the Honourable Member wishes for information, I shall make inquiry.

Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally : I shall be very much obliged if he could.

APPROPRIATION BY GOVERNMENT OF BUNGALOW NO. 12 IN HYDERABAD CANTONMENT SIND.

1603. Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally : (a) Are the Government aware that Bungalow No. 12 in the Cantonment of Hyderabad Sind has been appropriated by Government under Act VI of 1923 ?

(b) Is it a fact that the owner demanded a Committee of Arbitration under the Act ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Officer Commanding the Station has refused to grant him the said Committee ?

(d) If yes, why ?

(e) Is it optional with the Officer Commanding to call a Committee of arbitration ?

(f) If not, do Government propose to take any action in the matter, and if so, what ?

Mr. E. Burdon : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) Yes.

(d) Because the owner had already agreed to accept the increased rent of Rs. 60 per mensem.

(e) No.

(f) The necessary instructions have been issued.

SALE OF SURPLUS STOCK OF SALT IN THE GANJAM SALT FACTORY.

1604. Mr. B. Das : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) if it is a fact that Government are only able to sell in the Ganjam Salt Factory (Madras) at the rate of about 2 lakhs of maunds of Government salt a year and that more than three lakhs maunds of Government salt are now accumulating there ?

(b) if it is a fact that owing to the large accumulation due to dull sales, the Government have stopped manufacture in their monopoly platforms for the last three seasons ?

(c) if it is a fact that the stock now in hand represents the output of one year, manufactured three years ago ?

(d) whether Government intend selling off all the stock to any one merchant at a cheap rate ?

(e) if it is a fact that over and above the concession rate, Government propose to assign to the merchant all the waste and relinquished pans of the Ganjam Factory with a view ultimately to secure the whole factory under one man's monopoly and control ?

SALE OF SURPLUS STOCK OF SALT IN THE GANJAM SALT FACTORY.

1605. Mr. B. Das : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether representation has been made to the Collector of Salt and the Government of Madras to discountenance any extension or to sell the whole stock of salt to any one merchant ?

(b) whether Government are prepared to keep any proposals for fresh assignment of land in the Ganjam Factory in abeyance and call for a full report from the Government of Madras on the subject before deciding upon the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I will answer these two questions together.

The answers to parts (a), (b) and (c) of 1604 and part (a) of 1605 are in the affirmative.

In reply to part (d) of 1604, it has been decided to sell the stock to one merchant. The question whether the rate is a cheap one is a matter of opinion in view of the quality of salt.

(e) It is proposed to assign to the merchant the waste and relinquished pans of the factory, but this will not place the factory under one man's monopoly or control.

(b) of question No. 1605—The Government of India called for a report and after considering it have permitted the assignment to be proceeded with.

JOINT TERMINAL RAILWAY STATION AT BOMBAY.

1606. *Mr. B. Das : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) if they have considered the proposition of having a joint terminal station at Bombay in view of the immediate acquisition of the G. I. P. Railway and the ultimate acquisition of the B., B. and C. I. Railway for the State ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state what will be—

(i) the cost of the proposed new terminal station for the B., B. and C. I. Railway at Bombay ?

(ii) the cost of the acquisition of land for the same ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes. The possibility of providing for a part of the terminal traffic of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway at Victoria Terminus has been under consideration for some time. It is a complicated question because, at the same time, the alterations at Victoria Terminus in connection with the electrification of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway suburban lines and the necessity of allowing for further expansion of Victoria Terminus on account of Great Indian Peninsula traffic have also to be considered. But, although it may be found suitable to provide for the Bombay, Baroda and Central India long distance traffic at Victoria Terminus, the local suburban service of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway and their goods traffic must, of course, continue on the existing Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway lines as far as Grant Road where terminal arrangements will be in any case necessary for such traffic when the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway line between Grant Road and Colaba is removed.

(b) The original estimate of cost of the proposed new Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway terminal station at Grant Road amounted to 3½ crores of rupees. After being revised, this figure was reduced to about Rs. 2 crores, but is again being subjected to further revision and reliable figures for works and land cannot be furnished. This estimate would be reduced by the credit that will be received for the Colaba property to be abandoned, and it must also be borne in mind that, if the existing line between Colaba and Grant Road were to be allowed to remain, considerable expenditure would be necessary to improve the existing terminal facilities in order to meet present and future needs.

Mr. B. Das : What would be the cost of the acquisition of land ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: As I have already explained, I cannot at present give figures.

Mr. B. Das : Have Government actually acquired land for this scheme ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am afraid I cannot say whether we have actually acquired land or not. Negotiations for the acquisition of land have been in progress, but I do not know whether we have actually acquired any.

STATE MANAGEMENT OF THE EAST INDIAN AND THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAYS.

1607. *Mr. B. Das: (a) In reference to my starred question No. 301 of 12th February, 1924, will Government be pleased to state what progress has been so far made to take over these two railways, namely, the East Indian Railway and Great Indian Peninsula Railway ?

(b) Have Government considered the advisability of appointing an experts' committee of the Railway Board to go into details of management of the G. I. P. Railway with a view to introduce retrenchment as soon as the railway comes under State management ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The question of the arrangements necessary to take over the management of the East Indian Railway and the Great Indian Peninsula Railway is engaging the attention of Government and good progress has already been made with these arrangements.

(b) The Honourable Member's attention is directed to page 37 of Appendix B to the Demands for Grants for 1924-25. From that statement he will find that the present Agent is budgetting in 1924-25 for Rs. 71.52 lakhs less under the heads of General Administration, ordinary repairs and maintenance and operating expenses than the actual expenditure incurred under the same heads in 1922-23. This reduction in ordinary working expenses is being effected in spite of the fact that the Agent is budgetting in 1924-25 for gross earnings Rs. 20 lakhs in excess of the actuals of 1922-23. These facts show that there is no necessity for the appointment of the expert Committee suggested in this part of the question. The present Agent has already effected considerable economies on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway and the Government are confident that he will continue his efforts in this direction.

COST OF TOWN PLANNING SCHEMES UNDERTAKEN BY THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

1608. *Mr. B. Das : (a) Is it a fact that the Great Indian Peninsula Railway has been building residential towns for railway officers and abandoning them for other centres ?

(b) Is it true that there are 3 or 4 such deserted towns and that quarters built for high officials are occupied by subordinates ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state the capital spent on such town planning schemes by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) No.

(b) and (c). The Honourable Member possibly refers to the arrangements resulting from the new organisation adopted on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway on 1st November 1922. It is an exaggeration to use the expression ' deserted towns ', but it is believed to be correct that at a few stations certain bungalows previously utilised for officers' quarters will not be required now for that purpose. Of these, however, a number were rented bungalows the leases of which have expired, at least two were in bad condition and would have had to be rebuilt, and some will be sold as there is a demand for them.

This only leaves four officers' bungalows which cannot be utilised for their original purpose, and two of these will probably be set aside as rest houses, the other two being made use of for subordinates.

EXPENDITURE INCURRED BY STATE AND GUARANTEED RAILWAYS ON HOUSING OF THEIR STAFF.

1609. *Mr. B. Das : Will Government be pleased to lay a statement on the table showing the capital expenditure on all State and Guaranteed Railways for housing of their officers and staff ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : A statement giving the required information is placed on the table.

Statement showing capital outlay incurred from commencement of operations or from date of purchase in the case of railways purchased from the old guaranteed railway companies, to end of 31st March 1923 on staff quarters by State Railways whether worked by State or by Companies.

1610. *Maulvi Abul Kasem : (1) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the organisation known as the Army Canteen Board (India) has earned any profits, and if so, how much of those profits have been utilized for the benefit of the soldier ?

(2) Will the Government be pleased to state the extent and amount of guarantee which they have given to the Imperial Bank of India in respect of the advances made by the latter to the Army Canteen Board (India) ?

(3) Will the Government be pleased to say whether the Army Canteen Board (India) has repaid any part of the debt advanced to it by the Imperial Bank of India on the guarantee of the Government ?

Mr. E. Burdon : (1) With regard to the first part of the question, I would invite the attention of the Honourable Member to the reply given on the 9th June to starred question No. 1414.

As regards the second part, the Army Canteen Board (India) has, from the commencement, given a rebate to the units for which it caters. No sums in addition to this rebate have been distributed to troops.

(2) Rs. 20,00,000.

(3) The answer is in the negative.

APPOINTMENT OF AN OUTSIDER AS CONTROLLER OF TELEGRAPH STORES.

1611. Mr. B. Das : Is it a fact that an outsider has been appointed as Controller of Telegraph Stores on a special rate of pay (Rs. 1,700—2,000) though this appointment used to be held by an officer of the Telegraph Department of the rank of Divisional Engineer (Pay Rs. 550—50—1,300) ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : The officer appointed as Controller of Telegraph Stores on special pay of Rs. 1,600—75—1,900, is not an outsider but a permanent officer of the Department.

This appointment used to be held by an officer of the rank of Divisional Engineer who was liable to transfer at any time. In order to avoid the management of the Store Yard being affected by frequent transfers it was considered desirable to have an officer permanently posted to this particular appointment.

APPOINTMENT OF AN OUTSIDER AS ASSISTANT CONTROLLER OF TELEGRAPH STORES.

1612. Mr. B. Das : (a) Is it a fact that an outsider has been appointed as Assistant Controller of Telegraph Stores on a pay of Rs. 1,050 though officers with a knowledge of Telegraph Engineering and stores are available on much lower pay ?

(b) What are the special qualifications of this officer for which he has been started on the above salary ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) Yes. It was considered that a suitable man could not be obtained on a lower rate of pay.

(b) The man appointed is an electrical and mechanical engineer with specialised experience in store-keeping.

WORKING COST OF THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

1613. Mr. B. Das : In view of the commercialisation of the Telegraph Department, will Government be pleased to lay a revised statement on the table showing the working cost of this department of the Government of India after allowing for—

(a) depreciation,

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : The commercialisation of the accounts of the Department is not yet complete. It is not possible therefore to place a revised statement on the table.

1614. Mr. B. Das : (a) Is it a fact that the Telegraph Department always runs at a loss ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state what steps they have in contemplation for reduction of expenditure of this Department ?

(c) Are Government aware that heavy expenses are incurred in this Department by the reservation of a large number of posts for Anglo-Indians and Europeans ?

(d) Have Government considered the advisability of throwing open these positions to Indians and incidentally introducing retrenchment in expenditure ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) It is not possible to say for certain whether there is a profit or loss on the telegraph working until the accounts of the Postal and Telegraph Department have been fully commercialised.

(b) The Government have under consideration the question whether it is desirable to initiate a special inquiry into the possibility of reducing expenditure in the Department.

(c) No. So far as telegraphists are concerned, Indians, Europeans and Anglo-Indians are employed on the same rates of pay. So far as the superior officers of the Engineering Branch are concerned, the only difference in rates of pay is that the officers recruited in the United Kingdom draw overseas allowance and technical pay.

(d) This question is under consideration in connection with the Lee Commission's recommendations so far as the Superior Services are concerned.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : Sir, with reference to the answer to part (c) of the question, is it a fact that a certain number of posts in this Department are reserved for Anglo-Indians or Europeans ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I should like notice of the question.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : By what time do the Government of India expect to complete the commercialisation of the Post and Telegraph Department ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I hope in a few months longer.

(b) Will Government be pleased to give :

(i) the additional recurring expenditure to the Post and Telegraphs for introduction of these lines, and (ii) the income derived so far from the use of these trunk calls ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) The total capital expenditure incurred on the entire trunk system up to 31st March 1923 amounts to Rs. 36,39,924.

(b) (i). The recurring expenditure for the upkeep of all long distance telephone lines during 1922-23 amounted to Rs. 3,03,490 which included Rs. 1,98,049 on account of interest on capital outlay and Rs. 5,017 on account of overhead charges.

1616. Mr. B. Das : (a) Is it a fact that many district towns all over India are being fitted up with telephones for the use of a few Government officials ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to lay a statement on the table showing :

(i) the capital cost in each case of all town telephone schemes as have been carried out since 1923, March,

(ii) the additional expenditure in each case for maintenance and management,

(iii) the income derived from each town so far ?

(c) Are the Government prepared in future to place such schemes before the Standing Finance Committee and to agree that no such schemes be carried out without the approval of that Committee ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) No.

(b) The financial results of the telephone service for the year 1923-24 are not yet available.

(c) I do not at present see any reason to adopt any such general rule as is suggested by the Honourable Member.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are the public allowed to use those telephones in the districts ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Oh, yes ; certainly.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is there any system of payment or any system of collection besides the Government orders ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I am sure that the Honourable gentleman will be provided with a connection if he applies.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is there any rule up till now ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Rules will be furnished to the Honourable gentleman when he applies.

REPRESENTATION OF THE PASSENGERS' AND TRAFFIC RELIEF ASSOCIATIONS ON THE CENTRAL AND LOCAL RAILWAY ADVISORY COUNCILS.

1619. Mr. B. Das: (a) Are Government aware of the existence of the Passengers' and Traffic Relief Associations at Bombay, Madras, Calcutta and Karachi ?

(b) Have any of these Associations been given the privilege of representation on the Central and Local Advisory Councils ?

(c) If the reply be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to mention the names of such representatives and the Council they are on ?

(d) If the reply be in the negative, will Government be pleased to state the reason why ?

(e) Do Government propose to take immediate steps to see that such Associations wherever they exist are given the privilege of representation on the Local Advisory Committee of those Railways in the working of which they are interested ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: (a) Government are aware of the existence of various Passengers' Associations.

(b) and (c). The Central Advisory Council is formed from Members of the Council of State and Legislative Assembly. Mr. K. Parthasarathy Iyengar, Honorary Secretary, Indian Passengers' Association, Madras, is a member of the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway Local Advisory Committee. Mr. Jivraj Nensey, Secretary, Passengers' and Traffic Relief Association, Bombay, is a Member of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway Local Advisory Committee on behalf of the Municipal Corporation.

(d) Does not arise.

(e) The rules for the constitution of Local Advisory Committees provide for three members representing rural interests and the travelling public. It is to the interest of Railways to see that their Committees are as representative as possible. Government do not propose to take any action in the matter.

CONSTITUTION OF THE LOCAL RAILWAY ADVISORY COMMITTEES.

1620. *Mr. B. Das : Will Government be pleased to place on the table a copy of the Circular giving details of the constitution of the Local Advisory Committees set up with the different Railways in India ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is referred to item (ii) of the reply given in the Assembly on 19th February, 1923, to Mr. B. S. Kamat's question No. 376.

REORGANIZATION OF THE RAILWAY BOARD.

1621. *Mr. B. Das : (a) How far have Government proceeded in the reorganisation of the Railway Commission ?

(e) Do Government propose to take proper steps to recruit Indians in the reorganisation scheme of the Railway Board ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Full information about the changes is given in para. 35 of the Budget Memorandum for 1924-25, a copy of which was given to all Honourable Members. All of the changes referred to have been brought into effect.

(b) Members of the Railway Board must necessarily possess a high degree of practical knowledge and experience of railway working and no Indian possessing the requisite qualifications was forthcoming.

(c) and (d). No.

(e) Claims of Indian officers of suitable seniority and experience are considered in making selections for appointments in the Railway Board as they fall vacant. Two Indian officers have recently been selected for such appointments.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : What is the material upon which the Honourable Member bases his assumption that no Indian was found qualified to fill this post ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : Before filling this post we examined the qualifications of all the Agents and Chief Engineers.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : Was this post advertised ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : Certainly not.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : How did the Government of India ascertain that there was absolutely no Indian who could fill this post ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : There was certainly no Indian among the posts I referred to with fresh and recent experience of practical railway working in India.

STAFF SELECTION BOARD EXAMINATIONS.

1622. Mr. B. C. Roy : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) the total number of candidates examined by the Staff Selection Board in their first examination,

(b) the total number of candidates examined by the Staff Selection Board in their second or last examination,

(c) The total number of candidates to be examined this year :

(i) departmental,

(ii) outsiders ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : (a) The exact number cannot be stated. It was approximately 500.

(c) 268 departmental and 295 outside candidates.

QUALIFICATIONS, PAY, ETC., OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY, STAFF SELECTION BOARD.

1623. Mr. B. C. Roy : (a) Is it a fact that an Assistant Secretary has been appointed on a salary of Rs. 500 to carry out the impending examination to be held by the Staff Selection Board ?

(b) Is the incumbent who has been appointed to the post of Assistant Secretary an educationist ; if so, what is his University degree ?

(c) Has he ever conducted any public or departmental examination ; if so, when and where ?

(d) If the answers to the foregoing questions are in the negative, why has he been particularly selected ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the post was advertised ; if not, why not ?

(f) Has the present incumbent of the post been given gazetted rank ? In this connection will the Government be pleased to state what was his substantive pay ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The answer to part (a) is in the affirmative and to parts (b) and (c) and the first parts of (e) and (f) in the negative.

As to (d) and the remaining parts of (e) and (f) the Assistant-Secretary was specially selected after careful consideration in view of his proved ability as an assistant in my Department. The post was not advertised as there was a suitable candidate at hand. His substantive pay was Rs. 365.

DUTIES OF THE PART-TIME SECRETARY, STAFF SELECTION BOARD.

1624. *Mr. B. C. Roy : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if the present part-time Secretary to the Staff Selection Board draws an allowance of Rs. 200 per mensem and will continue to draw this allowance till this examination is over in addition to the appointment of the Assistant Secretary on Rs. 500 per mensem ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to furnish the reasons for sanctioning these two appointments ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the above procedure has been followed so as not to deprive the present part-time Secretary of his allowance of Rs. 200 ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the present part-time Secretary does not attend to the Board's work of correspondence with candidates, etc., regularly every day ; if so, for how long and to how many letters does he reply and on how many files does he note ?

(e) If the answer to the above is in the negative is it not a fact that he got the present Assistant Secretary appointed merely to take a greater share of his own normal work besides the work of the examination ?

(f) Is it also a fact that the present part-time Secretary gives a nominal interview for one minute to the passed and unpassed candidates ?

(g) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the present part-time Secretary does not devote any extra hours before or after office time to the Staff Selection Board's work ?

(h) If the reply to the above is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state why his allowance of Rs. 200 should not be retrenched now ?

(i) Will the Government be pleased to state for how long the present Assistant Secretary will continue in his post ?

(j) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the present part-time Secretary keeps the letters of passed and unpassed candidates unanswered from days to months ; if so, why so ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : (a) Yes.

(b) It was quite impossible for the part-time Secretary to carry out all the arrangements for the examination in addition to his other work. It was therefore decided to appoint a Special Officer for that work while retaining the Secretary to carry on his ordinary duties. The arrangement has resulted in economy.

The reply to parts (c), (d), (e), (g) and (j) is in the negative. Part (h) does not arise.

(f) I understand this is sometimes the case, especially when candidates have been previously interviewed.

(i) The Assistant Secretary reverted to his appointment in the Home Department on the 1st September.

AMALGAMATION OF THE STAFF SELECTION BOARD WITH THE HOME DEPARTMENT.

1625. Mr. B. C. Roy : Has it been decided that the work of the Staff Selection Board will be amalgamated with the Home Department and not with the Department of Education ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The Honourable Member is correct in thinking that that was the intention, but circumstances have since changed. The future of the Staff Selection Board is at present under consideration.

NAMES AND QUALIFICATIONS OF PAST SECRETARIES AND THE PRESENT PART-TIME SECRETARY, STAFF SELECTION BOARD.

1626. Mr. B. C. Roy : Will the Government be pleased to state the name and qualifications of the Secretary of the Staff Selection Board from the start, also the name and qualifications of the present part-time Secretary ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The names are :

Mr. J. D. V. Hodge,

Mr. R. S. Bajpai,

Mr. J. W. Hearn,

Mr. G. R. Kaye,

Mr. A. S. Lawrence,

Mr. E. H. Brandon.

The main qualification for the post are knowledge of the Secretariat system and good general ability. All the officers selected for the post have possessed these qualifications.

APPOINTMENT OF AN I. C. S. OFFICER AS SECRETARY, STAFF SELECTION BOARD.

1627. Mr. B. C. Roy : (a) Will the Government kindly state whether the Staff Selection Board was created to stop the irregular methods of recruitment which used to be formerly practised by the Chief Clerks and Registrars of the Departments ?

(b) If the reply to the above question is in the affirmative will the Government be pleased to state why the present post of the Secretary of the Board is held by an Assistant Secretary of a certain Department, who really performs the duties of a Superintendent or a Registrar ?

(c) Are the Government prepared to consider the question that in future this post should be held by an I. C. S. Officer and not by a junior officer of the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to paragraphs 35 to 37 of the Secretariat Procedure Committee's report which show why the Staff Selection Board was set up.

(b) Because that is a suitable and economical arrangement.

(c) I am afraid I cannot give any such undertaking.

NOMINATION BY THE SECRETARY, STAFF SELECTION BOARD, OF CANDIDATES FOR VACANCIES.

1628. *Mr. B. C. Roy : Will the Government be pleased to state whether the present Secretary of the Staff Selection Board can nominate for vacancies short or long passed or unpassed candidates without the approval of the Chairman or the Board ? Whether he has ever done it, if so how many candidates has he so far nominated without the knowledge of the Board or the Chairman ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The answer is in the negative.

The Secretary works in close and constant consultation with and under the orders of the Chairman of the Board.

EMPLOYMENT OF PENSIONERS IN THE LOCAL CLEARING OFFICE (ENEMY DEBTS).

1629. *Mr. B. C. Roy : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if the office of the Local Clearing Office (Enemy Debts) has been staffed with 4 or 5 pensioners ?

(b) Has this been done with the knowledge of the Staff Selection Board and what are the amounts of pay granted to these pensioners ?

Sir Henry Moncrieff Smith : There are two pensioners on the staff of the Local Clearing Office, which is only a temporary Office dealing with highly technical work in connection with the Peace Treaties. The work of the two posts in which they are employed can only be carried on by men of the ripest experience. Before the first pensioner was appointed the most suitable candidate the Staff Selection Board could provide at the time was tried for a month and found unfitted. An attempt was then made to secure a man of the requisite experience from another Department but none of the men selected as suitable would accept service in a temporary office on the pay offered. It was therefore necessary to employ a pensioner. The second pensioner, who is a retired Registrar of the Railway Board, had been employed for some time in a temporary capacity on special work of peculiar difficulty. As this work proved likely to continue for an indefinite period the opportunity of the recent resignation, on account of ill-health, of the senior assistant on Rs. 300 was taken to bring this man on to the regular staff. None of the candidates the Staff Selection Board could provide would have the experience necessary to deal with this class of work.

The pensioners draw consolidated salaries of Rs. 200 and Rs. 205 per mensem, respectively.

The sanction of the Staff Selection Board was obtained to the first appointment and the sanction of the Home Department, who now deal with such exemptions, has been obtained to the second appointment.

REPRESENTATION OF MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY ON THE STAFF SELECTION BOARD.

1630. *Mr. B. C. Roy : Will the Government kindly state if non-official Members of the Staff Selection Board have been nominated this year from the Members of the Assembly ; if not, why not and who are the Members who have been appointed as non-official Members ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The non-official members of the ad hoc Board are :

Khan Bahadur Mir Muhammad Khan, and Mr. U. N. Sen.

They are not Members of the Legislative Assembly. The Government of India did not think it necessary to appoint Members of the Legislative Assembly to the Board, as it has been meeting frequently in Simla while the Assembly has not been in session.

Mr. President : Kumar Ganganand Sinha. Question No. 1631.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : May I put these questions in the absence of Kumar Ganganand Sinha ? I shall put No. 1640 as the previous questions have already been answered.

Mr. President : No. 1631.

(a) whether the suggestion has been considered or not ; if so, with what results ? if not, why ?

(b) whether there was any communication on this point between the Government of India and the Governing Body of the College ; if so, will the Government be pleased to lay it on the table ?

Lala Hans Raj : Part (d) of No. 1632 has not yet been replied to.

Mr. President : No. 1632.

(c) true copy of the resolution, if any, of the Governing Body authorising some action on the inspection report referred to in (b) above ?

(d) details of the action, if any, taken on the resolution ?

(e) reason for not taking action, if that be so ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : (a), (b) and (c). Copies of the resolutions passed by the Governing Body and of Lieutenant-Colonel Megaw's report of inspection have been placed in the Library of the Assembly.

Mr. J. W. Bhore : The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply given by me to Lala Hans Raj's starred question No. 1593.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it not a waste of time to repeat the same answers ?

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : I stated in the beginning that I would not ask these questions. If you will permit me, I will ask No. 1640, because all the other questions have already been answered.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are Government aware that interested people draft a number of questions and approach Honourable Members one by one, who in their turn give notice of the same questions to the Secretary of the Legislative Assembly unnecessarily ?

Mr. President: Will the Honourable Member in charge tell me how many questions have already been answered ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : Practically all up to 1640.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : All except 1637.

Mr. President : No. 1634.

RULES OF SERVICE FOR THE JUNIOR AND SENIOR STAFF OF THE LADY HARDINGE MEDICAL COLLEGE, DELHI.

1634. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : With reference to question No. 626 put on the 3rd March 1924 and reply given thereto regarding the rules of service for the junior and senior staff of the Lady Hardinge College will the Government be pleased to call for and lay on the table a copy of the rules which apply equally to Europeans and Indians and state how they can be discriminated from clauses of the agreement of service, in the College ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : Copies of the agreement forms for the senior and junior staff recruited from England, whether European or Indian, have been placed in the Library of the Assembly. There are no special rules of service drawn up for those recruited in India.

Mr. J. W. Bhore : The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given by me to Lala Hans Raj's starred question No. 1592.

AFFILIATION OF THE SCIENCE AND MEDICAL DEPARTMENTS OF THE LADY HARDINGE MEDICAL COLLEGE TO THE DELHI UNIVERSITY.

1637. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Are the Government aware of the fact that neither the science nor the medical department of the Lady Hardinge College is affiliated to the Delhi University ? If so, do the Government contemplate to affiliate them to the said University ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : Yes. The matter is one for the consideration of the Governing Body and the Delhi University.

EMPLOYMENT OF INDIAN PROFESSORS IN THE LADY HARDINGE HOSPITAL, DELHI.

1638. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : With reference to the answer given to Pandit Krishnakant Malviya on the 3rd March that Indian Professors will be employed in the Lady Hardinge Hospital to fill the vacancies advertised, will the Government be pleased to state the names of Indians, if any, employed. If no Indian is employed, why is it so ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : This has already been answered.†

† Vide answer to question No. 1588.

ANNUAL GRANT TO THE LADY HARDINGE MEDICAL COLLEGE, DELHI.

1639. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement indicating the condition on which an annual grant of Rs. 2 lakhs is given to the institution ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : This has already been answered.†

RAISING OF THE LEVEL OF THE RAILWAY LINE BETWEEN KHARIK AND SAHEBPURKAMAL STATION ON THE B. N. W. RAILWAY.

1640. *Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that the B. N. W. Ry. is raising the level of the railway line between Kharik and Sahebpurkamal stations by 3 feet ?

(b) Are the Government aware of the fact that the embankment, over which the B. N. W. Railway trains pass between Kharik and Sahebpurkamal stations, checks the flow of water to the other side and year after year for the last 7 years causes flood on that side of it on which the Ganges flows ?

(c) Are the Government aware of the fact that these floods invariably bring with them famine and pestilence and cause innumerable loss of life and property ?

(d) Are the Government aware of the fact that the B. N. W. Railway realises from the people of the flood-stricken area contributions to defray the expenses of the patrol police guards, that are kept during the rainy season, to prevent the distressed people from causing a breach in the line ?

(e) Are the Government aware of the fact that the exasperation of the distressed people, numbering about 2 lakhs, is so great that they effected the breach of the railway line on more than one occasion ?

(f) Is it a fact that the villagers of the flood-stricken area have been constantly sending representations to the railway authorities about the flood for the last few years but no permanent measure to relieve their distress has been adopted ? If so, are the Government prepared to ask the Bihar and Orissa Government and B. N. W. Ry. for detailed information why nothing satisfactory has been done to meet the situation and why the embankment is being raised, and lay the information on the table when it is received ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Bengal and North-Western Railway has raised a flood berm about 3 feet high along the railway embankment between Thana-Bihpur and Pasraha.

(b) Yes, Government are aware of the fact that the Bengal and North-Western Railway embankment between Kharik and Sahebpurkamal stations checks the flow of flood water from the Ganges towards the north, and that for the last 7 years the Ganges floods on the south side have risen to a higher level than the flood water on the north side. The railway embankment between these places follows closely the watershed between the river Ganges on the south and the Bur Gundak, Tiljuga and Kosi rivers on the north, this section of the line having been designed in accordance with decisions arrived at as a result of investigations initiated by a meeting held at Bhagalpur under the Chairmanship of the Commissioner in December 1898. The object of aligning this section of railway along the watershed was that it should interfere as little as possible with the natural spread of the flood waters from these rivers, and as the country was subject to inundation on both sides of the railway alignment it was decided to carry the line on a more or less continuous embankment in order that the effect of the annual floods might be localised as far as possible in the areas to the north and the south and with the idea that the damages caused by such floods should be minimised as much as possible. Experience has shown that cuts which have been made in the railway embankment by the inhabitants of the neighbouring tracts, when they have been submerged, have not resulted in any substantial reduction in the level of the floods on the two sides of the embankment, and as a matter of fact the embankment often acts beneficially by confining the floods to one side to the advantage of the other. As mentioned above, for the last 7 years the floods in the Ganges have risen to a higher level than those on the north, but in view of the enormous volume of water which comes down the Ganges at such times of very high flood the effect that would be produced if there were flood openings in this embankment would only be to cause more severe floods on the north of the embankment without affording much relief to the area between the embankment and the Ganges.

(c) Government are aware that the hardships enumerated are usually associated with extensive floods.

(d) No such contributions are realised by the Bengal and North-Western Railway Administration.

(e) Yes.

(f) There have been representations in this matter from time to time and the problem is one that has received perpetual attention on account of the anxiety that is annually caused by the floods to the Railway Administration. It seems doubtful however whether any reasonable way of improving conditions can be found in view of what is stated above in the reply to (b).

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : In view of the serious admissions made by the Honourable Member, may I ask if the Government have considered any steps which would remove the difficulty which the Honourable Member himself admits ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have already explained that the difficulty seems to be insuperable.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : In view of the insuperable character of the difficulty, as the Honourable Member has stated, do Government propose to consider the question of dismantling the line altogether in order to save about two lakhs of people in the flood-stricken area ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No, Sir.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : Do Government consider that the existence of the lives of two lakhs of people is less important than a railway line extending over 7 miles ?

(No answer.)

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : May I take it that the Honourable Member is not answering that question ?

(No answer.)

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : Is a plan for building an embankment along a railway line considered by any Government official before it is finally sanctioned ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : I can give the Honourable Member a general answer. Might I suggest that he should study the very careful answer that we have given and then, after studying it, if he would like to come round and have a talk with the Railway Board, we shall be most happy to discuss the question. On this very technical question we have given a very carefully prepared answer, and neither Mr. Parsons nor myself are prepared to discuss in detail a technical engineering question of this kind.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : May I ask the Honourable Member if he is prepared to consider representations which have so far been received by the Local Government without any result and to discuss matters with those who are interested in this question ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : We have considered all the representations received, as I have already informed the Honourable Member.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : Have all these representations been considered and disposed of, or are they still pending ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member has had a very full and fair answer.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Discharge of Devi Chand, Points Jamadar at Kasur, N. W. Railway.

290. Lala Hans Raj : (a) Is it a fact that one Devi Chand, Points Jamadar at Kasur, North-Western Railway, has been discharged owing to his old age while Allah Ditta and Fazal Din who are older than him are still in service ? If so, will the Government please state the reason for doing so ?

(b) Is it a fact that in his old age the said Devi Chand's whole property was taken away by thieves from the quarters at Kasur railway station ?

(c) Is it a fact that the said Devi Chand has, in spite of many representations made to different authorities, since he was discharged, not received any gratuity ?

(d) Is it a fact that the said Devi Chand received one letter, dated 7th January, 1924, about a year after his discharge, from the District Traffic Superintendent, Bhatinda, informing him that " gratuity amounting to Rs. 162 has been sanctioned by the Agent, Lahore and you will be called in this office to receive payment when the pay order is passed by the Chief Auditor, Lahore " but has not yet been granted the same ?

Mr. C. D. M. Hindley : (a), (b), (c) and (d). Government have no information and cannot undertake to inquire. A copy of the question has however been sent to the Agent, North-Western Railway, and he will doubtless take such action as is required.

TRANSFER OF THE STATION MASTER, KASUR.

291. Lala Hans Raj: (1) Will the Government please state how many Muhammadans and Hindus were employed at Kasur railway station, North-Western Railway, previous to the present station master and how many are employed at present ?

(2) Will the Government please state :

(a) After how long one executive officer in civil and railway service is transferred from one station to another ?

(b) Since when the present station master is employed at Kasur ?

(c) Why the present station master has not been transferred after his three years' stay at Kasur ?

Mr. C. D. M. Hindley: (1) and (2) (b). Government have no information.

2 (a) and (c). There is no rule requiring a station master to be transferred after any given period.

CREATION OF A THIRD DIVISION IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA SECRETARIAT.

292. Lala Hans Raj : 1. Is it a fact that a Third Division is being created only in the Secretariat ? If so what has led the Government to do so ?

2. Is it a fact that general dissatisfaction and disappointment is being felt amongst the Lower Division Clerks of the Government of India Secretariat ?

3. If the answer to above question is in the affirmative, why do the Government contemplate the creation of a Routine Division in the Secretariat offices only and thus differentiate their salaries by a large margin as compared to the existing Lower Division ?

4. Will the Government please state what is the present rate of pay of the Lower Division in the Army Headquarters ? Why is not the same grade introduced in the Secretariat in place of the one now under consideration ?

5. After the creation of the Third Division, will the Government please state who would be the men placed in the Lower Division and what nature of work is expected of them ?

6. Are the Government aware that there are many Upper Division Assistants in the Secretariat and attached offices who are doing purely routine or very less important work ? If so, do the Government contemplate at the same time the introduction of a similar grade in their Division ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: 1. With the exception of the Headquarters, Royal Air Force, Simla, where a third division is already in existence, a third division has so far been created in the Secretariat only. It has been created in the interests of economy and in view of the recommendation made by the Indian Retrenchment Committee in paragraph 8 on page 128 of their Report.

2. I am not aware that such dissatisfaction or disappointment exists.

3. Does not arise.

4. I am sending the Honourable Member a statement showing the rates of pay of the Lower Division in Army Headquarters. These rates have not been introduced in the Secretariat, because Government considered that the new rates were more suitable.

5. It is for each Department of Government to decide what men will be placed in the Lower Division and what work will be taken from them.

6. The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative. The second part therefore does not arise.

CLERKS UNDER THE EFFICIENCY BARS IN THE LOWER AND UPPER DIVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA SECRETARIAT AND ATTACHED OFFICES.

293. Lala Hans Raj : 1. How many men of the Lower Division in the Secretariat and attached offices are under the efficiency bar and how many of them are Muhammadans, Hindus and Anglo-Indians ?

2. Does any such efficiency bar exist in the Upper Division ? If so, at what pay and how many men of that Division are under efficiency bar in different offices and of different communities ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : 1. There are 459 clerks below the efficiency bars in the Lower Divisions of the Secretariat and attached offices. Of these 93 are Muhammadans, 328 Hindus and 35 Anglo-Indians. This includes 3 Muhammadans, 7 Hindus and 6 Anglo-Indians, whose promotion has been stopped at the efficiency bars.

2. Yes. The efficiency bar in the Upper Division of the Secretariat is at Rs. 365. In the Attached Offices the efficiency bars are at Rs. 200 and Rs. 300 in the offices of the Director General, Indian Medical Service, Chief Controller, Stores, and Director, Intelligence Bureau ; at Rs. 200 in the offices of the Director General, Archæology, and Director, Public Information ; at Rs. 332 in the Branches of Army Headquarters ; and at Rs. 270 and Rs. 450 in the Military Accountant General's Office.

43 Muhammadans, 205 Hindus, 87 Anglo-Indians, 7 Europeans and 2 Indian Christians in the Upper Divisions of the Secretariat and Attached Offices are below the efficiency bars. None of these men have been stopped at the efficiency bars.

RENT-FREE QUARTERS AT RAISINA, DELHI.

294. Lala Hans Raj : Do the Government contemplate giving rent-free quarters at Raisina, Delhi, like all other services in India when they fix up their offices at Delhi ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : The answer is in the negative.

MATCH FACTORIES IN INDIA.

295. Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Will the Government be pleased to state (a) if they are aware that a powerful Swedish combine is being formed to establish match factories in India on an extensive scale, and (b) whether any concessions are being obtained for them or foreign enterprises from Provincial Governments through intermediaries in India ?

(2) Will the Government be also pleased to state whether any, and if so, what concessions or facilities or encouragements have been given by Provincial Governments to the Indian match factories already in existence at Ahmedabad and the Sundarbans and to the match factory which has nearly been completed at Shahdara (Lahore) ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : 1. (a) Government have seen statements to this effect in the press.

(b) No concessions have been granted as far as the Government of India are aware.

2. The Government of India understand that the only concession which the Government of Bengal have granted is one to the Bande Mataram Match Factory at Tollygange, Calcutta, giving them a lease of a forest block in the Darjeeling Forest Division for 30 years subject to certain conditions. The Punjab Government have, it is understood, leased some ground to the firm of Sir Daya Kishan Kaul Sons and Company for constructing a match factory at Shahdara near Lahore. The Government of India have no information regarding any concessions granted by the Government of Bombay to the factory at Ahmedabad.

VIEWS OF LOCAL GOVERNMENTS AND LEGISLATURES ON THE RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE LEE COMMISSION.

296. Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : Do the Government intend to obtain the views of the Local Governments and the Legislative Councils in the Provinces in regard to the recommendations of the Lee Commission and place the same on the table before the discussion of the subject in this House ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : Copies of the correspondence between the Government of India and Local Governments on the recommendations of the Lee Commission have been laid on the table*. Any expression of opinion by Provincial Legislatures is a matter for local arrangement.

SLEEPERS FOR THE NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

297. Lala Duni Chand : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the capacity of the treating plant belonging to the N. W. R. at Dhilwan for daily outturn, of treated sleepers ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the price at which the chir and fir sleepers for treating at Dhilwan are being purchased by the N. W. R. ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state the percentage of rejections of the fir and chir sleepers before they are treated in the N. W. R. plant at Dhilwan ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that each fir and chir sleeper when treated in the plant at Dhilwan costs the N. W. R. about Rs. 7-4-0 ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state how long a treated sleeper lasts on road line, and how long a deodar sleeper lasts on road line ?

(f) Will the Government be pleased to state what is the market rate of deodar sleepers at present, and how does the treated sleeper compare in price with the present market rate of a deodar sleeper ?

Vide* Appendix " A " printed with the Debates of the 8th September, 1924.

Mr. C. D. M. Hindley : (a) The maximum outturn of treated sleepers from the Dhilwan Depot is about 1,500 per day and the average about 1,100 per day.

(b) Under the present contract, the North-Western Railway is paying Rs. 4 per sleeper for fir and chir sleepers taken in equal quantities.

(c) Usually the rejections at Dhilwan before treatment are between 1 and 2 per cent, but if the sleepers, particularly fir, have to pass a summer in the Depot before treatment, the rejections may rise to about 5 per cent.

(d) Each fir and chir sleeper treated in the plant at Dhilwan, costs the North-Western Railway from Rs. 6-4-0 to Rs. 6-8-0 at present, including the original cost of the sleeper itself and the loss due to rejections before treatment. It is expected that this will be gradually reduced in course of time.

(e) The life of a deodar sleeper in the road is about 15 years. Government have not sufficient experience of treated fir and chir sleepers to be certain as to their life in the road, but it is anticipated that their life will be about 12 years.

(f) The present market price of a deodar sleeper is about Rs. 7, and for comparison with this, a treated fir or chir sleeper should cost Rs. 6-1-0 about, on the life basis given in the reply to (e).

North Western Railway Contract for Sleepers.

298. Lala Duni Chand : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that a sub-committee of the members of the Central Advisory Committee was appointed to go into the five years, N. W. R. sleepers, contract ?

(b) If the reply to the above be in the affirmative will the Government be pleased to state the names of the members of this committee ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state (i) the terms of reference to this sub-committee and (ii) if the sub-committee was authorised to take non-official evidence ?

(d) If the reply to part (c) (ii) be in the negative will the Government be pleased to state the reason why non-official evidence has been excluded ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the report of the sub-committee of the Central Advisory Committee ?

Mr. C. D. M. Hindley : In accordance with an undertaking given by the Honourable the Railway Member in reply to a question by the Honourable Mr. N. M. Samarth on 23rd July 1923, in the Legislative Assembly, the facts relating to certain contracts for sleepers made by the North-Western Railway were placed before the Central Advisory Council in February last and the matter was remitted by them for examination by a sub-committee of the Council consisting of :—

1. Mr. A. A. L. Parsons, I.C.S., Financial Commissioner, Railways.
2. Sir Campbell Rhodes, C.B.E., M.L.A.
3. The Honourable R. B. Lala Ram Saran Das, C.I.E., and
4. Babu Khitish Chandra Neogy, M.L.A.

It was decided that the sub-committee should submit their report to the whole Council, but no terms of reference were drawn up, nor was the Committee authorised specifically to take any particular evidence. In accordance with an undertaking given by the Honourable Railway Member to the Central Advisory Council, the Agent of the North-Western Railway was present when the matter was considered by the sub-committee and was interrogated by them. But the sub-committee was not in any sense a judicial body and had no authority to call other persons to give evidence before it.

The reports submitted by members of the sub-committee are laid on the table.

Report of the Sub-Committee to consider the N. W. Railway sleeper contract.

A Sub-Committee was appointed by the Central Advisory Council at its meeting of the 16th February to consider and report on the question of the North-Western Railway sleeper contract. The Sub-Committee consisted of—

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons, I.C.S.

Sir Campbell Rhodes, C.B.E., M.L.A.

The Honourable R. B. Lala Ramsaran Das, C.I.E.

Babu Khitish Chandra Neogy, M.L.A.

Two meetings were held on the 23rd February and 21st March, and it was decided at the latter that each member should note on the following distinct issues :—

(1) In calling for a five-year contract for whole or part supply in October 1922 did the Railway Administration exercise ordinary business prudence ?

(2) Should the whole contract have been given to Messrs. Spedding and Company ?

(3) Should the terms have been varied after the acceptance of the contract ?

(4) Are there any specific points which from a consideration of this case the Central Advisory Council might suggest for investigation by the officers who are enquiring into the best method of obtaining sleepers in future ?

The notes were considered at a meeting held on 26th March, and it was decided that in view of the divergence of opinions disclosed it would be more helpful to the Council if all of them were submitted in extenso.

Copies of the several notes are attached for information of the Council.

NOTE BY THE HONOURABLE RAI BAHADUR LALA RAM SARAN DASS, C.I.E.

In July 1923 a series of questions on the manner of purchasing coniferous sleepers by the North Western Railway were asked in the Indian Legislative Assembly. In reply to question No. 352 put by Mr. Samarth the Honourable Sir Charles Innes stated that "the manner of placing contracts for the supply of sleepers will be re-examined in the light of a contract and all the facts will be placed before the Central Advisory Council for Railways." A meeting of the Central Advisory Council was held on the 16th February 1924 and there it was decided that a sub-committee of the Council should first examine the matter and submit their report to the whole Council. The sub-committee framed the following four issues :—

1. In calling for a 5-year contract for a whole or a part supply during 1922 did the Railway Administration exercise ordinary business prudence ?
2. Should the whole contract be given to Speddings ?
3. Should the terms have been varied after the acceptance of the tender ?
4. Future suggestions regarding pools, etc.

Issue No. 1.—Ordinary business prudence required that the North-Western Railway should obtain its supplies at the cheapest rates provided the material at the same time was of good quality. The Railway Administration was not wise in making a contract of 5 years in advance. Even in war times the prices had not ordinarily risen beyond Rs. 8 per sleeper deodar. We have now been passing through a period of falling prices, and it could not be expected that prices would rise above Rs. 8 per sleeper, the rate at which the Railway proposed to purchase according to this 5 years' contract. As businessmen the North-Western Railway authorities should have known, as other big traders in the field did know, that the very firm Spedding and Dinga Singh with whom they were placing the contracts for the supply of conferous sleepers have as co-partners of the Punjab Government in the Talwara Saw Mills obtained very valuable concessions from the Punjab Government (vide agreement between the Secretary of State for India on the one hand and Bawa Dinga Singh on the other hand, dated 21st August 1922, referred to in the evidence of Mr. Gibson before the Public Accounts Committee of the Punjab Legislative Council—page 64 of the Report and page 77 of the same Report)—and that the Forest Department of that Province had agreed to sell to Bawa Dinga Singh B. G. Deodar at Rs. 6-4-0 per sleeper, Cheel Rs. 3 per sleeper and Fir at Rs. 2-12-0 per sleeper. In April 1923 these rates were subsequently revised. The rates of B. G. Deodar were raised from Rs. 6-4-0 to Rs. 6-8-0 and of soft wood to Rs. 3-3-6 per sleeper. The North-Western Railway authorities were under these circumstances quite unjustified in purchasing at such high prices as Rs. 7-15-0 for B. G. Deodar, Rs. 4-6-0 for Cheel and Rs. 3-12-0 for Fir. The Railway authorities for accepting these terms rely on two things. They say that Mr. Gibson, the Chief Conservator of Forests, advised that the prices were expected to rise. I doubt very much whether Railway authorities whose interest it is to purchase things as cheaply as possible were right in taking in this matter the advice of one of their own contractors, the Punjab Forest Department, whose interest must obviously be to secure for their Forest produce as high a price as possible. But apart from this the Railway Administration should have seen that the recent contract of the Chief Conservator of Forests, Punjab, with Bawa Dinga Singh was quite opposed to the alleged advice of the Conservator. And does not the Punjab Government a few months later close down their own Saw Mills on the ground that with prices prevailing in the market it was no longer profitable to run the concern. The second ground on which the Railway authorities rely for accepting such high rates from Spedding and Company for 5 years in advance is said to be that the other tenderers also had offered prices not only very different from Speddings but some of them offered two sets of prices, lower ones for the first two years or so and higher ones for the next three years. The Railway authorities from this argue that there was evidence for prices in subsequent years to rise. If the Railway Administration had been a little more prudent and foresighted they would have at once seen the reason for these two sets of prices. In the first place they must have known that the forest leases of many of the tenderers were about to expire in one or two or three years. Naturally the tenderers could not be sure about the market two or three years hence. It depended on how and by whom the future forest leases were to be worked. The wisest and best course for the Railway authorities should have been to see what happened when two years hence the forest leases of many of the tenderers expired. Under these circumstances the contracts should also have been limited to a smaller number of years preferably for one year only. And as regards high quotations by the tenderers, quotations much higher than the prevailing market rates, who was responsible for this? Did not the Chief Engineer of North-Western Railway himself in his letter No. P.-743-Miscellaneous, dated 11th March 1922, to the Chief Conservator of Forests, Punjab, offer to purchase B. G. Deodar at Rs. 8, M. G. Deodar at Rs. 4-2-0 and Cheel or Fir B. G. at Rs. 4? If the Chief Engineer himself is willing to offer such high prices to the Punjab Forest Department naturally it means that he invites the traders to demand the same high prices. I am convinced the North-Western Railway Administration was unwise in fixing contracts for 5 years in advance and at such high rates. The advice alleged to have been given to them by the Chief Conservator of Forests, Punjab, could not be supported by facts. In view of the falling prices the same Chief Conservator had to close down his pet scheme of Saw Mills for fear of its being a losing concern. The same Chief Conservator had a few months previous to this contract sold his own forest produce at much cheaper rates than what the Chief Engineer, North-Western Railway, accepted from Speddings. I find it impossible to think that the Railway authorities were prudent in making this long period contract at such high rates.

Issue No. 2.—The second point is whether it was wise to give the whole contract to one firm. In this matter too I cannot support the action of the Railway authorities. They seem to think that by eliminating the competition of other timber merchants they could bring down the prices of sleepers. Have the creation of monopolies ever reduced prices? The Railway authorities seemed to think that if competition in obtaining forest leases could be eliminated, forest leases could be obtained at cheaper rates from the owners of forests. As a matter of fact we find the acceptance of monopolist rates from Spedding has brought about for them increased rates for forest lease in the Kashmir State. But even if the rates for forest leases went down, the Railway authorities have made too large an assumption in this matter. Such a state of affairs would only swell the profits of the monopolists without in any way lowering the prices. Even recent instances show that where the Speddings obtained their supplies at very cheap rates, viz., Rs. 6-8-0 per sleeper they have not reduced their prices charged from the Railway. By giving the whole contract to one firm the Railway Administration can never succeed in lowering prices. It is only under a healthy competition that prices can be lowered. The Railway authorities say that in pre-war times when the bulk of the purchases were made from Spedding the prices were low. In the war times on account of scarcity of supplies contracts were given to others also. They now argue that because purchases were made from several firms the prices went up. Here there is another large assumption. Who ever heard saying that the existence of a large number of sellers in the market raises the prices? I am surprised that the Railway Administration should hold such a view wholly opposed to all well-known and well-tested economic principles. The prices in the war times went up not because there were too many sellers in the field, but because there were still larger a number, much too large a number, of buyers at the same time. After the war the number of buyers has suddenly gone down, while the number of sellers still remains at a high figure. The Railway Administration in this instance has without benefiting itself tried to injure the timber trade as a whole. By creating a monopoly it will bring about the ruin of all indigenous enterprise. Moreover there is another point to be taken into consideration. Before giving contract to one individual firm the Railway Administration should have seen whether the firm patronized had sufficient resources to meet the demands. In the pre-war times Spedding and Company no doubt possessed large forest areas on lease. They could then no doubt supply over 6 lakhs Deodar sleepers annually. But the Railway Administration should have known that Spedding and Company had been ousted from the Krishna-Ganga forest (Kashmir) by X in 1914. They were ousted from Chamba forests by Y in 1915. They are no longer working in Kulu since 1919. Bawa Dinga Singh has no forest on lease and he never had any. Spedding and Company in 1922 were already booked with North-Western Railway for 2,500,000 sleepers annually up to 1926. At the time of taking this new 5-years contract Speddings did not possess any resources in the shape of their own forests for meeting the obligations under this new contract. It was after this contract that the firm obtained another lease in the Kashmir State. But in view of the monopolist rates they had obtained from the Railway Department they had to pay higher rates for this lease. From this source they cannot supply more than 75,000 sleepers. The total output of this firm from their own forests at present is said to be about 3,25,000 sleepers annually. In August 1922, Punjab Government had no doubt agreed to sell to Bawa Dinga Singh Deodar and soft wood at much cheaper rates but in April 1923 their supply from Punjab Government was restricted to 1,25,000 B. G. Deodar at Rs. 6-8-0 and 75,000 Cheel at Rs. 3-3-6. It means that the total commitments of Spedding and Company at present are 7,50,000 Deodar annually and 6,00,000 soft wood sleepers annually. Against these commitments the firm is said to have a supply of 3,25,000 Deodar annually from their own forests, and a supply of 1,25,000 Deodar and 70,000 Cheel sleepers from Punjab Government annually. That is to say, they can supply annually about 4,50,000 Deodars and 70,000 Cheel from their own resources. The remaining 3,00,000 Deodars and 5,30,000 Cheel and Fir they have to take from the Bazaar. So far as their supply from the Government and their purchases from the Bazaar are concerned Spedding and Bawa Dinga Singh are merely middlemen. They have offered to purchase 65,000 sleepers from Z one of the unsuccessful tenderers, on a commission of Re. 1-4-0 per sleeper. They have purchased sleepers from others also at a big profit. From Government of the Punjab and from Tehri, Garhwal, they have been able to make a high profit. They purchase from them sleepers at Rs. 6-8-0 and sell it to Railway Department at Rs. 7-13-0. The North-Western Railway before giving a long term contract to Speddings should have satisfied itself as to whether the firm possess a sufficient supply of their own. This I am convinced, they have failed to do. No doubt, in the past this firm had been fulfilling its obligations to the satisfaction of the Railway Administration. But then it must be remembered that the resources of the company were formerly much larger. They possessed large number of forests on lease. That is no longer the case. The Railway authorities should have seen that it was now no longer possible for this company to meet their much heavier commitments from their own resources. To create a monopoly in their favour under such circumstances would only result in ruining all the other indigenous firms in the trade, and in benefiting and patronizing only this one European firm, of which Bawa Dinga Singh, is only a nominal partner. This could hardly have been the object of the North-Western Railway. We are told that Y had in the past been unsatisfactory inasmuch as they had not been regular in their supply. The Agent, North-Western Railway, himself admits that the Railway had not direct dealings with this firm. Even in cases where they appeared to have dealings of some sort with the Railway Department it has not been shown that the firm, excepting one, were at fault for any delay that may have occurred in the delivery and quality of the supplies. I believe there were many reliable tenderers, A was one who could supply sleepers to the Railway authorities from his own forests at lower rates. It appears that the Railway Administration was too hasty in accepting the tender of Speddings, and I am convinced they were not wise in rejecting all the offers of the others. At any rate the tenders should have been accepted in part from more than one tenderer. We have had no opportunity of examining the unsuccessful tenderers. If we had that opportunity I believe they would have given us sufficient material to judge whether the allegations of the Railway Department against other firms hold any water. The North-Western Railway has in my opinion been unjust in this matter to the other firms and they are not in their own interests wise in giving the whole contract to one firm and thus creating a monopoly which may become its own dictator in the future.

Issue No. 3.—The Railway Administration was not at all justified in varying the terms in the tenders. They have by these variations unduly favoured Spedding. In not requiring this firm to deliver sleepers f.o.r. the Railway Administration has given them a concession of one anna per sleeper which means to them a subsidy of about Rs. 1,56,250. By allowing them to supply only 85 per cent. first class they have given them a concession of 3 annas per sleeper on B. G. Deodar and 2 annas per sleeper on soft wood. This means to them a subsidy of about Rs. 8,43,750. In allowing the company to sub-let or assign their contract on commission to other firms and being able to purchase their supplies from the Government Forest Departments and others at very low rates the Railway Administration have put into the pockets of Spedding and Company about 40,00,000 of rupees in 5 years. If this company had been required in accordance with the terms of the tender to deposit 5 per cent. of the value of the goods to be delivered they would have been made to deposit over 14,00,000 of rupees. To finance such a big amount is not an easy thing and that meant a grant concession to the firm. All these variations of the terms of the tender will give I think to Spedding and Company something like 50,00,000 rupees in 5 years, in addition to the interest charges, they would save in not being made to deposit 14,00,000 of rupees as security. Had the other firms anticipated these changes in the terms of the tender the Railway Administration would have obtained very favourable terms from such firm. I believe in doing this the Railway authorities have made a serious mistake.

Issue No. 4.—The present system of pool, I am convinced, is wholly wrong. In pre-war times Messrs. Spedding and Company possessed in the Punjab a sort of monopoly. They possessed leases of most of the forests. At that time there were hardly any Indians in the timber business. In war times as every source for the supply of timber was stopped Indians also got an opportunity of entering the field. In a few years time the Indian firms obtained leases of some of the forests and were able to oust Spedding from the field to some extent. The creation of a monopoly in favour of Spedding has not only compelled the Punjab Government to close down their own timber saw mills concern and made them suffer a loss of about 7,00,000 but have also practically killed all indigenous enterprise in the timber trade. It is said that Bawa Dinga Singh is a partner in the firm of Spedding and Company and therefore the firm is not entirely European. But it must be remembered that Bawa Dinga Singh or Pandit Rishi Ram are only nominal partners in the firm. The firm is for all intents and purposes a European firm, and in giving a long term contract to this firm the Railway Administration are killing the entire Indian Industry in this line. In creating this monopoly the Railway too will not obtain any advantage. the present contracts have shown that the system of pools in neither for the advantage Time will come when on the removal of competitors from the field Spedding and Company will be able to dictate their own terms to the Railway and it will mean not cheap supply to them, which I hope is the object they want to attain. From this point also the creation of monopolies is inadvisable. Creation of pools for the purchase of sleepers vests too much power in one centre. This is undesirable, and the present contracts have shown that the system of pools is neither for the advantage of the country nor for the advantage of the Railways.

The 16th March 1924.

NOTE BY MR. K. C. NEOGY.

Issue No. 1.—The Railway authorities told us that the principal justification for this 5-year contract was that Deodar was getting scarce, and that they relied upon the expert opinion of Mr. Gibson, Chief Conservator of Forests in the Punjab, in support of this proposition. The Minutes of the discussion that took place on the subject between Mr. Gibson and the Railway authorities were read out to us, and it is to be noted that while Mr. Gibson expressed the view that the supply of Deodar was absolutely limited, in a later part of the Minutes he is reported to have stated that that was the worst period for entering into a 5-year contract, and further that no trader could quote favourable rates for 5 years. I fail to see how the Railway could reasonably act upon one part of Mr. Gibson's opinion overlooking the other part which bears more directly upon the question of advisability of a 5-year contract. As this expression of Mr. Gibson's opinion was not available to us when the Agent of the North-Western Railway appeared before the sub-committee, we could not get an elucidation on the point from him. We should have liked to ascertain whether there were any facts or circumstances justifying the rejection of the latter part of Mr. Gibson's opinion. It does not seem to me that the Railway Administration is justified in invoking the authority of Mr. Gibson in support of the decision to call for tenders for a 5-year contract. If Mr. Gibson's opinion is to be taken to have been their sole guide in this matter, I must clearly come to the conclusion that the Railway administration have failed to establish that they exercised ordinary business prudence in this matter.

As to whether the Deodar timber market could be reasonably expected in the autumn of 1922, to rise, it does not appear to me that there was any justifiable apprehension on this ground. Our attention was drawn to a statement made by Mr. Gibson before the Public Accounts Committee of the Punjab Legislative Council, on the 22nd September 1923, in which he referred to the fact that the state of the timber market in August 1922 was not brilliant (from the point of view of the seller).

The question of "whole or part supply" raised in this issue, is of a purely academic character, for the Agent, North-Western Railway, admitted with commendable frankness that the Railway authorities had decided, at the time of calling for tenders, to place the whole contract with one reliable firm, that the Engineers were definitely against part tenders, that monopolies tended in their view to keep down prices, and the only object in calling for tenders was merely to test the market. The call for tenders "for whole or part supply" was, in this view of the matter, more or less a formality.

Issue No. 2.—As stated above the Railway administration favour the creation of monopolies in the matter of sleeper supplies; and the only reason given by the Agent, North-Western Railway, in support of this position, was that by eliminating competition for forest leases, monopolist contracts have a tendency to reduce the royalty for timber and eventually to lower the price of sleeper. Even assuming that this policy may lead to a reduction of royalty for forest lease, there is no ground for supposing that the monopolist would allow the Railway to reap any advantage from such reduction, in the shape of reduced prices. It is difficult for me to support a policy which destroys competition among contractors. By creating a monopoly in favour of a firm, the Railway may be setting up a future dictator of sleeper rates.

The Railway authorities had admittedly made up their mind to place the entire contract with one firm, at the time of calling for tenders. And judging from all circumstances one may be led to believe that they had also made the selection of that one firm about the same time. The memorandum prepared by the Railway Board on the subject states that the North-Western Railway had an offer from Messrs. Spedding and Company, for a long term contract, but that they had decided to call for public tenders in order to test the market. The period of notice was unduly short, and the call was for the whole tender. The time, however, was extended in response to complaints from other firms, and part tenders were also called for, in a subsequent notification. It is difficult to contend that these alterations were made with any bona fide intention of considering the part tenders on their merits; because, as stated by the Agent, North-Western Railway, the Railway authorities, particularly the engineers, had decided not to accept part tenders. It seems to me, therefore, that the elimination of part tenders was a foregone conclusion.

The Agent stated that the two main considerations in accepting a tender were: (1) whether the contractor had a sufficient supply of his own, and (2) whether he was reliable as shown by past record. So far as Messrs. Spedding and Company were concerned, it does not appear that the Railway administration made any enquiries on the first head. All that we have been told is that this firm had dealings with the Railway for a long time, and its past record was quite satisfactory. In the case of the other tenderers, however, both the conditions stated above had to be satisfied, with the result that they were all rejected.

I do not desire to enter into a detailed discussion as to whether or not the charges brought by the Railway administration against the other tenderers have been made out. It should, however, be pointed out that in one particular case, the tenderers—Y—had no previous direct dealings with the North-Western Railway, and the charge against them of unreliability is based on certain assumptions. I am not satisfied that they were directly to blame for the laches with which they have been charged. But whatever the Railway might have to say against this firm, no accusation could conceivably be made, on these grounds, against A, who tendered jointly with Y. A, I am informed, owns considerable forest property and this was his first direct tender for the supply of sleeper to the North-Western Railway. There could, therefore, be no objection to his tender on either of the two grounds mentioned above. But it is surprising to note that the name of A was altogether omitted from the Memorandum circulated by the Railway Board to the Members of the Central Advisory Council, and it was only when one of the members of the sub-committee mentioned this fact that an enquiry was made into the matter. The sub-committee have lately been assured that, although the original tenders had been destroyed, there was evidence to show that A had joined Y in tendering. It therefore appears that A was penalized for the supposed sins of his associates.

Issue No. 3.—I do not think that there is any room for a difference of opinion on this point. In making the variations in the terms of the tender after acceptance, the Railway administration undoubtedly sacrificed the interests of the Railways and laid themselves open to the charge of giving undue preference to Messrs. Spedding and Company. Having regard to the great value of the present contract the North-Western Railway ought to have exercised more care in examining the tender forms and the conditions of the contract before actually modifying the terms after acceptance of the tender.

Issue No. 4.—I am not in favour of the present system under which the North-Western Railway is the sole purchasing authority for coniferous sleepers on behalf of certain Railway administrations. As disclosed by the circumstances of the present case, the present pool system has not resulted in the economy that was anticipated, and a monopoly in purchase has tended to create a monopoly in supply.

I cannot conclude this note without mentioning that the sub-committee were handicapped in making the enquiry by reason of the fact that, according to the decision of the Central Advisory Council, representatives of the tendering firms were not called.

NOTE BY SIR CAMPBELL RHODES.

The Committee have found considerable difficulty in carrying out the mandate of the Central Railway Advisory Committee. Many of the documents which would have assisted our investigations have been destroyed in the ordinary course of procedure, and there have been several changes in the personnel of the officers on the railway who had to deal with the contract, into the circumstances of which we have been asked to inquire. It appears that Messrs. Spedding and Company have supplied sleepers to the North-Western Railway for many years, either on the basis of five-year contracts, or on contracts for shorter periods, and in the matter of punctuality of delivery and in respect of quality they are said by the railway company to have given full satisfaction. There was therefore a predilection on the part of the latter to place a contract with this firm, though the Railway Board decided that public tenders must be called for. I consider the railway company rightly revised their original call for tenders by notifying that they were prepared to receive tenders not only for the whole quantity but also for portions. In deciding to call for tenders for a period of five years they were apparently guided by advice received from the Forest Officer of the Punjab Government, whose department it must however be assumed was not averse to the establishment of a high level of price for sleepers. All the circumstances considered, I have come to the conclusion that in calling for tenders for a five-year contract in October 1922 the railway administration exercised ordinary business prudence. Rightly or wrongly they believed that the supply of deodar sleepers was likely to diminish and they did not anticipate any early fall in prices. Regular supply was essential to their engineering programme. The railway company could not run the risk of any irregularity in supply at a period when much reconstruction had to be done, following on the delapidations of the war period. That they were not alone in their belief is shown by the fact that tenderers D, H, J and O quoted a higher price for the last three years of the contract, and tenderers N. Q, and R were only prepared to quote for the first portion of the period.

It appears there was a contract about this time for the sale to Dinga Singh by the Government of Punjab of deodar sleepers at Rs. 6-8-0 for a period of five years, but it is clear that this contract was at an exceptionally low rate to compensate the gentleman named owing to certain claims for compensation which he might possibly have substantiated against the Punjab Government on a matter outside the scope of our reference. This price therefore cannot be regarded as indicating the market value, a fact borne out by the tenders submitted to the railway. It is true that sleepers are now offering for less money, but in order to express an opinion on the railway's policy in 1922 it is necessary to visualise the conditions then ruling. Nor is it certain that had they placed the contract for one year only they would have been able to supply their requirements for subsequent years at any material reduction in price, as it is obvious that as soon as one large buyer has made a contract for a lengthened period with one of the larger sellers, the unsuccessful tenderers find it difficult to dispose of their stocks and are willing to accept lower rates. But had the railway purchased for one year only, their subsequent call for tenders would have created a firmer market, and there is to my mind some reason for believing that all the tenderers if not actually in a ring were at least tendering with marked and probably inspired unanimity at a price considerably above the cost of production. I have seen no evidence to prove that the circumstances of October 1922 would not have been reproduced a year later, though possibly a slightly lower rate might have been tendered.

The question remains as to whether it was advisable on broad lines of policy for the railway to give one firm of suppliers a monopoly for a period of five years and thus to threaten the existence of rival firms. The importance of this issue is enhanced by the fact that other railways buy their sleeper requirements from the Punjab and Kashmir forests solely through the North-Western Railway. The railway would probably urge that this policy in the past has been pursued with some consistency and without untoward results from their point of view, and that as shown above apparent competition amongst many tenderers had not actually produced that real competition which tends to force prices down to the cost of production, whilst on the other hand enhancing the price paid for forest leases. Some of the cheaper suppliers moreover had not built up a sound reputation for punctual discharge of their contractual obligations. Nevertheless, it must be borne in mind that there is always the danger of a buying monopoly creating a selling monopoly by crushing out the smaller firms, and it is therefore to the interest of any large buyer to keep alive and vigorous more than one source of supply. In the instance under review this could have been effected by giving some small portion of the contract to whichever of the cheaper tenderers the railway considered deserved by their past record to be encouraged or at least to be given another trial.

I have stated above my reasons for believing that the railway administration exercised ordinary business prudence in calling for tenders for a five-year contract. I consider that on their record and tendered price that the major portion of the contract should undoubtedly have been given (as the whole in fact was) to Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh, and it has been stated to us that since the contract was placed these suppliers have hitherto proved their ability to implement their obligations. But for the reasons of general policy indicated above I consider that a portion, not necessarily a large one, might advantageously have been placed elsewhere so as to maintain a more open market.

I do not attach any importance to statements made to the effect that Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh have obtained part of their supplies from other contractors, and have thus acted as middlemen. This is common in all trades and especially in the sleeper trade. Such action on the part of the suppliers is not tantamount to the sub-letting of the contract, for the original contractors remain responsible for the due delivery and quality of the sleepers and receive payment direct from the railway company. It is immaterial for the railway company to enquire whence suppliers obtain the goods they tender provided the quality is up to specification and the suppliers have established their reputation and bona fides.

There are a few other points to which it is necessary that attention should be directed. The railway authorities admit that the standard tender forms used were not applicable entirely to sleeper tenders and should have been revised before issue. The chief misunderstandings which thus arose were that tenderers were asked to supply the sleepers f.o.r. and that a security deposit, which in the case of such a big order over so long a period would have been oppressive, was not demanded. The customs in regard to sleeper supply are so well known and the security requirements were so onerous that it is hard to believe that the other tenderers were under any misunderstanding such as could not have been cleared up by a reference to the railways before the tenders were sent in. It should have been obvious that a standard form of tender was being used which was not properly applicable to the particular requirements of the case. It was however unfortunate that greater care was not exercised in the matter of issuing the tender forms, and it is by no means evident that tenderers' prices and the quantities offered were unaffected by the inclusion of conditions, which the railway company did not intend to enforce.

It has been further pointed out that the terms of the contract with Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh were varied after acceptance of the tender, not only in regard to the matters mentioned in the preceding paragraph but also by the acceptance of a certain proportion of second and third class and rejected sleepers at the full rate. Explanations have been given for this course which do not seem entirely convincing. It has also been urged in extenuation that hitherto the suppliers have not taken by any means full advantage of this concession. The railway company have been prepared during the last year or two to treat their sleeper suppliers with more consideration than was necessitated by the strict terms of the contract, and we are told of another instance affecting one of the unsuccessful tenderers where the price had been enhanced in favour of the suppliers. Contractual obligations during the years following the war had temporarily lost some of their old sanctity owing to violent fluctuations in price levels and dislocations in other directions. This remark is especially applicable perhaps to the North and Western parts of India, but is not without world wide application, and the railway company were therefore only following a precedent at that time well established. Nevertheless no reasons have been adduced why this particular concession should have been given to Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh. There is every reason to believe it was given in absolute good faith and in a belief which has so far been justified that the suppliers would not take undue advantage of it. But the fact remains that the railway company would have saved money by adhering to the terms of their contract and in my opinion they would have acted reasonably and rightly in so doing.

As stated at the beginning it has been difficult with the information before us to arrive at definite findings. It is therefore not surprising that the sub-committee does not find itself in agreement on all points. There is however in my opinion sufficient evidence to warrant the view which I have endeavoured to express in this minute, and I have therefore been compelled regretfully to put in my own individual note.

The sub-committee has also been asked whether there are any specific points arising out of this case for the future guidance of the railway administration in their purchase of sleepers. My personal views on this subject are I think adequately indicated in what has been written above.

CAMPBELL RHODES.

The 25th March, 1924.

REPORT BY MR. A. A. L. PARSONS, I.C.S., FINANCIAL COMMISSIONER, RAILWAYS.

After hearing the evidence of Mr. Hadow, Agent of the North-Western Railway (with whom were Colonel Cowie, now Chief Engineer with the Railway Board, and Major Woodhouse of the North-Western Railway), and going through such documentary evidence as still exists, the Sub-Committee framed four issues :—

(i) In calling for a five-year contract for whole or part supply in October 1922, did the Railway Administration exercise ordinary business prudence ?

(ii) Should the whole contract have been given to Messrs. Spedding and Company and Dinga Singh ?

(iii) Should the terms have been varied after the acceptance of the contract ?

(iv) Are there any specific points which from a consideration of this case the Central Advisory Council might suggest for investigation by the officers who are enquiring into the best method of obtaining sleepers in future ?

The Sub-Committee found themselves unable to reach a unanimous conclusion on the first issue and therefore decided that each member should draft a separate report, the various individual reports to be considered by the Sub-Committee again at a future meeting.

I.—In calling for a five-year contract for whole or part supply in October 1922, did the Railway Administration exercise ordinary business prudence ?—(a) Originally the Railway Administration suggested the placing of a contract without calling for tenders, but the Railway Board decided that calls for tenders should be issued. I think this decision was wise. I have no doubt that in placing their orders for sleepers in October 1922, it was of the first importance for the Railway Administration to secure certainty and regularity of supply, in order that there should be no interference with their own programme, and those of the other Administrations for whom they were buying, for making up the renewals which had fallen into arrears during the war ; and it might therefore be reasonably argued that it was their duty to place the contract with a combination of the two firms whom, as Mr. Hadow's evidence shows, they had certainly found by far the most reliable over a long series of years. But even though in such circumstances a call for tenders might only amount to testing the market, I think it was desirable, so as to secure that the actual price fixed represented at the time a fair market rate.

I also think that it was wise, as finally decided, to call for tenders for part or full supply since in that way a better idea was likely to be obtained of the correct market price, and more freedom was left to the Railway Administration in selecting between tenders.

(b) The question then remains whether the tenders should have been for a five-year contract. It is not entirely easy to reconstruct more than two years later the position as it must have appeared to the officers who in October 1922 had to decide this question. But the documentary and other evidence before us leads me to the conclusion that in deciding in favour of a five-year contract the Railway Administration did exercise ordinary business prudence. The position seems to me to have been as follows :—

The primary necessity was to secure a regular supply of a large quantity of sleepers over a series of years in order to carry out the rehabilitation of the railways. The Conservator of Forests in the Punjab definitely advised that the supply of deodar sleepers was absolutely limited, that it must inevitably tend to decrease, and that the rates for deodar sleepers were practically fixed ; and though other remarks of his at the time the placing of the contract was considered do not seem entirely consistent with this view, it obtains confirmation from the fact that in a considerable number of the tenders, including that of the most important rival of Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh, higher rates are quoted for the supply in the last three years than in the first two. The Railway Administration had also to consider the fact that their interests and those of the various Forest Departments were to a large extent divergent ; that their aim was to obtain sleepers as cheaply as possible and the aim of the Forest Departments to get as high a price as possible for leases of their timber. Knowing this and having reason to believe that supplies were falling, I think they were definitely well advised to attempt to secure their position for a considerable number of years by calling for a five-year contract ; and, in fact, I think that if they had done otherwise, they might have laid themselves open to the charge of gambling for a fall in prices of which, on the information before them, so far as I can now judge it, they had no clear indication. I should also have been influenced, had I been in their place, by the fact that five-year contracts were not unusual and had not proved disadvantageous in the past.

I therefore answer the question raised in the first issue in the definite affirmative.

II.—Should the whole contract have been given to Messrs. Spedding and Company and Dinga Singh ?—(a) The Sub-Committee had some evidence before them dealing with the forest leases held at the time the contract was placed by the various tenderers, and it was suggested that at that time Messrs. Spedding and Company and Dinga Singh had not got leases from which they could supply the whole of the sleepers contracted for, in addition to those for which they were liable under a previous contract. My views on this point are as follows :—

It was the duty of the Railway Administration to satisfy themselves that any tenderer to whom they gave the contract could be relied on to fulfil its terms; and if in any instance they had any doubt of the capacity of a tenderer to fulfil the contract, either from his past performance in similar transactions or because, so far as they were aware, he was a new comer into the trade, the fact that he had either alone or in conjunction with a third party forest leases sufficient to enable him to fulfil the contract would be a very relevant matter for consideration. But where general experience of the performance of a tenderer over a long series of years has established his reliability, and where he is known to have been for a long time in business, this factor loses its weight. For it is of small importance to a Railway Administration whether the contractor obtains his sleepers from particular leases under his control or in other ways, e.g., purchase in the open market, so long as the railway has reason to be certain that the contract will be duly fulfilled. The question whether Messrs. Spedding and Company and Dinga Singh had in October 1922 forest leases sufficient to supply the whole of the contract does not therefore seem to me relevant since past experience of the reliability of these suppliers was in my opinion sufficient to justify the Railway Administration in the expectation that they would fulfil their promises. On the other hand the Railway Administration were quite right in taking into consideration the forest leases possessed by other contractors, of whom their past experience had not been so satisfactory or of whom they had little or no knowledge.

(b) I do not propose to analyse all the tenders received. Of those for full supply for the complete period only Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh's and Y's (with whom we have reason to believe that A was associated) need be considered. Of these Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh's tender was fractionally lower both for deodar and for soft woods; the railway had had few dealings with Y, but in one instance had not found him satisfactory; and if it was right to give the whole supply to one contractor, I have no doubt that they were correct in selecting Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh both on the score of price and on the score of their past reliability.

(c) I think it was right to do so; and that had I had in October 1922 to make the decision, I should, as a purely business matter, have placed the whole contract with Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh. My grounds would have been that my experience of all the possible alternative tenderers to whom a part of the supply might have been given for five years was not entirely satisfactory; that, as I have held above, it was desirable to place the contract for five years; and that it was at that time so necessary to secure certainty of an absolute regularity of supply throughout the period, that as a business proposition it was more advantageous to place the whole contract with one reliable firm even though for some portion of it, it might have been possible with some risk to obtain slightly better terms. I therefore answer the question raised in this issue in the affirmative.

At the same time if the North-Western Railway had decided to place a small portion of the contract with one of the other tenderers at prices lower than those quoted by Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh, I do not think their decision would have been open to much objection provided the quantity was not so large that failure to supply it regularly and punctually would have retarded the progress of reconstruction on the various railways concerned, and that past experience of the contractor had not been wholly unsatisfactory. I should not have thought it of any immediate financial advantage so to split up the contract; but I should have recognised that there might be ultimate advantages in removing any suspicion that there was a final and definite policy of employing only one firm.

III.—Should the terms have been varied after the acceptance of the contract?—The Sub-Committee ascertained that tenders were called for on an old form drawn up in 1907 which does not seem to have been entirely applicable to the conditions prevailing in 1922. The contract on the other hand was on a new form only introduced in 1920 and applied then to a contract given without call for tenders. The result has been that in certain instances the contract actually made with Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh goes beyond, or is at variance with, the terms embodied in the call for tenders; and the question arises whether Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh's rivals were in any way prejudiced by these divergencies. Four points were brought to our notice:—

(i) The tender form asks for quotations f. o. r.; the contract does not provide—nor, in fact, did Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh tender—for f. o. r. delivery. I do not think this a material point. Clause 6 of the conditions of contract sent out with the tender forms provides for sleepers being delivered not f.o.r. but stacked, and in practice the railway generally takes sleepers stacked at convenient centres for removal to the various portions of the line when they are required. There is no reason to believe that the other tenderers were not fully aware of this practice or consequently that they were in any way prejudiced by the use of the old tender form.

(ii) The conditions of contract as supplied with the tender forms also provides for withholding a certain amount from the sums due for the sleepers supplied until the termination of the contract. But we ascertained that it had not been the practice to take security in this or other ways from contractors for fulfilment of sleeper contracts; and I see no reason to believe that any other tenderer or tenderers were prejudiced by a misunderstanding on this point.

(iii) In the conditions of contract sent out with the tender forms it is laid down that the contract shall not be assigned or sublet without written permission; and it was suggested to us that Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh were now purchasing sleepers, in order to fulfil the contract, in the bazar, and that this amounted to subletting the contract. I cannot agree. Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh are still entirely responsible for fulfilling the contract; they are the people who can be sued if they fail to do so; and the railway itself is not, in my opinion, concerned as to the method by which, or the source from which, the contractors get their supply provided the supplies are punctually delivered and are of the quality for which the contract provides.

(iv) The conditions of contract sent out with the tender forms state that only first class sleepers will be taken. Actually the contract allows 15 per cent. of the sleepers to be of a class below the first class without reduction in price. Mr. Hadow explained that up to 1920 all contracts allowed a certain percentage of sleepers below the first class (though this is not stated in the tender form); that these inferior sleepers were paid for at rates lower than those fixed for first class sleepers—10 per cent. lower for second class, 25 per cent. for 3rd class and 50 per cent. for rejected class. This may then be taken to have been the custom of the trade up to that time; but in 1920, owing to action by a certain Forest department into which I need not enter, it was decided to alter this practice, to base contracts on an average price per sleeper and to allow 15 per cent. of deliveries to be below the first class without any reduction in rates.

Effect was given to this new arrangement in a contract made with Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh in 1920; and it may be assumed that they tendered for the contract we are now discussing on the assumption that it would continue. There is also no reason to believe that other tenderers, if successful, would not have had a contract on similar terms. But I do not think we can assume that other tenderers were necessarily aware of the change or that, if they had been aware of it, they might not have tendered at more favourable rates. This is therefore in my opinion a material change, and once tenders had been called for on the old form, I do not think it should have been made. In actual practice Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh have not taken advantage of the variation, for their deliveries have, we are told, been 95 per cent. first class; but this does not alter the fact that they were given an advantage of which they could have made use outside the terms of their tender, and that probably the other tenderers were not aware that such an advantage would be given.

My answer therefore to the question raised in this issue is in the negative so far as this particular variation is concerned. I do not think the other variations prejudicially affected Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh's competitors; and I do not, in fact, think that any alteration they might have made in their tenders, had they been aware of this new arrangement, would have rendered it desirable to give the contract to any one of them rather than to Messrs. Spedding and Dinga Singh.

IV.—Are there any specific points which from a consideration of this case the Central Advisory Council might suggest for investigation by the officers, who are enquiring into the best method of obtaining sleepers in future?—As I explained to my fellow members on the Sub-Committee, I do not propose to deal with this issue since it will fall on me to deal with the report of the officers mentioned.

A. A. L. PARSONS.

Dated the 25th March 1924.

INDIANISATION OF THE ORDNANCE FACTORIES.

299. Mr. T. C. Goswami: Will Government please state what efforts are being made for the Indianisation of the Ordnance Factories?

Mr. E. Burdon: The Government of India, in January last, sanctioned a scheme for the training of apprentices in Ordnance factories. Details of this scheme were laid on the table of this House on the 24th March 1924 in reply to a question asked by Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas. The scheme aims at imparting technical training to Indians and others, so as to fit them for employment in Ordnance factories and it is anticipated that when the scheme has fully developed, Indians will be qualified to fill the appointments of Chargeman, Assistant Foreman, and so on. No other measures for training Indians in Ordnance factory work have been undertaken by Government. Indians if qualified are eligible to hold any of the civilian appointments in the factories.

VARIOUS CLASSES OF EMPLOYEES, EUROPEAN AND INDIAN, IN ORDNANCE FACTORIES.

300. Mr. T. C. Goswami: (a) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a list showing the number of Assistant Foremen, Foremen, Principal Foremen, Assistant Managers and Managers employed in the Ordnance Factories on the 1st April 1916 and 1st April 1923?

(b) Will Government please state how many of the above posts were held by (i) Indians and (ii) Europeans on those dates?

Mr. E. Burdon: (a) The list asked for is laid on the table.

(b) In 1916, none of the appointments mentioned in the list was held by an Indian. In 1923, one was held by an Indian.

List showing the number of Assistant Foremen, Foremen, Principal Foremen, Assistant Managers and Managers employed in the Ordnance Factories on 1st April 1916 and 1st April 1923.

Assistant Foremen	84	119
Foremen	43	58

VARIOUS CLASSES OF EMPLOYEES IN THE METAL AND STEEL FACTORY, ISHAPORE.

301. Mr. T. C. Goswami: Will Government be pleased to state (i) the number of workmen in each section of the Metal and Steel Factory, Ishapore, (ii) The number of Foremen, Assistant Foremen, Chargemen in the respective sections with their qualifications on the 1st April 1916 and 1st April 1923?

Mr. E. Burdon: I will furnish the Honourable Member separately with two statements giving the information desired by him. The qualifications necessary for Foremen, Assistant Foremen and Chargemen are that they must be thoroughly qualified, technically, and capable of taking charge of men, and that they should have been through a regular apprentice training and have had some years' subsequent experience in manufacturing sections.

REDUCTION OF THE COST OF SUPERVISION IN THE METAL AND STEEL FACTORY, ISHAPORE.

302. Mr. T. C. Goswami: (a) Are Government aware of the fact that the cost of supervision in the Metal and Steel Factory is three times more than the cost of labour and materials? If so, what steps are being taken to reduce the cost?

(b) Are Government aware of the fact that a European Chief Chemist was not thought necessary in the Metal and Steel Factory till 1918? Will the Government be pleased to state how and why the necessity arose?

(c) While each section of the Metal and Steel Factory has got a Manager, a Foreman and two Assistant Foremen, why is it that any of such posts have not been given to the Indian chemists who are working for years in one of the important sections of the Factory?

Mr. E. Burdon: (a) Government are informed that the facts are not as stated by the Honourable Member.

(b) Yes. The appointment of a European chemist was considered necessary on account of the increase in the output of the Indian Ordnance Factories, and because of the tests required to be undertaken by the Metal and Steel Factory for other departments of Government. Experience gained during the war has also shown the necessity for the employment of a fully qualified chemist, with practical knowledge of metallurgy.

(c) The answer to this part of the question is that the Indian chemists referred to have not the requisite qualifications. I should, however, explain that each section of the Metal and Steel Factory does not possess a Manager, a Foreman and two Assistant Foremen.

DEPUTATION OF QUALIFIED INDIANS SERVING IN ORDNANCE FACTORIES TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

303. Mr. T. C. Goswami: What steps have been taken by the Government of India to send qualified Indians on deputation to foreign countries in the same way as (European) Officers of the Ordnance Factories are sent?

Mr. E. Burdon: On the assumption that the Honourable Member refers to Indians serving in Ordnance Factories, the reply to his question is as follows:—

It is the practice to send members of the Ordnance Factories staff, not below the rank of Assistant Foreman, to Europe, usually to England, on deputation; and, provided they are technically qualified, Indians are no less eligible than Europeans for such deputation. I may mention that in 1923 an Indian Chargeman was sent on deputation to England to undergo a six months' course of training in the tanning and currying of leather.

WORKING HOURS IN THE COSSIPORE GUN AND STEEL FACTORY, ETC.

304. Mr. T. C. Goswami: (a) Are Government aware of the fact that the Indian clerks of the Cossipore Gun and Shell Factory, Ishapore

Rifle Factory and Metal and Steel Factory have been compelled under threat to attend the Factory at 7-45 A.M. instead of 10 A.M. and the Indian chemists of the M. S. Factory to attend at 9 A.M. instead of 10 A.M. violating standing orders of the Factory and Army Instruction (A. R. I., Vol. IV) ?

(b) Is it a fact that clerks are not allowed to work for more than six hours in the Ordnance Factory as laid down in the Army Instruction (A. R. I., Vol. IV) ?

(c) If so, do Government propose to consider the question of extending this rule to the case of metallurgical chemists and fixing their period of attendance from 10 A.M. to 4 P.M. or from 11 A.M. to 5 P.M. ?

Mr. E. Burdon : (a) and (b). The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given on the 30th May last to starred question No. 1098.

Although the rules as they now stand prescribe that all ordnance offices shall be open for 6 hours daily, it has been found necessary to modify the rules in practice. The volume of regulations to which the Honourable Member refers is at present under revision and the opportunity is being taken of amending the rules relating to office hours.

(c) No. The chemist staff is not part of the office but of the factory, and, therefore, must conform to factory hours.

LOSS INCURRED BY THE METAL AND STEEL FACTORY ON ACCOUNT OF CERTAIN BADLY MANUFACTURED ARTICLES.

305. Mr. T. C. Goswami : (a) Are Government aware of the facts that the Metal and Steel Factory received several orders from the Railway and Telegraph Departments, that those orders were afterwards cancelled and that the articles supplied by the Factory being very badly manufactured were not accepted and were returned at the cost of the Factory ?

(b) Will Government please state (i) the amount of the loss incurred by the factory on the transaction, (ii) who is responsible for the loss and (iii) what steps are being taken to recover the loss ?

Mr. E. Burdon : (a) No. Government are informed that the facts are not as stated by the Honourable Member.

(b) The question does not arise.

RESOLUTION re THE RELEASE OF SARDAR KHARAK SINGH.

306. Sardar Gulab Singh : What action has been taken by Government on the Resolution of this House recommending the release of Sardar Kharak Singh ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : In accordance with the undertaking given by the Honourable Sir Malcolm Hailey during the debate on the Resolution, the Punjab Government were consulted in the matter. The Government of India agree with the view taken by the Local Government that there are at present no grounds for the release of Sardar Kharak Singh or for the remission of any portion of his sentences.

RESOLUTION re GRIEVANCES OF THE SIKH COMMUNITY.

307. Sardar Gulab Singh : What action has been taken by Government on the Resolution of this House recommending the appointment of a Committee to inquire into the grievances of the Sikh community and to make recommendations ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The Government of India were unable to accept the recommendation contained in the Resolution, for the reasons explained by my predecessor in the course of the debate. They were, moreover, satisfied that the Government of the Punjab were taking all possible steps to give every opportunity for the statement and examination of the claims and grievances alleged and to promote an equitable solution.

CLAIMS AGAINST THE G. I. P. RAILWAY DURING THE YEARS 1921, 1922 AND 1923.

308. Mr. K. G. Lohokare : (a) What is the total number of claims preferred against the G. I. P. Ry. in the years 1921, 1922 and 1923 ?

(b) What was the total value of these claims for each of the above years ?

(c) What was the total amount of money paid by the Company out of court in satisfaction of these claims for each of the above years ?

(d) What was the value of claims rejected on the ground of Risk Notes for each of the above years ?

Mr. C. D. M. Hindley : Inquiry is being made and the information will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

THEFTS IN RAILWAY GODOWNS ON THE G. I. P. RAILWAY DURING THE YEARS 1921, 1922 AND 1923.

309. Mr. K. G. Lohokare : (a) What was the total number of thefts in railway godowns in the years 1921, 1922 and 1923 on the G. I. P. Railway ?

(b) What was the total number of running train thefts for each of these years ? What was the value of these thefts in (a) and (b) for these years ? How many of the thefts under (a) and (b) remained undetected ?

(c) What is the total amount of money paid by the G. I. P. Railway in satisfaction of decrees of Civil Courts in each of the above years and what were its court expenses in each of these years ?

Mr. C. D. M. Hindley : (a), (b) and the first part of (c). The information is not readily available and considerable time and labour would be involved in extracting it from past records.

With regard to the second part of (c), the figures are :—

	Rs.
1921	47,353
1922	1,02,187
1923	1,10,072

RETRENCHMENTS ON THE G. I. P. RAILWAY.

310. Mr. K. G. Lohokare : (a) What is the total number of employees discharged by the G. I. P. Railway in connection with the new retrenchment or otherwise dismissed under each of the following heads in the three years, 1921-22, 1922-23, 1923-24, namely :

(1)	Drawing Rs.	25 and under		per mensem.
(2)	Do.	25 to	50	do.	do.
(3)	Do.	50 to	100	do.	do.
(4)	Do.	100 to	250	do.	do.
(5)	Do.	250 to	500	do.	do.
(6)	Do.	500 to	1,000	do.	do.
(7)	Do.	1,000 and above		do.	do.

(b) What was the total number of Indians discharged or dismissed for these years and what was this total number for Europeans and Anglo-Indians ?

(c) What was the amount saved by this discharge or dismissal of Indian employees ? And what was this amount in respect of Europeans and Anglo-Indians ?

(d) How many Europeans and Anglo-Indians were newly employed by the G. I. P. Ry. in these three years and what is the total amount of their monthly salaries ?

(e) How many European and Anglo-Indian employees in the G. I. P. Ry. were given promotions in these three years ? And what is the total amount of these promotions for these three years ?

Mr. C. D. M. Hindley : (a) and (b). All available information on the subject is contained in the explanatory memorandum of the Railway Budget for 1924-25 which gives the reduction of Europeans, Anglo-Indians and Indians effected between 1st November 1922 and 1st November 1923. Similar information will be given in the Report by the Railway Board on Indian Railways for 1923-24. The collection of similar information for previous years or in the detail asked would entail heavy labour and expense which Government do not consider justified.

(c) The cost of staff on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway has fallen from 461½ lakhs in 1921-22 to 437 lakhs in 1922-23 and 397 lakhs in 1923-24. It is not known how much of this is due to the discharge of the different classes of employees referred to.

(d) and (e). Government have no information.

(b) At how many of these stations on each line are water taps provided ?

(c) At how many of these stations on each line are watermen employed to supply water to the passengers ?

(d) What arrangements are made by the above companies to supply water to passengers where there are no watermen specially employed ?

Mr. C. D. M. Hindley : (a) The number of stations on the Great Indian Peninsula, Bombay, Baroda and Central India, and Madras and Southern Mahratta Railways is 575, 633, and 498, respectively.

(b) On the Great Indian Peninsula Railway at 161 stations.

On the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway at 96 stations.

On the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway at 150 stations.

(c) On the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, 167 watermen are provided permanently and 164 additional watermen are engaged during the hot season.

On the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway at 379 stations.

On the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway at 153 stations in the hot weather and 125 in the cold weather.

(d) On the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, a porter is deputed to serve water to passengers. Each station is provided with chatties filled with good drinking water and wells from which passengers may help themselves are available at most stations.

On the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway there are usually water taps on the platform and, in addition to this, travelling watermen are employed during the hot weather.

On the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway filters are provided on the platform at 273 stations.

PREVENTION OF OVERCROWDING OF THIRD CLASS RAILWAY PASSENGERS.

313. Mr. K. G. Lohokare: (a) Are Government aware of the public cry that 3rd class railway carriages are generally overcrowded ?

(b) If so, what steps are being taken to prevent this overcrowding ?

(c) Have the Government of India or the Railway Board or any of the Provincial Governments ever taken any action, under section 93 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, since railways were introduced in this country ?

(d) If so, how many times and when, and what amounts were recovered under the above section and from what Companies ? If not, why did not the Government think it necessary to take any steps under that section ?

Mr. C. D. M. Hindley: (a) and (b). The Honourable Member is referred to the speech of Sir Charles Innes in this House on 12th February last.

(c) Not as far as Government are aware.

(d) Such action would not have been in the interests of the travelling public. The alternative to overcrowding was the stoppage of booking and such stoppages would, Government understand, have caused greater inconvenience to intending passengers.

EARNINGS PER MILE PER PASSENGER AND PER COACHING VEHICLE FOR FIRST, SECOND AND THIRD CLASSES ON THE G. I. P. RAILWAY.

314. Mr. K. G. Lohokare: (a) What was the average income for a first class carriage and for a first class passenger, per mile on the G. I. P.

Railway for the years 1920 to 1924 ? What was the average expense per mile for the same in the same period ?

(b) What were these averages of income and expense for a 2nd class carriage and a 2nd class passenger from 1920 to 1924 ?

(c) What were these averages of income and expense for a 3rd class carriage and passenger for the same period ?

(d) What was the total income from the Punjab Mail on the G. I. P. Railway and what was the total income from the same for the same years 1920 to 1924 ?

(f) For lessening overcrowding on other trains, why is not a 3rd class carriage put on this train ?

Mr. C. D. M. Hindley : (a), (b) and (c). A statement is placed on the table showing the earnings per passenger per mile and per coaching vehicle per mile separately for first, second and third classes, but the expense of hauling a passenger per mile and a coaching vehicle per mile is not known separately for each class.

(d) The information is not available.

Information regarding the actual number of I and II class passengers who travelled by this train during the period mentioned is not available.

(f) The load of the train does not permit of a III class carriage being attached as suggested.

(2) Those who gave written evidence,

(3) Those who gave oral evidence, stating in the case of (2) and (3) above the names of those who stipulated that their evidence should be regarded as confidential ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The Government of India have no information as to the persons and public bodies that were asked by the Provincial Governments or by the Lee Commission to give evidence, and their only information as to those who actually gave evidence is contained in paragraphs 2 and 107 of the Report of the Commission.

INDIAN AND BURMAN OFFICERS IN THE CENTRAL AND PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS.

318. Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the percentage of Indians and Burmans of the total strength of officers in the Central and Provincial Government services in India drawing salaries of Rs. 200 and above, Rs. 500 and above, Rs. 800 and above, Rs. 1,500 and above, Rs. 2,500 and above in 1913 and on 1st January 1924 separately on the lines given in the small table at the end of paragraph 34 of the Islington Commission's Report ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: I am sorry that I am unable to give all the information for which the Honourable Member has asked as it is not readily available. I am, however, laying on the table a statement prepared from material collected for the Islington and Lee Commissions which I trust will meet the Honourable Member's purpose. It gives the information for which he asks so far as the years 1913 and 1923 are concerned for a considerable number, but not for all, of the Central and Provincial services.

ESTABLISHMENT OF A TELEGRAPH OFFICE AT MURBAD IN THE THANA DISTRICT.

319. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: (a) Have Government received frequent representations from the Murbad Taluka of the Thana District in the Bombay Presidency requesting that there should be a telegraph office at Murbad ?

(b) Is it the ordinary policy of Government to have as far as possible a telegraph office in the headquarters of each Taluka ? Do Government propose to grant the request of the public of Murbad ?

Mr. H. A. Sams: (a) Yes, representations were received by the Postmaster-General, Bombay.

(b) No, unless recommended by the Local Government. The question of opening a telegraph office at Murbad is however being considered by the Postmaster-General, Bombay, and by the Local Government.

DETENTION OF THE ASSAM MAIL ON THE 6TH JULY 1924.

320. Mr. T. C. Goswami: (a) Are Government (Railway Department) aware of the serious breaches which occurred in the E. B. Railway line between Sapatgram and Amingaon during the first week of July (1924), and that the Assam Mail train (No. 3 Up) which had left Calcutta on the 5th July, was detained, first at Lalmonirhat Junction till about 7 and 8 A.M., and then at Sapatgram for the whole day, and then sent back in the evening to Lalmonirhat ?

(b) Is it a fact that the D. T. S. or some other Traffic Officer wired to ascertain if there were any European passengers in the train, and is it a fact that the reply was that there were no European passengers in that train ?

(c) Why was the train (which being the principal train for Assam carried a very large number of passengers) detained at Sapatgram from morning till evening on the 6th July in spite of my telegram to the D. T. S. drawing his attention to the fact that no food of any kind was obtainable there, and that there were other bigger stations to which the train could easily be taken ?

(d) Is it a fact that the Railway Officers have instructions to make especial efforts to secure the convenience of European passengers which they need not make in the case of Indian passengers ?

(e) Is it a fact that no inquiries were made of the Steamer Company's agent at Dhubri as to the availability of a steamer or steamers for taking the standard passengers, till a Traffic Officer at Lalmonirhat was compelled by some of the passengers to send a wire late in the evening of the 6th ?

(f) Was any arrangement with the Steamer Company made or even sought to be made, either on the 6th or on the 7th ? If not, why not ?

Mr. C. D. M. Hindley: (a) Yes. On the evening of July 5th, a breach occurred between Kokrajhar and Basugaon and during the night of 5th-6th a second breach occurred within half a mile of the first one. Two trains were transhipped over these two breaches on the morning of July 6th and meanwhile No. 3 Up Mail was detained at Lalmonirhat, pending information as to the possibility of continuing transhipment. It being anticipated that No. 3 Up Mail could be transhipped, the train was started from Lalmonirhat. But, in the meantime, a third and more serious breach occurred between Sapatgram and Fakiragram, so that No. 3 Up Mail, after being detained at Sapatgram, until it was known that transhipment was impossible, was sent back to Lalmonirhat, where better accommodation and food would be available for passengers.

(b) No such telegram can be traced.

(c) The Honourable Member is referred to item (a) above. It is pointed out that there are four food vendors at Sapatgram, so that III class passengers at any rate could obtain food there.

(d) No.

(e) and (f). There being no prospect of regularity in the timing of steamers at Dhubri during the rainy season, the local Traffic Officers were uncertain whether it would be better to send passengers to Dhubri or await restoration of communication. However, at the request of the passengers, of whom the Honourable Member is understood to have been one, the Steamer Agent was consulted. On receipt of information that a steamer might arrive at Dhubri on 7th, passengers were sent to Dhubri, but the steamer actually passed on the night of 6th.

INCONVENIENCES CAUSED TO PASSENGERS BY THE DETENTION OF THE ASSAM MAIL ON THE 6TH JULY 1924.

321. Mr. T. C. Goswami: (a) With reference to the detention of the Assam Mail train which left Calcutta on 5th July, are Government aware of the fact that not one of the Railway Officers whom the detained passengers (who had to spend the night of the 6th) could get hold of was able to say what arrangements were being made ; that the passengers were asked to take a train at about 8 A.M. on the 7th with an assurance that arrangements had been made with the Steamer Company, and that the passengers would get a steamer in the course of the day at Dhubri ; that no steamer was arranged for and that hundreds of passengers (almost all poor 3rd class passengers) were completely stranded in Dhubri for over two days, sleeping on the streets and starving except for the hospitality of the Indian population of Dhubri ?

(b) Are Government further aware that I sent a wire from Lalmonirhat to the Traffic Manager complaining of the " disgusting inefficiency " of the railway officials responsible which had ensured the maximum possible inconvenience to the detained passengers, and that, had proper inquiries been made, the passengers would have been able to avail themselves of a steamer which touched Dhubri on the night of the 6th ; that instead of diverting the whole train to Dhubri, the passengers were given the unnecessary trouble of having to spend the night on a railway platform and the following morning to go by a tedious route to Dhubri, changing at Golakgange into a train which had neither accommodation nor the ordinary comforts of the usual railway carriages ?

(c) Do Government propose to make necessary inquiries and punish the officials guilty of inefficiency and irresponsible conduct ?

Mr. C. D. M. Hindley: (a) In addition to the efforts made by the local officers to establish connection with a steamer, the Traffic Manager, on instructions from the Agent, endeavoured to arrange with the Steamer Companies at Calcutta, but they expressed their inability to do anything. The railway authorities provided (through the Deputy Traffic Manager) some funds for feeding passengers at Dhubri.

(b) and (c). Government have made inquiries. The inconvenience caused to passengers, which is much regretted, was initially due to the breaches. The first duty of the railway officials was to arrange transhipment, if possible, and endeavours in this direction were made. When transhipment was found impossible, efforts were made to arrange a steamer, and on information received from the steamer agent, the passengers were sent to Dhubri on the 7th. That the information given by the steamer agent proved incorrect was not the fault of the railway officials. Further, Government would point out that occurrences of this nature are apt to disorganise train services entirely, and it is not always possible for railway officials to arrange the conveyance of passengers with the convenience to the latter that is desirable.

In view of the succession of breaches and the fact that the situation changed three times on July 6th, Government are of opinion that the railway officials did their best under difficult conditions. In the circumstances, Government do not intend to take any action.

CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENTS OF THE AUXILIARY AND TERRITORIAL FORCES.

322. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: (a) Are the Government aware that the clerical establishments of the Auxiliary and Territorial Force units in India and Burma are not given any pension, provident fund or gratuity; and if so, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons?

(b) Is it not a fact that the clerical establishments of the Auxiliary and Territorial Force units in India and Burma are now paid directly out of military funds and considered as permanent establishments? And if so, are they entitled to have the privileges in the matter of pay, leave and other advantages as are enjoyed by the employees in the Military Department of the Government? If not, will the Government define the exact nature of the public service they belong to, and their status therein?

(c) Is it a fact that a Committee of Officers assembled at Presidency and Assam District Headquarters at Fort William on the 7th April 1924 for the purpose of considering certain questions in connection with the clerical establishments of the Auxiliary and Territorial Force units? If so, will the Government be pleased to state the decision of the Committee and also to lay a copy of the report on the table?

Mr. E. Burdon: (a) The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. As regards the second part, the necessity for the grant of such concessions has not, so far, arisen, as the clerks can be obtained under the present conditions.

(b) The clerical establishments of Auxiliary and Territorial Force units are paid from military funds. The members of those establishments are in temporary employ and are not entitled, therefore, to the privileges referred to.

(c) Yes. The Committee, which was an informal one, was assembled for the purpose of assisting Army Headquarters in the settlement of the questions referred to by the Honourable Member, which have been under consideration for some time. Government do not propose to lay a copy of the Committee's report on the table.

NUMBER OF INDIANS IN THE ALL-INDIA AND CENTRAL SERVICES ON THE 1ST APRIL 1924.

323. Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of Indians in each of the All-India Services on the 1st April 1924 and the proportion of Indians in each of the Services on the said date ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the number and the proportion of Indians in the Central Services on the 1st April 1924 ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: The information is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

ESTIMATED COST OF THE LEE COMMISSION'S RECOMMENDATIONS.

324. Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : Will the Government be pleased to state the estimated cost of the recommendations of the Lee Commission's report distributed among each of the Provinces and the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett: If the recommendations of the Lee Commission are accepted in the form in which they were made the estimated cost distributed between the Government of India and the Provinces is as follows :—

	Lakhs.
Government of India	26
Madras	9.7
Bombay	9.7
Bengal	9.3
United Provinces	10.8
Punjab	9.1
Burma	10
Bihar and Orissa	4.9
Central Provinces	5.7
Assam	2.9

The calculation has been made on the basis of a 16 pence rupee, and as exchange has been higher, the actual expenditure in the current year would be less ; but, on the other hand, it is possible, as the Commission recognised, that the number of officers taking advantage of the passage concession in the first few years will be more than normal. Secondly, the above calculation does not take into account the cost of the recommendations regarding house rent and medical attendance, which it is not possible to estimate accurately. In addition, there will be a sum of approximately 1¼ lakhs for the first year increasing by roughly the same figure every year for about 14 or 15 years, representing the cost of the pension concessions, of which it is not possible to show the distribution among the different Governments. The above represents the figures of cost as calculated by the Commission itself. To this may have to be added a sum of approximately 18 lakhs per annum if it is decided to extend the Commission's proposals to officers of the Great Indian Peninsula and East Indian Railways which will shortly become State managed lines and to officers of Company managed lines.

Against these extra charges must be set expected savings increasing annually due to replacement of European personnel by Indian. I can give no estimate of their amount or of their distribution among the various Local Governments.

NOMINAL VALUE AND COST PRICE OF BRITISH SECURITIES HELD IN THE PAPER CURRENCY AND GOLD STANDARD RESERVES.

325. Baboo Runglal Jajodia : Will the Government be pleased to state the purchase and present prices in sterling and in rupees of the British securities held in the Paper Currency Reserve and the Gold Standard Reserve, respectively ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The sterling securities in the Paper Currency Reserve are entirely in the form of British Treasury Bills which are purchased, renewed, and realised from time to time at current rates. Their nominal value and cost price are both given in the weekly Abstract of the Accounts of the Currency Department published in the Gazette of India.

The Gold Standard Reserve, on the other hand, contains other securities besides Treasury Bills. Their nominal value and estimated market value are given in the quarterly accounts published in the Gazette of India. The accounts as on the 31st March 1924 were published in the Gazette of India of the 14th June 1924. The cost price of the securities, whose market value on the 31st March 1924 is stated therein as having been £39,999,059, was £39,978,159.

INCREASE OF CURRENCY IN INDIA.

326. Baboo Runglal Jajodia : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if representations have been received from the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and from the Indian Mining Federation, and has the attention of the Government been drawn to a Resolution unanimously passed at a joint Conference of the departments of Industries, Agriculture, etc., in Calcutta on the 5th July last on the subject of increasing the amount of currency to meet the increased and growing demands of commerce and trade ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps are intended to be taken in that direction ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) The reply to the first part is in the affirmative and to the second in the negative.

(b) I would invite the attention of the Honourable Member to the Government's recent reply which has already appeared in the press to the representation by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce.

EXPENDITURE ON INSURANCE.

327. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) What is the approximate annual expenditure of the Government of India on insurance of properties or stores or machinery belonging to the Government of India against fire, marine or any other kind of risk ?

(b) Has it been the practice of the Government of India in the past to insure their goods with foreign insurance companies who employ foreign capital ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The information is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

RECRUITMENT FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA SECRETARIAT.

328. Mr. Bhubanananda Das : (a) Will Government be pleased to enunciate their policy of recruitment of staff for their Secretariat departments under their control ?

(b) Do they encourage people of all the Provinces of India to stand for recruitment to the Secretariat of India ?

(c) Do they encourage recruitment of officers to the Departments under their control in the Provinces where Central Government offices are located ?

(d) Do they recruit such officers direct or arrange recruitment through the respective Provincial Governments ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : (a) The clerical staff of the Government of India Secretariat is recruited through the Staff Selection Board by means of competitive examination, subject, where necessary, to the satisfaction of communal requirements.

(b) The examination is open to candidates from all parts of India.

(c) In Provinces where Central Government offices are located heads of Departments are ordinarily empowered to recruit subordinate staff by the employment of local men.

(d) Such recruitment is made direct and not through the respective Provincial Governments.

EMPLOYMENT OF ORIYAS IN THE PUBLIC SERVICES.

329. Mr. Bhubanananda Das : (a) Are Government aware that minor races like the Oriyas receive no recognition nor share in the posts recruited by the Central Government ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state if there are any Oriyas employed in the Imperial Secretariat and the emoluments they receive ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state the present number of Oriya officers in the—

(1) Postal Department,
(2) Income-tax Department,
(3) Salt Department,
(4) Customs Department,
(5) Forest,
(6) Railways ?

(d) Are Government prepared to instruct departmental heads in the sub-province of Orissa that in every instance they will give preference to Oriyas both in the provincial and subordinate cadre ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : (a) Government make no attempt to give each of the many races in India a definite share of the posts under the Central Government.

(b) A jemadar on Rs. 29-8 a month.

(c) The information will be obtained.

(d) The policy of the Government of India is to prevent a preponderance of any one class or community in the Public Services. Heads of Departments subordinate to the Government of India have been instructed to bear this policy in mind in recruiting for posts under their control and no further instructions seem necessary.

EMPLOYMENT OF ORIYAS ON THE BENGAL-NAGPUR RAILWAY.

330. Mr. Bhubanananda Das: (a) Is it not a fact that the B. N. Railway derive large profits from pilgrims visiting Orissa ?

(b) Is it not a fact that the B. N. Railway has over 600 miles of running lines along the Oriya-speaking tracts ?

(c) Are Government aware that the B. N. Railway seldom employs Oriyas in its railway staff ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to call for a statement from that Railway regarding present employment of Oriyas as—

(a) Engineers,

(b) Assistant Traffic Superintendents.

(c) Station masters,

on the B. N. Railway ?

(e) Are Government prepared to lay down a policy for this railway to reserve a certain proportion of employment for Oriyas in its track running over the Oriya-speaking country ?

Mr. C. D. M. Hindley: (a) Government have no information in regard to the precise extent of pilgrim traffic on the Bengal Nagpur Railway.

(b) Yes.

(c), (d) and (e). The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to somewhat similar questions asked by Mr. B. N. Misra in the Legislative Assembly of the 2nd July 1923.

MILITARY OR CIVIL LINE OVERSEER IN THE ARMY REMOUNT DEPARTMENT.

331. Mr. Abdul Haye: (a) Will the Government please state what is the original budgeted pay of a Civil and Military Line Overseer in the Army Remount Department ?

(b) What are the duties of a Civil and Military Line Overseer and what qualifications are required of him ? Is it necessary that he should also have veterinary qualifications ?

(c) Who is at present holding this post and when was he appointed ?

(d) What pay and allowance does he get ?

(e) If he is getting more than the budgeted amount has the sanction of the Government been obtained to this additional expenditure. If so, when ?

(f) Since the creation of this post, what additional expenditure (if any) has the Government borne which was not originally provided for in the budget ?

Mr. E. Burdon: (a) The pay provided in the budgets of the years 1904 to 1907 for the appointment of Military or Civil Line Overseer was Rs. 150 per mensem. Since 1907 this has been increased to Rs. 170 per mensem.

(b) The duties of the Military or Civil Line Overseer are—

(i) to supervise the management of the stallion stable No. 11 at Babugarh ;

(ii) to assist the District Remount Officer in matters connected with horse-breeding operations, horse shows and fairs held in the area, and to make arrangements for the purchase and branding of young stock and mares ; and (iii) to look after both Imperial and Provincial stallions, pharmacies, gear, clothing, saddlery, etc.

He is required to have a working knowledge of veterinary subjects but not a specific veterinary qualification.

(c) A serjeant of the India Miscellaneous List, who was appointed on the 27th April 1922.

(d) Pay at Rs. 150 per mensem plus staff pay at Rs. 20 per mensem, and such allowances as are admissible to a regimental non-commissioned officer of corresponding rank.

(e) He is not being paid more than the budgeted amount.

(f) Nil.

COMPULSORY RETIREMENT OF RISALDAR MAJOR HABIB-UL-RAHMAN OF THE ARMY REMOUNT DEPARTMENT.

332. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Is it a fact that Shahzada Habib-ul-Rahman who served as an Indian Officer and was lately working in the Army Remount Department was made to retire after he had put in only 28 years of service and before he had earned his full pension ?

(b) What is the usual limit of service after which an officer in the military compulsorily retires ?

(c) Is it a fact that Risaldar Lal Chand who has succeeded to the vacancy caused by Risaldar Major Habib-ul-Rahman's retirement has already put in 31 years of service ?

(d) Is it a fact that on a previous occasion Risaldar Lal Chand was refused confirmation because his work was reported on as unsatisfactory ?

(e) If the answer to parts (c) and (d) be in the affirmative, will the Government please state the reasons which led the Government to retain the services of Risaldar Lal Chand in preference to Shahzada Habib-ul-Rahman ?

Mr. E. Burdon : (a) On the reduction of the complement of Indian officers authorised for the Remount Department as a measure of retrenchment, Risaldar Major Habib-ul-Rahman, Bahadur, was selected by the head of the department for discharge to pension as being the least suitable for retention in the Department.

(c) Jemadar Lal Chand has not been appointed permanently to the vacancy caused by the retirement of Risaldar Major Habib-ul-Rahman. This Jemadar, who was employed in the Shahpur area, Sargodha, was merely transferred to the Amritsar area to replace Risaldar Major Habib-ul-Rahman as a temporary departmental arrangement.

(d) No, the confirmation of Jemadar Lal Chand was not refused. On the expiry of this Indian officer's probationary service in the department, he was recommended by his Commanding Officer for retention permanently in the department, but in the interests of the service it was thought necessary to extend the probationary period so as to obtain confirmation of the recommendation made by the Commanding Officer.

(e) This question does not require an answer in view of the information which I have given.

HARDSHIPS OF INDIAN LABOURERS IN BURMA.

333. Mr. B. Venkatapatiraju : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Government are aware that the labourers from India emigrated to Burma are ill-treated and ill-paid and unscrupulously exploited ?

(b) that the workman's breach of contract is fully made use of by the employers ?

(c) that the labourers are often cheated by the maistries ?

(d) that the Burma Government are unwilling to protect those unfortunate men and women ?

(e) Owing to the disproportion of sex there is good deal of immorality in the labour population ?

(f) that the housing accommodation is quite inadequate and even 30 to 40 people are occupying one or two rooms ?

(g) that the Burma Finance Committee is reported to have stated that if the conditions of employment are inadequate it is for the different Provincial Governments from which the labourers came to make inquiries into the matter ?

(h) Do the Government propose to consider the advisability of instituting an inquiry into those matters and publish a statement about the condition of their wages, hours of work, sanitary arrangements, housing accommodation and medical relief and enforcement of penal clauses under breach of contract of service and generally the physical, moral and economic condition of Indian labourers in Burma ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) to (g). Government have seen statements to this effect in a recent publication.

(h) The Government of Burma have been asked for a report.

INCOME FROM ADVERTISEMENTS ON TELEGRAPH FORMS.

334. Mr. B. Venkatapatiraju : Will the Government be pleased to state what amount has been realised up to now by permitting advertisements on telegraph forms ? What would be the additional cost of utilising better paper for telegraph forms so as to make the message more readable ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (i) Rs. 18,988-4-9

(ii) The additional cost would be about Rs. 5,000 a year.

NUMBER OF AND EMOLUMENTS PAID TO I. C. S. OFFICERS IN 1913 AND 1923, RESPECTIVELY.

335. Mr. B. Venkatapatiraju : What was the number of and the amount paid to I. C. S. officers in 1913 and what was the number of and amount paid to I. C. S. officers in 1923 ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The figures for 1913-14 and 1923-24 are as follows :—

	Numbers.
1923-24	1,290

Pay including leave salary and all allowances except travelling allowance.

Serving under Provincial Governments ..	1913-14 ..	225 lakhs.
	1923-24 ..	254 lakhs.
Serving under Central Government ..	1913-14 ..	25 lakhs.
	1923-24 ..	41 lakhs.

INCREASE OF EMOLUMENTS IN THE CIVIL AND MILITARY SERVICES.

336. Mr. B. Venkatapatiraju : Will the Government be pleased to state whether as stated by Mr. Montagu in Parliament the increase of emoluments to the Indian Civil Service was £360,000, Indian Police Service £130,000, Indian Educational Service £100,000, British Officers of Indian Army and British troops £1,700,000, Indian Medical Service £250,000, total £2,540,000 ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The figures quoted were obtained by converting the estimated extra cost in rupees into sterling at the rate of 2 shillings per rupee. It is not correct now to say that the extra cost in sterling is as stated in the question, as exchange is now far below 2. If the sterling figures be reconverted at ten rupees to the pound sterling, the result will be correct.

PAY AND PENSION OF THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

337. Mr. B. Venkatapatiraju : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the statement made by Earl Winterton in Parliament is accurate that the initial pay of I. C. S. Officers has been raised to 50 per cent. and that under the time scale, officers receive yearly increments and that a substantial increase has been made in the pay of officers in the ordinary line ?

(b) Is it a fact that the pension of £1,000 annually is from 1919 being usually assumed by the State, the 4 per cent. contribution previously enforced being funded for the benefit of officers on retirement ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : (a) The pay of Indian Civil Service officers in their first year of service was raised from Rs. 400 a month to Rs. 600 a month with effect from 1st December 1919. The average increase of pay granted at this time is estimated to have been about 10 per cent.

(b) 4 per cent. contributions paid after 1st April 1919 are funded for the benefit of officers on retirement.

LIBERALISATION OF THE LEAVE RULES, ETC.

338. Mr. B. Venkatapatiraju : Is it a fact that the leave rules are liberalised and greater facilities are given for leave on higher pay and furlough pay is based on 12 months' salary instead of the average of 3 years as formerly and whether it is a fact that it is to the advantage of an officer to be on leave drawing higher pay than serving in the department drawing smaller pay and whether steps were taken to remove this anomaly ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The Honourable Member has asked five questions in one. The answer to the first three is broadly in the affirmative. The answer to the fourth is that it is not always a fact, but it does sometimes happen that an officer is better off on leave than on duty. As regards the fifth, the reply is that the question is under consideration.

OVERSEAS PAY OF THE SUPERIOR SERVICES.

339. Mr. B. Venkatapatiraju : Is it a fact that the improvement in the pay of the Superior Services is to a large extent represented by the overseas allowance and is it not a fact that overseas pay is much more and not less than double the exchange compensation allowance which was abolished ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : It is difficult to generalise ; but roughly speaking, the suggestion in the first part of the question is correct. Exchange compensation allowance ranged from Rs. 25 to Rs. 138, and overseas pay ranges from Rs. 125 to Rs. 250.

EXPENDITURE INCURRED IN CONNECTION WITH H. E. THE VICEROY AND HIS ESTABLISHMENTS.

340. Mr. B. Venkatapatiraju : Is it a fact that the Viceroy with his establishments costs 12 lakhs of rupees ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to the answers given by me and the Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee to similar questions by Mr. T. C. Goswami on the 14th February 1924 and 8th March 1924. To the information then given I need only add that the salary of the Governor General is Rs. 2,50,800 per annum.

AVERAGE INCOME PER HEAD IN INDIA.

341. Mr. B. Venkatapatiraju : Is it a fact that Indian income is about 20 dollars per head and if not what is the Government estimate ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I would refer the Honourable Member to my reply to starred question No. 151 on page 185 of the Legislative Assembly debates of the 5th February 1924.

QUESTIONS RELATING TO KENYA AND THE POLL-TAX IN FIJI.

342. Mr. B. Venkatapatiraju : Will the Government be pleased to state the result of deliberation of the Colonies' Committee regarding the Kenya problem and the poll-tax in Fiji and whether the Government are prepared to publish even now the Fiji Deputation report long overdue ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : As regards Kenya the Honourable Member is referred to the statement made by the Secretary of State for the Colonies in the House of Commons in reply to Mr. Mills on August 7th. For the convenience of Honourable Members a copy of the statement is laid on the table. The result of the representations made by the Colonies Committee in regard to Fiji is not yet known. The publication of the report of the Fiji Deputation is still under consideration.

London, August 7th, 1924.

In the House of Commons to-day, Mr. Mills asked whether the Secretary of State for the Colonies was in a position to make a statement with regard to representations recently made to him on certain matters affecting Indians in Kenya by the Indian Colonies Committee.

Mr. Thomas, replying, said : I will take the subjects in the order in which they were raised by the Committee.

(1) Immigration.—My position is that if danger ever arises of such an influx of immigrants, of whatever class, race, nationality or character, as may likely be prejudicial to the economic interest of the natives, I hold myself entirely free to take any action which may be necessary. Conflicting statistics which have been laid before me have not enabled me to reach a definite conclusion as regards the extent of net Indian immigration. Accordingly steps will be taken to create a statistical department to obtain accurate information with regard to persons of all races arriving in or departing from Kenya. Meanwhile the Kenya Immigration Ordinance will not be enacted.

(2) Franchise.—I have given careful consideration to representations in favour of a common poll, but I am not prepared to resist the conclusion already arrived at that in the special circumstances of Kenya, with four diverse communities, each of which will ultimately require electoral representation, the communal system is the best way to secure the fair representation of each and all of these communities.

(3) Highlands.—I consider that the Secretary of State for the Colonies has no alternative but to continue pledges, expressed or implied, which had been given in the past, and I can hold out no hope of the policy in regard to agricultural land in the Highlands being reconsidered.

(4) Lowlands.—It was proposed to reserve an area in the Lowlands for agricultural immigrants from India. The Committee made it plain that it is averse from any reservation of land for any immigrant race, subject to the suggestion that before applications for land in Lowland areas are invited an opportunity should be taken of sending an officer experienced in Indian settlement and agricultural methods to report on the areas. At present any consideration of the matter is in suspense pending receipt from the colony of reports from the native and agricultural points of view on the areas in question.

Floods in Southern India.

343. Mr. B. Venkatapatiraju : Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Government of India received any communication from the Local Government regarding the great devastation and damage caused by the recent floods in Southern India and the loss estimated by them and steps taken to give relief and to restore the damaged roads, etc., to normal condition and whether they applied for any relief from the Imperial Government ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : Intimation has been received from the Local Government regarding the occurrence of floods in parts of the Madras Presidency but except in the case of railways details as to the extent of the damage caused are awaited. So far the Government of India have not received any report indicating the steps taken by the Local Government to give relief, etc., or any application asking for relief.

INCREASE IN THE RATE OF INTEREST ON POSTAL SAVINGS BANK DEPOSIT.

344. Mr. B. Venkatapatiraju : Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Government have ever considered the desirability of increasing rate of interest to 4 per cent. on postal Savings Bank deposits and utilising the said amount by loaning at 6 per cent. to the Co-operative Banks.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The Government do not consider it desirable to increase the rate of interest on postal Savings Bank deposits.

THE POST OFFICE AND INSURANCE WORK.

345. Mr. B. Venkatapatiraju : (a) Have the Government considered the question as to whether the Post Office has a very large field for development as insurance agency to the public at large ?

(b) Was the Director General consulted whether it is a feasible scheme ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : The question of extending the scope of the Postal Insurance Scheme has been raised, and is receiving careful consideration.

EXTRA EXPENDITURE INCURRED BY THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA FROM 1917 TO 1923.

346. Mr. B. Venkatapatiraju : Will the Government be pleased to state the total amount incurred on account of extra expenditure since 1917 till the end of the official year 1923 over and above the normal expenditure and how much of it was due to War and how much was due on account of increased pay and allowances, pensions, etc., to Government servants, civil and military, and whether any portion of it was spent for productive or developmental purposes ? Whether the whole excess can be placed at 500 crores of rupees and how much of it was met by increased taxation and how much by loans ? Whether it is a fact that non-productive debt was reduced to 3 crores only by 1916 ? What is the amount of unproductive debt at the present moment or as far as figures are available ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The Honourable Member is referred to the Finance and Revenue Accounts for the various years and the Finance Member's Budget speeches from 1917 onwards, copies of which will be found in the Library. If the Honourable Member wishes to have any information which he cannot obtain from these papers, I shall be glad if he will speak to me on the matter.

STATEMENT LAID ON THE TABLE.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee (Industries Member) : Sir, I lay on the table a statement furnished by the High Commissioner for India showing the cases in which the lowest tenders have not been accepted by him in purchasing stores for the Government of India during the half year ending the 30th June 1924.

HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR INDIA, INDIA STORE DEPARTMENT.

ABSTRACT OF CASES in which Tenders, other than the lowest offering suitable goods, were accepted on the grounds of superior quality, superior trustworthiness of the firm tendering, greater facility of inspection, quicker delivery, etc.

HALF YEAR ENDING 30TH JUNE, 1924.

PART A.—Cases in which lower foreign tenders, including British tenders for foreign made goods, have been set aside wholly or partially in favour of British tenders.

Stores ordered.	Contract Number.	Name of Contractor.	Amount of contract.	Lowest Tender not accepted.	Reason for acceptance.
Axles, engine . . .	D. 706-38, 18th February 1924.	Wm. Jessop & Sons, Ltd. .	324 0 0	250 19 0 (German).	One item of three crank axles was stated by the Railway Board, after a summary of the tenders had been telegraphed to them, to be urgently required. The lowest tenderers were unable to guarantee delivery within the period required, and it was therefore necessary to order the three axles in question from the lowest British firm. For the remaining axles the lowest tender (German) was accepted.
Wheels and Axles .	D. 1600-2429, 14th May 1924.	Wm. Beardmore & Co., Ltd.	2,340 0 0 (German) for 60 pairs.	1,434 0 0	212 pairs of wheels and axles were indented for by telegram, delivery being required at the rate of 20 pairs a month commencing by May, 1924. The lowest satisfactory tender came from the Bochumer Verein, but shipment could not be expected to commence before August if this tender was accepted. It was therefore necessary to place an order for 3 months' supply with the lowest tenderer who could be relied upon to give quick delivery. Sixty pairs were accordingly ordered from Beardmore and Co., who promised to commence in 5 weeks. The balance of the order was given to the Bochumer Verein.
PART B.—Cases in which the discrimination is between British or between Foreign firms and not between British and Foreign.
Windlass	D. 76-8849, 7th January 1924.	Clarke, Chapman & Co., Ltd.	131 0 0	108 0 0	Superior value. The lower offer was for a less powerful machine, and the accepted tender was well within the price estimated by Burma.
Chasers . .	D. 251-0040, 18th January 1924.	E. H. Pickford & Co., Ltd. .	15 11 0	12 17 0	Considered better value, the stores offered being much stronger and heavier and worth more than the difference in cost.

PART B.—Cases in which the discrimination is between British or between Foreign firms and not between British and Foreign.—contd.

Dog Spikes . . .	D. 456-30, 30th January 1924.	A. de Barsy . . .	5,309 10 9 (at £12-1-0 per ton). for T. Cwts. qrs. lbs. 439 14 1 4	5,100 13 0 (at £11-12-0 per ton).	The dog spikes were urgently required in India. The lowest tenderer had proved unreliable as regards deliveries so was only entrusted with a portion of this large order, viz., 146 tons (approx.).
Level	D. 524-210, 4th February 1924.	E. R. Watts & Son, Ltd. .	25 0 0	22 0 0	The lower quotation included a bubble reading attachment generally considered suitable; but the accepted tender included a Zeiss prism reading attachment, at an extra cost of only £3, which the Indenting Department is known to prefer.
Steel, mild, bar. . .	D. 896-672, 6th March 1924.	Patent Shaft & Axletree Co., Ltd.	34 8 6	32 17 2	The lower tender did not offer delivery in time to meet the urgent requirements of the Indenting Department.
Axles, steel, engine . .	D. 994-657, 21st March 1924.	Bochumer Verein . .	777 4 0 (German).	752 0 0 (German).	As the stores were stated to be urgently required, the order was placed with the second lowest tenderer at the small extra cost of £25 in order to secure delivery two months earlier than the time offered by the lowest.
Boiler . . .	D. 1175-8533, 8th April 1924.	James Neilson & Son, Ltd. .	580 0 0	568 0 0	The Indenting Department asked for the boiler to be delivered in India by the 31st January, 1924, the indent being received in the Store Department on the 21st November, 1923. The delivery specified could not be secured at such short notice, nor could the boiler be obtained in time to allow of payment in the financial year 1923-24. Enquiries had therefore to be made regarding budget provision, and it was not possible to place the order before the 8th April. In view of the urgency it was decided to pay the small extra sum of £12 to secure delivery about four weeks earlier than that offered by the lowest tenderer.
Binoculars . .	D. 1910-2618, 3rd June 1924.	J. W. Atha & Co. . .	209 0 0 (German Zeiss glasses with British Cases).	204 0 0 (French glasses and Cases).	Better value. Both the glasses and cases offered by Atha were considered superior to those offered by the lower tenderer and well worth the small difference in cost.
Carbonate of Soda . .	D. 2079-2213, 13th June 1924.	Brunner Mond & Co., Ltd. .	26 19 6	26 0 0	Superior value. Accepted tenderer's sample was of better quality.

(A Voice : " Three ".)

STATEMENT OF BUSINESS.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman (Home Member) : Sir, I wish to give Honourable Members such information as I can as to the course of business during the current session.

[Sir Alexander Muddiman.]

After to-day the next meeting will be on Monday, the 8th, when we hope to take up the second readings of the Bills on to-day's agenda. On Wednesday, 10th, we are prepared to set down the Government Resolution on the Lee Commission's Report, if the House is agreeable to that course. If the House thinks that it has not had sufficient notice, I am prepared to postpone the debate. If the debate begins on the 10th and continues on the 11th, we hope to conclude on the 12th.

Honourable Members will probably desire some explanation of the course of the meetings, during the first week. The explanation is this. Government legislation for the time being is held up on account of the fact that several Bills are being referred to Select Committee, and until opportunities can be had for Committees to sit and report to the House, no further progress can be made. We always find it difficult to get together Select Committees at the time when the House is sitting. It seems desirable that we should during the first week devote as much time as possible to finishing off these Committees. At present two Select Committees will sit to-morrow, the 4th, one on Friday, the 5th, and one on Saturday, the 6th. If the business before the House is finished on Monday by lunch time, a Committee will sit in the afternoon and two on Tuesday, the 9th. I hope that most of the Bills in Committee will come back to the House promptly, so that there will be no lack of business from the 10th onwards. I am assuming that the debate on the Lee Commission's Report will be finished not later than Friday, the 12th. Monday, the 15th, will be devoted to a Government Resolution on the subject of the separation of Railway finance. Tuesday, the 16th, and Tuesday, the 23rd, have been allotted for non-official Bills, and Thursday, the 18th, for non-official Resolutions. I hope that, subject to the orders of H. E. the Governor General, Monday, the 22nd, will also be allotted for unofficial Resolutions. The remaining days of the session will be occupied by further stages of the Bills now pending in this House. The Bills which we hope we will be able to dispose of finally are the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Bill, the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Bill, ordinarily referred to as the Morality Bill, the Imperial Bank of India (Amendment) Bill, the Indian Merchant Shipping (Amendment) Bill, and those new Bills which appear on the list of business for to-day. In addition there are three or four other Bills which will be introduced in another place which I hope will come before this House for consideration, before the end of the session. I anticipate the session will close on or about the 23rd or 24th.

Dr. H. S. Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions: Non-Muhammadan): Sir, after the statement made by the Honourable the Home Member that there is a paucity of work during the first week, owing to the necessity of convening meetings of various Select Committees, may I inquire what was the necessity for calling up the whole House when, according to the statement made by the Honourable the Home Member, only certain members of the Select Committee were all that was necessary for the purpose of convening the meetings of the various Select Committees to make further progress with the Bills ? I beg to ask what necessity there was for Government to convene a meeting of the Legislative Assembly to-day, which is not likely to last for another hour, and then to adjourn it from to-day to the 8th September ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: One of the very obvious reasons is that two Select Committees cannot sit until the House passes the business on the agenda to-day. Secondly, it is well known to Dr. Gour that Honourable Members will not come up unless the House is in session. That is the reason why we have got a meeting to-day.

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the United Provinces : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, is it not possible for the Honourable the Home Member to give us a third day, with the sanction of H. E. the Governor General, for non-official Resolutions, even if it is necessary to extend the session by a day ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I shall do my best to consider my Honourable friend's suggestion, but I must point out that two days for Bills and two days for Resolutions have been allotted for unofficial business. Compared with the Government business it is a very fair proportion.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : It does not compare with the number of non-official Resolutions.

Dr. H. S. Gour : Is it not a fact that over 200 Resolutions are pending disposal and yet the Honourable the Home Member considers that two days constitute sufficient time to dispose of those Resolutions ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: Would the Honourable Member consider three days as sufficient time for 200 Resolutions ?

Sir Henry Moncrieff Smith (Secretary, Legislative Department): I would add to that that there are far more than 200 Resolutions, and I calculate that if the House sat for five days in every week, the pending Resolutions would not be finished in a year.

Dr. H. S. Gour : Is that not a sufficient reason why more days should be allotted to non-official Resolutions ?

Pandit Shamlal Nehru (Meerut Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): You might allot some days between for non-official Resolutions.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : Committees are sitting on every day between those dates and surely the House will require some time to prepare for the large debate on the 10th instant.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar (Madras City: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Having regard to the fact that so much non-official business is pending, I suggest that this session should be prolonged for a week longer.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I understand that there is very grave objection to this. The Pujah holidays begin in Bengal at the end of this month and I doubt if the House will wish to sit during that period.

(Several Honourable Members: " We have no objection to sit.")

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Do Government realise that the small amount of time allotted for non-official business is creating a great deal of dissatisfaction in the public mind ? The matter of the number of Resolutions pending has been dealt with somewhat lightly by the Secretary of the Legislative Department. The fact that we cannot dispose of Resolutions pending, even sitting for five days in a week, in the course of a year, is a very strong reason why many more days should be set apart for non-official Resolutions. These Resolutions deal with questions of vital interest to the people. The Government call a meeting of the Assembly at great public cost. We come up here at the sacrifice of private business. Is it not fair, therefore, that Government should consult the Members of the Assembly in the matter of fixing dates for non-official business, and is it not only fair that the Government should extend the session even if a few Members should not be able to continue to stay here to the end ? I think some of the Members will forego their Pujah holidays if the interests of the country demand their presence here. I therefore urge that there is very great reason why more days should be assigned to non-official Resolutions, and I hope that Government will reconsider the matter.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

Mr. President: Enough has been said to show Government the feeling of the House in this matter, and I am sure that Honourable Members may rely on the Honourable Home Member making recommendations in the proper quarter in that sense.

THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE (AMENDMENT) BILL.

NOMINATION OF MR. K. C. NEOGY TO SERVE ON THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

Sir Henry Moncrieff Smith (Secretary, Legislative Department) : Sir, I beg to move :

"That Mr. K. C. Neogy be nominated to serve on the Select Committee to consider and report on the Bill further to amend the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, for certain purposes."

This particular Committee is without a Chairman, owing to the absence of Sir Henry Stanyon, and Mr. Neogy has consented to take his place if the House so pleases.

The motion was adopted.

THE INDIAN CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT BILL.

NOMINATION OF MR. K. C. NEOGY TO SERVE ON THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman (Home Member) : Sir, I beg to move :

"That Mr. K. C. Neogy be nominated to serve on the Select Committee to consider and report on the Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for the purpose of affording greater protection to persons under the age of eighteen years."

This Committee is also in the same position as the previous one, namely, without a Chairman, owing to the absence of the same gentleman, and my Honourable friend has kindly agreed to serve, if the House so desires.

The motion was adopted.

THE INDIAN MERCHANT SHIPPING (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. J. W. Bhore (Secretary, Department of Education, Health and Lands) : Sir, I beg to ask for permission to incorporate in the motion the names of the Select Committee which I have given in the motion.

I beg to move :

"That the Bill to amend the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1923, for certain purposes be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the following :

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum,
Mr. M. A. Jinnah,

Mr. Kabeer-ud-Din Ahmed,
Sir Henry Monerieff Smith,
Mr. W. S. J. Willson,
Khan Bahadur Wali Mohamed Hussanally,
Captain Ajab Khan,
Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar,
Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan,
Haji Syed Abdul Khadar Sahib Jeelani, Khan Bahadur Maulvi Ghulam Bari, and
Mr. J. W. Bhore,

and that the number of Members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be 7."

Sir, it is not necessary for me to take up the time of this House in retraversing the ground covered by Sir Montagu Butler in introducing this Bill. I would, however, like, even at the risk of some repetition, to emphasize this fact, that in bringing forward this measure, the Government were merely acting in response to pressure from many quarters to deal, on the general lines of this Bill, with this problem of destitute Haj pilgrims, a problem which, as the Honourable Members of this House know, has now assumed serious proportions. I would also like to emphasize the fact that the Central Haj Committee in this country and the Haj Committee in Jeddah were both emphatic and unequivocal in their opinion that the only possible hope of a satisfactory solution lay along the lines which are followed in this Bill. Sir, when this Bill was introduced, the Government, after consultation with the Muhammadan Members of this House, realised that it was not a measure which could be rushed through in a single session. Touching, as it does, a matter which is of the utmost importance to the Muslim faith, it was felt that the very widest opportunity should be given to all who were concerned to make themselves acquainted with its provisions and to understand all its implications. With the sanction of this Assembly the measure was circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon, and the result of this circulation is now before the Honourable Members of this House. I venture to assert, Sir, that it is clear beyond doubt that the bulk of educated and responsible Muhammadan opinion in this country is generally in favour of this measure. Further, practically all Local Governments have also lent it their support. In these circumstances, Sir, the Government feel not merely that they are justified in proceeding with this measure, but that they ought to do so, in view of the fact that they feel that the bulk of responsible Muhammadan opinion is in favour of it. There are, it is true, certain provisions of this Bill which have elicited adverse comment, and I think the bulk of that criticism is directed against clause 5. Now, Sir, I would like to make it clear that there is no sinister intention behind that clause. It originated, if I may say so, in a suggestion from the Bombay Government that no pilgrim ships should be allowed to sail from any port in the Presidency on a date later than the 10th day of Zilkada, the reason for that being that there had been many complaints that Indian pilgrim ships often arrived too late to enable Mecca to be reached in time for the Haj. In view, however, of the opposition which this clause has evoked, and as this clause is not really concerned with the substance of the Bill, I may say that Government are quite prepared to delete it. There are also certain other minor provisions of the Bill in regard to which too there has been some criticism, and I may say at once that the Government are quite prepared to consider any modification that may be necessary to meet such objections as are reasonable, and such objections as have a real measure of public support behind them, when this measure goes into Select Committee. All these matters, Sir, can, I think, best be considered in Select Committee, and I therefore beg to move the motion which I have just read out.

The motion was adopted.

THE IMPERIAL BANK OF INDIA (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, like Mr. Bhore, I have to ask your permission to amend the form of this notice by including in it the names of the Members whom it is proposed to appoint to the Select Committee. It was impossible to do this before because it had not been possible to obtain the assent of individual Members to take part in the Select Committee.

The motion I have to make, therefore, is :

"That the Bill to amend the Imperial Bank of India Act, 1920, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of :

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar,
Pandit Motilal Nehru,
Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas,
Mr. H. G. Cocke,
Mr. K. C. Neogy,
Mr. Bipin Chandra Pal,
Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta,
Mr. W. S. J. Willson,
Mr. Ahmad Ali Khan, and the mover ;

and that the number of Members necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be 5."

I need not enter at all deeply into the questions raised in this Bill. It has been circulated for opinions and the opinions have been received. They show the desirability of one or two small amendments which I think can be best dealt with in Select Committee. There is one general point however which I would like to touch on. More than one of the opinions received refers to the desirability of restricting the scope of the measure so that it should give assistance to banking companies registered under the Indian Companies Act and to no other companies, that is, that it should be confined to Indian companies with rupee capital, operating in this country. This is a comment which has been made by a good many of those who have given opinions on this Bill, but it is due, I think, to a misapprehension. The amending Bill definitely refers to banking companies within the meaning of section 13 of the Imperial Bank of India Act. This section refers to banking companies carrying on business in India of which the capital is divided into shares, and the explanation to the section says :

"For the purposes of this section, 'banking company' means any company formed for the purpose of carrying on the business of banking, and registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or the law relating to companies for the time being in force in British India."

The amending Bill therefore is already confined to Banking companies registered in India under the Indian Companies Act ; and the foreign exchange banks and others to which reference is made are already outside the scope of the Bill. I thought it desirable to draw attention to that in public because there has been some misunderstanding on the matter. I will not enter into any of the other smaller items which I hope will be dealt with by the Select Committee, and I will therefore confine myself to moving the motion which I read out.

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, with reference to the motion which has just been passed I am asked by the Secretary in the Legislative Department to say that it is proposed, if it is convenient to members of the Select Committee on the Imperial Bank of India (Amendment) Bill, to hold a meeting to-morrow morning at 11 O'clock.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, there is another meeting of an important Committee to-morrow which I have to attend.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas (Indian Merchants' Chamber : Indian Commerce) : The same applies to me. Sir Charles Innes will perhaps tell the Finance Member that he is convening to-morrow at 11 A.M. a meeting of the Central Railway Advisory Committee which is rather important.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : It is evident that I had better withdraw for the moment that notice and give private notice to the members of the Committee as to when they will meet. It shows, however, the desirability of the early meeting of the Assembly.

THE LAND CUSTOMS BILL.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate, amend and extend the law relating to the levy of duties of customs on articles imported or exported by land from or to territory outside British India.

The purpose of this Bill is stated fully in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. It is a longish Bill but is fairly simple in its purpose. As things stand at present the only laws which govern the collection of land customs in British India are those which are now in force in Madras and Bombay. These laws have for many years been felt to be entirely insufficient and defective and it has not been possible in fact to work the system of land customs except by using the corresponding provisions in the Sea Customs Act as a guide to the way in which customs ought to be collected rather than the law under which they are actually collected on the land frontiers. The matter has become more urgent owing to the fact that the administration of customs is now a Central subject and is being taken over and centralised by the Government of India. At the present moment the Collector of Customs in Madras, who is an Imperial Officer and is collecting sea customs as an officer of the Government of India, is for the particular purpose of collecting land customs an officer of the Madras Government. It is not a convenient arrangement and the Madras Government is anxious to bring it to an end. Similar conditions obtain in Bombay. Further there was an Act passed in the last session, the Indian Tariff (Amendment) Act, 1924, to apply the customs tariff, or parts of it, to goods crossing the frontier of any foreign territory. That Act is quite inoperative on at least one important frontier, namely, the frontier between Burma and Siam, owing to the absence of any Act governing the collection of land customs on that frontier. It is proposed by this small Bill to remedy these defects. The Bill has been kept quite simple for this reason, that the Government of India have in hand the question of the general revision of the law relating to sea, land and air customs. It was hoped at one time that it might be possible to introduce such a Bill this session but it is a somewhat complicated matter and the Bill is not yet ready for introduction and even after introduction may take some little time to examine. Meanwhile it is very desirable that we should have the power to collect these land customs where necessary. This Bill, therefore, is to some extent an interim measure which will enable us to act in the matter of land customs in advance of the time, whenever that may be, when we pass a revised and consolidated Customs Act dealing with customs generally. I beg to move.

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I introduce the Bill.

THE COTTON GINNING AND PRESSING FACTORIES BILL.

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes (Commerce Member) : Sir, I move for leave to introduce a Bill to provide for the better regulation of cotton ginning and cotton pressing factories.

I do not think I need detain the House very long over this Bill today, specially as at a later stage I hope to get the House to refer it to a Select Committee. The Bill is intended to deal with certain malpractices which are known to be carried on in cotton ginneries and presses. For its origin I must take the House back to the report submitted by the Indian Cotton Committee in 1919. That report covered every aspect of the cotton problem,. and when the Committee were considering the question what measures could be taken to secure for the cultivator an adequate price for his cotton they at once found themselves up against such questions as adulteration, the mixing of different varieties, and these malpractices in ginneries and presses. We have already dealt with one only of these problems, namely, that of the mixing of different varieties of cotton, by the Cotton Transport Act which we passed last year. That Act has been applied to certain areas of the Bombay Presidency, and I am informed that so far it has had a very useful effect. Now we are taking up those recommendations of the Cotton Committee which relate to these malpractices. I do not think that the House can accuse us of undue precipitancy in this matter, for I think we have consulted Local Governments already twice in this matter and we have been in continuous and close consultation with the Central Cotton Committee. At this stage I think all that I am concerned to do is to prove to the House that these malpractices do exist and do require the attention of the House. I do not think that I can do better than refer the House to paragraph 219 of the Indian Cotton Committee's report. They say :

> "The evidence in regard to these malpractices which we received was overwhelming and the numerous inspections of ginneries and presses which we made showed us that the complaints were justified."

Then they proceed to differentiate between deliberate malpractices, such as the watering of cotton, the mixing of cotton with waste, the mixing of cotton damaged by rain with good cotton, and so on, and abuses arising from faulty conditions—that is to say, the lay out of the ginneries.

They continue :

"We are much impressed by the magnitude of these evils and the necessity of providing some remedy for them. The protection of the interests of the third party, the cultivator, must always be a paramount consideration with Government in the case of a country which is so predominantly agricultural as India. That the existence of the malpractices in ginneries and presses, for which he is not at all or only to a very small extent responsible, must have a very serious effect on the price he obtains for his produce is a point which need not be laboured."

The Cotton Committee proposed a system of licensing of ginneries and presses, their main object being to enable unsatisfactory cotton to be traced back to the original gin or the original press. We have not gone as far as the Central Cotton Committee proposed. We are frightened of this system of licensing which will make much official inspection necessary and might lead to abuses. The main object of the Bill is to put the trade in a position to protect itself. With that object we provide for the marking of all bales, for a system of registration in ginneries and in presses, and in clause 12 of the Bill we give power to reject unmarked bales in fulfilment of contracts. We include other useful provisions in the Bill in regard to the submission of returns, the use of correct scales and weights, and the structural improvement of ginning and pressing factories. But all these points will be discussed, I hope, not only in the House but in Select Committee. I hope I have proved to the House that there are very serious malpractices in these ginneries and presses which do require the attention of this House and this being so, I beg for leave to introduce this Bill.

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : I introduce the Bill.

THE INDIAN POST OFFICE (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee (Industries Member) : Sir, I move for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Indian Post Office Act, 1898, for certain purposes.

This is a very minor measure. Honourable Members who have correspondence with foreign countries must have noticed that in many cases they receive letters without any postage stamps but with merely the impression of a stamp fixed on the letter or on the envelope by a machine. This practice has been sanctioned by the International Convention of the Postal Congress at Madrid in 1920. The system is quite simple. Certain machines have been patented and the users and purchasers of the machine obtain a licence from the Post Office Department. A postal official locks one of the meters in the machine for a certain amount. The machine then works only up to that fixed amount. When that amount is exhausted, the machine cannot be worked any further. We want to introduce this system in India for the convenience of the general public and this Bill is meant to safeguard the Post Office and the State from any fraudulent acts that might be committed in using these machines. We have satisfied ourselves that ordinarily all such frauds would be easily discovered and the system will be carefully watched.

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Sir, I introduce the Bill.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Monday, the 8th September, 1924.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Monday, 8th September, 1924.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

RESERVE CLERKSHIPS AND BRANCH POSTMASTERSHIPS IN BIHAR AND ORISSA.

1641. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (a) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a list of the accepted candidates for reserve clerkships and Branch Postmasterships in Bihar and Orissa during the years 1922 to 1924 ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state :

(i) how many vacancies have occurred in Branch Postmasterships and reserve clerkships during 1922, 1923, and 1924 ?

(ii) how many of them have been filled up ?

(iii) what principle has been adopted in filling up those vacancies ?

(iv) how many persons, if any, other than the registered candidates have got provisions in those vacancies and under what circumstances ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : The collection of the information asked for by the Honourable Member will entail very great labour in a large number of offices. I shall be glad to inquire into any particular case which the Honourable Member may bring to my notice where there has been substantial injustice which has not been redressed on appeal.

APPOINTMENT OF BINDESWARI PRASAD MISRA, A PROBATIONER IN THE POST AND TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT, TO A PERMANENT VACANCY.

1642. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (1) Are the Government aware of the facts that :

(a) Bindeswari Prasad Misra of Gogri was appointed as a probationer in the Post and Telegraph Department under the orders of the Superintendent of Post Office, Monghyr Division, Bihar and Orissa, on the 17th January 1923 ?

(b) his name was registered and he was allowed to learn Post Office work after furnishing a security of Rs. 300 in the prescribed form and promised that he would be given a permanent appointment as soon as a vacancy occurred ?

(c) he worked as a probationer and was attached to the Gogri Post Office for about four months ?

(d) he has not been provided with any permanent appointment as yet ?

(e) he will be overage for Government service in July 1925 ?

(2) If so, will the Government be pleased to state the reason for his not being appointed as yet and whether or not he is going to be appointed in future ? If he is not going to be appointed, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons for the same ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (1) (a) Yes.

(b) Yes, but there was no specific promise of a permanent appointment.

(c) Yes, but the period was only 2½ months.

(d) Yes.

(e) Yes.

(2) A number of men who were enlisted as unpaid probationers before B. P. Misra and have had a longer training are still waiting for reserve clerkships and, as there was no chance of his receiving such an appointment before reaching the age of 25, his name has been removed from the list of candidates by the Postmaster-General, Bihar and Orissa. If Mr. B. P. Misra has any grievance, he has the right of appeal to the Director General which he has not yet exercised.

EXERCISE OF MAGISTERIAL POWERS BY EXECUTIVE OFFICERS IN CANTONMENTS.

1643. Dr. H. S. Gour : (a) Are the Government aware that by a notification, dated the 11th March, 1921, published in the C. P. Gazette of 1921, Part I, page 296, Major J. Ardoino was appointed Cantonment Magistrate, Kamptee ?

(b) Is it a fact he has been given summary powers under section 260 of the Code of Criminal Procedure ?

(c) Is it a fact that since the enactment of the Cantonment Act (Act II of 1924), which came into force on the 1st May, 1924, it has been the policy of the Government to appoint no Executive Officer to discharge any judicial function of a civil or a criminal character within the Cantonment area (Vide Army Department letter No. 25314-1-A.D., dated the 3rd March, 1924) ?

(d) If so, how is it that Major J. Ardoino still continues to exercise magisterial powers in Kamptee though he has been appointed Executive Officer under the new Cantonment Act ?

(e) Will the Government please explain whether the combination of executive and judicial functions in the same Cantonment Officer is consistent with the policy of the Government of India laid down in its letter No. 25314-1-A.D., dated Delhi, the 3rd March, 1924, paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 ?

(f) Do the Government propose to take steps to see that no Executive Officer of a Cantonment is given magisterial powers, or is suffered to wield them in pursuance of a notification issued before the enactment of the new Cantonment Act ?

Mr. E. Burdon : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes, in 1921.

(c) Yes.

(d) Major Ardoino was required by the Local Government as a matter of practical convenience to complete the trial of two cases which he had commenced to hear in his capacity of Cantonment Magistrate. The cases in question were compounded on the 17th July 1924.

(e) No.

(f) The case of Major Ardoini which forms the subject of the Honourable Member's question was of an entirely special character which could arise only in the period of transition to the new form of Cantonment administration. The general orders which the Government of India issued will effectively prevent the exercise of judicial powers by Executive Cantonment officers in any other case.

EMPLOYMENT OF CIVILIANS AS EXECUTIVE OFFICERS IN CANTONMENTS.

1644. Dr. H. S. Gour: (a) Are the Government aware that Mr. Burdon in a speech dated the 24th July, 1923, promised to very favourably consider the proposal of the Select Committee that the Executive Officer of a Cantonment should be an officer in the civil employ ?

(b) What effect have the Government given to this recommendation and how far have the Government been able to redeem the promise made by them ?

(c) Have the Government referred to the Secretary of State the terms of services which they promised to introduce ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of military officers still employed as Executive Officers of Cantonments and those still wielding magisterial jurisdiction ?

Mr. E. Burdon: (a) Yes.

(b) The undertaking has been carried out. The Executive Officers of the temporary Cantonments Department constituted are in civil employ.

(c) The terms of service granted provisionally to members of the Cantonments Department were referred to and sanctioned by the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India.

(d) The answer to the first part of the question is 36. The answer to the second part is nil.

SEPARATION OF EXECUTIVE AND JUDICIAL FUNCTIONS IN CANTONMENTS.

1645. Dr. H. S. Gour: (a) Is it a fact that His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, in his statement dated the 14th February 1924, stated that the combination of executive and judicial powers of the Cantonment Magistrate would cease, and that the judicial work which he performed would be transferred to the Civil Judicial staff of the Provincial Governments and that the executive powers will, in future, be vested in the Executive Officer who will also be the Secretary of the Cantonment Board ?

(b) How far have the Government been able to make good this promise and in respect of what cantonments does the Executive Officer wield both judicial as well as executive powers ?

(c) What steps do the Government propose to take for the speedy termination of the combination of such powers condemned by Government ?

Mr. E. Burdon: (a) Yes.

(b) As regards the first part of the question, the necessary orders have been issued. To the latter part, the answer is nil.

(c) In view of the reply to part (b), this question does not arise.

RACIAL DISTINCTIONS ON RAILWAYS.

1646. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer: (a) Are the Government aware that Indian passengers holding tickets are not allowed entry into railway platforms before the arrival of the trains while third class Anglo-Indian and European passengers are admitted to the platforms ?

(b) Are the Government aware that in some big stations where sleeping accommodation is provided Indian passengers find difficulty in admission and are sometimes not admitted while third class Anglo-Indians are admitted ?

(c) Are the Government aware that in overcrowded trains with hardly sitting accommodation for Indian passengers, compartments reserved " For Europeans and Anglo-Indians Only " are seen either empty or with one or two passengers therein ?

(d) Do the Government propose to take immediate steps to remedy the above racial distinctions in the Railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). The reply is in the negative.

(c) and (d). I am aware that it occasionally happens that compartments reserved for Europeans and Anglo-Indians are not fully occupied when other compartments on the same train, not so reserved, are full or practically full, and I wish to take this opportunity of explaining exactly what the policy of Government is in this matter. We do not think the reservation of intermediate class compartments for Europeans and Anglo-Indians is any longer required by traffic considerations, and we have, therefore, issued instructions for its cessation on State-managed railways. These instructions will apply to the East Indian Railway when it comes under State management at the end of this year. The reservation of intermediate class compartments has already been discontinued on all other Companies' railways.

It has also been our policy to reduce the reservation of third class compartments, and from the statement which I lay on the table the Honourable Member will see that the practice has already been reduced to very small dimensions.

Statement showing the third class accommodation reserved for Europeans and Anglo-Indians.

INDIAN AND EUROPEAN RAILWAY REFRESHMENT ROOMS.

1647. *Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer: (1) Is it not a fact:

(a) that the space allotted to the Indian refreshment rooms in several railway stations is much smaller than the space allotted to the European refreshment rooms, where both exist?

(b) that the passengers resorting to the Indian refreshment rooms are numerically much larger than those who go to the European refreshment rooms?

(c) that the conveniences such as lighting and water supply provided by the Railway Companies to the European refreshment rooms are much greater than those provided to the Indian?

(d) that in some important stations where the need for Indian refreshment rooms exists only European refreshment rooms are provided?

(2) Do Government propose to inquire into the above state of affairs and take necessary steps to improve the same?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: (1) and (2). Government have no information on the points raised by the Honourable Member. They have frequently impressed on Railway Administrations the need for improving the arrangements for refreshments for Indian passengers and specifically brought to their notice in April last the question of providing Indian refreshment rooms where they are required.

Sardar V. N. Mutalik: Have Government received any reply to their representations to the Railway Companies?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: Not that I know of. We merely drew their attention to this matter.

Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally: Will Government be pleased to inquire if they have carried out their instructions?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: If the Honourable Member can give me any specific instance we will certainly inquire into it.

Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally: But it is generally known that these instructions are not carried out.

PROPOSED VASAD-BORSAD-KATANA RAILWAY.

1648. *Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: (a) Will Government be pleased to state how far the project of the Vasad-Borsad-Katana Railway line has progressed?

(b) Do Government propose to expedite the matter by providing the requisite funds in the Railway Budget for the year 1925-26?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: (a) The revised project estimate of the Vasad-Borsad-Katana Railway is being re-examined by the Agent, Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway, and a fresh traffic survey has been ordered.

(b) Until the revised project estimate and the traffic report have been examined it is not proposed to allot funds.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas: When do Government expect this matter to be decided by the Railway Board after the examination that they are carrying on at present?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I cannot give the exact date. It will not be very long with the Railway Board. They will consider the matter as soon as they have heard from the Agent.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Are Government aware that this scheme has been under consideration for the last 25 years ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : It is because it has been under examination for 25 years that we have had to revise the estimates.

Sardar V. N. Mutalik : When will the revised estimates be ready ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am afraid I cannot say.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Are Government aware that certain members of the Central Advisory Railway Committee brought this matter prominently to the notice of the Railway Board last January ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : That is why we have asked for a revised estimate.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Then they are tarrying too much over it.

OUTRAGE ON AN INDIAN WOMAN WORKER IN THE FEDERATED MALAY STATES.

1649. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a statement from one Mr. C. R. Naidu appearing in the Voice of India, dated 16th June, 1924, under the title " A White Man's Lust " ?

(b) Is it true as alleged in the statement that in the Federated Malaya States an Indian woman worker was outraged by her European master under circumstances of barbarity and violence ?

(c) Have Government received any information regarding the result of the prosecution said to have been started against the offending Manager ? If so, what ?

(d) What steps, if any, do Government propose to take to prevent the recurrence of such inhuman outrage on Indian workers there ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) The Manager and Assistant Manager of the Estate concerned were tried for the principal offence and abetment thereof respectively. The former was sentenced to 12 months' rigorous imprisonment and the latter acquitted.

(d) As the Honourable Member is aware offences of this kind are punishable under the criminal law of the country concerned which must be allowed to take its course. The Government of India, however, have asked their Agent who has exercised commendable vigilance in such cases whether he considers any special steps to be desirable and on receipt of his report will decide what action, if any, they shall take.

DISMISSAL OF MR. MOHANLAL TRIBHUVANDAS, CHIEF CLERK OF THE DISTRICT TRAFFIC SUPERINTENDENT, BULSAR, B. B. AND C. I. RAILWAY.

1650. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) Are Government aware of the existence of a body called the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway Employees' Association ?

(b) Are Government aware that the said Association has been working for the last four years and has 400 members on its roll ?

(c) Are Government aware that among its members are European and Anglo-Indian employees of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway ?

(d) Are Government aware that on the 30th June, 1923, Mr. Manilal Kothari, the Honorary Secretary of the Association, convened a meeting of " All Railway Employees " at Bulsar ?

(e) Are Government aware that at the said meeting speeches were made about the grievances of the railway employees only ?

(f) Are Government aware that for attending the said meeting one Mr. Mohanlal Tribhuvandas, the chief clerk of the District Traffic Superintendent at Bulsar, was dismissed ?

(g) Do Government propose to inquire into the matter and see that justice is done to Mr. Mohanlal ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b), (c) and (e). Government have no information.

(d) Yes.

(f) He was dismissed for disobedience of orders.

(g) No. The matter is sub judice as Mr. Mohanlal has filed a civil suit against the Railway for dismissal.

APPOINTMENT OF PASSENGER SUPERINTENDENTS ON THE VARIOUS RAILWAYS.

1651. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) Have Government employed any superintendents on the various railway lines ?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, will Government state the number of these superintendents with their salaries, allowances and other remuneration ?

(c) Will Government state the duties assigned to the said superintendents and also whether and how far they have proved useful to passengers ?

(d) Have Government received any reports from these superintendents as to how Railway administration can be improved and economised ?

(e) If the answer to (d) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the substance of those reports and the action they propose to take thereon ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes. In response to a Resolution passed by the Assembly in the Delhi session of 1921, passenger superintendents were appointed on the principal railway lines in India.

(b) There are at present 58 passenger superintendents employed on salaries ranging from Rs. 50 to Rs. 250 per mensem.

(c) Their duties are to assist third class passengers generally in such matters as taking of tickets, finding platforms and trains, securing accommodation, and the like. On some Railways the passenger superintendents have not been found useful, and they have been abolished ; on other Railways they are considered to be performing a useful function.

(d) It is not the business of these superintendents to make suggestions as to how the Railway Administration can be improved and made more economical!

(e) Therefore does not arise.

OUTRAGE ON AN INDIAN WOMAN WORKER IN THE FEDERATED MALAY STATES.

1652. *Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : (a) Have Government seen a report in the Voice of India, dated the 16th June 1924, regarding the alleged conduct of a European Manager of the Sangli Regla Perak Estate in the Federated Malay States, who is said to have forcibly removed a Telugu cooly woman working on the said estate with the intention of outraging her modesty ?

(b) Have the Government of India's Agent at Penang submitted any report to them regarding this incident and if so will Government be pleased to place a copy of the said report on the table ?

(c) Has the said European Manager been tried in a court of law and if so what is the result of such trial ?

(d) Have the Government of India been able to devise any steps by which persons guilty of such attacks on cooly women can no longer work in the area served by indentured labour from India ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : (a) and (c). The Honourable Member is referred to my reply to question No. 1649 by Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta.

(b) Copies of the reports received from the Agent of the Government of India in Malaya are laid on the table.

(d) The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given to part (d) of question No. 1649 asked by Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta.

3. In the second case, I received information on the evening of 23rd that an Indian girl had been raped in Sungei Reyla estate. I proceeded by the earliest available train to Ipoh and from there went to Sungei Siput station about seven miles from Sungei Reyla estate. At Sungei Siput, I noticed a gang of about forty Telugus loitering in the bazar. When I questioned them they said they had come away from Sungei Reyla estate as one of them had been raped and they pointed out the girl. I took that girl, her husband and another labourer in my motor car and drove to the estate. After some local inspection, I commenced to inquire into the matter. The Deputy Controller of Labour, Penang (Mr. Abearne), and Extra Assistant Controller under training (Mr. A. S. Reddi—Indian) who had heard about this affair from the local police joined me and the Deputy Controller agreed that I should complete the inquiry I had already commenced and that he should help me where necessary. Briefly, the facts of the case are these. On the morning of 19th, at about 2, the Manager of the estate Mr. Johnson and the Assistant Manager Mr. Jessamine drove from the club to the lines where the labourers are living. The Manager went up to the hut of Errasami and pushed open the door and called out Geddama—Errasami's wife. Both husband and wife came out of the hut. The Manager pushed out the husband and dragged the girl to the car, lifted her into it and drove the car to the bungalow of the Assistant Manager. The Manager took the girl who was screaming the whole time into a spare bedroom and cohabited with her four times. The girl then returned home crying at about 5 A.M. Errasami had in the meantime roused his neighbours and all of them were waiting outside the lines when Geddama turned up and related her misfortunes. All the labourers, about forty in number, left the estate in a body and went to the nearest railway station Sungei Siput and also laid information at the Police Station there with the result that the two men, Manager and his Assistant, were arrested. They were both released on bail. The Manager attempted to commit suicide by swallowing some prussic acid. Happily however, the acid was dilute and the fact was discovered. Necessary medical aid was rendered and the Manager was re-arrested. During the Police investigation, however, a serious blunder had been committed owing to faulty interpretation. The complainant is a Telugu. The Police Officer, who took her statement is a Malay and the man who interpreted the Telugu of Geddamma into Malay is a Tamil Muhammadan. Complainant is alleged to have stated to the Police that both the Manager and the Assistant Manager had intercourse with her. I spoke to the Deputy Public Prosecutor, who was in charge of the case with the result that he suggested to the Magistrate that his case against the Assistant Manager was only one of abetment in that he lent the use of his room to the Manager. The case against the Manager was fully inquired into and both the Deputy Controller of Labour, Penang, and myself watched the case and occasionally helped the Deputy Public Prosecutor. It was argued on behalf of the Assistant Manager that the Manager was to have taken the girl to the house of the Manager but that the latter changed his mind at the last moment and got into one of the rooms without the consent of the Assistant Manager. In the end, the Assistant Manager was discharged and the Manager has been committed to the Assizes (Sessions). I shall report further details after the case has been disposed of in the Assizes.

6. The Sungei Reyla rape case referred to in paragraph 3 of my last report was tried at the Ipoh Assizes on 23rd June. The first accused Johnson was convicted and sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for one year and the second accused Jessamine, who was first discharged in the lower court and brought up for trial at the instance of the Deputy Public Prosecutor, was acquitted.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Will Government be pleased to state if persons who are sentenced for any crime like this are allowed to work in the same area after their release from jail ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : That is a question of fact upon which I have no information.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Will Government be pleased to make inquiries on the subject ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : I have already said that we have called for information from our Agent on that point and further action will be dictated by the result of his report.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Will Government be pleased to lay the report as soon as it is received from this Agent in Malaya on the table ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : I have already laid the reports so far received on the table.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : No. The report that you may call for.

Mr. J. W. Bhore : I will do so.

THE INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

1653. Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : (a) With reference to the Administration Report of the Indo-European Telegraph Department for 1922-23, Appendix " E ", will Government be pleased to place on the table a similar statement for the five pre-war years ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the total number of State telegrams between India and the United Kingdom in each of the five years mentioned in Appendix " E " of the Report referred to above ?

(c) In view of the fact that the Government of India are directly interested in the Indo-European Telegraph Department will Government be pleased to state if they have issued instructions to all Departments of the Central Government and to all Provincial Governments that for telegraphic communication with the United Kingdom on State service the Indo-European Telegraph line should be used as far as possible ?

(d) With reference to paragraph 4 of the Report referred to above where it is stated that the interest on capital shown against the years 1919-20 to 1922-23 is the interest earned in excess of the interest charges due to Government on the capital outlay, will Government be pleased to state the rate of interest thus calculated on the capital outlay for the year 1922-23 ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state to what account credit is taken for—

(i) the amount of interest on the capital locked up in the Indo-European Telegraph Department ; and (ii) the net revenue for 1922-23 which latter net revenue amounts to 6.38 per cent. of the capital ?

(f) With reference to the foot-note on page 4 of the Report will Government be pleased to give details of the cost of the London Office establishment which amounted to £2,914 in the year 1922-23 ?

(g) In view of the result of the working of the Indo-European Telegraph Department for the year 1922-23, will Government be pleased to state if they still contemplate selling or leasing this Department as recommended by five members of the Inchcape Committee in their Report ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) A consolidated statement furnishing the figures required by the Honourable Member is laid on the table.

(b) The total number of State telegrams between India and the United Kingdom is not separately recorded, but the total numbers of all foreign State telegrams, of which the great bulk are telegrams to and from the United Kingdom, during the years in question were—

Year.	Number.
1919-20	109,743
1920-21	73,796
1921-22	49,731
1922-23	33,585

(c) The answer is in the negative. The matter has been considered and decided in relation to the division of traffic between the different lines of telegraph communication between India and the United Kingdom.

(d) The average rate of interest charged in the year 1922-23 was 3.3252 per cent. on the Capital Expenditure to the end of 1916-17, and 5.48 per cent. on subsequent expenditure.

(e) (i) In the Indo-European Telegraph Department the interest charge is taken into account on a pro forma basis simply for the purpose of the Profit and Loss Account, as the whole Capital outlay has been met from revenue. Hence it is included only in the Administration Report and no account adjustment is made.

(ii) The net revenue of the Indo-European Telegraph Department is credited under the head " XV—Posts and Telegraphs ".

(g) The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given by me to a similar question No. 46, heads (a) to (c), put by him at the Legislative Assembly meeting of the 1st February, 1924. No decision on the matter has yet been arrived at.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : May I know when Government are likely to arrive at a decision in this matter ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I cannot give any definite promise.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Have not Government had enough experience of the commercial utility of this Department to enable them to come to a decision ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I think the Honourable Member is aware of the very complicated nature of the question on which a decision has to be arrived at.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : So far as I can see, the question strikes me as a very simple one in view of the results that we have seen.

AMOUNTS PAID TO INDIAN AND EUROPEAN DEPOSITORS OF THE ALLIANCE BANK.

†1654. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) With reference to starred question No. 175 of the 5th February 1924, will the Government be pleased to state if they have found out what amounts were paid to Indian and European depositors of the Alliance Bank, both in India and in Europe ?

(b) If the answer be in the negative, will the Government state their reasons ?

ALLEGATIONS CONTAINED IN THE REPORT OF THE ALLIANCE BANK OF SIMLA COMMITTEE OF INVESTIGATION.

†1655. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the report of the Committee of Investigation, appointed at a meeting of the creditors of the Alliance Bank, held on the 1st June 1923 (vide the " Amrita Bazar Patrika," dated the 12th June 1924) ?

(b) Is it a fact that although written to, " the past Directors of the Bank, with one excuse or another, failed to come forward to help the investigation " ?

(c) Is it a fact that, as stated by Mr. C. T. Allen of Cawnpore, he "strongly protested against the actions of those who were misusing the Bank and its funds;" and that he "finally quitted the Board as a protest against the management of the Bank's affairs"?

(d) Is it a fact that Mr. Ashworth, one of the Liquidators of the Alliance Bank, was asked for certain Bank books; but his "reply was evidently a dodge to avoid the request"?

(e) Are the Government prepared to make inquiries into the above, and report the result to the House?

ADVANTAGE SECURED FROM THE ALLIANCE BANK OF SIMLA BY MESSRS. BOULTON BROTHERS.

†1656. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: Is it a fact that within the short period of less than two years, Messrs. Boulton Brothers managed to secure from the Alliance Bank the following advantages:

(1) Shares of the Bank to the extent of 10 lacs.

(2) £10,000 of St. Petersburg Loan sold to the Bank.

(3) Rs. 13 lacs in 3½ per cent paper were taken by them upon the understanding that the money would be returned within 12 months in exchange for foreign and continental securities.

(4) A loan of £80,000 was received by them against non-marketable securities.

†1657. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: Did the Government make inquiries into the circumstances that led to the failure of the Alliance Bank, before sanctioning the payment from the Imperial Bank; and in view of new facts brought to light, do the Government propose to take any action?

REPORT OF THE ALLIANCE BANK OF SIMLA INVESTIGATION COMMITTEE.

(b) If so, will they please lay a copy of it on the table?

REPORT OF THE ALLIANCE BANK OF SIMLA INQUIRY COMMITTEE.

†1760. Haji S. A. K. Jeelani: (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the report of the Alliance Bank Inquiry Committee appointed to investigate into the causes of its failure?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether there are any facts in the report which were not within the cognisance of the Government before they authorised the Imperial Bank to advance 50 per cent. on the security of the Alliance Bank assets to its creditors?

(c) In the light of the facts disclosed by the Inquiry Committee, will the Government be pleased to state whether from the available assets of the Alliance Bank it is possible to recover the amount advanced ?

REPAYMENT OF ADVANCES MADE BY THE IMPERIAL BANK TO THE ALLIANCE BANK OF SIMLA.

1870. *Mr. Bhubanananda Das : Will Government be pleased to state how much still remains to be paid by the Alliance Bank liquidators to complete the repayment of advances made by the Imperial Bank of India under Government guarantees ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I shall take up questions Nos. 1654-1657, 1745, 1760 and 1870 together for the sake of convenience as these relate to the same subject.

Copies of the Reports of the Liquidators and of the Committee of Investigation have been placed in the Library. These will supply most of the information asked for. Government have no information beyond that contained in these Reports and in the press.

From a statement issued by the Liquidators on the 9th August which has already appeared in the press, I gather that they are able to pay a 50 per cent. dividend which will set the Government free from any financial liability in respect of their guarantee to the Imperial Bank of India.

For the rest, the matter is sub judice and Honourable Members have no doubt been watching the proceedings in the Court.

DISMISSAL OF HAVILDAR SANTA SINGH OF THE 8TH ARTILLERY FOR READING AN AKALI NEWSPAPER.

1658. *Sardar Kartar Singh : (1) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to an article headed, " Akali Te Pardesi Akhbar parhna jurm hai. Ek Havaldar ki mulazmat se mauqufi " (Reading of Akali Te Pardesi newspaper is an offence. Dismissal of a Havaldar), in the daily Urdu Akali of Amritsar, dated the 28th June 1924 ?

(2) (a) Is it a fact, that Santa Singh, Havaldar of the 8th Artillery stationed at Tonk, N.-W. F. P., has been dismissed from service on account of having been found reading the " Akali Te Pardesi " newspaper by the Officer Commanding ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Officer Commanding immediately after finding Santa Singh Havaldar reading the said newspaper suspended him by removing his military badges, and put him in the quarter guard ?

(c) Is it a fact that Santa Singh was handcuffed and his trial by a court-martial lasted for four days continuously ?

(d) Is it a fact that Santa Singh was fined Rs. 50 by the court-martial, was dismissed from service and was ordered to be out of bounds at once ?

(e) Is it a fact that Havaldar Santa Singh had distinguished himself on service on the battlefields of France, Chaman, Waziristan, etc., and was a recipient of several medals and certificates, and had several times officiated as a Jamadar and was about to be soon promoted to that rank ?

(f) Is it a fact that at the time of dismissal his medals and certificates were confiscated, and he was deprived of all his pay and allowances due to him ? ›

(g) Is it a fact that after being dismissed Santa Singh was taken in handcuffs to the railway station, Tonk, and was there ordered to leave the place at once while he was neither supplied with any railway ticket nor pass, nor was he given any money to enable him to reach his village in the Ludhiana District ?

(3) Will the Government be pleased to state under what rules or regulations was the reading of the "Akali Te Pardesi" newspaper by Santa Singh considered an offence ?

(4) Is the reading of newspapers by soldiers in the Indian Army prohibited ; if so, when were the orders to that effect issued, and how long is it intended to keep those orders in force ?

(5) What steps do the Government propose to take in the matter ?

Mr. E. Burdon : (1) Government have seen the article referred to by the Honourable Member.

(2) to (5). Government have made inquiries from which it appears that no incident such as the question describes has taken place. I may state for the information of the Honourable Member that the unit mentioned, the 8th Pack Battery, Royal Garrison Artillery, has never served in Tonk.

AMALGAMATION OF THE DISTRICT LOCOMOTIVE, CARRIAGE AND TRAFFIC OFFICES ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1659. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that the District Locomotive, Carriage, and Traffic Offices under the administration of the East Indian Railway are going to be amalgamated with a view to create Divisional Offices at Howrah, Asansole, Dinapore and Delhi ?

(b) If this be so, will the Sahebganj Loop District be absorbed in the Howrah District ?

(c) Are the Government aware that for 10 or 12 years there has been no improvement in the Loop District ?

(d) Is it a fact that only a year ago, the Railway administration spent some four or five lakhs of rupees to accommodate the District Locomotive and District Engineer Offices and staff at Sahebganj ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have under contemplation a reorganisation of the present system of administration on the East Indian Railway, but the proposals are not sufficiently mature to enable definite information to be given on this subject.

REPRESENTATION AGAINST THE ABSORPTION OF THE SAHEBGANJ LOOP DISTRICT IN THE HOWRAH DISTRICT OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1660. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether or not the Railway Board has received any application from Rai Sahib Khusilal, Zemindar and Vice-Chairman, Sahebganj Municipality, and Babu Rajendra Nath Ray, Pleader and Municipal Commissioner, and others, showing the injurious effect of the absorption of the Sahebganj Loop District in the Howrah District ?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to lay it on the table and state whether or not any reply has been given to the same ?

(c) If any reply has been given, will the Government be pleased to lay it on the table ?

(d) If no reply has been given, will the Government be pleased to give reasons for the same ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). A copy of the petition will be furnished to the Honourable Member. Its receipt has been acknowledged.

(d) For the reasons stated in reply to the Honourable Member's previous question no reply to the petition is possible at present.

AMALGAMATION OF THE DISTRICT LOCOMOTIVE, CARRIAGE AND TRAFFIC OFFICES ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1661. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that the East Indian Railway is going to be taken over by the State from the 1st January 1925 ?

(b) If so, is there any guarantee that the proposed amalgamation of the East Indian Railway District Locomotive, Carriage and Traffic Offices will not be altered by the State management ?

(c) Have the Government satisfied themselves or not, whether such an amalgamation will sacrifice efficiency to economy, or not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). As already stated in reply to previous questions by the Honourable Member, the matter is under consideration and Government are not in a position to make any statement.

PROVISION OF EXTRA WATERWAYS ON THE CHAPRA-MASHRAK BRANCH AND ON THE MAIN LINE, BENGAL AND NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

1662. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) With reference to my starred question No. 1166 of the 2nd June 1924, regarding the floods in Bihar and the waterways on the Railway embankments, has the attention of the Government been drawn to the following passages occurring in the press communiqué, dated the 4th October 1921, issued by the Government of Bihar and Orissa, and published in the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council debates, Volume III, no. 7, page 314:

"Mr. Bremner visited the District, and discussed the question of waterways with the Agent and Chief Engineer of the Bengal, North-Western Railway, and with the Collector. It was agreed that the waterways provided in the Chapra-Mashrak Branch were altogether inadequate, and that more will be provided either by bridges or by causeways with adequate vents at ground level. It was also agreed that more and better waterways should be given on the main line west of Siwan !".

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state if more waterways have been provided on the Chapra-Mashrak Railway, and on the main line, since the date of the press communiqué ? And if so, how many ; and of what dimensions ?

(c) If the answer to (b) be in the negative, will the Government be pleased to state their reasons ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have seen the passage referred to.

(b) and (c). All the works agreed upon have been completed. A list showing the amount of extra waterway provided, is placed on the table.

List showing extra waterways provided on the Chapra,-Mashrak Branch and on the main line Bengal and North-Western Railway.

The extra waterways given on the Chupra-Mashrak Branch are :—

Mile 2/6	(Chain 125·00)	=	Causeway 1,000 ft.
„ 4/6	„ 225·00	=	„ 1,000 „
„ 5/4-5	„ 286·90	=	Bridge No. 8B (1-3' Barrel Drain) which was destroyed during the flood has been replaced by 4 spans 5 ft. arches.
„ 6/6	„ 332·15	=	A new bridge 5 spans of 4 ft. arches.

The extra waterways given on the main line are :—

In Bihar & Orissa, at mile 243/1 (Chain 3735·60)=2 spans of 6 ft. arch between Savan and Bhata Pokhar stations.

Do. at mile 249 (Chain 4050)=8 spans of 6 ft. arches between Bhata Pokhar and Mairwa stations.

In the United Provinces, at mile 260½ (Chain 235·40)=6 spans of 6 ft. arches between Bankata and Bhatpur Rani stations.

FLOODS AND RAILWAY EMBANKMENTS IN THE SARAN DISTRICT, BIHAR AND ORISSA.

1663. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the following passages in the report of the Chief Engineer and Secretary to the Government of Bihar and Orissa in the Public Works Department, on the question of floods and Railway embankments in District Saran published as press communiqué, dated the 11th October 1921, Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council debates, Volume III, No. 7:

"A good deal of the drainage of Siwan and Gopalganj Sub-Divisions falls into the trough between the main line of the Bengal, North-Western Railway, and Saran embankment ; and flows in a south-easterly direction towards Sonepur. The drainage of the whole area north of the main line of the Bengal, North-Western Railway, i.e., of about 80 per cent. of the District crosses the main line sooner or later ! "

"The Daha which is the main drainage channel of Siwan and Gopalganj Sub-Divisions, is crossed just after passing Siwan station ! "

"There is a strong local feeling in favour of having a culvert made at this place, which is supported by the Sub-Divisional Officer, Siwan ! "

"In my opinion the waterway was not sufficient to pass the abnormal rain of the 15th September ; but is ample for ordinary heavy rain. Beyond Bhatapokhar station at mile 249 the line was a serious obstacle to drainage. There is a culvert near the place, but this was quite unable to take the water. The Chief Engineer of the Railway admits an afflux of 6 feet at the place where the line was cut, and the Agent has accepted the necessity of a bridge ! "

(b) Have additional waterways been provided at Daha, and beyond Bhatapoker Station as recommended by the Chief Engineer ? If so, how many, and of what dimensions ? If the answer to the above be in the negative, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have seen the passages referred to.

(b) There was no suggestion for additional waterway at the Daha. Extra waterways have been provided at the following places :—

At mile 243—2 spans of 6 ft. arches to replace a 3 ft. opening. This is the culvert referred to as supported by the Sub-Divisional Officer, Siwan.

At mile 249 (Chain 4050)—8 spans of 6 ft. arches.

At mile 260½ (Chain 235.40)—6 spans of 6 ft. arches.

FLOODS IN BIHAR.

1664. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the following passages in the report of the Chief Engineer and Secretary to the Government of Bihar and Orissa, published as press communiqué, dated 11th October 1921:

"The Doronda-Maharajaganj Branch does not seriously obstruct the drainage, but appears to hold up the water to some extent. The question of additional waterway may be considered when the detailed report of the afflux at each opening is received ?"

"The Chapra-Mashrak Branch—The failure of the first six miles of this branch to pass the flood is the great cause of complaint against the Railway. The waterway was totally inadequate to pass the heavy flood ?"

"The water backed up against the Railway until it was levelled with the rails both in the branch and main lines. The Chapra-Mashrak line was either cut or breached early on the morning of the 16th. It would have breached in any case as the waterway was insufficient to pass the impounded water. The Chief Engineer of the Bengal North-Western Railway states that the line was cut at all the places ?"

"The wide breaches are all in the first six miles where the Railway runs through low ground, and obstructs the drainage ?"

"The effect of the blocking of the drainage by the Mashrak Branch was to increase greatly the flood level immediately west of the line, with the result that almost all the houses in villages lying west of the Railway collapsed. The damage to houses and property would have been comparatively small had there been sufficient waterway to pass the flood ?"

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state how many waterways have been provided in this section of the Railway line as recommended in the report ; and of what dimensions ? If the answer be in the negative, will the Government kindly give the reasons ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have seen the passages referred to.

(b) Doronda-Maharajganj Branch.—The afflux levels recorded did not show that any increase of waterway was necessary.

As regards extra waterways on the Chapra-Mashrak Branch, the Honourable Member's attention is invited to the list† I have placed on the table.

FLOODS IN BIHAR.

1665. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the following passages in the report of the Chief Engineer and Secretary to the Bihar and Orissa Government published as press communiqué, dated 11th October 1921:

"The only outlet being closed, the water could not get away except through the Railway sluices, which only drain a limited area ?"

"In the afternoon of the 15th the flood from the west came down, and backed up by the Mashrak Branch began flowing into the town ?"

"In view of the fact that the Gogra was low, there was no reason for Chapra town suffering anything like so much damage, had there been proper arrangements for dealing with the drainage and the flood. The damage was of course intensified by the failure of the Mashrak Branch to pass the flood?"

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state if "a large increase in waterway on the Mashrak Branch" has been provided as recommended in the report referred to above? And if not, why not?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: (a) Government have seen the passages in question.

(b) The reply is in the affirmative. The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the list† placed on the table.

PREVENTION OF FLOODS IN BIHAR.

1666. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the proceedings of a conference of officials and non-officials held on the 30th September 1921, and published in the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council debates, Volume III, No. 8, pages 373—374, in which it is reported that Mr. W. S. Bremner, Chief Engineer, Irrigation Branch of the Public Works Department, Government of Bihar and Orissa, stated that "he would settle with the Railway Agent what measures should be taken to prevent future floods"?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the exact nature of the settlement referred to above, and of the measures taken to prevent future floods?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: (a) Government have seen the proceedings referred to.

(b) At the request of the Railway Administration, Mr. Bremner was deputed by the Bihar and Orissa Government to discuss the question of waterways in the district affected by the exceptional flood in 1921, and as a result, the additional waterways considered necessary to prevent future floods, have been provided.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: Has the attention of the Government been drawn to a publication entitled "Defective Waterways on the B. N. W. Railway in the district of Saran" by George Nixon?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: I am afraid I must ask for notice.

PROVISION OF ADDITONAL WATERWAYS ON THE BENGAL AND NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY TO MEET FLOOD SITUATION.

1667. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: (a) Are the Government aware that in reply to question No. 419 of the 10th March 1921, relating to the "inadequate provision of culverts and waterways on the Bengal and North-Western Railway line from Barauni Junction to Katihar Junction," the Government stated in this House that "judged by ordinary conditions, this section of the line is not provided with waterways to the extent that would be normally considered necessary"; and that "the culverts were never intended to be flood openings, but to deal with impounded water from local rain-fall"?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state if additional waterways have been provided on this Railway since the date of the reply to meet flood situations ? If the reply be in the negative, will the Government kindly give the reasons ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: (a) Yes, but the Honourable Member will no doubt have noticed that the reply went on to say that the amount of waterway provided was in accordance with the unanimous decision of a committee, representing all interests which met to consider the question at Bhagalpur on 5th December 1898. The inference was therefore plain that the question was decided with due regard to the special conditions obtaining in the locality.

(b) The reply is in the negative and the reason for not providing more waterway is given in the reply to the first portion of the question.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: Are Government aware of the fact that in reply to a question on the recent floods in Bihar, the Local Government in the course of a statement in the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council on the 29th August 1924 stated as follows:

"Several telegrams have been received from the residents of Saharsa, Makna Bazar, Mansi, Pasraha and Khagaria reporting that scores of villages were flooded, cattle were dying for want of fodder and that people were in great distress. They prayed for more outlets in the B. N. W. Railway line in various places."

What steps do Government propose to take in the matter ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: I must ask for notice.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: Do the Government propose to take any action on this ?

Mr. President: The Financial Commissioner has very properly asked for notice.

Prevention of Floods in North Bengal.

1368. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: (a) With reference to question No. 149, asked in the Council of State on the 18th March 1924, regarding floods in North Bengal, will the Government be pleased to publish the recommendations of Rai Bahadur Ralla Ram, I.S.O., who was specially appointed by the Railway Board to undertake the investigation of the subject ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state if additional waterways on the (i) Santhar Jamalgunj Railway section ; (ii) Santhar-Kahaloo section ; and (iii) Sara-Serajgunj Railway line, have been provided, as recommended in the report ?

(c) If the answer to the above be in the negative, will the Government be pleased to state their reasons ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Six copies of the Report by Rai Bahadur Ralla Ram, I.S.O., on the Northern Bengal floods are already in the Library.

(b) and (c). The position is as follows:

(i) Santhar-Jamalgunj section.—The desirability of additional waterway has been recognised and a special survey for the purpose has recently been completed. No waterway has, however, been provided pending the abandonment of the Metre gauge railway embankment.

(ii) Santahar-Kahaloo section.—460 feet of additional waterway have been so far provided against the 480 feet recommended, and it is considered that the slightly reduced provision will prove adequate.

(iii) Sara-Serajgunj Railway.—A bridge with about 600 feet of waterway has been completed which give 50 per cent. more additional waterway than was recommended.

PROPOSED CONSTRUCTION OF A RAILWAY FROM MUZAFFARPUR TO SITAMARHI.

1669. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) With reference to my starred question No. 119 of the 4th February 1924, regarding the construction of the Muzaffarpur-Sitamarhi Railway line, have the Government asked for the views of the Government of Bihar and Orissa on the subject, as promised ; and will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the reply ?

(b) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the following question asked in the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council on the 25th July 1921 :

" Are the Government aware that great inconvenience is felt by the inhabitants of the Sitamarhi Sub-Division, in coming to its District Headquarters, Muzaffarpur, for want of a direct Railway line between the two ? "

to which the following reply was given by the Government :

" The necessity for the proposed line has been brought to the notice of Government by the Comissioner of the Division ; and it has been included in the list of Railway projects recently prepared for early construction " ?

(c) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the following reply given by the Government of Bihar and Orissa in the Local Legislative Council, on the 22nd November 1921 on this subject :

" The suggested line has been included in the list of new Railway projects for early construction, which has been sent to the Railway Board ? "

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state if they are prepared to sanction the early construction of a direct railway between Muzaffarpur and Sitamarhi ?

If the reply be in the negative, will the Government kindly give their reasons ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The matter is still under correspondence with the Government of Bihar and Orissa and the Government are not in a position to lay on the table a copy of the papers.

(b) and (c). The reply is in the affirmative.

(d) In view of the reply given to (a) above the Government are not at present in a position to say if and when the Muzaffarpur-Sitamarhi Railway will be sanctioned for construction.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that in reply to a question on this subject in the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council on the 19th August 1924 the Local Government stated " that Government are unable to give any date as to when the construction of the line in question will be taken in hand. The matter is now under correspondence with the Railway Board." ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I was not aware of the fact, Sir, but I am glad that the opinion expressed by the Government of Bihar and Orissa coincides with that which I have just given to the Honourable Member.

COMPLAINT AGAINST THE HOWRAH RAILWAY STAFF.

1670. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : With reference to my starred question No. 1106 of the 30th May 1924, regarding the complaint against the Howrah railway staff, will the Government be pleased to state what punishment has been inflicted upon the booking clerks concerned ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The only information Government possess is that the booking clerks concerned were adequately punished. Government do not know the exact form which the punishment took.

PROVISION OF A LATRINE AND FEMALE WAITING ROOM AT AHMADPUR JUNCTION STATION ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1671. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to a signed letter headed " Railway grievances," published in the " Amrita Bazar Patrika," dated the 22nd June 1924 ?

(b) Is it a fact that there is no latrine or female waiting room at Ahmadpur Junction Station on the East Indian Railway ?

(c) What steps have been taken to remedy the grievances complained of ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes. Government understand that the traffic does not warrant the provision of a female waiting room and that the provision of a latrine is under consideration.

(c) Government understand that No. 1 Up Ahmadpur-Katwa train generally runs punctually, and that in June this train missed its connection with No. 27 Up East Indian Railway train at Ahmadpur on only one occasion. Also Government are informed that the interval between the former and latter train at Ahmadpur has recently been increased to 25 minutes.

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST THE STAFF OF THE BENGAL, NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

1672. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to a signed letter headed " Ways of Railway Staff," published in the Searchlight of Patna, dated 8th June 1924 ?

(b) Are the allegations made therein with reference to the staff of the Bengal, North-Western Railway substantially correct ? And what action has been taken in the matter ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) No.

(b) A copy of the Honourable Member's question and of this answer has been sent to the Agent in order to draw his attention to the fact that such an article was published.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : With regard to the answer given to part (a) of my question, I beg to point out that I enclosed a cutting of the Searchlight newspaper along with my question. I presume it has been made over to the Government for answer ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: It must have been mislaid. Sir. I have not seen it.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: I think the Legislative Department ought to look into the matter. I sent it.

INCOME-TAX ASSESSMENT.

1673. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the "Amrita Bazar Patrika," dated the 26th June 1924, in which a paragraph has appeared relating to the judgment of the Patna High Court, in the case of the Honourable Mr. Sachidanand Sinha, who moved against the assessment of his income-tax without giving him an opportunity of filing his objections ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state how much public money has been spent in defending the reference at the Patna High Court ?

(c) Is there any truth in the statement made in the newspaper referred to that "there are many cases of illegal assessment and unnecessary harassment which do not come to light, and in which the parties find no relief" ? Do the Government propose to take any steps to control Income-tax Officers in enhancing assessments ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett: (a) The Government have seen the paragraph.

(b) The Government have not the information desired.

(c) No.

ECONOMY IN MILITARY EXPENDITURE.

1674. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: (a) Have the Government of India appointed any Committee for the purpose of making recommendations for economy in the military expenditure, as stated by Mr. Thurtle in the House of Commons (vide "Amrita Bazar Patrika," dated 26th June 1924) ?

(b) If so, who are the members of the Committee ; and what sum, if any, has been sanctioned for the inquiry ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett: (a) The answer is in the negative. The Honourable Member probably has in mind the Sub-Committee of Council mentioned in my reply to Mr. K. Rama Aiyangar's question No. 1561 on the 11th June 1924, which has been engaged in examining the probable military expenditure for 1925-26 on behalf of the Council as a whole.

(b) The Sub-Committee referred to was composed entirely of Members of Council. No extra expenditure was involved.

SIR SANKARAN NAIR'S BOOK "GANDHI AND ANARCHY".

†1675. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the evidence of Sir Sankaran Nair, published in the Press, in the course of which he stated that "the materials for the book "Gandhi and Anarchy" were supplied to him by the Government of India, the Government of Bengal, and other Provincial Governments : and a large number of copies were purchased by them" ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state in detail what materials were supplied to Sir Sankaran Nair by the Government of India and how many copies of the book were purchased by them ?

(c) Was Sir Sankaran Nair asked by the Government to write his book "Gandhi and Anarchy" in opposition to Mahatma Gandhi's movement ; and have the Government made any pecuniary contribution towards the production of the book ? If so, how much ?

SIR SANKARAN NAIR'S BOOK " GANDHI AND ANARCHY ".

†1678. *Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that they suggested it to Sir Sankaran Nair to write the book " Gandhi and Anarchy " ?

(b) Was any material supplied by the Government to Sir Sankaran Nair to write that book ? If yes, what was the nature of the material supplied ?

(c) Was any other help rendered to Sir Sankaran Nair ? If so, what was the kind of help rendered ?

(d) Was any chapter of the book written by any official of the Government of India ?

(e) Were any copies of the book bought by the Government of India ? If so, how many copies ? At what price ? To what use were the purchased copies put ? Were they circulated free ?

TRANSLATION OF SIR SANKARAN NAIR'S BOOK " GANDHI AND ANARCHY ".

†1679. *Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Was Sir Sankaran Nair's book " Gandhi and Anarchy " translated into any of the vernaculars ? Was the translation carried out at the instance of the Government ? What is the cost which the translation involved ? Into how many languages was the book translated ? Were any of the translated copies circulated free ? If so, how many and in what Provinces ?

DEFAMATORY PASSAGE IN SIR SANKARAN NAIR'S BOOK " GANDHI AND ANARCHY ".

†1681. *Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Did the defamatory passage in the book " Gandhi and Anarchy " occur in the translation ? Was the deletion of the defamatory passage in the second edition of the book done at the instance of the Government ?

SIR SANKARAN NAIR'S BOOK " GANDHI AND ANARCHY ".

†1705. *Haji S. A. K. Jeelani : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that Government assistance had been sought and obtained by Sir Sankaran Nair in the preparation of his book " Gandhi and Anarchy " ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state what is the nature of the assistance rendered and the object of the Government in rendering such assistance ?

(b) Did Sir Sankaran Nair write that book of his own accord or was it suggested to him by the Government ?

(c) How many copies of Sir Sankaran Nair's book " Gandhi and Anarchy " were bought by the Government and what use was made of them ?

SIR SANKARAN NAIR'S BOOK " GANDHI AND ANARCHY ".

1897. *Sardar V. N. Mutalik : Will Government be pleased to state :—

(1) whether it is a fact that this Government instructed Sir Sankaran Nair to write the book, " Gandhi and Anarchy " and whether Government had seen the manuscript before its publication ?

† For answer to this question, see p. 3022 infra.

(2) whether Government have spent any amount for its publication ?

(3) whether Sir Michael O'Dwyer consulted the Government or the Secretary of State before filing the suit against Sir Sankaran Nair ?

(4) whether there was any correspondence between this Government or the Secretary of State, on the one hand, and Sir Michael O'Dwyer or Sir Sankaran Nair on the other hand, with regard to the libel suit between the knights ? and if so, will Government be pleased to place the correspondence on the table ?

(5) whether any expenditure was incurred by this Government or the Secretary of State, in connection with the suit and, if any, for what party ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: Sir, with your permission I will answer questions Nos. 1675, 1678, 1679, 1681, 1705 and 1897 on the same subject together. In February 1922, Sir Sankaran Nair, at his own request, was supplied with the official reports of certain debates in the Imperial Legislature, newspaper reports and debates in certain Provincial Legislatures, a copy of the Repressive Laws Committee's Report and certain statements containing lists of important riots and disorders, which had already been laid on the table of this House. Apart from the supply of that material, which consisted entirely of public documents, the Government of India afforded no assistance of any kind to Sir Sankaran Nair in the publication of his book. The book was not inspired by them and manuscripts were not seen by them prior to publication. So far as they are aware no chapter of the book was written by any official of the Government of India. I have no information as to whether any Provincial Government gave any assistance to Sir Sankaran Nair or not.

2. The Home Department purchased three copies of the book at a cost of Rs. 2-8-0 each for official use. The Director of Public Information purchased 18 copies, some of which were sent by him to his correspondents and some kept for his own use. I understand that the book was translated into Urdu and Hindi under the auspices of the Publicity Officer, United Provinces, but I have no information as to the number of copies published in these languages, or the use made of them, or of the cost of translation. The passages, which formed the subject of the libel action, occur in the Urdu edition, and it may be presumed in the Hindi edition also. The Government of India had no concern in the deletion of any passages from the second edition of the book.

Sir Michael O'Dwyer did not consult the Government of India before filing his suit, and I have no reason to suppose that he consulted the Secretary of State. Both parties asked the Government of India for certain official documents and these were supplied to them. I am not prepared to lay the correspondence on the table. Government incurred no expenditure in connection with this suit, except in the supply of the documents referred to above and correspondence connected therewith.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: Is it a fact that the Government of India subsequently deputed an officer of their own to hunt up evidence on the strength of which Sir Sankaran Nair was subsequently convicted ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: I have not learnt yet of the conviction of Sir Sankaran Nair.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: The exact statement has appeared in the Amrita Bazar Patrika of the 8th July 1924.

APPROVAL OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY TO CERTAIN CONTRACTS.

1676. *Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : With reference to Diwan Bahadur Ramachandra Rao's Resolution passed by the Assembly recommending that the Assembly's approval be obtained by Government regarding certain contracts, and with reference to the reply given to unstarred question No. 249 on the 27th May 1924 that the Government of India's decision is that they cannot be bound by the said Resolution, will Government be pleased to state the grounds on which their said decision was arrived at ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : The grounds for the Government of India's decision were the same as were taken by the Honourable Member for Railways and myself in opposing the Resolution.

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST ASIATIC CLERKS AND INDIAN MONEY-LENDERS IN THE REPORT OF THE COMMISSON ON AGRICULTURE APPOINTED BY THE ZANZIBAR GOVERNMENT IN 1922.

1677. *Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : (a) With reference to question No. 1150 put in the Assembly on 2nd June last drawing the attention of Government to allegations against Asiatic clerks and Indian moneylenders in the Report of the Commission appointed by the Zanzibar Government in 1922, will Government be pleased to give replies to sections 3, 5, 6 and 7 (a) of the said question ?

(b) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a memorandum on the report of the said Commission by Mr. Yusufali Esmailjee Jivanjee, a Member of the Protectorate Council, Zanzibar ?

(c) If the reply to the above be in the affirmative, do the Government of India propose to draw the attention of the Government of Zanzibar to the various points made out by Mr. Yusufali in his memorandum after his experience of the conditions in Zanzibar ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : Part (a). Sections 3, 5 and 6 of question No. 1150 of 2nd June 1924. The Government of India regret that they have no information regarding the qualifications of the members of the Commission. They understand that copies of the Commission's questionnaire were sent to certain leading Indians who were asked inter alia for particulars regarding the indebtedness of the agricultural classes, but no replies were received from them on these points. No Indian witnesses were examined orally. As the Commission took no minutes of evidence it is not possible to comply with the Honourable Member's request for a copy to be placed in the Library of the House.

Part (b). The reply is in the negative. If the Honourable Member will be so good as to furnish me with a copy of the memorandum the matter will be looked into.

Part (c). The Indian member of the Protectorate Council complained in Council of certain specific observations and received an assurance that his complaint had been made under a misapprehension. He was also invited to discuss all contentious points with the Vice-Chairman of the Commission but did not avail himself of the offer. In the circumstances the Government of India are not prepared to take any action in the matter.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas: With reference to the Honourable Member's reply to part (a) of my question, will the Honourable Member be pleased to say if he has any information as to whether any Indians were asked to give evidence before the Commission on the whole reference to the Commission ? I understand that some Indians were asked to give certain information which they perhaps could not do, but were they asked to give evidence on the whole reference ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore: I regret I cannot give an answer to the Honourable Member's question because the reply from the Zanzibar Government is not quite clear on that point.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas: Will the Government be pleased to get a clear reply from them ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore: If the Honourable Member thinks it is worth while I will attempt to do so.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas: I think it will be very useful to know how decisions were taken by the Commission without examining a single Indian witness on the point. May I inquire if the Honourable Member is disposed to say that Government will make inquiries ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore: I think the Government will be prepared to do so.

(For questions Nos. 1678 and 1679—see p. 3021 ante.)

CONTRIBUTION BY GOVERNMENT TOWARDS THE LOSSES SUSTAINED BY SIR SANKARAN NAIR IN THE O'DWYER-NAIR CASE.

1680. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer: Do the Government propose to pay towards the losses sustained by Sir Sankaran Nair in the O'Dwyer-Nair case ? Do they at least propose to give Sir Sankaran Nair £500, the amount of damages awarded to Sir M. O'Dwyer ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: Numbers 1678, 1679 and 1681 have already been answered. As regards 1680, which relates to payments, the answer is in the negative.

Mr. Chaman Lall: As regards part (2) of question 1681, was the deletion done at the instance of Government ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: I have already answered that question.

MR. JUSTICE MCCARDIE'S JUDGMENT, IN THE O'DWYER-NAIR CASE.

1682. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer: (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if a complete transcription of Justice McCardie's judgment in the O'Dwyer-Nair case has been transmitted by the Secretary of State to the Government of India ?

(b) Have the Government been asked to express their opinion on the extra-judicial matters raised by Justice McCardie in the light of the Hunter Commission Report ?

(c) If yes, will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the document containing their opinion on the subject ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: (a) A complete transcript of Mr. Justice McCardie's summing up has been received and published in the Government of India Gazette of the 26th August 1924.

(b) and (c). I invite the Honourable Member's attention to the Resolution of the Government of India published in the Gazette of India Extraordinary of the 1st September 1924.

SIR SANKARAN NAIR AND THE ROUND TABLE CONFERENCE OF 1922.

1683. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer: (a) Did the Government ask Sir Sankaran Nair to preside over what is known as the "Round Table Conference" early in 1922 ?

(b) Did Sir Sankaran submit any report of the Conference to the Government ? If yes, will they be pleased to place the report on the table ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: (a) The answer is in the negative.

(b) Does not arise.

An Honourable Member: Are the Government aware that Sir Sankaran Nair made a statement in the Press that he communicated to the Government, as the report says, his views about a Round Table Conference ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: That I am not aware of, Sir.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar: May I ask Mr. Ranga Iyer on what information he has based his question ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: That question is not addressed to me ?

Mr. K. Ahmed: May I ask, as a matter of principle and under the rule that we abide by, whether in putting this question my Honourable friend from Madras is entitled to put a specific question to my Honourable friend from the United Provinces under the circumstances ?

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer: If, I have not misunderstood Mr. Rangachariar's question, I say, I based my information on a statement which appeared in the Press and the statement was attributed to Sir Sankaran Nair. I was also told that the attention of Sir Sankaran Nair was drawn to that statement. Personally I have not seen any statement in the Press made by Sir Sankaran Nair or anybody else contradicting that statement, and I have reason to believe, at any rate I had reason to believe it until the Honourable the Home Member answered my question, that Sir Sankaran Nair made some statement either orally or in writing to the Government of India with regard to a Round Table Conference.

Mr. President: It may be an appropriate moment now for me to point out to the Chamber that Members putting questions on the paper are held to be responsible for any statement of fact they may contain, and that it is undesirable for them to seek to protect themselves by using the authority of a newspaper for facts about which they themselves are uncertain.

Mr. Chaman Lall: May I know whether it is within the knowledge of the Honourable Mr. Rangachariar that this statement is not based on facts ?

Mr. President: As I pointed out to the Honourable Member who asked this question, it is his business to satisfy himself of the facts which he incorporates in his question. If another Honourable Member challenges his accuracy, it is not for the challenger but for the challenged to substantiate the statement.

Pandit Motilal Nehru: May I ask whether it is the duty of a Member to carefully sift the facts which appear in the Press before putting a question ?

Mr. President: I have pointed out to the Chamber that it is desirable for Honourable Members to remember the terms of Standing Order 15 (ii). Members putting questions on the paper are supposed to make themselves responsible for any statement of fact they contain. In this case I do not suppose much harm has been done. But the principle is laid down in the Standing Order.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : May I know what is the responsibility of a Member of this House who puts a question that is based on a newspaper report ?

Mr. President : I have had occasion more than once, before admitting a question, to ask the Member point blank whether he would make himself responsible for a certain statement, for it seemed to me that the publication of the statement might lead to trouble. In some cases Members have satisfied me, in others they have not. In this case I can leave it to Mr. Rangachariar and Mr. Ranga Iyer to settle between themselves.

PURCHASE FROM MESSRS. ARMSTRONG WHITWORTH AND COMPANY OF LOCOMOTIVES FOR THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY.

1684. Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to Reuter's cable, dated Geneva, the 30th June 1924 announcing that " Messrs. Armstrong Whitworth and Company in the face of very strong foreign competition have secured an order for 37 heavy main line locomotives for the Bengal Nagpur Railway " ?

(b) Was this purchase made through the Government of India, or through the Indian High Commissioner ?

(c) What foreign competition was referred to in this cablegram ? Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a comparative statement of quotations received from England as well as from other foreign countries ?

(d) What were the reasons for accepting the offer of Messrs. Armstrong Whitworth and Company ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: The Government's attention has been called to the Reuter's cablegram, referred to by the Honourable Member, but as the purchase was made in England by the Railway Company, in accordance with the terms of its contract, Government have no detailed information on the subject. They presume (1) that the tender notice was published and in accordance with the usual practice in the technical journals in England, (2) that tenders were received from British and foreign manufacturers, and (3) that the Board of Directors on the advice of their Consulting Engineers accepted what was considered to be the most advantageous tender.

INDUSTRIAL UNEMPLOYMENT IN INDIA.

1385. *Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to Reuter's cable, dated Geneva, the 30th June 1924, containing a summary of the speech made by the Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee on behalf of India ?

(b) Is it a fact that Mr. Chatterjee stated at Geneva that " There was no industrial unemployment in India and that the Government had already adopted an excellent system of dealing with occasional unemployment in agriculture " ?

(c) What " excellent system " does the Honourable Mr. Chatterjee refer to ? How far has it met the demands of " Occasional unemployment " ?

(d) Have the Government of India made any inquiry into the question of industrial unemployment in this country ? On what materials did the Honourable Mr. Chatterjee make the statement that there was no industrial unemployment in India ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). The statement in question is not a quotation from my speech, the official record of which I shall be happy to show to the Honourable Member if he is interested. I stated that, ordinarily speaking, there is no unemployment among industrial workers in India. This is a fact which is well known to all who are acquainted with the demand for industrial labour in India, and it was confirmed by the inquiries made by the Government of India in 1920. I went on to allude to our system of famine relief, a system which, inasmuch as it provides not merely relief but actual employment on a large scale when necessary, is in advance of any system of employment exchanges or unemployment insurance in other countries.

(d) The Honourable Member is referred to Bulletin No. 10 of the Bulletins of Indian Industries and Labour, which contains the results of the inquiries made in 1920. The Government of India have endeavoured to maintain constant touch with the industrial situation in India since that date.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I ask whether the Honourable Member has got more recent information ? He talks of 1920. I want to know whether there has been any unemployment since 1920, and whether the Honourable Member is aware that on State and Company-managed railways in India thousands of people have been discharged during this period. Not only that, but is the Honourable Member aware that in his own Department in the Government presses people in large numbers have been discharged, and whether all these people who have been discharged from railways as well as from Government presses have found employment, and whether there is a great deal of unemployment in the country at present ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee: In answer to the very lengthy question of my Honourable friend, I can only state that we endeavour to the best of our ability to keep in touch with the situation in the country, and I have no reason to believe that the men who were discharged have not found employment elsewhere.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Does the Honourable Member undertake to give employment to the people who are being discharged from the railway workshops as well as from his own printing presses ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Certainly not.

Mr. Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member if he is prepared, firstly, to institute an inquiry into the question of unemployment in India in industrial centres, and, secondly whether he would inform the House of the terms of reference of the 1920 Inquiry Committee as well as the conclusions arrived at by that Committee ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I have no reason to believe that there is unemployment at present in industrial centres and I am not prepared to institute an inquiry. As regards the terms of the inquiry of 1920, I have already referred the Honourable Member to a published bulletin.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, if the existence of thousands of unemployed will not convince my Honourable friend of the existence of unemployment, what will convince him of its existence ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : The Honourable Member, Sir, has put a hypothetical question.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : May I ask the Honourable Member if he will tell us of any single specific attempt on the part of Government to relieve unemployment as it exists to-day in India, and, secondly, since unemployment in England has necessitated such extensive and extraordinary relief action on the part of the British Government, does it redound to the credit of the Indian Government, surrounded as they are to-day by unemployment of their own creation, for the Honourable Member in charge to so unsympathetically say that they do not propose to start an inquiry ?

Mr. President : Questions of credit seem to me to be hypothetical.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : May I ask the Honourable Member if he can tell us what are the normal sources of information of the Government of India enabling them to come to any conclusion regarding adequate employment or unemployment of either the industrial or agricultural population in India ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : The reports of our district officers.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Regarding industrial unemployment, Sir ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Yes.

Mr. Chaman Lall : Will the Honourable Member put them on the table of the House ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : No.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Will the Honourable Member be pleased to say whether the industries of India are mainly located in districts or in cities ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Cities are included in districts.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : What, Sir, is the latest date of that report ? Can the Honourable Member give us the date of that report ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : We receive reports every fortnight.

Pandit Shamlal Nehru : May I inquire, Sir, whether recruitment from England does not create unemployment in India ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Certainly not ; we were only discussing industrial unemployment.

Pandit Shamlal Nehru : I mean industrial unemployment. Eighty people have already come from England, to Tatas.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Will the Honourable Member please place the latest copy of the departmental report received from district officers on the table ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I have already said that I was not prepared to place these reports on the table.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will the Honourable Member state the reasons for refusing to place the reports on the table ?

Mr. President : I think Honourable Members may put other questions down on the paper.

Opium Policy of the Government of India.

1686. Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a resolution passed by the All-India Congress Committee at its last sessions at Ahmedabad, condemning the opium policy of the Government of India ? Do Government propose to revise their opium policy in the light of facts recently disclosed by Miss La Motte and by Mr. C. F. Andrews ?

(b) What are the difficulties against the sale and manufacture of opium in India being confined to strictly medicinal purposes ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) The Government have seen a report to that effect in the press. Statements made ex parte by Miss La Motte, and Mr. Andrews do not appear to the Government to afford strong ground for a revision of the Opium policy of the Government of India. That policy has been strictly in accordance with the obligations accepted by them as parties to the Hague Convention. If it were to be reconsidered, it would have to be reconsidered in the light of ascertained facts.

(b) The primary difficulty of confining the use of opium in India to strictly medicinal purposes, were such a policy decided on, is a practical one. The number of qualified medical practitioners trained in accordance with some authoritative curriculum is so small in comparison with the population that to restrict the use of opium and its allied products to such persons as can obtain prescriptions from qualified medical practitioners would be to deprive an overwhelming majority of the population of the use of opium as a medicine. On the other hand, to accept prescriptions from unqualified persons might merely give such persons an illegitimate source of income without doing anything towards effectively restricting the consumption of opium.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I, Sir, ask Government whether they are not aware that their present opium policy is not approved of by a large section of the public in India ? I would also like to ask them one question as to why they oppose the restricted use of opium for medicinal purposes. The Government of India insist upon the use of opium in India for all legitimate purposes and I want to know from them what they consider to be legitimate purposes.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is too fond of argumentative questions. He must make his questions shorter.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I wanted to explain my question fully, Sir.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member may assume that the Government are sufficiently intelligent to understand his questions.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I cannot claim that I have sufficient intelligence to understand the explanation. I think I understood the question. I did my best to answer the last part of the question, the question about restriction to medicinal uses. The Honourable Member is incorrect in stating that the Government oppose such restriction. I explained the difficulties as to the practical working of any such restriction. As regards the first part of the question, it is difficult to find any policy of the Government of India which is not opposed by some section of the people of India.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I want to ask Government whether they are not aware that a large section, the majority of the public opinion, in India is opposed to their policy ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : That, Sir, is a matter of opinion.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I am not asking about an opinion. I am asking them whether they are aware or not. That is a question of fact.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The answer then is in the negative.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I also want to know if they had not opposed the restriction of the use of opium to medicinal purposes, why they insisted at the League of Nations meetings in using the word " legitimate " instead of " medicinal " purposes.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : That, as the Honourable Member is aware, involves a long explanation, and he is probably already in possession of the documents from which he can get an answer.

Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally : Are the Government of India prepared to appoint a Committee to ascertain the public opinion upon this question in India ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : That is a question, Sir, which may come up in due course.

TRAVELLING AND DAILY ALLOWANCES DRAWN BY MR. J. H. GREEN, WHILE SECRETARY OF THE INDIAN MERCANTILE MARINE COMMITTEE.

1687. Dr. H. S. Gour : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(1) If it is a fact that Mr. J. H. Green who worked as Secretary, Indian Mercantile Marine Committee, was, before his appointment as Secretary, a Superintendent in the Department of Education, Health and Lands ?

(2) If so, what was his pay as Superintendent and as Secretary and what were the other terms of his latter appointment ?

(3) Whether one of the terms of his new appointment was the grant to him of travelling and daily allowances in accordance with rules in force before 1st June 1923 ?

(4) If reply to (3) is in the affirmative, is it a fact that he drew travelling allowance in accordance with those rules while he drew daily allowance in accordance with the new rules which came into force from 1st June 1923 and which were more favourable than the old ones ?

(5) What was the amount so drawn in excess of that admissible to him in accordance with the terms of his appointment and whether the same has been recovered ?

(6) By whom was this irregularity brought to the notice of Government ?

(7) Was it found that the irregularity was committed in ignorance of the rules or intentionally ?

(8) Was this irregularity brought to the notice of the Education Department and was it given due consideration when he was promoted to the post of Registrar in the Education Department ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : (1) Yes.

(2) Mr. Green's pay as Superintendent was Rs. 720 per mensem plus Simla house-rent allowance of Rs. 500 for the Simla season. His pay as Secretary to the Indian Mercantile Marine Committee was Rs. 900 per mensem without any house-rent allowance. He was also allowed double first class fare for journeys by rail and steamer with the Committee and a daily allowance of Rs. 10, with exemption from the 10 days halt rule, for periods of halt with the Committee at places other than Simla.

(3) No. The terms, as for other members of the Committee, were special to the appointment.

(4) Does not strictly speaking arise. It is correct, however, that the Supplementary Rules governing travelling and daily allowances were amended on the 1st June 1923, so as to permit an officer travelling to draw daily allowance on the days of arrival at, and departure from, a place of halt, and it is correct that Mr. Green afterwards drew daily allowance on such days.

(5) Rs. 47-8-0. The amount has been recovered from Mr. Green.

(6) By the Audit Officer.

(7) The allowance was drawn by Mr. Green, and also by all the other members of the Committee, with the approval of the President, who did not understand that this amendment of the Supplementary Rules did not apply to the Committee.

INTERNATIONAL OPIUM CONFERENCE OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

1688. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if the International Opium Conference of the League of Nations is to be held in Europe in next November ; and will any representatives from this country be deputed to express India's opinion on the Opium question at the Conference ? And if so, how is the selection to be made ?

(b) Will the Government kindly state how many such Conferences have been held in the past ; and the names of India's representatives, if any ; and the method of their selection ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) Yes. Two conferences will be held in November and it has been decided to send Mr. Campbell to represent India at the conferences.

(b) No international conference has been held on the subject since the Hague Conference in 1911. The League of Nations has often discussed the question of international control of opium and other drugs and the representatives of India on the League from time to time, with whose names no doubt the Honourable Member is quite familiar, have represented the Government of India on this question also. The League of Nations has also created a Standing Advisory Committee on opium, and on this committee Mr. Campbell has all along represented the Government of India. He was chosen because of his knowledge of this subject.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I know whether the Government of India will take steps to ascertain the opinion of this House on this question before they issue instructions to Mr. Campbell for these Conferences ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The Honourable Member will find an answer to that exact question in a previous answer given by me to the effect that the Government had no objection if occasion offered to the discussion by this House of the question.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government give facilities for discussion by allotting a day ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : That is a question which should be addressed to the Leader of the House.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I, Sir, ask the Leader of the House ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I should like to consult my Honourable Colleague.

TRANSMISSION TO THE INTERNATIONAL OPIUM CONFERENCE OF THE OPINION OF THE ALL-INDIA CONGRESS COMMITTEE ON THE OPIUM POLICY OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

1689. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that the delegates of the Government of India in the past pleaded in substance before the International Opium Conference that " the Indian people always used opium as medicine, and it did not hurt them at all, and there would be widespread unrest in India if the people were deprived of their opium, as it would be the case if tea were taken away from the British people " ?

(b) Are the Government aware of the following resolution passed by the All-India Congress Committee held in Ahmedabad in June last :

" In the opinion of the All-India Congress Committee, the Opium policy of the Government of India is altogether contrary to the moral welfare of the people of India, and other countries. The All-India Congress Committee is further of opinion that the people of India would welcome the total abolition of the Opium traffic for purposes of revenue, and is also of opinion that the production of opium is out of all proportion to the medical requirements of India" ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state if they are prepared to transmit the above opinion of the All-India Congress Committee to the International Opium Conference ? And if not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) The Honourable Member is probably referring to the speech of His Highness the Jam Saheb before the Assembly of the League of Nations on 19th September, 1922. The only passage in that speech which comes near the version of the Honourable Member is this. "I believe I am perfectly correct when I say that Indian soldiers after a long march regard a very small dose of opium in the same light as European soldiers regard a cup of tea, or coffee or cocoa or a glass of beer or wine." This statement, it will be seen, is one based on the personal knowledge of His Highness.

(b) The Government are aware of the resolution referred to.

(c) It is open to the All-India Congress Committee to transmit its opinion direct to the International Opium Conference if that Conference is prepared to receive it.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware of the fact that the opinion expressed by the All-India Congress Committee in the Resolution which I have quoted above, is the true representation of India's public opinion on the subject of opium policy ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I am aware that the Honourable Member apparently thinks it is.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : I have got another supplementary question. Are Government aware, Sir, that in a London cable, dated August 27th, and published in the Amrita Bazar Patrika of the 29th August 1924, it is reported that at the meeting of the League of Nations Advisory Committee on the opium traffic, at Geneva :

"Sir John Jordan on behalf of Britain submitted a suggestion that the quantity of the Indian opium exported to States regulating the opium smoking should be reduced by ten per cent. per annum for the decade, and Governments of Japan and Siam and Powers with possessions in the Far East should be requested to reduce their consumption of opium at the same rate ; but the suggestion was opposed by Mr. Campbell on behalf of India so it does not appear as resolution."

Is this gentleman our representative who was deputed to the League of Nations ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I can inform the Honourable Member that the first statement is incorrect.

Pandit Shambhu Dayal Misra : What is the correct statement, Sir ?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : I want to know who is this Mr. Campbell ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : This Mr. Campbell is the gentleman to whom I referred in the answer to the last question.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : I would like to know what are his qualifications to represent us in the League of Nations.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : He is a very great authority on the subject of opium.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : What are his qualifications, educational and otherwise, and what experience has he of India ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : He is a very distinguished member of the distinguished Indian Civil Service.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Do Government propose for the benefit of the country to make a statement repudiating the allegation made against them and publish that statement in the newspapers ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I do not know whether the country would really be greatly benefited by such a statement.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Will the Honourable Member take it from me, a representative of the people of this country, that it will be beneficial. Do Government propose to publish a statement both for their own benefit and for the benefit of the country on a matter like this ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I am not sure that I shall personally derive any benefit from it ; but I will consider the matter.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : May I know, Sir, what is the correct version of the facts mentioned in the report just read out by my friend, Mr. Ganga Prasad Singh, and whether it is not a fact that the representative of India declined to enter into an arrangement by which the export of opium could be reduced from time to time ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I think it is not a fact that any proposal for the reduction of opium was made on behalf of the British Government.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : Not on behalf of the British Government but on behalf of the Governments concerned, the names of which have just been mentioned by my Honourable friend ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : That is correct.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : I beg to offer a cutting from the Amrita Bazar Patrika, dated the 29th August 1924.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I believe it was a personal suggestion made by Sir John Jordon. He had no authority to make that statement.

Pandit Shamlal Nehru : May I know if Mr. Campbell has any experience of opium ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I am not aware, Sir, that he personally indulges in opium.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : What experience has Mr. Campbell of India ?

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know whether Government will take immediate steps to correct this wrong impression which has been created on the public ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I hope that mention of this in public here will do something to achieve this result.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Would this be cabled out ?

UNINTERRUPTED FLOW OF THE GANGES FROM HARDWAR TO THE SAGOUR ISLANDS.

1690. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps have been taken to secure the uninterrupted flow of the Ganges from Hardwar to the Sagour Islands ; and have the Government received representations on the subject ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the views of the Government of the United Provinces on the subject, referred to in reply to question No. 28 of the 15th February 1921 in this House ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) Free openings have been made in the weirs which span the Ganges at Hardwar and Narora, which ensure an uninterrupted flow of water down the river throughout the year; no representation in the matter has recently been received by the Government of India.

(b) The views of the Government of the United Provinces are embodied in their resolution No. 1741-IW|IB-2-W-9N, dated the 22nd August 1923, which was published in the Local Government's Gazette dated the 25th August 1923, a copy of which is laid on the table.

No. 1741-I.W.|1B-2W-9N.
RESOLUTION.

IRRIGATION BRANCH.

Dated Naini Tal, the 22nd August, 1923.

IN 1916, in deference to Hindu religious sentiment, a two-feet notch was made in the weir across the Ganges river at Narora in order to give a free flow of water down the river at all times of the year. As experience had shown the danger of cutting into weir, it was decided to keep the sill of the notch only one foot below the crest of the weir ; and in normal years the volume of water passing through the notch is 40 cusecs up to the end of November, gradually dropping to ten cusecs by the end of December and to four cusecs by the middle of January. It remains at four cusecs from the middle of January till the end of April, when it begins to increase with the advent of the snow water, and reaches its maximum of 40 cusecs by the middle of May.

2. In 1920 the Sri Bharat Dharma Mahamandal and the All-India Hindu Sabha submitted through this Government memorials addressed to His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India. The memorialists urged that the two-feet notch was not sufficient to meet the requirements of Hindu sentiment, that the sacred stream of the Ganges should flow in its natural course from its source to its mouth, and prayed that an opening be made in the weir down to the river bed so as to increase the volume of water to a minimum of 600 cusecs at all times of the year. Sir Harcourt Butler's Government thought it advisable, before coming to any decision on these memorials, to ascertain the views of the Legislative Council, and the non-official members of that body were therefore asked to appoint a committee to consider the questions involved, and to give their opinions thereon. The Committee so appointed submitted its report in May 1922. They found that the two-feet notch was not by itself sufficient to maintain a running stream at all times of the year, and that when the river is very low it would not maintain any stream at all ; and they recommended that a minimum flow of 300 cusecs should be allowed at Narora.

3. The report of the Committee was published with resolution No. 1677|III—677, dated the 12th October, 1922, for the purpose of eliciting public opinion on the important proposals contained therein. Altogether 431 opinions have been received. Of these, 81 (principally from Hindu religious societies) support the Committee's recommendations ; whilst 350, submitted by zamindars and cultivators belonging for the most part to the Hindu community,—are definitely opposed thereto. One of the latter opinions is signed by over 18,000 persons, residents of 180 villages and including many Hindu rajes, and urges that all that is necessary is that an extra supply of water should be passed down on the occasions of the principal Hindu bathing festivals.

Vide page 29 of Legislative Assembly Debates, Vol. I.

4. The Governor in Council has given careful consideration to the recommendations of the Committee. He realises and respects the strength of the religious sentiment, which has inspired the demand for a free flow of water down the sacred river at all times of the year; he is anxious to meet this demand to the fullest extent possible; and he agrees with the Committee that it is not adequately met by the existing notch at Narora. But for the reasons indicated below, he is convinced that it is neither necessary nor desirable that a minimum uncontrolled supply of 300 cusecs should be provided throughout the year.

(1) In making their recommendation, the Committee seem to have been largely influenced by the belief that as regards the supply of water for irrigation the period of difficulty is "limited from about the middle of March to the middle of May." The grounds for this belief are not clearly stated in the report, and in any case the facts are quite otherwise. The average monthly supplies of the Ganges river in the ten years ending 1920 were as follows:

November.	December.	January.	February.	March.	April.	May.
Cusecs.	Cusecs.	Cusecs.	Cusecs.	Cusecs.	Cusecs.	Cusecs.
15,700	10,400	8,400	8,500	9,500	11,300	18,800

As this table shows, the supply of water in the river diminishes rapidly with the close of the monsoon, and generally becomes insufficient to meet the needs of the canal by the beginning of December.

The supply continues to fall throughout the period December to April, when with the melting of the snows it commences to increase and continues to increase as the weather becomes hotter. The real period of difficulty is thus not that between the 15th March and 15th May, but that between the 15th December and 15th March. Since this latter period includes the greater part of the rabi season, it follows that, even were the amount of water allowed to pass restricted to 300 cusecs, the loss entailed by the adoption of the Committee's proposal would be far greater than doubtless they supposed. But, in fact, owing to the varying water levels at the weir, if a minimum flow of 300 cusecs were to be maintained, the average volume of water passing during the period in question would be much greater than 300 cusecs. The loss in revenue alone would amount to about two lakhs of rupees per annum, and it is unnecessary to emphasise the effect of this reduction on the provincial finances. But a still more serious consideration is the damage which would be inflicted on the cultivators of the areas affected. From 30,000 to 40,000 acres of rabi and from 15,000 to 20,000 acres of early kharif would be deprived of canal irrigation. As the Committee justly observe "the lower Ganges Canal has been running ever since its opening in 1878, and in the areas through which it passes conditions have been created which cannot be entirely ignored. The owners and tillers of the soil fertilised by the canal water have acquired rights and privileges and have accepted liabilities which should not easily be disturbed."

(2) The main reason however, which led the Committee to recommend a discharge of 300 cusecs was the small depth of water which they found at Ramghat, a bathing place five miles down the river from Narora. It is necessary, therefore, to point out that a discharge of 300 cusecs or even of 600 cusecs at Narora would not guarantee a supply of water of sufficient depth for bathing at Ramghat. Much of the existing supply at Ramghat comes by percolation, and a supply of water sufficient for bathing purposes could be ensured only by training the river into a definite channel at that place. This, however, is not practicable because a flood of water might at any time come down when the canal is closed on account of the winter rains. Moreover, Ramghat has to a great extent been abandoned as a bathing place in favour of Rajghat, which is conveniently situated on the railway and is above Narora.

3. In order to ensure the flow recommended by them, the Committee propose that:

(a) the two-feet notch should be closed,

(b) the cross-walls of the fish ladder should be removed, and the first under-wall in the fish ladder lowered as far as possible to allow a deeper sheet of water to pass through it than is at present possible;

(c) the stone grooves for planking the fish ladder should be permanently closed;

(d) the ten-feet wide opening thus secured should form the passage for the unobstructed and continuous flow of the sacred stream and should be named the "Ramdhara," and

(c) since the Ramdhara could not discharge 300 cusecs at all times of the year, vent No. 23 should be altered so as to take the shape of the letter V and be used for a supplementary discharge of uninterrupted Ganges water to supply the balance required.

These proposals raise difficulties which do not seem to have been brought to the notice of the Committee. On the one hand the alteration of vent No. 23 would often result in more water being discharged than the Committee themselves recommend; on the other hand, if the whole supply were to be passed through the fish ladder, as was suggested as an alternative, it would be necessary, owing to the varying conditions of water levels of the weir, to lower the crest of the weir to an extent which would seriously endanger its safety.

5. For these reasons the Governor in Council has come to the conclusion that it is not practicable to give effect in their entirety to the recommendations of the Committee. Fortunately, however, the choice does not lie between the adoption of their proposals and the maintenance of the existing arrangements. The Governor in Council is indebted to Mr. Jwala Prasad, Superintending Engineer, for an alternative scheme, which avoids or minimises the difficulties inherent in that of the Committee, will secure the principal object which they had in view, and should satisfy all reasonable Hindu opinion. The main features of this scheme which the Governor in Council has approved, are as follows:

(a) A minimum perpetual supply of 150 cusecs will be provided throughout the year; of this at least 80 cusecs will be passed through an unfettered and free opening over the existing fish ladder, the grooves of which will be entirely closed to prevent any possibility of planking, and the balance will be passed through the sluices.

(b) A minimum supply of 300 cusecs will be maintained from the 15th March to the 15th December.

(c) A minimum supply of 600 cusecs will be maintained on Puranmashi days and on the occasions of any other festivals for which this increased supply may be found to be necessary.

(d) A minimum discharge of 1,000 cusecs will be passed for three days at the Kartiki-Puranmashi and for one day at the Somwati-Amawas.

An uncontrolled flow of water will thus be secured at all seasons of the year, and ample supplies will be provided on the occasions of all important bathing festivals. The loss to the State and to the cultivators concerned, though less than the proposals of the Committee would have entailed, will be undoubtedly heavy. The State will lose about 1½ lakhs in revenue and the cultivators will lose about 12 lakhs.

The Governor in Council cannot regard these results with equanimity; the province can ill afford any curtailment of its slender revenues: and the deprivation or reduction of canal water will bring hardship to many cultivators. He is willing however to accept them as the price of the settlement of a difficult problem, and in the confident hope that the Hindu community will recognise that by the concessions now announced the claims of religious sentiment have been generously met.

By order,

(Sd.) A. C. LAURIE,

Joint Secretary to Govt., United Provinces.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: Will the Government be pleased to ascertain from the Government of the United Provinces whether sullage is still allowed to flow into the Ganges at Hardwar and what progress has been made with the Hardwar drainage scheme?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee: I have no reason to suppose that sullage is still allowed to flow into the river and I do not propose to make any inquiry.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: In this connection I beg to refer my Honourable friend to a cutting from the Amrita Bazar Patrika, dated 29th June 1924, in which, Sir, there is a letter from the Secretary, Hindu Maha Sabha to the Secretary, Municipal Board, Hardwar Union. That letter reads as follows :

"Would you please let me know what progress, if any, the Hardwar Drainage Scheme has made up to now ? Complaints regarding the flow of sullage into Shri Ganga Ji continue as before and naturally the public are anxious to know when this injurious as well as sacrilegious practice would come to an end."

This is the letter to which I have referred, and I can hand over a copy of it to my Honourable friend.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I have no doubt that the United Provinces Government would have inquired into this matter if there were any definite complaints.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will the Honourable Member satisfy himself and satisfy the House whether such an inquiry has been made or not ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : The residents of Hardwar can have questions put in the United Provinces Legislative Council.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that Hardwar is a very important religious centre which is visited by a large number of pilgrims from all parts of India who are interested in this matter, as their health is exposed to the risks of epidemics ?

LOCATION OF BRITISH TROOPS AT MUZAFFARPUR.

1691. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) With reference to my starred question No. 31 of the 1st February 1924, regarding the location of a detachment of British troops in Muzaffarpur, has the attention of the Government been drawn to the following reply given in the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council on the 25th July 1921 :

"It moved to Muzaffarpur about 26th February, and returned to Dinapur on 9th March. The move was made by order of the Military authorities to relieve a temporary congestion at Dinapur, where for a short period there were two battalions simultaneously. The Local Government had nothing to do with the move" ?

(b) Will Government kindly state on what other occasions prior to February 1921 such a move was made to relieve any temporary congestion at Dinapur ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to lay all papers in this connection on the table ? And if not, why not ?

Mr. E. Burdon : (a) Yes. This referred to a temporary and casual move of a detachment of British troops to Muzaffarpur.

(b) So far as the Government of India are aware, no such move was made prior to February 1921 to relieve any temporary congestion at Dinapore.

(c) Government are not prepared to lay on the table the papers in question as they are of a confidential nature and are not suitable for publication.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Why are the Government not in a position to lay the papers on the table ? Is it because they will drag the skeleton out of the cupboard ?

LOCATION OF BRITISH TROOPS AT MUZAFFARPUR.

1692. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the following reply given in the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council on the 24th January 1922 on the subject of the location of troops in Muzaffarpur :

" One Company of British troops has been sent to Muzaffarpur. They have been sent with the knowledge and approval of Government. Government are not aware that any panic has been caused by the presence of the troops, and they do not propose to withdraw them " ?

(b) Is it not a fact that in reply to my starred questions Nos. 31 and 33 of the 1st February 1924, the Government stated that the troops were first despatched to Muzaffarpur " at the request of Lord Sinha's Government," and also that " the Government of India complied with the request made by the Local Government " in this matter ?

(c) In view of the statements made in the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council, and the reply given in the Assembly, to which reference has been made, will the Government definitely state which authority is responsible for the location of troops in Muzaffarpur ?

(d) Is it not a fact that the decision to locate troops in Muzaffarpur was arrived at during the ill-health of Lord Sinha, who was then the Governor of Bihar and Orissa, and behind his back, in concert with a few indigo planters ?

(e) Are the Government prepared to give reasons for their refusing to publish all papers on this subject, and treating them as confidential ?

Mr. E. Burdon : (a) Yes. This, as is obvious from the date and terms of the reply, referred to another occasion, namely, the permanent location of a company of British Infantry at Muzaffarpur.

(b) Yes. This reply referred to the troops which are permanently stationed at Muzaffarpur.

(c) The Government of India are responsible for the permanent location of troops at Muzaffarpur. In arriving at a decision, they were guided by the views of the Local Government.

(d) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply given by me on the 1st March 1924 to his starred question No. 537.

(e) Government do not consider it would be in the public interest to make public the correspondence of the subject.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : I have got many supplementary questions. Are Government aware, Sir, that in reply to a question on this subject in the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council on the 19th August 1924 (an official copy of which I hold in my hand) the Local Government stated that : 12 Noon.

" The question of locating troops at Muzaffarpur was under consideration between the Local Government and the military authorities for several months before Lord Sinha resigned. A decision was arrived at sometime after his resignation."

In reply to my question on the 1st of February 1924, the Government in this House stated that the troops were moved " at the request of Lord Sinha's Government ". Again, on the 1st of March 1924 when I asked another question on the same subject, the reply given was :

" There is nothing in the records of the Government of India to show whether the application for troops made by the Government of Bihar and Orissa was or was not the personal decision of Lord Sinha."

The two statements appear contradictory. Will the Government please state which is the correct statement ?

Mr. E. Burdon : There is no conflict between the two statements.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : The Local Government state that the decision to locate troops was arrived at shortly after Lord Sinha's resignation.

Mr. E. Burdon : The troops which afterwards were permanently located at Muzaffarpur were first sent while His Excellency Lord Sinha was Governor of Bihar and Orissa.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Who was responsible ?

Mr. E. Burdon : I have just answered that question.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : I want to know the name of the Governor who was at the head of the Province, when the decision was arrived at.

Mr. E. Burdon : I have told the Honourable Member in answer to previous questions that the Government of India deal with Governments and not with Governors, and they base their decisions on the recommendations of Local Governments and not on the personal opinions of Governors.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that since the location of troops at Muzaffarpur not a single occasion arose on which the troops were called out ?

Mr. E. Burdon : I do not know whether that is a fact. If it is, the result is very satisfactory !

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : That was the information given in the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council in August last.

FRACAS BETWEEN SOLDIERS AND THE INHABITANTS OF MUZAFFARPUR.

1693. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Will the Government kindly state the result of inquiry into the fracas that occurred in Muzaffarpur on the 2nd November 1923 between some soldiers and a few inhabitants, and admitted by the Government in the Assembly on the 1st February 1924 and 1st March 1924 ?

(b) What was the nature of the investigation into the occurrence ; and are the Government prepared to place all the papers on the table in this connection ? If not, why not ?

Mr. E. Burdon : (a) A case under sections 147 and 325, Indian Penal Code, was instituted, and a counter-case under sections 147 and 304, Indian Penal Code, was made the subject of inquiry by the police. The evidence produced did not justify the prosecution of the accused in either case.

(b) Information of the occurrence was given to the District Magistrate who at once visited the spot. The town inspector of police, under his orders, commenced the investigation, which was continued by the Superintendent of Police under the supervision of the Deputy Inspector General of Police. Government are not prepared to place the correspondence on the table as it is of a confidential nature.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it not a fact that in reply to a question of mine on the 1st February 1924, Government stated that there was only one case of friction, whereas in reply to questions in the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council on the 20th August 1924, Government stated that there were three cases of friction ?

Mr. E. Burdon : At the time I gave the answer to the question the Government of India had only received a report of one case of friction.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will Government call for a report in the other two cases also ?

Mr. E. Burdon: If the Honourable Member will show me the question and answer in the Bihar Legislative Council, I will go into the matter further with him.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Do the Government propose to pay compensation to the family of the man who lost his life at the hands of the soldiers ?

Mr. E. Burdon : The matter is one for the Local Government. I have no information on the point.

OCCUPATION BY THE MILITARY OF THE CIRCUIT HOUSE AT MUZAFFARPUR.

1694. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is the Circuit House in Muzaffarpur in occupation of the military ? And, if so, how long, and is any rent being paid for their residence ? And, if so, how much ?

(b) Is it a fact that owing to the Circuit House in Muzaffarpur being occupied by the military, high officials are put to inconvenience when they have to go out on their inspection tours ?

(c) Is it a fact that owing to the Circuit House in Muzaffarpur being occupied by the military, a private bangalow has been rented, and converted into a Circuit House for other officials ? And, if so, since when, and on what rent ?

(d) Will the Government kindly state whether the rent of the hired bungalow is paid out of the Civil or the Military estimates ?

Mr. E. Burdon : The Government of India have no information on the subject, but are inquiring. I will let the Honourable Member know the result as soon as possible.

CORRESPONDENCE WITH LOCAL GOVERNMENTS REGARDING THE RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE LEE COMMISSION.

Sardar V. N. Mutalik : With reference to my question No. 1896,† I understand that the Honourable the Home Member is not prepared to answer it to-day ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman (Home Member): The main urgency in the Honourable Member's question has already been dealt with as the correspondence was laid‡ at our last meeting in answer to an unstarred question and I will answer the remainder in due course.

† " 1896. *(a) Will Government be pleased to place on the table copies of the correspondence between the Central Government and the Local Governments on the recommendations of the Lee Commission, including the views of the Provincial Governments on the recommendations ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether any instructions had been issued by the Government to Provincial Governments for obtaining the views of the Provincial Legislatures on the recommendations of the Lee Commission ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to place on the table the opinions of the Provincial Legislatures, if any of them have expressed any opinion ? And will Government be pleased to state whether all the Provincial Governments offered any opportunity to the Legislatures to express their views ? "

‡ Vide Appendix " A " to these debates.

RULES RELATING TO THE CLASSIFICATION, CONTROL, ETC., OF THE SERVICES IN INDIA.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) what were the circumstances that led to the publication for general information of Notification No. F.-472-II-23, in the Gazette of India in June last of the Rules made by the Secretary of State in Council under sub-section (2) of section 96B of the Government of India Act relating to the classification, control of the services in India and the procedure in cases of dismissal, suspension, removal or reduction of officers in the said services ;

(b) why these Rules were not published earlier for general information as and when they were framed ;

(c) whether all or any of them were laid before both Houses of Parliament in accordance with section 129A of the Government of India Act, and if so, when ;

(d) whether the Fundamental Rules made under the same section regulating the conditions of service of the civil services which came into force in 1922 and the several subsequent amendments thereunto have been similarly published for general information and previously laid before Parliament ; if not what the reasons are for not doing so ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: (a) and (b) . The rules which came into force on dates preceding the 21st June, 1924, were communicated to the Local Governments concerned and to the Departments of the Government of India immediately they were made. It was considered unnecessary to publish them for general information until other connected rules had been sanctioned by the Secretary of State in Council. The rules were published on the 21st June, 1924, because the resolution of the Secretary of State in Council making those portions of the rules which came into effect from the 21st June, 1924, definitely prescribed that they should have effect from the date of publication by the Governor General in Council in the Gazette of India.

(c) Section 129A of the Government of India Act applies only to rules under the Act for which no special provision is made as to the authority by whom they are to be made. The rules under part VII-A of the Act are made as indicated in that part by the Secretary of State in Council with the concurrence of the majority of votes at a meeting of the Council of India. That is, the provisions of section 129A have no application to the rules, and the Government of India assume that they have not been laid before the Houses of Parliament.

(d) The Fundamental Rules referred to by the Honourable Member were published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India of the 19th November, 1921. They also were made under section 96B of the Act in the manner prescribed in section 96E, and section 129A has no application to them.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar: May I know, Sir, whether the question as to the rules made by the Secretary of State, having, by section 129A, to be laid before the Houses of Parliament, is not a matter which this Government will refer to the Secretary of State for his opinion ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: I am satisfied with the opinion I have given the House.

DIFFERENTIAL TREATMENT OF APPEALS OF MEMBERS OF THE ALL-INDIA AND PROVINCIAL SERVICES.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar: (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the reasons which have induced the Secretary of State to adopt in the enactment of Rules, the differential treatment therein laid down between the All-India and the Provincial Services in respect of their rights of appeal against punitive orders ?

(b) Whether any instructions have been issued as to the manner in which the Governor by himself is to sit in appeal over punitive orders made against Provincial Services men made by the Local Government, i.e., either by " the Governor acting with Ministers " or by " the Governor in (Executive) Council ", under Rule XVIII ? If not, in what manner do the Government propose to make this right of appeal a reality ?

(c) What is the reason for the provisions in Rules XVII and XVIII to the effect that while an All-India Service man can appeal directly to the Governor General in Council against an order of the Local Government and can appeal again as of right up to the Secretary of State in Council, the Provincial Services man can only appeal from the Local Government (which includes the Governor) to the Governor and thereafter to a very limited extent to the Governor General or the Secretary of State in Council ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: (a) and (c). The differential treatment between the All-India and the Provincial Services in respect of their rights of appeal to which the Honourable Member refers has been introduced in accordance with the policy underlying the enactment of section 96B of the Government of India Act. In regard to that policy, I would merely refer the Honourable Member to Annexure IV to the report of the Committee on the Division of Functions. The idea in regard to the All-India Services was that the structure of the services, their duties and the general conditions of their employment should remain as far as possible untouched by political changes. The rules therefore purport to be and are merely a re-codification of the existing rules. So far as the Provincial services however are concerned, the intention of the rules was to give the local authorities as complete powers as possible and accordingly to restrict as far as possible the rights of appeal of officers to authorities outside the province in which the officers in question are serving.

(b) Under clause VII (4) of the Instrument of Instructions issued to all Governors, they are required to safeguard the members of the services employed in their provinces in the legitimate exercise of their functions and in the enjoyment of all recognised rights and privileges, and to see that the Local Government orders all things justly and reasonably in their regard. No further instructions have been issued. The intention, however, is that the members of the services who are given a right of appeal to the Governor should have a definite appeal against the order of the Local Government whether it was an order made by the Governor acting with his Ministers or by the Governor in Council.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I point out that my question has not been answered ? My question was, in what manner do Government expect the Governor, by himself to act in appeal over an order made by him along with his Executive Council or along with his Ministers ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I have explained it in my answer and it is this. When the Governor hears the appeal in his capacity as Governor he will hear in a semi-judicial manner and will discharge the functions which the Instrument of Instructions direct him to exercise.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : That is, he sits in judgment over himself according to the answer just given ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I take it that the Honourable Member's point is that the Governor may have been a party to the order before, but that will not be his personal order but an order for which the Local Government is responsible.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar: Would that carry out the principle laid down in the Instrument of Instructions that he will deal justly and fairly with the claims of these people in the Services who are entrusted to his special protection ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I hope so.

SPECIAL POWERS OF THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS IN RESPECT OF PATRONAGE, ETC.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : With reference to the answer to my unstarred question No. 255, dated the 27th May last, will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) What decisions have been come to with reference to the special powers claimed on behalf of the Governor in Madras in respect of patronage and appointments by virtue of the instructions in the Despatches of the Court of Directors in 1846 and 1847 ?

(b) Whether the Statutory Rules in the Notification No. F.-472-II.-23 have been communicated to the Government of Madras and are intended to supersede any such pre-existing powers ?

(c) Whether the Governors of Provinces have been, in pursuance of the Instrument of Instructions or of other directions from the Government of India or Secretary of State, invested with any special powers of controlling Ministers in the transferred Departments in the exercise of their authority over the officers subordinate to them including normal disciplinary action not of an immediately punitive character ?

(d) If so, will the Government be pleased to lay the same on the table ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : (a) In a reply which I gave to the Honourable Member's question on the 27th May I stated that complete papers in regard to the despatches of the Court of Directors issued in 1846 and 1847 had been called for from the record room in Calcutta. It was later found that the papers in the record room were not complete, and ultimately the complete despatches were obtained from the Madras Government. The examination of these papers is still proceeding and Government are not yet in a position to make a statement on the subject. It appears possible that they may find it necessary to address Local Governments in the matter.

(b) The statutory rules referred to supersede preceding rules dealing with the matters to which they relate.

(c) and (d). In reply to one of the earlier questions of the Honourable Member I have cited the provisions of the Instrument of Instructions which relate to this matter. They indicate the manner in which the Governor is expected to exercise the powers entrusted to him, and the Governor is, of course, a member of the transferred side of the Government in the same way as he is a member of the reserved side. The main provision regulating the exercise of the authority of a Local Government over officers of the public services is contained in rule 10 of the Devolution Rules. Under that rule, the personal concurrence of the Governor is required before certain orders may be passed to the disadvantage of an officer of an All-India Service or of a Provincial Service and also for the posting of an officer of an All-India Service, and, further, under sub-section (3) of section 52 of the Government of India Act, the Governor is given power, if he sees sufficient cause to dissent from the opinion of his Ministers, to require action to be taken otherwise than in accordance with their advice. No other instructions have been issued. Part (d) of the question does not, therefore, arise.

DEPUTATION OF SIR BHUPENDRA NATH MITRA TO LONDON IN CONNECTION WITH THE OUTSTANDING CLAIMS IN DISPUTE BETWEEN HIS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT AND THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : (a) With reference to the outstanding claims in dispute between His Majesty's Government and the Government of India, will Government be pleased to state what steps they are taking to hasten the settlement of these claims ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that they have decided to depute Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra to London in this connection ?

(c) If the reply to (b) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the powers of Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra for this purpose, and whether they intend sending any non-official elected Members of the Assembly to go into the question with the help of Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra for the purpose of report to this Assembly ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The Government of India have been in close consultation with the Secretary of State, with a view to expediting a settlement, and Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra has been deputed to visit England with a view to discussion with the Departments of His Majesty's Government. The answer to the last part of the question is in the negative.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Do Government expect to place before this House the result of Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra's discussions in London regarding the subject matter of this question ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I have already stated on previous occasions that the Government will do their best to keep this House in touch with any important developments.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know exactly what the powers of Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra are with reference to the discussions which he is going to have with His Majesty's Government ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : He is deputed to discuss the matter with the departments of His Majesty's Government. Those are his powers.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : How far will that commit us or the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : He cannot bind the Government of India without the approval of the Government of India ; he has no powers in that sense.

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : May I ask the Honourable Member whether he is merely an agent of the Government of India, or whether he has any independent powers ? Is he their plenipotentiary ? Has he any final powers ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : He has no final powers.

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : It means that on every occasion he has to make a reference to the Government of India before coming to an agreement with His Majesty's Government ?

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know if, when questions are referred to the Government of India for settlement in respect of these several claims, this House will be informed as and when they occur, so that we may keep in close touch with the exact settlement that has got to be made ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : With reference to the last question I cannot add anything to the answer which I have already given to Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas. With regard to the previous question, Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra's powers are very real powers to discuss. They are not powers to arrive at a settlement without further reference to the Government of India.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Will it be convenient to Government to allow Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar or any other Honourable Member of this Assembly to accompany Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra and help him or be helped by him, and thus bring relief to the situation ?

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Are the powers of Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra to discuss with His Majesty's Government restricted only to questions in dispute so far as the claims are concerned, or do they also extend to the capitation charges which I understand is a question still hanging fire between His Majesty's Government and the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I hope very much that he would be able to make progress with the latter question as well as with the outstanding questions.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : May I take it then that Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra has instructions to examine the question of capitation charges also ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Yes.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Do the Government of India not think that it would be to the interest both of this House and of themselves if some non-official Members elected by this Assembly were deputed to accompany Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra in this connection ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The answer is in the negative.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah: Do I understand that the powers of Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra would be to press the conclusions which the Government of India have already arrived at on the subject ? Is that the limitation ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : That is not a limitation. That is undoubtedly a statement of one part of his errand.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : What else will he be in a position to do ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : To endeavour to arrive at a settlement for submission to the Government of India.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Is there any constitutional objection to deputing Members from this House to go into the question in order that Government may have very few questions to answer and very few complaints to listen to from this House when the question is finally settled by the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I think there is a constitutional objection. This House is not the Executive Government.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Members of this House need not go with executive powers, but only to examine and satisfy this House that the settlement arrived at is the proper settlement.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I am content to let the Honourable Member have the last word.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Then I am afraid the inference is the Honourable Member has no reply to my question.

Sardar V. N. Mutalik : Is there anything in the constitution which prevents Government from doing this ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : In any well arranged constitution the Executive Government does the executive work and it is not done by Parliament.

Sardar V. N. Mutalik : Is it not the practice to take up some Members of this House in an executive capacity ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I think this is a question of which notice had better be given.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

EXPENDITURE BY GOVERNMENT IN CONNECTION WITH THE O'DWYER-NAIR LIBEL SUIT.

347. Mr. T. C. Goswami : (a) Was any money spent by the Government in connexion with the O'Dwyer-Nair libel suit, which has recently been disposed of by Mr. Justice McCardie at Westminster,—namely, for securing evidence, etc. ?

(b) If so, what is the total amount so spent ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The Honourable Member is referred to paragraph 3 of my statement made in reply to starred question No. 1675 and other questions bearing on the same subject.

THE O'DWYER-NAIR LIBEL SUIT.

348. Mr. T. C. Goswami : (a) What steps do Government propose to take to contradict Mr. Justice McCardie's obiter dicta regarding Government's unjust treatment of General Dyer and to uphold their position in 1920 in the matter of General Dyer's responsibility in Amritsar ?

(b) Has Government's attention been drawn to the following passage appearing in the " Statesman " (Dak edition, dated 24th July), under the heading " Indian Affairs in London ", from the London Correspondent of the paper, regarding Mr. Justice McCardie's obiter dicta in the O'Dwyer-Nair libel suit ?—

> " From an additional reply given by the Under-Secretary of State it appears that the Government of India is to be given an opportunity of making any statement it may think relevant and called for on perusal of the judge's full judgment in the case. If Lord Reading and his advisers intend to take advantage of the opportunity thus afforded them, it is hoped here that they will do so quickly and allow oblivion to overtake the discussion."

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply I gave to Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer's starred question No. 1682.

SIR SANKARAN NAIR AND THE ROUND TABLE CONFERENCE OF 1922.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : I take it that my friend the Honourable Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar stood up in this House to put a question to me more in affection for an old comrade than to know the source of my information. I take it also that he was present in England, but I do not know if he was present in Justice McCardie's Court from day to day. In either case he has not told us whether he has got a message for this House from my old fellow countryman, Sir Sankaran Nair. I am not concerned here with Sir Sankaran Nair's second thoughts, with what he may have communicated to Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar, but my question was based on Sir Sankaran Nair's reported statement in Justice McCardie's Court, and, until the Diwan Bahadur is prepared to prove to the contrary, I must stand by it and with due respect to you, Sir, I think there was every " desirability " in view of that statement to put this question in the House.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : The question about which I asked Mr. Ranga Iyer on what authority he based that question was No. 1683, that is, whether the Government asked Sir Sankaran Nair to preside over what is known as the Round Table Conference early in 1922. It was in connection with that question, I asked, on what information he based that statement. If Sir Sankaran Nair admitted this, I was not aware of it and

I apologise for having raised the question, but, if Sir Sankaran Nair has not admitted it, I still persist in asking whether it is right that we should impute to a public man conduct of that sort without informaion being available.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : My statement related to the very same question that the Diwan Bahadur just read out, 1683, and Sir Sankaran Nair, to the best of my information, made that statement in Justice McCardie's Court and, so long as the Diwan Bahadur is not able to prove to the contrary, I stand by that statement and I have nothing more to add than that I accept the Diwan Bahadur's apology until he has proved to the contrary. If he proves to the contrary, I am prepared to apologise.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : I know that Sir Sankaran Nair was not asked by the Government to preside over that Conference. It was on my invitation and that of some friends who were organising the Conference that he agreed to preside over the Conference.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : What I am concerned with is Sir Sankaran Nair's own statement.

STATEMENT LAID ON THE TABLE.

Mr. J. W. Bhore (Secretary, Department of Education, Health and Lands) : I lay on the table the information promised in reply to questions Nos. 1373, 1374 and 1375 by Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh asked on the 9th June 1924, regarding the Emigration Depôt at Benares.

Statement No. 1 showing the names and other particulars of the Recruiting Agents employed for the Emigration Depôt at Benares.

Copy of the notes recorded by visitors in the Inspection Book maintained at Benares Emigration Depôt.

Statement No. 2 showing the number of emigrants recruited by the Emigration Depôt at Benares for despatch to Mauritius.

EXPLANATORY NOTE.

Statement No. 1.—The heading of column 7, namely "Number of emigrants required to recruit under the license" shows the maximum number of emigrants which the Emigration Agent concerned was authorised to recruit under his license.

None of the Agents mentioned in the statement acted as Emigration Agents in indenture labour days. They received fixed salaries.

Statement No. 2.—The total number of adult male labourers to be recruited by the Emigration Commissioner for Mauritius within the period 31st May 1923 to 30th May 1924 was limited to 1,500. Out of this 303 were recruited by the Emigration Depôt at Benares only.

Visitors Book.—In his remarks, dated the 29th October 1923, Mr. Krishna Kumar stated that he was informed by the Emigration Commissioner that the rule of one single man to every five did not apply in the case of sweepers. No such exemption was sanctioned by the Government of India. His statement dated the 20th November 1923, that the orders of the Government of India were to send 1,500 families and 168 sweepers is incorrect.

(Sd.) GADA HUSAN,
Emigration Commissioner,
Benares Depôt.

In pursuance of rule 18 of the Emigration Rules, 1923, made by the Governor General in Council, I inspected the place of accommodation for intending emigrants proposed by the Emigration Commissioner and found the situation suitable for the purpose in every respect.

J. H. DARWIN,
District Magistrate.

BENARES ;
The 3rd August 1923.

In pursuance of rule 20 of the Emigration Rules, 1923, made by the Governor General in Council, I appoint Khan Bhadur Moulvi Maqbul Alam, Pleader, and Babu Mala Pershad, Honorary Magistrate, as members of the visting committee who will inspect the Depôt for Emigration to Mauritius at an interval of 2 months.

M. Sheo Mohal Lall, Deputy Magistrate, Benares, will visit and inspect the Depôt at least once in a month.

J. H. DARWIN,
District Magistrate.

BENARES ;
The 9th August 1923.

I went round the place to-day with Khan Sahib Munshi Gada Husen. Arrangements for recruiting are in progress. Only one male cooly has so far been secured. The recruiting of families is presenting difficulties, but they will gradually be overcome.

Sheds have been put up for accommodation of emigrants. Latrines for males and females separately are in course of construction. There are temporary structures capable of being taken down and the materials sold after the close of the work.

SHIVA MOHAL LALL,
Deputy Collector.

September 3, 1923.

I paid a visit to the Emigration Depôt to-day. K. S. M. Gada Husain Sahib was away to see the District Magistrate and I was shown round by M. Zahir Husain, an Assistant Clerk.

The tin sheds have been partitioned into compartments of suitable size and the latrines for males and females have been completed.

There were two emigrants one a Chamar with his wife and another a Muhammadan single. I had a talk with them and both appeared happy at the prospect of being sent to Mauritius and appeared to understand the terms of their engagements. None had any complaint to make.

I was given to understand that 50 emigrants recruited at Delhi will soon arrive.

SRIKRISHEN KUMAR,
Emigration Magistrate.

The 20th September 1923.

Arrangements must be made at once to clear the latrine drains with water and phenyle used. The shed is not so clean as it ought to be. The chulhas must be removed at once from inside to the proper place pointed. Lanterns are not fixed at proper places their stands ought to be coal-tarred and fixed at places shown. Tell the house owners' mali to remove at once the manure collected besides the path to the emigrants' shed.

GADA HUSAIN,
Emigration Commissioner.

The 23rd September 1923.

I inspected the Emigration Depôt to-day and found 63 males and five females and children. I asked them for reason of going Mauritius. They answered me that they are going with their own wishes.

MALA PERSHAD,
Member of the Visting Committee.

The 24th September 1923.

I had come to the Depôt for the examination of emigrants under rules 24 and 26 and was asked by the Emigration Commissioner, to have a look round the place.

Accommodation.—There are 5 compartments 17′ × 15′ and one room 20′ × 14′. This gives a superficial area of 1555 sq. ft. I understand orders have been received not to collect more than 100 emigrants at any one time and the accommodation of 15 to 16 sq. ft. per man appears amply sufficient.

I am informed that some emigrants had to be sent back to their homes as they were unwilling to proceed to Mauritius. The sweepers appeared to be under a delusion that they would be able to earn 2¼ a day ordinarily. Perhaps it was explained to them by the recruiter that if they worked extra hours they would be able to earn 1¼ more per diem in addition to their daily wages 1¼ and they took it that 2¼ a day would be earned ordinarily and not in special cases. The Emigration Commissioner had already removed this delusion and though on the first question I put them some said they would get 2¼ a day for their wages on further questioning they all appeared quite prepared to be satisfied with 1¼ a day. By repeated questions I have satisfied myself that none of the sweepers is dissatisfied with the terms on which he is prepared to migrate. I have satisfied myself also that whatever the misunderstanding what they were actually told was that they would or could earn 1|- per day in addition to 1|4 a day by working extra hours.

No emigrant had any complaint to make.

KRISHN KUMAR,
Emigration Magistrate.

The 3rd October 1923.

Seen note of Magistrate-in-charge of emigration work. The capacity of the Depôt will be considered as sufficient for a maximum of 100 coolies at a time.

J. H. DARWIN,
District Magistrate.

The 4th October 1923.

Inspected. There are 93 men and women. I asked them several times, they are going with their own desires.

One Lachhmi Ray came on the 3rd October 1923 and was registered on the same date. Afterwards on 12th October his uncle came and met him and wanted his discharge. The officer of the Emigration Depôt discharged him at once.

MALA PERSHAD,
Member.

The 15th October 1923.

One Samuel Dayal Christian who was present in Emigration Depôt and want to go in Mauritius and want to go with very gladly. There are very clear place and management of their food, etc., are very nice.

MALA PERSHAD,
Member.

The 15th October 1923.

I visited the Depôt to examine emigrants under rules 24 to 26. I had a talk with some of the emigrants I had passed in my last visit. All are still happily awaiting departure and none had any complaint to make. Some requested that their departure be expedited as they are losing pay every day they are delayed.

I notice that one emigrant No. 61, whom I had passed last time, was afterwards persuaded by his uncle who came to see him not to go and was discharged by the Emigration Commissioner.

S. KRISHN KUMAR,
Emigration Magistrate.

The 15th October 1923.

Visited the Depôt to-day and passed 5 emigrants. A letter has been received from the Protector of Emigrants. The letter is not before me as I am writing this inspection the Emigration Commissioner has taken it to the Collector. I had however read it and it is to the effect that agreements be supplied ; that as laid down in notification No. 282, dated 22nd March 1923, no emigrants shall have entered into an agreement to labour for more than a month. In my opinion that is a condition on which they are engaged ; the condition finds a mention in the memorandum over the signature of Mr. Walter handed over to each emigrant and I have not been able to assist the Emigration Commissioner in coming to a decision as to what other form this agreement could take. However the Emigration Commissioner told me that the Collector has directed that I should certify to this agreement having been made. I therefore drafted a certificate and the Emigration Commissioner has taken it to get it approved by the Collector. I explained individually to each of the 81 emigrants collected before me that they shall not have entered into an agreement to labour for more than one month. Hitherto I have passed 88 emigrants the following 7 were not put up, they having gone out : (1) Tota, (2) Bansi, (3) Piara, (4) Nibal, (5) Taruf, (6) Baroo, (7) Tanwana. These 7 can be sent to my house and after I have explained this condition to them, as I did to the 81 present, I shall sign this certificate in the form approved by the Collector.

I may mention that when the Emigration Commissioner calls the Emigration Magistrate he may very kindly see that all the emigrants intended to be put up before him are so put up and not allowed to go out. This would curtail the number of his visits to the Depôt and enable him to do the work at the Depôt in comparatively less time.

As I was writing the note Emigrant Ram Sarup [illegible] came to me and said he is not willing to go as he left his wife at home.' He should be discharged and sent home.

I am afraid similar difficulties may arise later on with certain other single men who appear keen just now. Of the 88* men passed hitherto only 11 men are with families. Rule 23 lays down that "men who are unmarried or unaccompanied by their wives shall not be assisted to emigrate to any one country in any one year to a number exceeding one in five of the total number of persons so assisted." The Emigration Commissioner cannot of course at this stage of recruitment look to the proportion but the chances are that sufficient men with families may not be forthcoming and the rule may under the proviso to it have to be modified. This time alone will show.

KRISHN KUMAR,
Emigration Magistrate.

The 18th October 1923.

I paid a visit to the Depôt on October 15, and found things in a satisfactory condition ; one emigrant was sick but under medical treatment a doctor was due to appear soon after my visit.

Complaints had been made in the newspapers that coolies were being deceived into consenting but this I found was not the case. I questioned a number of them. They knew the terms and expressed their willingness to emigrate. The Magistrate in charge doing his duty thoroughly.

While I was at the Depôt the relative of one cooly came and wanted the cooly to return to his home. The cooly was reluctant to do so but when the relative insisted, the Commissioner told him he had better go.

There is some agitation outside for permission to enter the premises. I propose to add Rai Bahadur Munshi Ravmandan Pershad, M.L.C., to the members of the Visiting Committee. Apart from that, the members of the Local Board are all authorised to inspect. This would seem to me quite sufficient. The Commissioner has however been kind enough to allow other visitors to come in occasionally. The matter is one which remains in his discretion. He cannot be expected to allow persons with no representative status to enter.

J. H. DARWIN,
Collector.

The 19th October 1923.

I passed 12 more emigrants to-day. I questioned them all one by one to find if any one was a runaway from home after a quarrel with parents or wife but find them all saying that their relatives at home are aware that they are going to Mauritius. Again of the 12 only one is taking his wife with him. But these are sweepers and the rule of one single man to every 5 sent as the Commissioner told me does not apply to sweepers who are to be sent in addition to the numbers of emigrants sanctioned.

Some men of the batches I had passed before the 18th instant had complained to me on 18th that they were not given the clothing they were promised. I told them that they were not to be given any clothing under the rules and asked them if they wanted to proceed to Mauritius or go back home ; they said they would go to Mauritius. I found they needed no clothing and our chief clerk who was with me told me that clothing was being given to a few who actually need it. This needed no interference by me and as I had finished my note of 18th October before this complaint was made I make mention of it to-day, so that the Emigration Commissioner may kindly take the trouble of making it known to recruits that they should not under any circumstances hold out to any recruits a promise which the rules do not permit.

These 12 are the only recruits in the Depôt to-day. They have no complaints to make except that they have not yet received the clothing they expected, namely, the uniform and the blankets and the advance 30 per head. The Emigration Commissioner is away and the chief clerk will please let me know what the promises to these men are and what they would actually get at Calcutta. If they are to get a uniform and 2 blankets each at Calcutta as they say they have been promised I may be informed. The advance I know they will get here.

* The 88 include 53 sweepers in whose case there is no fixed proportion of men with families to single men.

Mangat says he was employed in the N. W. Ry. at Delhi and his 2 days' pay is due; that he has come away with the consent of the Railway authorities and that his pay be made over to his brother Nanka who is still in the employment of the Railway. His application to this effect may be forwarded. A similar application from Bhagwana to the Municipal Board at Ghaziabad may also be forwarded.

KRISHN KUMAR,
Emigration Magistrate.

The 29th October 1923.

Chief Clerk's note perused. The emigrants can be sent. I have passed them.

(Sd.) S. K. K.

The 29th October 1923.

Learning that an Emigration Depôt has been opened at Benares, I was naturally greatly concerned about it and most anxious to visit it. There was also some concern expressed in the papers, I thereupon wrote to Mr. Darwin if I could visit the place. Mr. Darwin very courteously wrote back to say that I could go and later also wrote to say that as a Municipal Commissioner, I was entitled to come here whenever I wanted to. I therefore availed myself of this opportunity and paid a visit to this place on the afternoon of October 30. Moulvi Guda Hussain Saheb, the Emigration Commissioner, was not in the station and I am thankful to Babu Chhannu Lal for having taken me round the whole place and shown me everything and everyone here without reserve or hesitation. As to the situation and the arrangement I have nothing or very little to say. The only complaint I have is that more than one family can be and is being housed as necessity arises in the same enclosure, or rather within the same partition walls of the large enclosure especially constructed for the purpose. This is totally wrong and I know for a fact that one of the chief complaints of housing in the poorer parts of garden is that many families occupy the same room. This is morally very deleterious. Family life of even the humblest is sacred and I do think that either all men should be in one enclosure and all women in another, or if they insist on living even here as families, each family must be separated from the other.

I should like to add here that I, as a humble servant of my country, cannot look at this problem from a purely economic standpoint. I almost cried as I saw these poor countrymen of mine about to be sent abroad as "Coolies" to give the impression to all mankind that we are a nation of "Coolies" and nothing else. I felt anguished at heart that I had not 1|4|- per day to offer to every single one of them and to take them away with me. Economics is a cruel demon. It will make us do anything; these people are not going I emphatically assert on their own authority for love of Mauritius or desire of seeing other lands, but for money. It is shameful for any of us that our countrymen should go out like that and cannot be retained here. Englishmen are recruited for service in India to be our rulers. We are recruited to be coolies. How long will this last?

I will close with only one observation. I find that a number of Bhangis are also being sent. The published notices distributed broadcast only mentions sugar-cane fields. This Bhangi recruiting should also be mentioned. There is a lack of Bhangis in India everywhere. They are very necessary for our national economy. Why should they go? They must be retained; and I think local bodies would retain them at any cost, if they knew they are going away.

I think Babu Chhannu Lall again for his courtesy to a frankly hostile visitor. I repeat I have no complaints against the arrangements apart from the one mentioned above. I hate the whole institution; and am very sorry if my countrymen have anything to do with it in any capacity. I indeed want to write in this book for I knew my feelings were strong but was prevailed upon to do so only by the repeated and kindly request of Babu Chhannu Lall.

(Sd.) SRI PRAKASA,
Municipal Commissioner, Benares.

The 30th October 1923.

Postscript.

On coming back from the Emigration Depôt, I thought some words I had written in the Inspection Book were not clear and there was likelihood of misunderstanding so I write this and am sending it to Babu Chhannu Lall with the request that he would paste it below my note. I hope and trust he would oblige me and do so. I am not unaware of the fact that emigration from one country to another is the commonest of things. I recognise that men and women in all ages and all countries would emigrate from one place to another in search of fame or fortune. I know that large posters in England specially on omnibuses loudly cry out to the passers by "Why not emigrate to Australia? Plenty of land and plenty of wages. It is the workman's paradise." But so far as I am aware there is no Governmental institution and Government Officer in any way connected with or taking any active interest in promoting such emigration in England. Our complaint is that India's Government in embodying alliance with the Government and capitalists of other lands actively promotes this sort of emigration from India. That makes it so objectionable, so hateful. If they went of their own accord no one would complain or even have the right to complain at all and then why do people emigrate from other lands? Certainly not, as we do to be coolies in other peoples' sugar-cane estates, or to be bhangis carrying other peoples' nightsoil day in and day out.

(Sd.) SRI PRAKASA,
Member, Municipal Board, Benares.

The 30th October 1923.

I visited the emigration Depôt to-day. I notice that since my last inspection Mr. Sri Prakash has paid the Depôt a visit. There is nothing to show that his note has been seen by the District Officer and I would commend it to his notice if he has not. The only point to which Mr. Sri Prakash took exception was that accommodation did not exist for each family separately. The Emigration Commissioner has given his explanation and I am inclined to agree with him that it will not be an easy job to provide accommodation on the scale recommended by Mr. Sri Prakash. What is humanly possible with the accommodation available is being done. For example to-day there are 7 pairs among the 14 souls present. Of these 3 pairs are high castes Brahmans or Kshattriyas, others are Chamars. The Brahmans and Kshattriyas are being lodged in a separate building, not in a separate compartment of the building, intended for those who have no caste scruples. They are quite happy with arrangements made. All those 7 pairs have been to Trinidad and can talk a little broken English. They are happy to go to Mauritius where they expect the labour conditions to be much better than here in India. It is interesting to hear them tell their reasons for choosing to leave again the country of their birth.

None had any complaint to make. I had a look round the latrines also. I find from the water that there was that Phenyle is being regularly supplied, but in spite of it and in spite of the fact that the number of males to-day is under a dozen, the male latrine was emitting a stench. The sweeper might be told to make proper use of the Phenyle that is supplied.

I understand the orders are to send 1,500 families and 168 sweepers. So far the recruitment has been as follows:

I. Towards 1,500—
Pairs	..	11
Singles	..	37
II. Towards sweepers—
Pairs	..	7
Children	..	5
Singles	..	60

It has not thus been possible to maintain the proportion of single to pairs in the ratio of 1 : 4 to I.

I am informed that at Calcutta about 450 Fiji returned emigrants have chosen to go to Mauritius. A very large number of the 450 consists of families.

The Emigration Commissioner is away in Calcutta and the Chief Clerk who is a smart man without doubt is carrying on the work very properly.

S. KRISHN KUMAR,
Emigration Magistrate.

The 20th November 1923.

As I was leaving the Chief Clerk drew my attention to the fact that the present lot of men are not satisfied with the rations they get. At present they get 12 ch. flour and rice, half and half, and 3 ch. Dal; they want 1 seer ata and rice, half and half, and 3 ch. Dal. They did not make this complaint to me when I had questioned them before, but on ascertaining again I find that they are really feeling that they have not been getting enough to eat. If they can eat the quantity they want I see no reason why they should not get it.

S. K. KUMAR.

The 20th November 1923.

In consequence of statements publicly made of unwise or unlawful action on the part of employees of this department, I called to make inquiry to-day. The Commissioner is absent in Calcutta but Babu Chhannu Lall kindly gave me every possible facility. The internal arrangements of the Depôt for the accommodation of the coolies seem quite satisfactory. I satisfied myself by questioning each inmate personally that they had not been misinformed in reference to the conditions of emigration, that they understood them perfectly, and willingly accepted them. It happens that all those residents to-day are returned emigrants from Trinidad and Jamaica. They had come back in each case with good savings which have been quickly spent and the men and women find there is no place or satisfactory work for them in their home villages. They are glad to return. What I have seen satisfies me that some of the criticisms I heard are without foundation.

J. C. JACKSON,
Member, Benares Distt. Board.

The 21st November 1923.

Inspected the Emigration Depôt to-day; there were about 19 persons. I asked them. They are going with their wishes.

MATA PERSHAD,
Member.

The 24th November 1923.

I visited the emigration depôt at about 9 A.M. to-day. The number of intending emigrants at present in the depôt is 18. Most of these people are returned emigrants who do not find economic and to some extent social conditions in their villages suited to their interests and are anxious to go out again as soon as possible.

What a sad commentary on our present administration and the conditions created and buttressed up by it! The physical needs of the inmates of the barracks seem to be well attended to. I find nothing particular to speak about. As there are practically no fresh emigrants, if I may use the term, it is difficult to say if any coercion has been exercised or not.

SAMPURNANAND,
Member, Municipal Board. Benares.

The 29th November 1923.

I inspected the emigration depôt to-day at 11-30 A.M. There were about 19 persons as I saw on 24th November; they were in good condition.

RAVI NANDAN PARSAD, M.L.C.
Member.

The 8th December 1923.

I visited this Depôt this evening. There are 49 souls including 19 sweepers and 2 infants, and found every thing all right with them. One Chhedi Brahman returned emigrant of Trinidad had brought with himself a widow named Janki as his sister some 5 years ago. She was living with him in India and was admitted in the Depôt as his dependant. Few days ago she had a concubinage with Kashi another returned emigrant of the same country present in this Depôt, with the consent of Chhedi who had brought her with him here. All 3 concerned came the day before yesterday to the Emigration Commissioner and reported all what they were willing to do. The Commissioner directed them all to go to the Police Station to report, which was done. The said officer did so as to the safeguard of the connection made. Specially because the woman is a widow and might not prove otherwise.

MATA PERSHAD,

The 11th December 1923.

I visited the Depôt this morning and examined 47 emigrants intending to proceed to Mauritius. They were found willing to proceed there and were granted permission as required under rule 25 of Emigration Rules. I ascertained the fact regarding Mst. Janki's story given in the inspection note of Babu Mata Pershad and found it correct.

SAIYID ZAMIN HUSAIN, Khan Sahib,
Emigration Magistrate.

The 12th December 1923.

I visited the Depôt this afternoon and questioned almost all the emigrants. They are all satisfied with the arrangements, food, etc. They full well understand the conditions on which they are emigrating to Mauritius. They have been provided with meat to-day. I also ascertained the fact referred to by Mr. Zamin Husen and there is nothing objectionable in the matter.

M. KHALIL, B.A., LL.B.,
Member of the Visiting Committee.

The 12th December 1923.

Fifteen emigrants were registered this morning and 2 were unwilling to emigrate—16 emigrants have been advanced Rs. 30 each. The two unwilling men have been allowed to go back to their home (Begamabad), their railway fare at Rs. 8 each total Rs. 16 has been paid to Md. Jamil Khan and he has been directed to purchase railway tickets for them.

S. ZAMIN HUSEN.

M. KHALIL, B.A., LL.B.,
Member of Visiting Committee.

The 9th January 1924.

I inspected the Depôt this morning and registered 67 souls. I put questions to Din Mohamed and he assured me that he could not procure any employment for himself in this part of the country and so he was prepared to emigrate to Mauritius Island.

S. ZAMIN HUSAIN,
Emigration Magistrate

The 11th January 1924.

I inspected the Depôt this afternoon and found about 66 emigrants. I asked them why they were going to other country—they assured that they are going with their own wishes.

The 14th January 1924.

I inspected the Emigration Depôt this morning at 10-30 and inquired individually from each emigrant—who stated that he had given his consent. The number emigrants to-day, male 36, female 13, and children 17. As the Emigration Commissioner was out—Babu Chhanulal has very kindly show me the place, for which I thank him.

The 5th February 1924.

I inspected the Depôt this evening. There are five pairs excluding two babies with their parents in the Depôt. I put several questions to them and they answered the questions very satisfactorily. They are all pleased, happy and quite willing to go to the Island (Mauritius). There is nothing particular to note.

M. KHALIL, B.A., LL.B.,

The 29th February 1924.

I inspected the Depôt this morning at 9 A.M. It is a bit early and the clerks have not come. There are 28 emigrants in the Depôt. They are willing to emigrate and they understand the conditions on which they are going to Mauritius.

S. ZAMIN HUSAIN,

The 19th March 1924.

I inspected the Depôt this morning at 10 A.M. There are 53 intending emigrants. They have no complaints—they are properly fed and kept. I registered 53 emigrants.

S. ZAMIN HUSAIN,
Emigration Magistrate.

The 11th April 1924.

I inspected the Depôt this morning at 10 A.M. and registered 24 emigrants. They appeared to be happy and they understood well the conditions under which they were allowed to emigrate. It struck me that 2 families of Saiyads were willing to leave for Mauritius and they insisted on their going there. This shows that respectable families are also preferring to go to Colonies though this may be due to their poverty. Everything is satisfactory.

S. ZAMIN HUSAIN,
Emigration Magistrate.

The 24th April 1924.

I inspected the Depôt this morning at 10 A.M. and registered 51 emigrants. They understood the conditions on which they were allowed to emigrate—they expressed their willingness and said that they were not under any deception.

S. ZAMIN HUSAIN,

The 20th May 1924.

(Remarks were made in Urdu language and have been translated into English.)
I inspected the Emigration Depôt to-day. It contained pairs of men and women together with their children. They expressed their willingness to get recruited and go out as emigrants. They know the object of their visit abroad.

MOHAMMAD FARUQ, Khan Bahadur,
Dy. Supdt. of Police, Benares City.

The 3rd October 1923.

(Remarks were made in Hindi and have been translated into English.)
To-day at about 4 P.M. I inspected this Depôt. During this month up to to-day only 40 men and women have been recruited. Out of this those recruited up to the 18th have already been despatched. At present the recruited coolies consist of two classes. There are some who speak of their return from Jamaica and also say that they don't like to remain in India. They who say so belong to the Faizabad District. The one class consists of Brahmin men, women and children and have sufficient accommodation at their disposal. The other class consists of Chamar men, women and children. For these also accommodation is sufficient. They have also medical arrangements. The coolies consist of one Thakur of the Faizabad Dist. and one Chedi Brahmin who says he has returned from Jamaica and is very clever. He is ready to answer when others are questioned.

SATYA DEV SARDA,
Member, District Board, Benares.

The 29th November 1923.

I inspected this Depôt to-day. At present it consists of 18 coolies, both men and women. Out of them, there is one Brahmin boy, named Sukhdev who looks 12 years of age approximately. Looking at this boy I am of opinion that whereas in other civilised countries boys of such ages are reformed, in this country such boys are recruited as coolies. Will this country ever remain dependent ? Whereas in other countries to be called a coolie is a great disgrace, in this country it is boasted of by the people. This scene I only saw in this Depôt. Whomever I questioned he replied that he was going out with great pleasure. In our own country we havn't got room for ourselves, i.e., we get only one anna daily wage here in this country while there we would get Rs. 1-4 daily.

KRISHAN CHAND SHARMA,
Member, Municipal Committee, Benares.

The 30th November 1923.

To-day at about 10 in the morning I inspected this place. At present there are only 3 or 4 men. One named Din Mohammad says that if he could get a job here he would refrain from going to Mauritius. The Emigration Commissioner should give this man sufficient opportunity.

SATYA DEV SARDA,
Member, District Board, Benares

The 5th January 1924.

To-day I again inspected this depôt. At present, there are 84 men, women and children. Coolies number 64 and majority of them are Mohammadans and belong to the Province of the Punjab. Some of them belong to this Province. One is a Pandit.

THE IMPERIAL BANK OF INDIA (AMENDMENT) BILL.

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE LAID ON THE TABLE.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : I beg to lay on the table the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Imperial Bank of India Act, 1920.

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes (Commerce Member) : With your permission, I propose slightly to vary the motion on the order paper. I beg to move :

"That the Bill to provide for the better regulation of cotton ginning and cotton pressing factories be referred to a Select Committee consisting of :

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar

Sir Chimanlal Setalvad,

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas,

Seth Kasturbhai Lalbhai,

Baba Ujagar Singh Bedi,

Mr. R. A. Wilson,

Pandit Shamlal Nehru,

Mr. Harbilas Sarda, and

and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee be five."

When I introduced this Bill a few days ago I was concerned merely to prove that there were malpractices and abuses in cotton ginneries which deserved the attention of the House. I attempted to prove that statement by referring to the authority of the Indian Cotton Committee, particularly to paragraph 219 and following of that Committee's report. That Committee after prolonged investigation and inquiry throughout India found that there was overwhelming evidence that serious malpractices and abuses exist in these ginneries and factories. They found also that those malpractices injure the reputation of Indian cotton and thereby reduce the price which the cultivator gets for that cotton. That was a point on which they laid great stress. Well, Sir, all Local Governments have endorsed the statement of the Indian Cotton Committee that these abuses and malpractices exist. To-day I am asking the House merely to agree in principle that legislation is required to tackle these abuses and these malpractices. The actual proposals we have made in this Bill will no doubt be carefully scrutinised in this Committee which I want the House to agree to. It may be said that this is just the sort of abuse which the trade should be left to deal with by themselves. On that point the Indian Cotton Committee definitely reported that the trade unaided could not deal with the abuse. They further said that legislation should be undertaken to enable the trade to deal with these malpractices and abuses. They made various suggestions as to the restrictions which should be put on cotton ginneries and cotton presses and they made a further proposal that those restrictions should be made effective by a system of licensing of ginneries and presses in India. That was the recommendation of the Indian Cotton Committee. When we got their report in 1919, we referred those recommendations to all Local Governments. The letter was published. Local Governments consulted Chambers of Commerce and non-official opinion and they reported practically unanimously in favour of the wholesale adoption of the Indian Cotton Committee's report. At the time when we got those replies the Central Cotton Committee had come into existence and the first thing we did was to refer the whole question to the Central Cotton Committee. The Central Cotton Committee, as the House knows, represents the cotton trade in all its branches, growers as well as the trade itself. Their report was to the effect that there were three essential conditions to improvement, the adequate marking of bales to enable ownership to be established, the maintenance of the records of ownership and compulsory statistical returns. Those are the main features of the Bill which I am putting before the House to-day, but in the Central Cotton Committee there was a good deal of difference of opinion about this question of licensing. The Central Cotton Committee were only prepared to go as far as to say that they thought that Local Governments might be enabled by central legislation to impose licensing if they thought it necessary. We got that report at the end of 1921 and again we consulted all Local Governments, and all Local Governments again consulted Chambers of Commerce. They were more or less generally in favour of this enabling clause but the Government of India on further consideration, especially of the report of the Provincial Cotton Committee of the Punjab, on which the growers and the trade were strongly represented, thought that the best plan in the first instance is to drop even this enabling clause regarding licensing.

We propose to confine our Bill entirely to those points which the Central Cotton Committee regarded as essential. We are not placing any very severe restrictions upon ginneries and factories, but what we are doing is that we are enabling the trade to protect itself and the cultivator against these malpractices and abuses which injure so much the reputation of Indian cotton which do so much to prevent the Indian cultivator from getting an adequate price for his crop. If the House will agree to a reference to a Select Committee, all it means is that they agree that legislation is necessary to deal with these evils. In support of that statement I have quoted the authority of the Indian Cotton Committee. I have quoted also the fact that Local Governments generally have agreed with these proposals we are putting forward. Our precise proposals will no doubt be gone through most carefully by the members of the Select Committee. I have specially made it my aim in proposing Members for the Select Committee to propose Members not only representing the cotton trade but also the interests of the grower. In these circumstances, Sir, I hope that the House will agree to the motion which I have just moved.

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : Sir, I rise to move the amendment :

"That the Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon by 31st of December 1924."

In support of the motion I desire to make only a few observations.

In the first place I think that the subject of controlling the working of cotton ginning and cotton pressing factories should be left to the Provincial Governments and the Central Government should not, as far as possible, interfere in the matter.

The subject really comes within the category of transferred subjects, vide Entries Nos. 26, 27, 28 and 29 of Part 2 of Schedule I and, unless there is a strong case, the Central Government is not justified in interfering.

From the report of the Central Cotton Committee it is perfectly clear that the circumstances relating to the cotton cultivation, cotton trade and cotton industry differ in different Provinces. And therefore they have dealt with the question for each Province separately.

A uniform legislation by the Central Legislature to regulate them may not necessarily be a panacea for the evils existing everywhere.

[Mr. M. S. Aney.]

The Indian Cotton Committee bitterly complains in its report of the evils arising out of the multiplication of small ginning factories in the Madras Presidency. On the other hand, the Agricultural Department of the Central Provinces was of the definite opinion some time ago that the best method to save the cultivators from the evils of the pool system obtaining in certain important Cotton Centres in the Central Provinces and Berar as well as the best way to secure the proper price to the cultivator was to encourage him to get his cotton ginned before taking it to the market and therefore to provide facilities by encouraging the establishment of small ginning factories run by the power of an oil engine. The agricultural unions in Berar at any rate looked upon this proposal as a satisfactory solution of some of the difficulties which appeared insuperable to the Indian Cotton Committee. It has to be seen how far the process of encouragement is to succeed if this Bill be passed into law.

Besides, in the Central Provinces and Berar, the existing cotton market law has already given some of the powers to the cotton market committees that are established there. For example, the standardisation of weights and measures used in the cotton markets is already provided for by the municipal laws of the Central Provinces and the cotton market laws of Berar. I have only referred to these things just to show how conditions regarding this subject differ in different Provinces.

The second question which I wish the House to consider seriously is whether the control which is sought to be established on the factories can be better exercised by such local Committees as the Cotton Market Committees or by the Government through such agency as this law may create. I do not venture to give any definite opinion on the question without further examination and without being in possession of all the information which those that are directly interested in the trade and industry may be in a position to place at our disposal.

But if I am allowed to judge the matter by such previous experience as we had regarding grain control during the war time, I am inclined to think that the governmental control of trade through an official agency is certainly not an unmixed blessing. Such a power vested in the officials oftentimes degenerates into a form of weapon of harassment to businessmen and a dangerous temptation for corruption which the officials concerned in the majority of cases find it difficult to withstand.

Even if we recognise the necessity of some control, we must know clearly the purpose which we have in view. If this control is intended only for securing statistical accuracy I have no doubt that the Bill goes very much beyond requirements But if it be intended to protect the trade against damping, adulteration or other malpractices in the interest of foreign purchasers of Indian cotton, I am afraid that the framers of the Bill have perhaps failed to take proper account of the conditions of the cotton trade as they exist at present.

The Indian Cotton Committee has been harping on the point that the reputation of Indian cotton has very much suffered in the foreign markets and the Central Cotton Committee probably neglecting its legitimate and primary function of providing facilities for research work regarding the possibilities of long staple cotton cultivation and similar work of a scientific nature in its advisory capacity has been flooding the Government of India every year with suggestions to redeem this lost reputation of the Indian cotton.

It may be some consolation to the Honourable Members of this House that the Government of India, though not jealous of the reputation of Indian manhood in foreign lands, the human commodity, if I may so use the expression, is, at any rate, showing very commendable zeal in saving the reputation of an Indian commodity of commerce like cotton. This extra zeal for the reputation of Indian cotton has been to me a mystery.

I do not see from the figures of exports of Indian cotton published by the Government of India any indication of this loss of reputation of Indian cotton in foreign markets. The pre-war average of the export of cotton bales from India was 2,407 thousand bales. In 1921-22 it was 2,989 thousand bales and in 1922-23 it had risen to 3,362 thousand bales. If the loss of the reputation of Indian cotton had told on the export trade and thus affected both the revenues of the Government of India as well as the material prosperity of the Indian cultivators and others engaged in the cotton business in the country, I would have very well understood the anxiety of the Government of India to investigate into the question promptly and take immediate steps to remedy the evils also in the best interests of the country. But the figures of exports do not disclose any diminution of the trade and therefore the question certainly need not be treated as one of urgency.

I even go further, Sir, and urge that the question of adulteration and malpractices in the Indian cotton trade has not yet been properly investigated. Although I do admit to some extent the existence of this evil, I feel that the conclusions of the Cotton Committee regarding the true sources of these malpractices and even the suggested remedial measures based on these conclusions cannot be accepted as the last word. It was at one time thought that cotton cultivators are to some extent responsible for it and this Assembly has passed the Cotton Transport law. Now it is suspected that the petty merchants in conspiracy with the owners of ginning and pressing factories practise the fraud and we are asked to pass the present law to remedy the evil. But is it known to the Honourable Members of this House that the petty merchants as well as the Indian cotton cultivators are solely at the mercy of the agents of big foreign companies in the Indian cotton markets ? It is these agents who purchase the cotton on a large scale in these markets and it is they who virtually rule the markets.

The conditions of the Indian cotton markets have materially altered during the last five or six years. There is no important cotton market in Berar at any rate where we do not meet with the agents of the big European, American and Japanese cotton purchasing firms. They purchase the cotton directly from the cultivators in these markets and get it ginned and pressed. But if, in spite of this, there is a good deal of adulteration, I think that the matter requires a fresh and searching investigation. Who is the culprit ? I do not want to rush headlong to any conclusion and give an off-hand answer. But I certainly think that the thing requires to be properly investigated. Is it that the agents practise fraud on their principals ? So long as the foreign companies were not directly dealing with the Indian cultivators in Indian markets, there were grounds to suspect that the fault possibly lay with the cultivators or the petty Indian merchants or the ginning and pressing factory owners. But as I have said the situation has materially altered and it is necessary to give all those owners of Indian factories and

[Mr. M. S. Aney.]

Indian cultivators a fair opportunity of expressing their opinion on the provisions of the Bill before this House can be asked by the Government to adopt it.

I ask the Honourable Members of this House to bear in mind that they are passing a penal law and a little negligence on the part of owners in regard to the maintenance, production and preparation of registers or submission of returns or structural construction of their factory buildings is being penalised. And therefore it is all the more necessary for you, Sir, to hear them and receive suggestions from them before making up your minds finally on the merits of the Bill.

Sir, there is another consideration also which I wish to urge. The element of Indian population which is bound to be affected by this piece of legislation occupies a very important part in the economic and public life of my Province. Nearly 520 factories in the Central Provinces and Berar employing on an average 38,650 persons will be affected by this law. The importance of this class is already recognised by the Government in constituting the factory owners of the Central Provinces and Berar as a separate constituency for the Provincial Council as well as for the municipal bodies of various towns in the Province. So their importance also requires that neither the Government nor the Honourable Members of this House should hasten to pass an ex parte order against them. It is an intelligent, influential and public-spirited class of citizens.

I conclude therefore with a fervent appeal to the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill as also the Honourable Members of this House to adopt my motion and thus give them an opportunity of having their say on the principles underlying the Bill as well as the detailed provisions of the Bill.

This Bill was introduced on the 3rd of September. It was published in the Gazette of India on the 6th. And I therefore need not say that it has not yet reached the distant places where the factories sought to be controlled by it are generally situated.

In this connection I may also remind the Honourable Members of this House, that the cotton transport law to which the present Bill is rightly described in the aims and objects as being supplementary, was not pushed through the Legislature in haste. Government immediately after its introduction in the Assembly published it and circulated it for public opinion and then referred it to a Joint Committee of the two Houses. This House gave its assent to that Bill on receiving the Report of the Joint Committee. So, in pressing my amendment, I have a strong precedent to rely upon and I am confident that the Government and this House will adopt the same procedure this time and adopt my motion for circulating it for public opinion. With these words, I commend the motion to the House.

Mr. Narain Dass (Agra Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to support the amendment moved by the Honourable Mr. Aney. I think cotton pressing and ginning goes on mostly in the districts. Gentlemen coming from big trade centres like Bombay and other places have knowledge of exporting the pressed cotton bales, but as regards what processes are really involved in pressing and ginning the cotton, in what places this is being done, and so forth, these gentlemen know very little. I think the Bill as it stands would mean undue interference with large industrial interests, and those who are really engaged in that trade, who carry it on in so many districts, are the persons who happen to be the least consulted. I do not think that gentlemen living in large trade centres have the right to prescribe certain methods, to prescribe certain marks and labels to the various other proprietors and owners of the factories scattered almost all over the country and carrying on trade under different conditions, under different circumstances. Sir, until the cultivation and growth of cotton in various parts of the country is brought under certain regulation, until we adopt Western methods and bring under a certain degree of uniformity the cultivation and culture of cotton and reduce it to certain well-defined methods, I think it would be going too far, it would be rather putting the cart before the horse, to take up legislation like this. Sir, the production of cotton in any district depends on a variety of circumstances. For example, a district using the same sort of seed cannot produce cotton of the same quality always,—rather in the same season the quality of the cotton differs very much. At the very beginning it is perhaps just of an inferior quality ; as the season advances, it becomes of a better quality, and then at the end of it the quality of the cotton falls off. So to be obliged to put the same mark on a number of bales ginned in a certain factory would mean nothing : it may simply mean that the contents of a certain bale were ginned in a certain factory. But there can never be any guarantee as to the quality of cotton which forms the contents of that package. Then, Sir, I submit that there has not been anything like universal complaint of any admixture or any sort of adulteration going on in the ginning factories. It is mostly to their self-interest to gin the cotton as they get it from the bazaar and to see that the cotton is quite pure. There is no complaint at all that they adulterate it to any the least extent. Many of us coming from the United Provinces or from the Central Provinces or from Berar know very well under what circumstances cotton is being ginned and pressed. Almost every district has got not only one but a number of factories, and they are doing their work very honestly and in a business-like manner. I do not think there will be any the least necessity for interfering with their work, and the Bill as it stands will really encroach upon the liberty of businessmen. Sir, I think we should at least consult those who are really concerned with the ginning and pressing work, and that the Bill should be postponed for at least six months to get opinions thereon. I am sure the Bill will not improve the quality of cotton but would mean a great vexation to the trade.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas (Indian Merchants' Chamber : Indian Commerce) : Sir, while one cannot help sympathising to a certain extent with the wish of the Honourable Member from Berar, my friend, Mr. Aney, who suggested that the Bill should be circulated in order to enable owners of gin and pressing factories in his district at least to express their opinion on the draft Bill, I must very strongly protest against the indictment that my Honourable friend has thought fit to pass on the principles underlying this Bill. Sir, I think it would help this House if I stated at the very start that I happen to be concerned for the last 25 years in the work of cotton ginning and pressing, and I happen to belong to that class which it is proposed to bring under better regulation by this Bill. I might say at once that I had something to do with the conception of the principles underlying this Bill and I had a good deal to do in seeing the Bill through the Central Cotton Committee, an organization consisting of 35 members, mostly of members who are non-official merchants interested in the cotton trade of India from various parts of the country. If, therefore, my Honourable friend, Mr. Aney, or my Honourable friend, Mr. Narain Dass, wishes in the slightest degree to insinuate or to allege that the Bill comes before this House without the sanction of the people whom it affects, I wish most emphatically to challenge them and say that they are either under a misapprehension or they are misinformed.

The Bill comes here, Sir, with the full support of the principles approved in most cases unanimously, and in some cases by a substantial majority of that statutory body created by this very House, namely, the Indian Central Cotton Committee. I therefore wish that my friend, Mr. Aney, had put forward his grounds for the Bill being circulated not on the general indictment that he has chosen fit to pronounce in this House but on the very simple ground that the Bill was only published a few days ago and has not had time to get to the people whom it is likely to affect. With that ground of his, every one will sympathise. Against the rest, I protest emphatically. What does my Honourable friend from Berar suggest ? The first is, why should there be an all-India legislation on this question and why not leave it to every provincial Government to legislate for gins and presses in their boundaries as they may best like to do. I would give him a very straight reply and very short one too. The fact is that cotton is not marketed by provincial boundaries, cotton is marketed all in one place and the mill-owners of India who are the consumers are not restricted by provinces nor are exporters similarly restricted. It is, therefore, most necessary that the broad principles on which this Bill is based should be uniform all through. And what are those principles, Sir, against which we have had such vehement opposition from my Honourable friend there or my esteemed friend over there ? The Bill only makes provision for the maintenance of registers, marking of bales in order that there may be uniformity, and thirdly for gin and press owners preserving returns, a thing which in ordinary business firms one would have thought they might have done ; but owing to the various stages of literacy that is enjoyed by the various people who are interested in this business, and various ideas of economy that prevail in the minds of gin and press owners and for other reasons which I need not go into here, adequate returns and records are not at present preserved. I say that as a gin and press owner myself and I think it is only right that this Assembly should insist that everybody who handles the raw produce of the cotton cultivator should have certain definite records, so that in case of any mischief having to be traced, it can be traced to the originating place. The third point, Sir, is for adequate provision for scales and weights being maintained. I wonder if my Honourable friends take objection to that ; and the last is some structural requirements to be observed in order that when the raw produce is being ginned no excuse may be available for pure cotton being mixed with seed or seed cotton by an accident. These are the very simple underlying principles of the Bill which my Honourable friend thought fit to assail or to take exception to. The next thing that he suggests is this and there again there is a misunderstanding and I wish to clear it up. My Honourable friend says that he apprehends that damping or watering may be prevented by legislation for the purpose of the foreign purchaser. I heard a good deal of the word "foreign," "foreign," in his speech. I really wonder if my Honourable friend thinks that the only buyers of Indian cotton are foreigners and that the Indian mill-owners do not buy anything at all of it. May I ask if he really thinks that watering should be allowed to go on if it really can be checked ? The Honourable Member in charge of this Bill has said that the Central Cotton Committee were of opinion not only that there should be better regulations, but that there should be a system of legislation of licensing of gins and presses. The Government of India wish a better case to be made out that there will not be any suffering by those who may be innocent and to that extent that part of the recommendation of the Central Cotton Committee is being held in abeyance, I hope, by them and had not been rejected. But the principles underlying this Bill, Sir, appear to me to be very necessary for the welfare not only of the foreign buyer, as my Honourable friend tried to make out, not only of the indigenous consumer, the Indian mill-owner, but of all those for whom my friend there and my friend over here plead, namely, the cotton grower and the cotton cultivator. I will only give one instance, Sir. This very Assembly, I think, less than a year back or approximately a year back passed what is now known as the Cotton Transport Act, perhaps under protests of a melancholy nature similar to what we have heard here. I wish my Honourable friend there would get a copy of the press communiqué recently issued by the Government of Bombay where they have said that after definite experience for one year they have come to the conclusion—and this is the conclusion which is endorsed by the commercial community—that the Cotton Transport Act has benefited the cotton grower by lakhs upon lakhs of rupees a year—and that in one year only, Sir. I have very great pleasure in commending this measure to the House.

Regarding the question whether it should be referred to a Select Committee or not, even if the Bill is referred to a Select Committee now, I wish the Honourable Member to bear in mind that the Bill cannot come into operation for the coming cotton season. The cotton season will begin within two months more ; and if the Select Committee were appointed now, I expect the Honourable the Commerce Member does not wish the Select Committee to carry through its consideration and submit a report to this House this session. Therefore, even at the very best the Select Committee's Report can come up for consideration of this Assembly next February. If there is a general feeling in the House that the Bill should be sent out for circulation and opinions be called in by the end of this year, the Select Committee can meet in February, sit down to work and submit their report, and the Bill may be passed into law before the end of the winter season at Delhi. I have said that not a single season would be lost by this being accepted, and I wish to suggest to the Honourable Member in charge that he may think over this. If there was the question of a single season being lost by adopting this suggestion of my Honourable friend over there, I perhaps would have been the first to oppose it, for every season that is lost means lakhs of rupees loss, avoidable loss, to the cotton cultivator. The motion of Mr. Aney entails no loss of time in the Bill coming into operation, which can at the earliest be for the season 1925-26 ; if the House wish that more time should be available to those interested in this Bill to make necessary representations to this House, I hope that the Honourable Member in charge may see his way to accept this amendment.

Sardar V. N. Mutalik (Gujarat and Deccan Sardars and Inamdars : Landholders) : I rise, Sir, to support the motion that has been brought forward by my friend. In the first place, I would refer to some remarks that have fallen from the Honourable Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas. He said that the Select Committee may be appointed just now ; the Select Committee may decide to have opinions and the Bill may be circulated, the Select Committee may sit in February and have the report in the next session. What does this mean ? This means that the House is committed to the underlying principle of the Bill. I first want to ask whether the House agrees to that proposition. If the House agrees to that proposition, then it means very little whether the Select Committee is nominated just now or whether the Select Committee sits and reports after February, after the opinions are invited. I think the best course would be both for Government and for the House to postpone the consideration of this matter for some time. In the meanwhile the Bill may be circulated for eliciting opinion on it. 1 P.M.

The next question, Sir, which I want to refer to is the report of the Bombay Government. I was present on the occasion in the Bombay Council when the first Bill of this nature came up for consideration in that Council. This Bill, even then, was considered as a contest between the capitalists and the Members from the mufassil. If anybody would refer to those debates, he will find that the Bill for controlling the cotton transport was strongly opposed by the section which represented the cultivators. I may also mention here, Sir, that it was strongly opposed by those Members who came from constituencies which were mainly cotton-growing constituencies. After all, Sir, we cannot help this competition. There will always be a difference of opinion between the capitalists or the people staying in the cities and the people in the mufassil, who are mere cultivators and supply for the commercial requirements of the commercial population in the cities. I say that it was a wise suggestion from the Honourable Member from Berar to consider whether it was not right to have provincial legislation or an All-India legislation on this matter. I do not know what argument there is in the statement that because the mills are situated in one locality and as they are the best purchasers, the Indian Legislature should take in its hands the question of legislation. Nor do I understand the argument that because cotton is exported from one port, this House should take into consideration this legislation. Personally, I think it would be desirable to leave this matter to the Provincial Governments if they are willing to accept the responsibility of legislating on this matter. They know best the local conditions. They are well conversant with the factory owners and they will be the best judges to legislate on such matters. This Bill really interferes with the trade itself. I wondered when the Honourable Member in charge of this Bill said that unaided trades should be left unaided to adjust themselves. At the same time he now considers that this is a thing which the trade is not able to do unaided. Trade ought to adjust itself and I suppose the merchants will take care of themselves in this matter. Why should not the merchants themselves move in the matter ? Why should they not enter into communication with the gin owners and the press owners and constitute a machinery by which everything can be adjusted without the intervention of Government ? I think the suggestion made by the Honourable Member from Berar should be accepted by this House and the Central Government may embark on this legislation in the February session.

Mr. K. G. Lohokare (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I come, Sir, from a constituency where cotton is grown in abundance. There are many cultivators who are my friends. During the last year at the time of the election campaign I was told—I shall be glad if my information is wrong—that the doings of the Cotton Committee and the Transport Act were not to the benefit of the agriculturists themselves. It may have helped the agents. It may have helped the foreigners to discern one variety from the other, but it has not helped the agriculturists. On the other hand, it has increased their difficulties. This time, in the present condition, I think it will create another difficulty for them. When the cotton is to be brought to the gin—it cannot be kept as it were in the open—it will have to be kept in different sheds for avoiding damping and mixing. Consequently, the cost of the sheds will go to increase the cost of ginning, and that increase will be borne by the agriculturists. Everyone knows that it is the question of demand and supply that determines the price. If there is a certain price at a certain time and if the ginning takes up some more of it, it is the agriculturist who will get less and consequently something will come in his way by an enactment of this sort. The Marketing Act as well as the Transport Act, I am told just now here, have benefited the agriculturists, whereas the actual impression is that they come in their way a good deal and consequently have interfered with the legitimate profits of the agriculturists themselves. It is with this consideration that I should like to say, although I am not ready to say anything regarding the frauds in the trade, that if these are facts, they should, of course, be adjusted. But, in order that the agriculturists may be given a hearing and in order that the people in the distant corners of the district may know what is going to be enacted for them, it is absolutely necessary that the Bill should be circulated. I have no objection to a certain period of time within which this should be done. Consequently, I would rather accept the amendment of my friend, Mr. Aney, and request the House to support it in the interest of the agriculturists so that they may find out what comes in their way and the traders themselves can find out how they can protect their own interests as well as the interests of the agriculturists.

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : Sir, I have very few words to say upon this motion. Most of what I have to say has already been said for me by my friend Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas. I just want to refer very briefly to what the Honourable Member from Berar said on one or two points. He stressed very much his argument that legislation of this kind should not be all-India legislation but should be left to Provincial Governments. Well, Sir, that was a point which was directly referred to the Local Governments for their opinion and their opinion was generally unanimous to the effect that this legislation should be undertaken by the Government of India and not be left to different Local Governments. Just let me read an extract from the reply of the Government of the United Provinces. This is what they say :

> "The conclusion of the Governor, acting with his Ministers, is that All-India legislation should be introduced to compel marking of bales sufficiently to enable ownership to be established, and also to compel the submission of statistical returns. This Government thinks that the suggested legislation should certainly be All-India. Marking of bales and submission of statistics on an All-India system are likely to be much more effective than marking and statistics by methods differing from province to province."

That shows that we have taken this action with the concurrence of the Local Governments.

[Sir Charles Innes.]

Then, Sir, I just want to add something to what Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas said about the Select Committee. Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas said that, as the Bill had only been published a few days ago, we ought not to make any attempt to rush it through the Assembly this session. That was not my intention, Sir, and for that very reason I did not say so in the motion that I have just moved. I did not suggest that the Assembly should instruct the Select Committee to report by a certain date. I said nothing on that point. What is the result under the rule? Such report should be made not sooner than three months from the date of first publication, unless the Assembly orders the report to be made sooner. This Select Committee cannot submit a report in less than three months. The Bill will be published and there will be ample opportunity for everybody who is concerned, who has any apprehensions, to submit representations to the Government of India, and they will be put before the Select Committee. I hope that point will satisfy the House that I have no intention of rushing the Bill through the Assembly. We have had it under discussion for four solid years and I do not want to make another reference to Local Governments. I should like the Bill to be examined by a Committee of this House. That Committee will consider any representations that may be brought up against the Bill and will submit a report to this House next Delhi session. If the House then thinks that the Bill ought to be circulated it is always open to any Member to move a motion to that effect. I hope that the House will be satisfied and agree to my motion that this Bill should be referred to a Committee of the House.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas: May I just ask one question? The Honourable Member in charge said that the Bill could be sent for circulation even after the Select Committee had reported on it. I understood that in another Select Committee meeting a responsible member of the Government in this House said that the Bill having been submitted to Select Committee could not be circulated. If what the Honourable the Commerce Member says is a fact, namely, that the Bill can be circulated after the Select Committee's Report is available, may I put it to the Honourable Member that that would cause still more delay in case Honourable Members make up their minds in February next that the Bill should be circulated; and that, therefore, the shortest and swiftest method would be to put this motion off until the Delhi session?

Mr. President: The original question was:

"That the Bill to provide for the better regulation of cotton ginning and cotton pressing factories be referred to a Select Committee."

Since which an amendment has been moved:

"That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 31st day of December 1924."

The question I have to put is that that amendment be made.

The motion was adopted.

THE LAND CUSTOMS BILL.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member): Sir, I beg to move:

"That the Bill to consolidate, amend and extend the law relating to the levy of duties of customs on articles imported or exported by land from or to territory outside British India be taken into consideration."

As I explained when this Bill was introduced, this is to some extent an interim measure designed to deal with the difficulty of collecting duties on the frontiers of foreign territory by land. At present, only in the case of Madras and Bombay does there exist any power to collect duties on the land side. Those duties are collected under two old Acts, Madras Act VI of 1844 and Bombay Act XXIX of 1857. Both those Acts have been found for some time to be insufficient and badly in need of amendment, and, in addition, they do not apply to other frontiers. The frontier that we have particularly in mind at the present moment is the Burma-Siam frontier. Owing to two causes, the development of communications in Burma and Siam, and the very high duties on certain articles, such as matches, saccharine, gold thread and other things which are light articles and can easily be transported, a regular trade is growing up, which is quite legitimate, between Siam and Burma, in goods which would be liable to customs duties, if they came in by sea. Cigarettes are one of our difficulties, matches are another, as I have already mentioned. I have here a letter on the subject of cigarettes :

"Importation of cigarettes by land into Burma is increasing, as is evidenced by the quantity of cigarettes in the Rangoon market, which are being sold at considerably lower rates than those imported by sea. We are afraid that after the monsoon is over even larger quantities of cigarettes will be brought into Burma from Siam, overland. We cannot sit idle and allow our trade to be interfered with much longer, but naturally we are loth to avail ourselves of this particular method of importing cigarettes, if the Government intend to take proper action to protect legitimate trade."

There are similar difficulties owing to the insufficiency of the existing Madras Land Customs Act with reference to the importation of saccharine and gold thread from Pondicherry and some of the European Settlements in India proper. Our object in introducing this Bill now is, therefore, that we may be able to deal with these difficulties, protect legitimate trade in these imported articles and protect our own revenue which is liable to serious inroads if this smuggling into Madras is not checked and also the importation by land into Burma. Our intention originally was to introduce a bigger Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to sea customs, which is badly in need of bringing up to date, and to incorporate in it clauses dealing with land customs ; but it will probably be six months before we are ready with such a Bill, and possibly a year before such a Bill can be carried through all its stages. In the meantime we do not desire to lose our revenues.

I see there is a motion down to circulate this Bill for opinion or refer it to a Select Committee. As regards circulation I would urge that it is very important that we should get this Bill through this session, if we are to deal with the conditions on the Burma-Siam frontier. As soon as the rainy season is over a big trade in dutiable articles by a method which brings them in free of duty will undoubtedly spring up there unless we have power to deal with it. Circulation could not add very much to the knowledge on which we are acting. There are really three Governments concerned, the Madras Government, the Bombay Government and the Burma Government, at the present moment. All of them are in favour of this Bill and the Madras Government in particular are very urgent that it should be passed, so that they may cease to be in the anomalous position of our agents for the collection of land customs and not our agents for the collection of sea customs. As regards the Select Committee, the Bill is a fairly simple one. Its clauses are taken straight or almost straight from the Madras and Bombay Acts which it is proposed to repeal, and from the Sea Customs Act. In one or two cases they do perhaps improve on their originals, but not in a way that makes any serious modifications in the existing state of affairs. So far, therefore, as Madras and Bombay are concerned, the changes are of comparatively little importance in the matter of changing the existing state of affairs except that they enable the Government of India to do its own work instead of doing it through the agency of the Provincial Government. In the case of Burma, it is, of course, a new power, but it is a power that we desire to possess in order to deal with special circumstances on that developing frontier. I would suggest, therefore, that there is not a great deal for a Select Committee to consider and that this is one of those Bills which might more desirably be dealt with in the House itself. We are prepared to explain the Bill clause by clause when we proceed to its consideration in detail. Any questions or particulars that may arise on particular clauses we shall be in a position to deal with here. I do not know that any exact precedents exist as to what Bill should be referred to Select Committees and what should not. There has been a tendency in this second Assembly to refer more Bills to Select Committees perhaps than during the previous Assembly. But I think that this is a Bill that might very well be taken in the House, and from our point of view it has this advantage that there are already a good many Select Committees on various Bills and Committees on other subjects sitting, and, regard being had for the time of the House and the desirability of getting this Bill through this session, we should very much prefer that the Bill should be taken in the House.

I beg to move that the Bill be taken into consideration.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay Northern Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I beg to move :

"That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 31st day of December, 1924."

My reasons are these. When the amendment of the Tariff Act was made in March last there was a considerable amount of misapprehension that the Act, as amended, would prejudicially affect the subjects of Native States or British subjects who had dealings with Native States (Voices : "Indian States"), Indian States—that is better, and I accept the amendment—and a number of telegrams were received by those who were interested in these States ; as I happen to represent a constituency which is connected with nearly 300 Indian States, I was flooded with telegrams making the most piteous appeals not to make it possible for Government to revive the Land Customs frontier and, with it, the horrible state of things that prevailed for fifteen years at Viramgam and Ranpur making the life of the people almost miserable day in and day out. At that time the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill, Sir Charles Innes, made it quite clear that the Bill did not intend to make any change with respect to the law as it prevailed in respect of these Indian States, that there was legislation in existence in some provinces which could, if necessary, be put in force and land customs frontiers formed on the frontiers of these Indian States, and that the amendment of the Tariff Act was only intended to make it possible for Government to make good the revenue which they were losing on the Siam-Burma frontier and other foreign frontiers. On that representation and also on the assurance given by Sir Charles Innes that there was no intention whatsoever to apply this measure to the Indian

States the House agreed to pass it. Well, Sir, now a measure is brought forward which jointly with the Tariff Act amended last March will touch not only the Indian States which would have been touched before March 1924 but will involve other States which contain nearly one-third of the total population of this country. Moreover, the people who are going to be affected by the Bill before the House are not merely the subjects of these Indian States as some people assume. Persons residing in British districts, our multi-millionaires and captains of industry as also the wage-earning classes, who originally hailed from these Indian States, who have settled in Bombay, Calcutta and other places, and who maintain a constant intercourse between these States and the British territories, will be equally affected. That is the position which, if this measure is passed, will come into being ; until now, the huge Indian States in Central India, Rajputana, and the Sikh States in the Punjab who have not got sea-ports were not touched by any legislation of this kind. It is the first time that a legislation of this character will affect them and they do not know to-day that they are going to be legislated about, and yet, without their knowledge, without giving them any opportunity to put forward their views of the matter, we are asked to pass a piece of legislation which will vitally affect their economic and social existence. Further, Sir Charles Innes had promised that the Tariff Act would not be applied to the Indian States, but the legislation before the House contains no indication that it is to be confined to the Siamese-Burmese frontier and the European settlements in India. If that was made clear, no case for circulation would then exist. Again, the Bill assimilates the procedure of the Sea Customs Act. Anybody who will give a moment's thought to this question will realise that the Sea Customs Act and the Land Customs Act cannot be on the same footing. They are vitally different. For the administration of the Sea Customs Act there are certain well-known ports where alone the landing, exporting and importing of goods can take place. But the matter is quite different when you are concerned with a land frontier. Just take the case of Kathiawar. Imagine a land frontier of one hundred miles. Under the Sea Customs Act in a frontier of 100 miles there will be two or three ports and people will have their goods landed or exported only at these ports. Along a land frontier the population on both sides of the whole of the frontier are in constant intercourse day after day, and hundreds of people have lands on this side of the frontier and on that side of the frontier, and yet the Bill proposes that all communications of goods across the frontier shall take place through certain stations. What can be the result ? Suppose two persons are living within a mile's distance of each other, one on each side of the frontier, and suppose after this Bill becomes an Act a certain route is prescribed for the passage of goods. It then becomes imperative on the persons living there first to carry the goods to the prescribed station on their side of the frontier, ten, fifteen, or twenty miles, and, come back the same distance on the other side of the frontier to the place where they want to go ; if they were allowed to cross the frontier at the nearest point ten minutes would be sufficient for work which under this legislation could only be done in ten hours. And more often it will not be worth while at that rate. Take a concrete instance. Suppose I have to carry five seers of ghee or other agricultural produce from an Indian State one mile across the frontier to British territory. Under the proposed measure I must go to a Land Customs station ten miles from my village and, having passed through all the formalities of this measure, I must cross the frontier there and go ten miles again to reach my destination in British territory. That is the condition of things to which people will be reduced on both sides of the frontier, not merely Indian State subjects but British subjects as well, if this Bill becomes an Act ; and therefore I have moved that it be circulated for opinion. Just see how the matter stands ; only on the 3rd instant leave for the introduction of this Bill was asked for. To-day on the 8th, we are asked to consider and pass it. The people concerned do not know that such a piece of legislation is hanging over their heads. Their number cannot be less than five crores and without giving them any opportunity to represent their case, we are asked to legislate, on such an important matter, a thing unheard of ; and I hope that this House will not tolerate anything of the kind.

We are told that the Bill merely reproduces the legislation in existence in Bombay and Madras. Nothing of the kind. You go far beyond. You make this legislation more drastic than the Provincial Acts are. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons we are told that there are certain defects in these local Acts, that these defects are reported to hamper seriously the attempts of the land customs administration to cope with the extensive smuggling over the land frontiers which has sprung up recently and that the substitution of more effective provisions has for these reasons become a matter of urgency. Therefore, this Bill goes far beyond the local legislation now existing in Bombay and Madras. I will point out one or two instances. Under the Bombay Act, XXIX of 1857, which is now sought to be repealed and replaced by the proposed legislation, there is a provision made for punishing vexatious seizure of goods by Land Customs officers ; but this Bill takes away that right. Further, I do not find in the Bombay Act any provision so drastic as clause 7 of this Bill which says :

"Any person who conveys or attempts to convey to or from any foreign territory or to or from any land customs station any goods by a route other than the route, if any, prescribed for such passage under this Act, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding one thousand rupees, and the goods in respect of which the offence has been committed shall be liable to confiscation."

I would not mind if that was done subject to judicial investigation, but there is no provision for judicial investigation. It is to be a purely executive act. The officers who seize the goods are to decide whether to inflict the one thousand rupees fine or to confiscate the goods or to do both. Cæsar is to be both prosecutor and judge. Clause 7 therefore is more draconian than the previous legislation, and yet the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett has gone further and proposes to add a new clause (c) to that clause 7 which says :

"or aids in so passing or conveying any goods, or knowing that any goods have been so passed or conveyed, keeps or conceals such goods or permits or procures them to be kept or concealed."

I submit Sir, you cannot allow that kind of legislation to be enacted in such a hurry without proper investigation. One more objectionable feature is that, whether the goods are dutiable or not, we are to ask for a permit the absence of which is made penal. If I want to leave Bombay for a place in Kathiawar and if I do not choose to go by the prescribed customs station but by some other route, then, Sir, I must ask for permission for a permit from some Customs Officer located either in Viramgam or Ranpur, and I must ask for a permit saying that I want to take from Bombay to Kathiawar Rs. 500 worth of such and such goods which may not be dutiable under the Indian Tariff Act. The permit may come in 5 days or 7 days or 10 days or in a month and it may happen that I must either go without those goods or go a day after the fair. That is the effect of clause 5. These drastic provisions cannot be passed without further investigation and without knowing the opinions of those whom they affect so vitally. I think there ought to be some limit to hurry in legislation. We are legislating for a certain class of people who do not know the provisions of the proposed measure, and to pass it without giving them an opportunity to represent their case is certainly not passing legislation but issuing Ordinances. Therefore I move that in view of the promise of Sir Charles Innes when the Tariff Act was sought to be amended—I will read that promise—he said on page 450 on the 11th February 1924 (Legislative Assembly Debates) :

" As far as I know, none of the Indian States at present is declared to be foreign territory for the purposes of these powers ", and then he said :

" As far as I know it is not intended to do that at present..... "

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : Is that a promise. I made a statement of fact that, as far as I know, it is not intended to do that at present.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : If that is not some kind of assurance on which we voted, I do not know what it is. The word " promise " is not there.

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : As far as I know the position is exactly the same at the present moment.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : The Honourable Sir Charles Innes said :

" As far as I know it is not intended to do that for the present ", and now you do it. On that promise votes were secured and to-day we know that that promise comes to nothing. On that day it was worth a lot. In view of that promise, for what it is worth, in view of the fact that the people for whom we are legislating do not know what the effect of this legislation will be on them, in view of the fact that this legislation goes far beyond the legislation now in force in Bombay and Madras, and in view further of the fact that it is going to affect the States which were never affected by such legislation in this country, and, lastly in view of the severity of some of its clauses, it would not be wise for this House to proceed without asking the opinions of those who are going to be vitally affected by it. If, as I said at the outset, the Indian States are let out of this legislation, I will allow this Bill to be considered here and now. I do not want that the Government should lose any revenue unnecessarily or that bonâ fide merchants should be penalised or that those who are engaged in smuggling should get the better of the honest merchant ; but I certainly do stand for a position that those for whom you legislate shall know what is proposed to be done, that their views shall be heard and that before their views shall be heard you shall not proceed with this kind of legislation.

Sir P. S. Sivaswamy Aiyer (Madras : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I beg leave to make a few remarks, not with the object of hampering the progress of the Bill but with the object of eliciting some explanation from the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill. But before I proceed with the remarks which I intended to make, I should like to make a few observations on the motion which has been made by my Honourable friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta. He seems to assume that this Bill enables the Government to impose customs duties by virtue of these provisions. So far as I have been able to study the provisions of this Bill, it seems to me purely a processual measure, not a Bill which imposes any customs duties, not one which enables the Government to levy any duties at all, but simply one which enables the Government to collect the duties which may be leviable under other enactments in a more effective manner. That, so far as I understand, is the scope of the Bill. The feelings of alarm to which my Honourable friend has given expression seem to me therefore to have been very unnecessarily excited. There is no question in this Bill of subjecting to any fresh duties goods which would otherwise pass from any of the Native States into British India or from India into Native States. The question whether any goods should pass from the Native States into British India or vice versa free of any duty raises very wide issues. If, according to the existing practice, such goods have been passed free, the practice should certainly be kept up ; and I may also add that, in view of the interlacing of the territory of Indian States and of British India, it is desirable to have some arrangement by which goods can be passed free, something like a Zollverein. But that is a question which raises very wide issues. Supposing an Indian State is not willing to reciprocate the arrangement, I should be most unwilling to let their goods pass into our territory free of any duty at all. That is a matter which has to be decided upon principles of its own and that question of policy does not arise for consideration here. As I have pointed out, the question of the liability to duty does not arise under this Act at all and most of the objections of my Honourable friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta fall to the ground.

Another objection which he brought forward was that this Bill is a little more drastic, that some of its provisions are more effective, than the provisions of the Acts which they are intended to replace. But that is the very object of this Bill. If the provisions of the Acts which it is intended to replace served their purpose equally well, I could not understand the object of bringing forward a new measure for doing that which the existing law will enable us to do as effectively. I see no objection therefore to the provisions of clause 7 on that account.

Then again, my friend pointed out that there is no provision for a judicial investigation and for a condemnation by a court and the imposition of a penalty. I see no clause in this Bill taking away the power of the courts, and I should be surprised if it could be held that the customs officer or some other person has the authority to impose a penalty of one thousand rupees, or anything of that kind. The Bill merely creates an offence. The ordinary law will then apply and the penalty will have to be enforced by the courts so far as I can see. I see my friend Mr. Lloyd shaking his head. Of course if it is intended that the jurisdiction of the courts with regard to the liability of a person for penalty under clause 7 is meant to be taken away I should like to know of it.

Mr. A. H. Lloyd (Member, Central Board of Revenue) : Might I draw attention to the fact that one of the sections of the Sea Customs Act sought to be extended is section 182 ? Section 182 of the Sea Customs Act gives Collectors of sea customs power to adjudicate. That means that a large number of offences under the Sea Customs Act are adjudicated by Customs Collectors and not by the Courts.

Sir P. S. Sivaswamy Aiyer : Well, it may perhaps be a matter for consideration whether that provision should or should not be extended. It is not proposed to be done by this Act but indirectly by the application or extension of one of the provisions of the Sea Customs Act. I confess I have not had the advantage of reading the Sea Customs Act in connection with this Bill, but if that provision is in force in the Sea Customs Act and has worked without hardship, I for one see no particular objection to importing that provision into this Bill for the purpose of a more effective realization of the duties leviable under the Indian Tariff Act and Indian Tariff Rules.

Now, Sir, the observation which I myself originally intended to make was in connection with the difficulty I have felt under clause 5, sub-clause (3), of the Bill. It says:

"(3) Any Land Customs Officer, duly empowered by the Chief Customs-authority in this behalf, may require any person in charge of any goods which such Officer has reason to believe to have been imported, or to be about to be exported, by land from, or to, any foreign territory to produce the permit granted for such goods; and any such goods which are unaccompanied by a permit, or which do not correspond with the specification contained in the permit produced, shall be detained and shall be liable to confiscation."

What I wish to point out is this. The words "any goods which he has reason to believe to have been imported" appear to me to be too wide and the whole clause is expressed without any qualification or regard to distance or time. One does not know.....

Mr. President : If I allow the Honourable gentleman to proceed on that line I shall have to allow a debate. Then we shall have two debates, one now and one on clause 5 when we come to it. I think matters of detail of that kind had better be reserved.

Sir P. S. Sivaswamy Aiyer : If the difficulty I feel is not explained, I shall not be disposed to support the reference to a Select Committee.

Mr. President : We are discussing the circulation of the Bill. The Honourable Member cannot be deprived of his opportunity. If the Bill proceeds at all the opportunity will arise.

The original question was.....

(Mr. Patel rose in his place.)

If Honourable Members wish to continue the debate we must adjourn now. [Other Members rose.] As there is a desire to continue, we had better take it up when we resume at ten minutes to three.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Ten Minutes to Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Ten Minutes to Three of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. President : The Assembly will now resume debate on the motion:

"That the Bill to consolidate, amend and extend the law relating to the levy of duties of customs on articles imported or exported by land from or to territory outside British India be taken into consideration."

Since which an amendment has been moved:

"That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of illiciting opinion thereon by the 31st day of December 1924."

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, taking advantage of the luncheon interval, I have been able to discuss with some of our friends as to the procedure on this Bill. I understand that the difficulty that they feel is with regard to the extension of this Bill to Indian States. There is a good deal of misapprehension on the point, because we already have power under the Madras and Bombay Acts to treat Kathiawar exactly in the way that Mr. Jamnadas Mehta was so much afraid of our treating her under this Bill. There is no new power in respect of Kathiawar, there is no new power in respect of Indian States which are affected by the Madras and Bombay Acts. It is no part of the intention of the Government in introducing this Bill to proceed to apply the provisions of this Bill to any Indian State. The purpose of the Bill is, as stated by me, primarily to deal with foreign European Settlements in India and with foreign States on the borders of India, not merely of British India but of all India. I am prepared, if it meets the wishes of the House, to substitute for the motion which I originally moved a motion for reference to a Select Committee, and I am prepared in the Select Committee to consider to the best of my ability in consultation with legal advisers the possibility of confining the operation of this Bill to foreign States, properly so called. That will not be at all contrary to the intention with which we introduced the Bill, and, in view of the importance which attaches to getting it through quickly, I hope the Select Committee, if that is agreed to, will be able to come to a swift decision, because both the Government and the House must remember that, if we do not get this Bill through soon, we are taking the responsibility of seriously upsetting the legitimate trade of traders in many parts of India as well as of losing revenue which is the tax-payer's due.

Mr. V. J. Patel (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, in view of the statement made by the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett, I would advise my Honourable friend, Mr. Jamnadas Mehta, not to press his motion to a division. The whole object of the motion of my friend, Mr. Jamnadas Mehta, is to see that what we considered to be an asurance given by the Honourable Sir Charles Innes is carried out in substance, namely, that the Tariff Act, as amended in the March session of this Assembly, was not meant to apply to Native States. Sir Basil Blackett when he spoke in support of his motion pointed out that a huge quantity of cigarettes was coming into Burma through Shan territory, and if this measure is not passed soon, Indian revenues will suffer and there will also be unfair competition amongst merchants, and that therefore it is necessary that this measure should be passed without much delay. A good case for taking this measure into consideration at this session has been made out. At the same time care should be taken that the power which has been vested in the executive to declare any territory ' a foreign territory ' should not be exercised by them to the detriment of the residents of Indian States, in accordance with the promise given by Sir Charles Innes. If this is made clear by the Select Committee by making the necessary amendments in the present Bill, so that it may not be possible to extend the provisions of this Bill to territory other than the Burma-Shan frontier and other frontiers of foreign European Settlements, I think all that Mr. Jamnadas Mehta needs will have been provided for. I do not know whether a formal motion has been moved by anyone regarding reference to a Select Committee. I take it that Sir Basil Blackett has moved that the matter be refered to a Select Committee ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I am prepared to do so, if I have not done so.

Mr. V. J. Patel : And also that the terms of reference to the Select Committee should contain instructions that the Committee do amend the Bill so as to restrict the operation of its provisions to the Burma-Shan frontier and other frontiers of foreign European Settlements. If this is done by clear and unambiguous provisions in the Bill, I shall have no objection, but I would not merely rely on the intentions and promises which Sir Charles Innes or Sir Basil Blackett might hold forth, because we find that within a few months such promises are attempted to be explained away. I clearly remember I voted for the amendment of the Tariff Act in March last, simply because I was assured by those who were serving on the Select Committee at that time that the Bill was not going to be applied to Native States at all (The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : " Indian States ") but it was being enacted for the purpose of meeting that particular contingency, namely, to enable Government to levy duties on imports from the Shan frontier into Burma. Before I resume my seat, I would once again advise my friend, Mr. Jamnadas Mehta, to withdraw this particular motion in favour of the motion that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee with instructions that the Committee do so amend the Bill as to confine it to certain frontiers only.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah (Bombay City : Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I think there is some confusion in the minds of some Honourable Members when they say that in the Select Committee the matter was discussed and thereafter an assurance was given that the Tariff Act should not apply to the Indian States. That is not quite correct. As far as I understand, Sir, what happened was this. Under the old Act, I mean the Tariff Act—which was sought to be amended by the Bill which was introduced by Government at the last session, the Government already had power by notification to declare any Indian State to be a foreign territory. They already had those powers, and therefore the question then really was to deal with the particular emergency that had arisen, namely, whether the Siamese Frontier should not be brought under the Act as it stood. The Act therefore was sought to be amended for that purpose. We gathered at the time that there was a very strong feeling regarding the position of Indian States and I think the prime mover was my Honourable friend Mr. Dumasia and he brought the question to the front in the course of the debate. Then, Sir Charles Innes, speaking on behalf of the Government, gave his assurance to this extent that the Government had no intention for the present to declare by notification Indian States as foreign territory. Well, now, the Bill before us, Sir, is undoubtedly a very comprehensive Bill. Therefore, so far as the law which enables the Government to levy the duty is concerned, that law is already there and they can declare under the present Tariff Act Indian States as foreign territory. But they have got the machinery for collecting that duty only in two Presidencies, the Bombay Presidency and the Madras Presidency. They propose now to do away with that and substitute this Bill, which is a comprehensive Bill, and which will apply to the whole of India. But although this Bill is a machinery provided for the purpose of collecting duty, it is open to the Government under the present law by notification to declare any Indian State as foreign territory. Once that is done, then this Bill can be utilised for the purpose of collecting duty. Therefore, it is a very comprehensive Bill, but after hearing Sir Basil Blackett, I do not wish to make any proposal from my side yet,—but after hearing him I am satisfied that if we can find a solution and confine this machinery, which is after all a machinery for collecting duty, to properly called foreign territories and foreign States, that is, if we can make some provision which will exclude the Indian States, I think on this side of the House we shall be satisfied. I do not wish to make any particular suggestion just now. But I think it is a matter which might be threshed out in the Select Committee.

Mr. N. M. Dumasia (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Mr. President, we welcome the announcement made by the Honourable the Finance Minister that there is no intention to apply this Bill to Indian States and impose customs barriers against Indian States. He has removed a great deal of misapprehension and we are grateful to him for the same. I may say that my friend the Honourable Mr. Jinnah has correctly stated the facts as they happened in the Select Committee. At the Select Committee which was appointed at my instance the Honourable Sir Charles Innes made it clear that Local Governments had these powers but as customs duty had become an Imperial item, the Central Government were only taking these powers to themselves which already existed on the Statute-book. He then assured the Committee that there was no intention of extending the operation of the Tariff Bill to the Indian States. I may mention the further fact that when the Viramgam customs barrier was removed, there were new treaties with the States possessing ports at Kathiawad and according to those treaties, I think, Government cannot impose customs barriers without infringing those treaty rights. I am glad that the misapprehension has been removed and I hope the Select Committee will return the Bill in such a revised manner that we shall have no fear that the Act would operate against any Indian States.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Sir, in view of the statement made by the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett, I have very great pleasure in withdrawing my motion for circulating the Bill for opinion. I shall be very glad to accede to his suggestion, namely, to refer the Bill to a Select Committee with the proviso that he should find out some way by which the operation of this Bill will be restricted to foreign States outside India's border and to European Settlements in India. My only apprehension was about Land Customs duties on the inland frontier, the working of which was a perfect nightmare to the people of Gujarat and Kathiawar for fifteen years. That apprehension will now be removed.

Mr. President : Is it your pleasure that the motion for circulation be withdrawn ?

The motion was by leave of the Assembly withdrawn.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Sir, I move :

"That the Bill to consolidate, amend and extend the law relating to the levy of duties of customs on articles imported or exported by land from or to territory outside British India be referred to a Select Committee consisting of—

Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer,

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao,

Mr. M. A. Jinnah,

Mr. N. M. Dumasia,

Mr. A. H. Lloyd,
Mr. N. C. Kelkar,
Mr. V. J. Patel,
The Honourable Sir Charles Innes,
Mr. Cocke,
The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett, and
myself,

with instructions that it shall not be necessary for more than 4 members to form a quorum and to report by the 15th of September 1924 ", and with this understanding that a basis shall be found for excluding the Indian States.

Mr. President : Further amendment moved :

" That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of—
Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer,
Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao,
Mr. M. A. Jinnah,
Mr. N. M. Dumasia,
Mr. A. H. Lloyd,
Mr. N. C. Kelkar,
Mr. V. J. Patel,
The Honourable Sir Charles Innes,
Mr. Cocke,
Mr. Jamnadas Mehta, and
The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett,

that the number necessary to constitute a meeting be 5, and that the Committee do report on or before 15th September 1924."

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I have pleasure in supporting the motion, which I hope will enable us to find a satisfactory solution of the difficulty which is merely one of wording and not one of substance between us. I would like to say that, if the House agrees to this motion, it is proposed to call a meeting of the Committee to-morrow morning at 11 O'Clock.

Mr. President : The original question was :

" That the Bill to consolidate, amend and extend the law relating to the levy of duties of customs on articles imported or exported by land from or to territory outside British India be taken into consideration."

Since which an amendment has been moved :

*APPENDIX "A".

Correspondence between the Government of India and Local Governments on the recommendations of the Lee Commission.

LETTER FROM THE HONOURABLE MR. J. CRERAR, C.S.I., C.I.E., SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, TO ALL LOCAL GOVERNMENTS, No. F.-172|24-ESTS., DATED SIMLA, THE 18TH JUNE 1924.

SUBJECT.—Recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India.

I am directed to address you regarding the method of considering the Report of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India. His Majesty's Secretary of State for India attaches great importance to the point emphasised in paragraph 108 of the Report regarding the interdependence of the recommendations. The words used by the Commission are—"Finally in submitting this our Report we wish to emphasise that we regard its main proposals as vitally interdependent, and that unless all are given effect to, violence will be done not merely to the spirit of compromise which has inspired our agreed conclusions, but to the whole structure of our recommendations." The Secretary of State is of opinion that the Report must be considered as a whole and that a decision on general principles must be reached before details are examined. I am to say that the Government of India agree that it is desirable as a preliminary step to arrive at once at a general decision as to whether the main outlines of the Report are acceptable. In arriving at this decision, however, it is not possible altogether to ignore the consideration of certain important factors containing elements of practical detail.

2. The Government of India consider therefore that the following procedure may facilitate the disposal of the Report. They propose to address the Government of Madras, etc., in separate letters dealing with each of the main proposals of the Report. These letters will go only so far into detail as seems necessary for the purpose of reaching practical conclusions on important issues. But the Government of India do not propose to await the answers to these letters before deciding whether the main outlines of the Report can be accepted. They think that it should be possible for Local Governments, when the main points which arise out of the general recommendations have been stated, to arrive rapidly at a general appraisement of the main features of the Report. I am therefore to request that the Government of India may be informed in reply to this letter and in advance of the replies to the more detailed letters dealing with each individual point, whether the Government of Madras, etc., accept the following general propositions. In arriving at a decision I am to ask that the point mentioned in paragraph 1 of this letter regarding the interdependence of the main recommendations may be specially borne in mind. A proposition which there might be some reluctance to accept, if it stood by itself, might prove acceptable as part of the general scheme.

(a) That the All-India Services operating in reserved fields should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State ;

(b) That the Services operating in transferred fields (with the exception of the Indian Medical Service regarding which a further reference will be made) should, as far as future recruits are concerned, be appointed and controlled by Local Governments, existing members of these Services retaining all their present rights and status ;

(c) That the integrity and efficiency of the Services should be protected by the constitution of a Public Service Commission and the enactment of Public Service Act ;

(d) That recruitment of Indians for the All-India Services dealing with the reserved departments should be increased to the percentages recommended by the Commission ;

(e) That relief in the matter of pay should be given to the Services approximately on the Scale proposed—reserving for the moment the question of the exact form which the relief should take and whether relief should be given to Indians in receipt of overseas pay ;

* Vide page 2950 of Legislative Assembly Debates, dated 3rd September 1924.

(f) That provision should be made for passages for officers and their families at a cost approximately equivalent to Rs. 50 a month for each Officer ;

(g) That the pensions of the Uncovenanted Services should be increased by Rs. 1,000 a year as proposed by the Commission in paragraph 70 of the Report.

3. With regard to point (e) it will be observed that the Commission disagreed as to the necessity of extending relief to officers holding administrative posts with the exception of those on a pay of Rs. 1,750—100—2,150. The opposing views are set out in Appendix IV of the Report. In stating therefore whether the scale of relief in the matter of pay is accepted I am to ask that it may be indicated whether, without committing itself to the actual details, the Government of Madras, etc., accept generally the view of the English or of the Indian Commissioners.

4. I am to explain that, as stated in the Indian Legislature on the 27th May the Secretary of State and the Government of India are of opinion that whatever measures of relief may be finally sanctioned should have effect, as recommended by the Commission, from the 1st April 1924.

5. In view of the strongly expressed desire of the Secretary of State that some preliminary agreement on these main propositions should be reached at a very early date, I am to request that the Government of India may receive the views of the Government of Madras, etc., not later than the 21st July.

ENDORSED BY THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, No. F.-172-24-ESTS.

Copy forwarded to the Chief Commissioner, N. W. F. P., Coorg and Delhi, for information and with the request that any observations he may have to make should be submitted to the Government of India not later than the 21st July 1924.

LETTER FROM N. E. MARJORIBANKS, ESQ., C.S.I., C.I.E., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF MADRAS, No. 472|O.-1, DATED OOTACAMUND, THE 23RD JULY 1924.

I am directed to communicate the views of His Excellency the Governor in Council on the main recommendations of the Report of the Royal Commission on the Public Services, as desired in your letter No. F.-172|24-Ests. The Honourable the Ministers have been consulted and their views when they materially differ from those of His Excellency the Governor in Council are briefly indicated. I am to enclose a copy of their Memorandum.

2. His Excellency the Governor in Council accepts in principle the propositions (1) that All-India Services operating in the reserved fields should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State, and (2) that the services operating in the transferred fields should as far as future recruits are concerned be appointed and controlled by Local Governments, the rights of existing members being safeguarded. The considerations set out in Professor Coupland's minute attached to the Commission's Report appear conclusive on this matter. There will, however, be difficulties in the practical application of the principle in case of services that operate or may hereafter operate both in reserved and transferred fields. His Excellency the Governor in Council is not sure that these difficulties are insurmountable but it is unnecessary at present to enter upon a detailed examination of the subject.

The Honourable the Ministers while not objecting to existing members of All-India Services, whether working in the reserved or transferred field, continuing under the control of the Secretary of State, would recruit all future officers on a provincial basis.

3. Subject to the more detailed report on the subject called for in your letter No. F.-178|14|24, dated the 1st July 1924. His Excellency the Governor in Council welcomes the proposals of the Commission that a Public Service Act should be passed and a Public Service Commission set up. Not only does he regard these measures as most desirable, but he also considers it necessary that Provincial Public Service Commissions should be established to safeguard the present and future Provincial Services and even the subordinate services.

4. Subject to the two reservations that follow, His Excellency the Governor in Council accepts the ratio of recruitment of Europeans and Indians proposed by the Commission.

For the Judicial Branch of the Civil Service, His Excellency the Governor in Council considers that a higher proportion of Indians in the cadre than one-half should be attained in the period specified by the Commission. He would further point out that in paragraph 35 of the report no mention is made of the system of recruitment direct from the bar which at present obtains. Whether the recruitment be by promotion from the Provincial Service or from the bar, the result will presumably be attained by the gradual listing or reservation of a certain number of the District and Sessions judgeships.

In the case of the Forest Service, on the other hand, His Excellency the Governor in Council considers that the recommendation cannot be supported that European recruitment should be reduced to 25 per cent. and is of opinion that the rate of such recruitment should remain for the present at the rate of about one-half. The reasons that compel His Excellency the Governor in Council to make this recommendation will be stated in detail in replying to your letter No. F.-178|10|24-Ests., dated the 21st June 1924. Broadly they are that it is difficult to find suitable Indian recruits for this work which is uncongenial to them and that it is particularly necessary to maintain a strong European element at the present juncture when the department is entering on an era of considerable development.

The Honourable the Ministers are generally opposed to any further European recruitment save for special reasons and on special short term contracts, till the proposed proportion of Indians in the respective cadres has been reached.

5. His Excellency the Governor in Council agrees with the Royal Commission in their recommendations that relief should be given to the services approximately on the scale proposed, reserving for the moment the question of the exact form which the relief should take, and accepts the position that relief should be given to Indians now in receipt of overseas pay. On the further question referred to in para. 3 of your letter under reply, I am to say that His Excellency the Governor in Council supports the recommendations of the English Commissioners and the President of the Royal Commission in regard to the need of extending relief to officers holding administrative posts. Not only do the arguments advanced in support of this view appear to have much greater weight than those urged against the recommendation, but it will produce unjustifiable anomalies to refuse this relief. For example, the present pay of the Third Member of the Board of Revenue and the Revenue Secretary to Government is Rs. 3,000 which is also the total emoluments including overseas pay of the junior Secretaries to Government. Unless therefore the recommendations of the English Commissioners are accepted the result will be that the Revenue Secretary and the Third Member of the Board will be worse off by Rs. 200 per mensem than the junior Secretaries—a result which can hardly have been contemplated even by the Indian Members of the Commission. Further, if the other recommendations of the Commissioners are accepted, but this particular one is not, it would also result that the head of a department such as the Director of Agriculture would be inadequately remunerated. At present the difference in remuneration between him and the senior officers subordinate to him varies from Rs. 250 per mensem to Rs. 500 as the maximum pay of the Selection Grade is Rs. 1,750 whereas his pay is Rs. 2,000—2,250. Unless the proposal of the English Commissioners is accepted this difference would be reduced by from Rs. 50 to Rs. 300 and this would be insufficient to mark the difference between a Head of a Department and the officer under him. The subject will be further commented on in replying to your letter No. 178|11|24-Ests., dated the 21st June 1924.

The Honourable the Ministers have no special objections to urge to the proposals of the Royal Commission on the matter but consider that any relief granted should not involve the presentation of a heavy bill and should not exceed the average savings effected in the next few years by Indianisation and provincialisation.

6. His Excellency the Governor in Council agrees that provision should be made for the grant of passages for officers and their families on the scale recommended by the Royal Commission. It is observed that the recommendation is for the grant of passages on this scale and that the figure of Rs. 50 per mensem is only an estimate of the financial effect. The Commission do not limit their recommendations by this figure.

The Honourable the Ministers while not objecting to giving relief consider that the matter requires further investigation on the ground that some steamer fares have been reduced.

7. His Excellency the Governor in Council accepts the recommendations that the pensions of the Uncovenanted Services should be increased by Rs. 1,000 a year as proposed by the Commission in para. 70 of the Report.

The Honourable the Ministers are opposed to any increase to the pensions of the Uncovenanted Services.

8. The Honourable Sir Muhammad Habibullah having been a member of the Royal Commission does not desire to associate himself with the proposals in this letter in so far as they differ from those of the Royal Commission.

The Memorandum of the Ministers.

The memorandum containing the view of the combined Government of Madras on the questionnaire relating to the organization of services stated, in reply to Question No. 1, that generally speaking there have been in this province no difficulties between Ministers and members of the All-India Services serving in transferred departments and it was hoped that any irresponsible criticism of services will be diminished as further subjects are transferred and the sense of responsibility in the legislature is increased, and further stated that owing to the number of officers now on the cadre of the Imperial Services, recruitment may be shut down almost entirely for the present. There may then be a gradual readjustment on a provincial basis by the replacement of officers retiring, by officers of the Provincial Services. The rights of existing officers being protected it was also considered desirable to give them the option of retiring or continuing to serve under the provincialised system. In the light of the answer given by this Government general propositions have to be considered.

(a) and (b). Under the existing constitution, we would have no objection to the All-India Services now operating both on the Reserved as well as Transferred fields of the Government being controlled by the Secretary of State, though we would prefer that control being transferred to the Governor General in Council. So far as the future recruits are concerned, in the existing state of affairs, differentiation of recruits in either part of the Government is likely to lead to practical difficulties. There is no reason to depart from the position taken up by this Government in answer to Questionnaire No. 1 (Royal Commission) in regard to future recruitment of Services.

(c) We agree to the appointment of Public Service Commission and the passing of Public Service Act.

(d) In the proposals of the combined Government, it was suggested that recruitment to the All-India Services may be shut down almost entirely. Therefore, it will follow that further recruitment to the cadre must not be resorted to until a proper proportion of Europeans and Indians is reached. It is on the basis of this understanding that the replies to questions relating to pay, passage and pension were agreed to. We are therefore unable to agree to the proposition as stated. If it be decided that there should be recruitment, we would suggest that the rate of recruitment of Indians should be such as to reach the proportion in ten years, instead of fifteen years that is worked out in the Report. The rate of progress should be accelerated by larger percentage of recruitment of Indians. But this Government "after careful consideration and having regard to all the circumstances" proposed the fixing of the minimum of Europeans at about 50 in a cadre of 148. There is no reason to depart from this proposal. In the case of Police, this Government was of opinion that the reduction of the European element to 40 would go to the limit of safety (out of 85 posts on the cadre). In the case of the P. W. D. we are surprised at the recommendations of the Commission that the existing proportion should continue where the two branches—Roads and Buildings and Irrigation—are combined. This is opposed to the principle of Indianisation and inconsistent with the recommendation itself that one branch of the P. W. D. should be provincialised. Therefore the two branches must be provincialised.

(e) Some relief was proposed by this Government, but the form in which that relief should be given was not determined. Any relief that is proposed should not involve the province in a heavy bill and it should not exceed the average savings effected in the next few years by this provincialisation or Indianisation.

(f) The rates of passage were very high at the time when the question was raised, but subsequently, certain Liners reduced the passage rates. The concession was intended to be purely temporary while the high cost of passage prevails, until matters return to normal conditions. Therefore the question whether any relief on this ground is now needed requires further investigation. Temporary relief may be given.

(g) We don't agree to any increase of pensions to uncovenanted services.

TELEGRAM FROM THE GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY, DATED THE 26TH JULY 1924.

Your letter No. F.-172|24-Ests., dated 18th June regarding acceptance of main outlines of Lee Commission's Report. Bombay Government accept the seven propositions enumerated in your second paragraph. I am however to state that a minority of Executive Council do not accept first proposition that Secretary of State should control All-India Services in reserved fields. They consider it essential that control of All-India Services should pass entirely to Public Services Commission to be appointed in India. Their acceptance of remaining proposition (b) to (g) is dependent upon the acceptance of this transfer of control from Secretary of State to Public Service Commission.

LETTER FROM A. N. MOBERLY, ESQ., C.I.E., I.C.S., OFFG. CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL, NO. 8258-A., DATED THE 9TH JULY 1924.

SUBJECT :—Recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India.

I am directed to refer to your letter No. F.-172-24-Ests., dated the 18th June 1924, on the above subject and to say that the Government of Bengal accept the general propositions enumerated in paragraph 2 subject to the following observations as regards points (c) and (e) :

(c) Whilst the Government of Bengal accept the general proposition that the integrity and efficiency of the services should be protected by the constitution of a Public Service Commission, and the enactment of Public Service Acts, they desire to explain that they do not necessarily accept the opinion of the Royal Commission regarding the detailed functions of the Public Services Commission as expressed in paragraphs 27 to 30 of the Report, and propose to deal with this question in a separate communication.

(e) The Government of Bengal accept generally the view of the English Commissioners as to the necessity of extending relief to officers holding appointments outside the time-scale.

2. The Government of Bengal agree that whatever measures of relief are finally sanctioned should have effect from the 1st April 1924.

LETTER FROM G. B. LAMBERT, ESQUIRE, C.S.I., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED PROVINCES, NO. 3328, DATED NAINI TAL, THE 8TH JULY 1924.

SUBJECT :—Recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India.

I am directed to reply to the Home Department letter No. F.-172-24-Ests., dated June 18th, 1924. The Honourable Home Member, the Raja of Mahmudabad, is unable to agree with the opinion expressed in this letter, and I am to enclose a separate minute in which his views are stated.

2. Like the Secretary of State, the Governor in Council is much impressed by the importance of the point emphasised in paragraph 103 of the report of the Royal Commission namely the inter-dependence of the various recommendations made. He realises the care and skill with which numerous conflicting interests have been reconciled, the delicate nature of the balance represented by the sum of the detailed recommendations, and the danger that if any of the main proposals are rejected violence will be done to the whole scheme of the Commission. With this consideration prominently before him, the Governor in Council finds himself able to support all the general propositions (a) to (g), referred to in paragraph 2 of your letter. In nearly every instance indeed the recommendations of the Commission accord with the advice tendered by the Governor in Council in answer to the questionnaires issued at the outset of the Commission's tour, and where the opinions previously expressed vary slightly from those embodied in the Commission's final recommendations, the divergence is more a matter of detail than of principle. It is not necessary for the Governor in Council to indicate at this stage his reasons for accepting the principles laid down by the Commission. These will be given, as he understands the Government of India desire, in reply to the separate letters dealing with each main proposal which have since been received.

3. With regard to the point raised in paragraph 3 of your letter, I am to say that the Governor in Council without committing himself to details, in general strongly supports the views of the English Commissioners.

4. It is observed that the Secretary of State and the Government of India are of opinion that whatever measures of relief may be finally sanctioned should have effect, as recommended by the Commission, from April 1, 1924. I am to say that the Governor in Council attaches great importance to this pronouncement as mitigating the effects of the unavoidable delay in carrying out the Commission's recommendations.

Minute of the Hon'ble Raja Sir Muhammad Ali Muhammad Khan, Khan Bahadur, K.C.S.I., K.C.I.E., of Mahmudabad, Home Member.

I regret I am unable to associate myself with the draft letter proposed to be sent to the Government of India in connection with the Lee Commission Report.

After going through the Lee Commission Report, I frankly confess that the recommendations of the Commission are far from being satisfactory. Without going into the details, I offer a few observations on only those important points on which the Government of India have particularly asked the opinion of the Governor in Council:

(a) I still believe that All-India Services should no more be controlled by the Secretary of State and that the Government of India should appoint and control members of All-India Services.

(b) I agree that the services operating in transferred fields, with the exception of the Indian Medical Services, should be appointed and controlled by Local Governments.

(c) I agree on principle that a Public Services Commission should be appointed, and I reserve my opinion with regard to details.

(d) I adhere to my opinion expressed before the Lee Commission that the recruitment for Imperial Services should altogether be stopped from Europe.

(e) I am opposed to the scale of pay proposed by the Commission both for Europeans as well as Indians in receipt of overseas pay.

In view of the present financial difficulties of the Government I am opposed to both (f) and (g).

ALI MUHAMMAD KHAN.

The 6th July 1924.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PUNJAB, No. 26-CAMP-GAZETTE, DATED THE 30TH OF JULY 1924.

I am desired to refer to your letter No. F.-172|24-Ests., of the 18th of June, 1924, and to convey the following views of the Governor in Council on the seven general propositions summarized in paragraph 2 of your letter. In formulating these views the Governor in Council has given due weight to the point emphasized in paragraph 108 of the Commission's Report regarding the interdependence of their recommendations, to which reference is made in the first paragraph of your letter. It should however be understood that in accepting the main outlines of the Commission's recommendations the Governor in Council does not feel himself precluded from criticizing them in detail at a later stage.

2. This Government accepts the principle that the All-India Services operating in reserved fields should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State. Without endeavouring to forecast at this moment the changes in the constitution of the services which may result from the reconsideration of the Government of India Act which will be undertaken in 1929, the Governor in Council considers that for the present it is necessary to retain the general principle of appointment and control by Secretary of State. Any modification of this principle would be likely seriously to impair the chance of securing suitable recruitment to these services.

3. As regards the principle that the Services operating in transferred fields (other than the Indian Medical Service) should, as far as future recruits are concerned, be appointed and controlled by Local Governments, the Governor in Council recognizes that this change is the logical outcome of the existing constitution. He foresees that it will almost inevitably mean the practical cessation of—or at any rate a very marked reduction in—European recruitment for the Services affected, and that probably it will lead eventually to the merging into a single cadre of the existing All-India and Provincial Services operating in transferred fields. Nevertheless the Governor in Council would accept the proposed change subject however to the following provisos:

(a) That existing members of the All-India Services in question should, as recommended by the Royal Commission, retain all their present rights and status. The expression "present rights" should be strictly interpreted and should include, for example, the prospects of existing members of those Services of promotion to the selection grade of their cadre. This is a point of detail, but one of vital importance to members of Services in which the size of the selection grade has been fixed at a certain percentage of the total cadre. Under the new proposal the cadre of the All-India Services operating in transferred fields will gradually diminish as retirements take place, but it would not be fair on present members of those Services that the number of selection appointments should be correspondingly diminished.

(b) That a strong and impartial Public Service Commission should be established and a suitable Public Service Act passed.

4. The Governor in Council, as shown above, accepts the recommendation that the integrity and efficiency of the Services should be protected by the constitution of a Public Service Commission and the enactment of a Public Service Act. He desires to emphasize the necessity of making the Public Service Commission a strong and impartial body wholly removed from political influences. There is one point of detail in connection with this proposal to which I am directed to invite attention, as it does not form the subject of reference in your letter No. 178|14|24-Ests., dated the 1st July 1924, dealing with the detailed proposals regarding the Public Service Commission. The Royal Commission has recommended (on page 15 of its report) that an officer dissatisfied with the orders of the Government of India should retain his right of appeal to the Secretary of State, provided that his case is certified by the Public Service Commission as a fit one for such appeal. The Governor in Council has reason to believe that grave objection to this proviso will be taken by officers of the All-India Services and he is of opinion that such officers should retain their right of appeal to the Secretary of State without any qualification of the nature suggested. He does not conceive that it is part of the functions of a Public Service Commission to decide in what cases such an appeal would lie.

5. As regards the question whether the recruitment of Indians for the All-India Services dealing with the reserved departments should be increased to the percentages recommended by the Commission, the Governor in Council observes that the Royal Commission's proposals contemplate the Indianization of the four Services concerned (Indian Civil Service, Police, Irrigation Department and Forest Department) on a somewhat more rapid scale than was recommended in my letter to your address No. 26225-Gazette, dated the 25th of October, 1922. At the same time the Governor in Council is prepared to accept the percentages recommended by the Royal Commission as a general guide suitable for application to India as a whole, subject however to the general qualification that suitable proportions of Indian and European recruits must be fixed for each province with reference to its special circumstances. In this connection I am desired to draw attention to the arguments stated in paragraph 7 of my letter of the 25th of October, 1922, against a too rapid reduction of European recruitment for the Indian Civil Service and Police in the Punjab and to explain that since that letter was written the difficulties consequent on the paucity of British officers of these two Services have increased rather than diminished.

As regards the other two Services affected, the Governor in Council is of opinion that the ratio of recruitment proposed for the Forest Department (75 per cent. Indian and 25 per cent. European) is unsuitable for the Punjab in existing conditions. He would prefer a smaller percentage of Indian recruits for some years to come. Similarly as regards the Irrigation Branch of the Public Works Department the proportion in the existing cadre is 58 per cent. European and 42 Indian. Recruitment on the basis proposed by the Royal Commission (40 per cent. European, 40 per cent. directly recruited Indians and 20 per cent. Indians promoted from the Provincial Service) would involve Indianization on a scale which the Governor in Council considers too rapid for application to the Punjab. I am to add, however, that the Honourable the Revenue Member of this Government is prepared to accept the percentages proposed by the Royal Commission for the Forest and Irrigation Departments as suitable.

There is one other point to which I am desired to draw attention in regard to this proposal. An enhancement of the rate of promotion from the Provincial to the All-India branch of a Service is likely to prejudice the prospects of officers now holding inferior appointments in the All-India Services of reaching superior appointments, unless it is definitely laid down that officers promoted from Provincial Services are to be appointed in the first instance to inferior appointments in the All-India Services. This point is of considerable importance in present circumstances, as most of the recruits joining the All-India Services since the War are considerably older than pre-war recruits. In the case of the Police, for example, it is estimated that the recently joined recruits will not be confirmed in the rank of Superintendent of Police till after they have completed 16 years' service. This period would be considerably prolonged if the number of Superintendentships open to the Provincial Service Officers is enhanced.

6. I am now desired to deal with the question "whether relief in the matter of pay should be given to the Services approximately on the scale proposed by the Royal Commission". The Governor in Council conceives that the object of increasing the emoluments of the Services is two-fold, first to attract to the Indian Services British recruits of the required stamp, who are not at present forthcoming in sufficient numbers, and secondly to allay the discontent and remove the financial embarrassments of officers already in the Services, a matter which in itself has important reactions on the question of recruiting. Whether the relief proposed by the Royal Commission is likely to attain the first object the Governor in Council is not in a position to pronounce, but he confesses to considerable scepticism on the point. It is, however, clear that the relief proposed will not be accepted by existing Members of the Services as adequate to remove their financial embarrassments. He has received within the last few days a number of memorials from the various "Service" Associations in the Punjab, all of which regard the Royal Commission's proposals in this respect with keen disappointment. I am desired to enclose as an appendix to this letter an extract from a communication received from the Civil Engineers' Association, which the Governor in Council considers faithfully reflects the average "Service" point of view regarding these proposals.

Nevertheless, while in doubt whether the recommendations of the Royal Commission will suffice to attract British recruits to the Indian Services and while entertaining no doubt that these recommendations will not fully allay the existing discontent among the Services, the Governor in Council is of opinion that it would be politic to accept the relief now offered rather than to attempt to reopen the whole question. The considerations which make for this conclusion are obvious, and it is perhaps unnecessary to enlarge on them; indeed, the Governor in Council believes that even those members of the Services which now express disappointment at the recommendation of the Commission, would themselves appreciate the undesirability of any such attempt. There is a further point. The Governor in Council fears that if the measure of relief recommended by the Royal Commission be not granted at an early date, this province, which has already suffered severely from retirements on proportionate pension, will have to face further losses of officers from this cause. He would, therefore, accept the relief proposed, but he presumes that the expression used in your letter "approximately on the scale proposed" will not be interpreted as meaning anything less than the relief recommended by the Royal Commission.

7. The Governor in Council agrees in principle to the recommendation that provision should be made for passages for officers and their families at a cost approximately equivalent to Rs. 50 a month for each officer; he does not for the moment enter on a discussion of the detailed proposals, many points in which require separate consideration.

8. The Governor in Council is in favour of the proposal made in paragraph 70 of the Royal Commission's Report that the pensions of the Uncovenanted Services should be increased by Rs. 1,000 a year.

9. With reference to paragraph 3 of your letter under reply the Governor in Council has no hesitation in accepting the view of the English Commissioners as stated in appendix IV (i) of the Report, that relief in the matter of emoluments should be extended to officers, holding posts above the time-scale, but he would not extend such relief to any officers already in receipt of Rs. 4,000 per mensem or more. The Honourable Sardar Bahadur Sundar Singh, Revenue Member of this Government, however, prefers the view taken by the Indian Commissioners on this question.

10. I am desired to add that as the Ministers are concerned with the questions discussed in paragraphs 3 and 4 of this letter, the Governor in Council has consulted them on these questions and will forward their opinions at a later date.

2. The recommendations are extremely disappointing, not only "in re" but also "in modo". In response to a definite request, my Association was at some pains to furnish the Royal Commission with domestic budgets and other statements, conservatively framed, exhaustively checked, and fully explained, every item of which the Association was prepared to justify ; but these statements, upon the accuracy of which my Association based its case, the Commission found itself unable to " examine in detail ", and dismissed as affording merely " strong evidence " of a state of affairs already admitted by Government, by the Macdonnell Committee, and by the preamble to the present report, a state of affairs, in fact, beyond the need of proof.

3. Again even if the direct evidence presented by the Association at the request of the Commission, be ignored, the report itself in paragraphs 44 to 48 (iii) affords ample circumstantial evidence that the requests coupled with that evidence were extremely moderate, and that the ultimate recommendations of the Commission are inadequate. My Association is in fact unable to trace any logical sequence between the paragraphs referred to, and the actual recommendations prefaced by the remaining two sub-paragraphs of paragraph 48.

4. The members of this Association do not deny the need for economy in any administration, but they had been led to look to the Royal Commission as an impartial Tribunal to decide between the various Governments in India on the one hand, and members of the services on the other. They feel that if it has not been possible for the Commission to examine in detail the evidence of the Association ; equally it cannot have been possible to determine either the exact financial resources of the various Governments in India, or the precise need and justification for economising at the expense of the superior services. In fact it appears that while one set of evidence has been discounted, the other has been presumed.

5. While my Association believes that at this stage it will be obligatory for the Local Government to confine itself to the consideration and criticism of the actual proposals contained in the report of the Commission, nevertheless it feels that the Local Government should be under no misapprehension as to the feelings of members of the Association with respect to the proposals. The Association still adheres to the carefully prepared and moderate demands which it laid before the Royal Commission as the minimum which will " do something towards restoring the real pay of existing services to the level which proved attractive twenty years ago "; it believes that the recommendations of the Commission are by no means final and are merely a small advance towards that minimum, and that this fact is clearly recognised by the Commission itself by the publication of the minute of Sir Reginald Craddock ; and it dissociates itself completely from the expressions of satisfaction which have appeared in the European Press.

TELEGRAM FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BURMA, NO. 790, DATED 21ST JULY 1924.

Your letter F.-172-24-Ests, dated 18th June. Local Government strongly supports view that commissions report should be treated as a whole and that there should be least possible divergence from any particular recommendation in order not to upset balance involved in their conclusions. Further having regard to great discontent of superior services with present conditions it is essential there should be no whittling down of commissions recommendations especially as these have been published and have been accepted by all the services as a compromise, it being generally understood that the Secretary of State would treat them as such and would give effect to them at once. On the seven main points set out in paragraph 2 of your letter this Government advocates acceptance of the commissions recommendations subject to remarks below. Reference paragraph 3 of your letter this Government accepts generally the view of the English Commissioners contained in Appendix IV (1). Finance Member and two Ministers are against retention of any All-India Services being in favour of recruitment throughout on Provincial basis as set out in their reply to commissions questionnaire. Finance Member considers that commissions proposals go too far in case of transferred services and not far enough in case of reserved services and that Ministers will not find it possible to recruit any Europeans for former unless Secretary of State prescribes minimum proportion. His Excellency the Governor and the Home Member were strongly opposed to this differentiation of Burma from the Indian Provinces and indeed regarded proposal as wholly impracticable. Constitution of a Central Public Service Commission is accepted but it is necessary that Burma should have her own separate commission to deal with own Provincial Services for reasons set out in this office letter 24-T., dated 6th June 1921. Proposed increase pensions uncovenanted services opposed by Finance Member except for present incumbents and future European entrants and accepted by education Minister subject to proviso that proposals as a whole throw no heavy burden on tax payer. Ministers prefer their original proposals as regards rates of pay, etc., and smaller proportion of Europeans in reserved services as fulfilling conditions they consider essential namely no additional burden on tax payer. They however accept commissions main recommendations as these were presented as vitally inter-dependent and result of compromise. Sir Harcourt Butler has been so deeply impressed during his experience for nine years as head of a Provincial Administration by the grave and legitimate discontent in the European services and its effect on the administration that he considers it absolutely necessary to accept the solution now offered and regards the removal of that discontent as essential to the working of the reforms which as they are extended will need more and more all the support which the diminishing European element can give them.

GOVERNMENT OF BIHAR AND ORISSA.

APPOINTMENT DEPARTMENT.

LETTER FROM E. L. L. HAMMOND, ESQ., C.B.E., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BIHAR AND ORISSA, APPOINTMENT DEPARTMENT, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, No. 1689-A.R., DATED RANCHI, THE 22ND JULY 1924.

SUBJECT.—Recommendations of the Royal Commission on the superior Civil Services in India.

I am directed to reply to your letter No. F.-172, dated the 18th June 1924, enquiring whether the Local Government accept the general propositions contained in the report of the Royal Commission. It has not been possible in the time allowed by the Government of India to obtain many individual opinions, but Heads of Departments have been consulted, and the opinions of the Honourable Ministers are added as annexures to this report. Speaking generally, the criticisms advanced have been either that the proposals are too expensive, or, on the contrary, that they may fail to attract the right class of recruit. Otherwise, there is a general recognition of the fact that the scheme proposed by the Commission must be regarded as a whole, being in fact a reasonable compromise, the details of which it would serve no useful purpose to reopen. The Governor in Council generally accepts this view, as the need of an expeditious settlement appears to him to be the paramount consideration.

2. On the specific proposals mentioned in paragraph 2 of your letter the views of the Local Government are as follows :

(a) His Excellency in Council agrees that it is desirable that officers of the All-India Services operating in reserved fields should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State. This is an inevitable corollary to the system of diarchy, unless the Secretary of State was willing to make the requisite delegation to the Government of India, and it was established that recruits of satisfactory quality to the services concerned could be obtained under these altered conditions. Since it is to the ultimate control of the Secretary of State that the services, as now constituted, attach the utmost importance, any change would inevitably hasten their dissolution, and, if that result is to be avoided, is to be most strongly deprecated.

(b) Equally as a corollary to the system established by the Reforms, His Excellency in Council accepts the proposition that the services operating in transferred fields (the matter of the Indian Medical Service being excepted for subsequent examination) should, quâ future entrants only, and without derogation of the rights of existing incumbents, pass to the control of the Ministers. That there will be a deterioration in the standard of recruit obtained, the practical disappearance of the European element, and loss of efficiency is probable, but the change is consistent with the status accorded to the Ministers under a system of diarchy, and as it is supported by them, it should not be opposed.

(c) Reserving for the present any opinion on points of detail, His Excellency in Council would welcome the appointment of a Public Services Commission as a safeguard to the maintenance of efficient standards and proper methods of recruitment ; also as a source of practical help to Local Governments (should they require its assistance) in the actual examination of candidates, though appointments made by promotion or nomination could never be effectively controlled by such a body and should be excluded from its sphere. If, however, as is apparently contemplated, such a Commission is also to operate as a disciplinary body and a court of appeal for service grievances, questions of difficulty may arise, regarding which an opinion is not now expressed. The enactment of Public Service Acts is theoretically expedient as some guarantee to the Public Services of continuity and fairness of treatment. No Act, however, is unalterable, and the true safeguard to any public servant to be recruited in future should be a legally enforceable contract stating specifically the conditions of his appointment.

(d) As regards the rate of Indianization of the Services, I am to refer to Mr. Rainy's letter No. 173-A., dated the 6th January 1923, as indicating that on the merits or finality of any endeavour to fix racial recruitment on a basis of percentages the Local Government are not unanimous, and the majority are sceptical as to the soundness of the procedure. However, as the point is one to which the Indian members of the Commission doubtless attached great importance, it becomes an integral part of the compromise, and should be accepted as such.

(e) Speaking generally, and subject to the further consideration of points of detail, the proposals of the Commission in the matter of the pay of Services appear to the Governor in Council to follow a fair line of compromise, and as regards existing incumbents he would accept them as such. Also if the non-alteration of the basic pay is to be regarded as an essential part of the compromise, he would let it stand on that ground, but he is doubtful whether (as regards future recruitment) it falls within that category, and it is certain that widely voiced Indian political opinion would welcome a lowering of the basic or Indian rate, while it is more than probable that a scale of pay in excess of the market rate is at present being offered for the type of Indian officer who is, in fact, being secured. If so, the expediency of starting the Services of the future upon a needlessly high scale of pay is open to the gravest question. Indianization is widely advocated in the interests of economy, and if an economy can be effected, over and above the gradual disappearance of overseas pay, it is not right that it should be neglected.

For European officers the total emoluments suggested by the Commission are not extravagant. Any alteration in the basic rates would, of course, entail consequential changes in overseas pay.

The Local Government are not unanimous in the matter of the extension of relief by the benefit of remission of overseas pay at privileged rates, to officers holding administrative posts. The Honourable Mr. Sinha and the Honourable Ministers, agreeing with the Indian Commissioners, consider that in these posts there should be no difference in the pay of Europeans and Indians. His Excellency in Council, on the contrary, believes that the need for assistance, which is the only true criterion, is as cogent in the later days of service as in the earlier, and except where the post carries with it an increased pension, as for example in the case of High Court Judges or, as proposed by the Commission, in the case of Governors and Members of the Executive Council, he would extend this benefit to all European officers. The anomaly caused by the proposed exclusion of the lowest executive administrative grades from the concession can perhaps best be removed by giving Deputy Inspectors-General of Police, Superintending Engineers and Conservators of Forests higher incremental pay than they draw at present (though not, as proposed by the Commission, the maximum pay of the post), and by admitting them also to the remittance benefit.

In this matter His Excellency in Council is in entire agreement with the views expressed by Lord Lee. The existence of prize posts, as also the proposed increase of pensions to officers holding high administrative posts, does, in fact, offer one of the chief inducements to recruitment, and the argument is not tenable that because in the later days of his service an officer might just be able to carry on, therefore nothing need be done for him. In the first place, if married, he will certainly not carry on without difficulty ; his scale of expenditure will necessarily have gone up and his liabilities will be heavier. Moreover the theory that it will suffice if Government servants at different stages of their career are barely solvent, ignores the course of events in any other following or profession of repute. If a man devotes years of hard and solid work to progress therein, he is entitled to look forward to some reward ; this is an incentive to him to work, and his employer benefits by the work done. The Government in this country has benefited greatly by the Service tradition of hard work, and if that disappears there will be a distinct pecuniary loss to the State, to say nothing of the moral consequences involved. Whereas the rewards available to even the most successful officers are small.

(f) The question of relief in the matter of passages for European officers is one to which the Services attach the utmost importance, and any relief in that respect, combined with assistance in the matter of home remittances, will help greatly to arrest the exodus on proportionate pensions. The principle underlying the proposals of the Commission (subject to subsequent detailed examination) commends itself heartily, therefore, to the Governor in Council.

(g) The increase proposed in the pensions of the uncovenanted services appears to the Governor in Council to be reasonable and justifiable.

ANNEXURE A.

Minute by the Honourable Babu Ganesh Datta Singh, Minister of Local Self-Government, Bihar and Orissa.

The report of the Lee Commission is practically based on compromise and the recommendations are interdependent, vide paragraph 108. Under the circumstances no useful purpose is likely to be served in examining the recommendations in detail and offering suggestions thereon. I apprehend the financial condition both of the country and the province may stand in the way of their accepting the recommendations as they are not in a position to shoulder any additional burden except at the cost of some vital development projects.

G. D. SINGH.

The 10th July, 1924.

ANNEXURE B.

Minute recorded by the Honourable Sir Muhammad Fakhr-ud-din, Minister of Education, Bihar and Orissa.

It is very difficult to express any definite opinion on the several questions asked by the Government of India in the absence of any public opinion threshed out either in the provincial Legislative Council or the Legislative Assembly. We had already expressed our views in our evidence, written and oral, before the Lee Commission.

It appears that the report of the Commission is based on a compromise spirit and the various recommendations made in the report are interdependent. Paragraph 108 of the report also requires that unless all the proposals are given effect to violence will be done not merely to the spirit of compromise which has inspired their agreed conclusions, but to the whole structure of their recommendations. This recommendation has added further to our difficulty in giving any definite opinion on the various recommendations, but I think at present we have only to give our opinion on the main features of the report, and I propose to answer them as follows :

Paragraph 2.—(a) Though personally I have no objection in accepting the recommendation that All-India Services operating in reserved fields should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State, but I think it would be wiser and more expedient to delegate this function to the Government of India. This would be also consistent with the popular feeling. The Right Honourable V. S. Srinivasa Sastri described his feeling in the following terms :—" If the constitution was to confer any degree of self-government at all upon the people of India, if the Government of India was to have a modicum of independence of the Imperial Parliament in internal affairs as was proposed, we all thought that the dependence of our country upon the Secretary of State for the recruitment of our services was a mark of degradation. Now, we wish, before the provinces stand on their own feet, that the place of the Secretary of State shall be taken hereafter in these matters by the Government of India, and no political party in India which wishes to command a modicum of respect from the electors can acquiesce in the continuance of the Secretary of State as the final arbiter over our services. " The Secretary of State and his Council have to be deprived of most of the powers they now enjoy."

I think this feeling will find expression in the various provincial councils and the Legislative Assembly.

(b) I accept this recommendation.

(c) I have no objection to the constitution of the Public Services Commission and the enactment of Public Service Acts. At present I am not required to offer any remarks on the details of the powers of the Public Service Commission with regard to the services operating in the transferred fields.

(d) I have no suggestions to offer, as I have already given my views in regard to the percentages of Indians and Europeans in my evidence and the recommendation of the Commission is a compromise. But I am afraid, this will also be a subject matter of hot discussion in the Councils.

(e), (f), (g). I do not wish to make any differentiation between Europeans and Indians in respect of the overseas pay in the matter of relief. If the services have got a genuine grievance they are certainly entitled to relief. But in regard to the recommendations referred to in clauses (e), (f) and (g) the only difficulty which I could point out is the difficulty of finance. It is doubtful if this province will be in a position to bear any large additional burden.

I do not think that we should make any recommendation or anything more than what has been recommended by the Lee Commission. If we once begin to disturb the recommendation made by the Commission in favour of the services, there will be no justification in the Government refusing to comply with the request of the public and the Members of Council to decrease the amount of emoluments recommended by the Commission. It is mainly for this reason that I have accepted generally all the recommendations made by the Commission and referred to in the letter from the Government of India.

FAKHR-UD-DIN.

The 9th July, 1924.

LETTER FROM A. E. NELSON, ESQ., O.B.E., C.I.E., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT, CENTRAL PROVINCES, No. 2759-III-1268, DATED NAGPUR, THE 21ST JULY 1924.

SUBJECT :—Recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India.

I am directed to reply to the Government of India letter No. F.-172-24-Ests., dated the 18th June 1924, asking for the views of the Local Government on certain general propositions arising out of the Report of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services.

2. The Local Government desires strongly to support the view expressed in paragraph 108 of the Report that the main proposals are interdependent and should be accepted as a whole. They, therefore, deprecate a detailed re-examination of the merits of each proposal, and recommend that the report should be accepted as a whole, although on some matters the views of the Commission differ from the proposals made by this Government. They would prefer to confine their recommendations to the removal of any anomalies or inconsistencies in the Report.

3. The first proposition is that the All-India Services operating in the reserved fields should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State. The proposal put before the Royal Commission by the Local Government was that the Secretary of State's control should be maintained over the Indian Civil Service and the Police, but that in the other two reserved services (Forests and Irrigation) the European element should be an all-India Service controlled by the Secretary of State and the Indian element should be a Provincial Service controlled by the Local Government. In making this recommendation the Local Government was influenced mainly by considerations of economy. The question has now been re-examined in the light of the arguments advanced by Professor Coupland in his minute attached to the report. Having regard to these arguments and the fact that there is a strong desire among Indians for equal treatment, while the extra expenditure involved in equal treatment will not be excessive, the Local Government is now prepared to support the recommendations of the Royal Commission that all the four services should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State. The Honourable Mr. Standen, however, while agreeing that the advantages to be derived from acceptance of the Commission's report as a whole warrant acquiescence in proposals which would not otherwise commend themselves, desires to state his view that if on consideration of opinions expressed by Local Governments or in the Legislature, the Secretary of State so amends the proposals of the Commission as to disturb the balance of conflicting views represented by the report, the question of the recruitment by Local Governments to indianized posts now in the cadre of All-India Services should be reconsidered on the ground that it is of great importance for the future welfare of the country that the scale of pay should be reduced as soon as possible to that which is sufficient to attract the type of man required and that the least objectionable means of doing this is by provincialization of indianized posts. He further desires to say with reference to Mr. Coupland's note on "the control of the services," that this course will not affect the ability of the Secretary of State to discharge his constitutional responsibility. The business of the reserved departments is already largely conducted by officials provincially recruited and the transfer of some more posts to provincial recruitment will not necessarily prejudice the position of the Secretary of State. It would be a question in each case whether the measure of transfer proposed was such as to affect the maintenance of the desired standard of administration.

4. The second general proposition is that the services operating in transferred fields (with the exception of the Indian Medical Service regarding which a further reference will be made) should, as far as future recruits are concerned, be appointed and controlled by Local Governments, existing members of these services retaining all their present rights and status. The opinion of the Local Government previously recorded coincided with that of the Royal Commission with one exception. In the Education Department a recommendation was made in favour of reserving 12 posts for Europeans to be recruited and controlled by the Secretary of State. In view of the unanimous conclusion of the Royal Commission the Local Government does not desire to press this proposal and accepts the general proposition as it stands.

5. The third general proposition is that the integrity and efficiency of the services should be protected by the constitution of a Public Service Commission and the enactment of Public Service Acts. The Local Government accepts this recommendation without committing itself at present to any opinion on the scope of the Commission's activities.

6. The fourth general proposition is that recruitment of Indians for the All-India Services dealing with the reserved departments should be increased to the percentages recommended by the Commission. The Local Government accepts the percentages for recruitment recommended by the Commission. In its recommendation to the Royal Commission the Local Government, while agreeing with the principle of complete Indianisation of the Indian Forest Service, expressed the opinion that it should proceed only at the rate at which suitable material became available. In accepting, therefore, the percentage of Indian recruitment (75 per cent.) suggested for this service, the Local Government assumes that the Royal Commission was satisfied that Indian recruits with the necessary qualifications will be available to the extent required.

7. The fifth general proposition is that relief in the matter of pay should be given to the services approximately on the scale proposed, reserving for the moment the question of the exact form which the relief should take and whether relief should be given to Indians in receipt of overseas pay. The Local Government accepts this proposition in its general form. With regard to the necessity of extending relief to officers holding administrative posts with the exception of those on a pay of Rs. 1,750—100—2,150, the Local Government desires to support the views of the English Commissioners recorded in Appendix IV of the report. Under the alternative scheme the difference in emoluments between administrative posts and senior posts in several departments will be so small as to give rise to serious anomalies and practical difficulties in filling the administrative posts. These will be explained more fully in reply to the detailed letter of the Government of India on the subject. The Honourable Sir M. V. Joshi, Home Member, dissents from this conclusion, and supports the view expressed in the minute recorded by the Indian members of the Royal Commission.

8. The sixth general proposition is that provision should be made for passages for officers and their families at a cost approximately equivalent to Rs. 50 a month for each officer. The Local Government accepts this proposition in principle, reserving the right to consider whether the legitimate claims of the services cannot be satisfied by the grant of passage money at a lower rate and to examine the accuracy of the estimate that Rs. 50 per mensem is required.

9. The seventh proposition is that the pensions of the Uncovenanted Services should be increased by Rs. 1,000 a year as proposed by the Commission in paragraph 70 of the report. This proposition, which deals with one of the most pressing requirements of the services, is also accepted by the Local Government.

TELEGRAM FROM ASSAM, SHILLONG, NO. 4115-AP., DATED THE 22ND JULY 1924.

Reference your F.-172-24-Ests, June 18th, 1924, regarding recommendations of Lee Commission. Government of Assam feel difficulty in dealing with question owing to uncertainty of future constitutional position but their views on main points stated in paragraph 2 of your letter are as follows. They accept proposition (a) but Ministers would stop recruitment of Europeans for 5 years and if European recruitment continues would withhold from future recruits option of retaining all-India status in event of Departments being henceforth transferred. This will be further discussed in reply to your 178-9-24-Ests. of 20th June. They agree to (b) and regard (c) as an essential condition to (b). As regards (d) they are unable to state definite view until they have examined your F.-178-10-24-Ests. of 21st June in detail with special reference to Assam. They accept (e) so far as Europeans are concerned. As to (f) they agree that passages should be provided on scale proposed by Commission. They agree to (g). As regards paragraph 3 views of English Commissioners are supported by European members of Government and those of dian Commissioners by Indian members of Government.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

ESTABLISHMENTS.

LETTER FROM THE HONOURABLE MR. J. CRERAR, C.S.I., C.I.E., SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, TO ALL LOCAL GOVERNMENTS, NO. F.-178| 9|24-ESTS., DATED SIMLA, THE 20TH JUNE 1924.

With reference to my letter No. 172|24-Ests., dated the 18th June 1924, I am directed to address you on the main problems connected with the control and organisation of the All-India Services which arise out of the recommendations of the Report of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India. The main recommendations briefly are :

(a) that the Services operating in the reserved field as specified in paragraph 13 of the Report should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State in Council ;

(b) that the Services operating in the transferred field as specified in paragraph 14 of the Report (with the exception of the civil side of the Indian Medical Service which will be treated separately) should, so far as future recruits are concerned, be appointed and controlled by Local Governments. Existing members of these Services, however should retain all their present rights and status as officers of All-India Services.

2. These two main recommendations are derived from the application of the same principle, namely that the Services should be controlled by the authority which is ultimately responsible for the administration of the subjects. It would seem, therefore, that the policy advocated should be regarded as a whole.

3. The Commission have not explained in their Report the constitutional basis of these proposals, and indeed it is suggested that the Members, though agreed on the conclusions, did not all accept the general principle stated above, which appears to give logical coherence to the proposals. The theoretical justification of the proposals, however, is fully given in paragraphs 1 to 12 of the Minute by Professor Coupland on the control of the Services. It is not necessary to repeat the arguments contained in this Minute, but the Government of India would invite the special attention of the Government of Madras, etc., to the considerations there set forth.

4. Apart from the arguments based on the existing constitution, there are practical considerations which may be urged in favour of both sides of the policy of the Commission. It has been asserted that in present conditions the transfer of the control of the Secretary of State to the Government of India in regard to the Services in the reserved departments would give rise to feelings of such discontent and distrust as would probably be fatal to continued recruitment from England. On the other hand, in the transferred departments it is urged that Ministers, though they have been served well and loyally by the members of the Services, feel that in practice the existing system is an undesirable restriction on their powers. The proposal of the Commission that Ministers should be enabled to build up gradually their own Services may be held to give a completeness to the system of transfer of subjects which has hitherto been lacking.

5. At the same time both the main conclusions of the Commission with regard to the control of the All-India Services run counter to views which have been widely expressed on the one hand by politicians and on the other by officials. There has been, as explained in paragraph 12 of the Report, a demand on the part of Indian political opinion for the transfer of the control of the Services on the reserved side to the Government of India. It appears however that the Services must in essentials be under the control either of Parliament or of the Legislative bodies in India, and that if the Government of India ceases to be responsible to Parliament in regard to the control of the Services, it must tend to become responsible to the Indian Legislature. It has to be considered whether this position would be consistent with the existing constitution. On the other hand it may be argued that the change advocated in the control of the Services in the transferred departments will in effect in most cases mean a complete cessation of recruitment of Europeans in these Services and that this will lead to an appreciable deterioration in the efficiency of the administration. With reference to this argument the question arises whether considerations of efficiency are decisive with reference to the transferred subjects, and also whether, as the new system develops, it will be found that the policy of the Ministers rather than the personnel of the Services under them will, in the last resort, determine the standards of efficiency.

6. It should be recognised that the acceptance of the proposals of the Commission comes very near to establishing in effect for the future the principle that, when the transfer of a subject takes place, it should be accompanied by the transfer of the Service dealing with that subject, with the proviso that the rights of the existing members are fully safeguarded. This principle appears to be assumed in the detailed recommendations made by the Commission in paragraph 74 (v) of the Report for the treatment of future British officers when the field of service for which they have been recruited is transferred. The Government of India would be glad to learn the views of the Government of Madras, etc., on this principle and on the actual suggestions made by the Commission in paragraph 74 (v).

7. Before deciding that the Services in the transferred departments should be made over to the control of Ministers dependent on the votes of the Legislative Councils, it is desirable to form some picture of the conditions under which these Services will work and the safeguards that may be provided for them. It would be natural that full powers should be conferred on Local Governments in regard to the existing provincial services both in the reserved and in the transferred departments as well as in regard to the new provincial Services which would perform the functions of the old All-India Services on the transferred side. Delegation of powers would be made by the Secretary of State in Council by means of rules under section 96-B (2) of the Government of India Act. Such rules may either delegate the power of making rules to Local Governments or may authorise the Indian Legislature or local Legislatures to make laws regulating the Public Services. In paragraph 22 of the Memorandum of the Government of India which forms Annexure IV to the Report of the Committee on Division of Functions, it was stated that the Government of India considered that Ministers should not take the Provincial Services entirely into their own hands until they had put questions of recruitment, pay, pensions, etc., on a legal basis by legislation. I am to ask whether it would be preferable to adopt the method of legislation for governing these matters or to allow Local Governments to make rules. If it is decided that legislation should be undertaken the further question will arise whether such legislation should be central or provincial. In view of the differing conditions in the various Provinces and the body of regulations already in force in each province providing for the selection of officials, their promotion, punishments, appeals, etc., it might be held to be more convenient that these matters should be defined by local legislation and that no attempt should be made by undertaking All-India legislation to cast them into a uniform mould irrespective of local conditions. If local legislation were undertaken, it would presumably govern the subordinate as well as the provincial services.

8. It would appear that the points to be dealt with in such legislation might include :

(a) methods of recruitment, whether by examination or by selection committees, and the qualifications of candidates ;
(b) regulations for promotion and transfer ;
(c) regulations for discipline, security of tenure and appeals ;
(d) rates of pay, pensions and provident funds ;
(e) conditions of service generally including leave.

The Government of India propose to address the Government of Madras, etc., in a separate letter regarding the functions of the Public Service Commission which might in certain circumstances have an important bearing on the recruitment and protection of the Provincial Services.

9. The future of the provincial civil medical administration has been discussed in chapter III of the Report. It might be held that inasmuch as civil medical administration is a transferred subject effect should be given as far as possible in organising a civil medical service to the general principle that may be adopted for Services working in transferred subjects. In the case of the civil medical service, however, the problem is complicated by the desirability of maintaining an adequate military reserve in civil employ and by the problem of providing treatment by British medical officers for British civil servants. The extent to which the actual proposals of the Commission succeed in reconciling these various considerations will require somewhat careful examination, and the Government of India will address the Government of Madras, etc., later on this subject.

10. The Commission contemplate that the Irrigation branch of the Indian Service of Engineers should remain an All-India Service, while the Buildings and Roads branch will, so far as future recruitment is concerned, be provincialised. It is understood that this proposal would present no difficulty in those provinces where the two branches have already been separated. [In some provinces, however, this process has not been carried out. I am to enquire what are the views of the Local Government with regard to the treatment of the Indian Service of Engineers in Madras, etc.].

(In Assam the whole of the public works administration is reserved. The proposals of the Commission therefore contemplate the whole cadre of the Indian Service of Engineers in Assam remaining as an All-India Service. I am to ask whether the Government of Assam support this proposal.)

11. It will be noted that the proposals of the Commission apply only to the Services working in the Governors' provinces. There will remain a certain number of officers in each of the Services, the future recruitment of which it is proposed to provincialise, who will be working directly under the Government of India in central institutions such as Pusa, Dehra Dun or Muktesar or under the minor administrations. There will also be certain officers of the Indian Educational Service engaged on European education which is a reserved subject. The question how these officers are to be obtained in future will form the subject of separate communications.

12. If the proposals of the Commission are accepted, an important point in connection with the organisation of the Services in the reserved departments will remain for decision, namely whether Indians in these Services should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State or should be appointed and controlled by the Local Governments or the Government of India. The Commission have not referred explicitly to this point, but from their silence it may be inferred that they intended the existing system to continue, and that they rejected the proposals which had been made to them for a differentiation in the status of Indians and Europeans. It has been left for Professor Coupland in paragraphs 13 to 15 of his Minute on the control of the Services to explain the justification for this conclusion. The arguments on both sides are fully stated by Professor Coupland. I am to ask whether the Government of Madras, etc., accept the view that the balance of advantage lies in maintaining the equal status of Indians and Europeans in these Services. If this view is accepted a further question arises, whether Indians recruited in future should be able, if the field of service for which they have been recruited is transferred, to claim all the privileges which are recommended for British recruits in paragraph 74 (b) of the Report. Indian recruits would presumably be forthcoming without these inducements. To offer them the privilege of retirement on proportionate pension may be thought unnecessary. Whether they should be allowed to retain their All-India status is a more doubtful point. I am to ask whether in the opinion of the Government of Madras, etc., it would be reasonable to inform them at the time of recruitment that they would be liable to be placed later under the control of provincial Governments, but that existing rates of pay would be guaranteed to them.

13. If the general position of maintaining the equal status of Indians and Europeans, is accepted, there is one point of importance which has to be faced. Those who advocate the provincialisation of Indians in these Services lay stress on the claim that the Services in a Province should be staffed by men of that province, and they point out the serious danger, in the event of unrestricted competition, of candidates from one or two provinces obtaining an altogether disproportionate share in these vital Services. It may at once be conceded that it is necessary to prevent these Services from being swamped by men from the one or two provinces which are intellectually most advanced. But to rule that only men belonging to a particular province should serve in that province would involve an undoubted lowering of the general standard of the Service in the backward provinces, where there would not be a sufficient supply of men of the standard required. To meet these conflicting considerations it has been suggested that it might be reasonable to prescribe a certain minimum of natives of each province who must be recruited each year. This number might perhaps be three-quarters of the average annual direct recruitment of Indians into the Service in that province. The remaining one-quarter would be open to free competition. Men would be posted primarily to their own provinces. If more men from one province passed than the number of vacancies in that province, the surplus would be distributed among other provinces where the number of provincial men fell short of the total number of provincial vacancies. The effect of this system would probably be that provinces like Bengal and Madras would be staffed entirely by Bengalis and Madrasis. On the other hand, even the most backward provinces would have three-quarters of their own men among their directly recruited Indians. I am to ask the views of the Government of Madras, etc., on this suggestion.

14. To sum up I am to ask for the views of the Government of Madras, etc., on the following points:

(1) whether the services operating in the reserved field should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State in Council;

(2) whether the services operating in the transferred field, with the exception of the civil side of the Indian Medical Service, should, so far as future recruits are concerned, be appointed and controlled by Local Governments, existing members of these services retaining their present rights and status as officers of All-India Services;

(3) whether the principle can be accepted that when the transfer of a subject takes place it should be accompanied by the transfer of the service dealing with that subject, the rights of existing members being safeguarded;

(4) whether the suggestions made by the Commission in paragraph 74 (v) of the Report for dealing with British members of the Services, if and when a transfer of the subject for which they have been recruited takes place, appear generally reasonable;

(5) whether full powers should be conferred on Local Governments in regard to all classes of provincial services;

(6) whether the provisions safeguarding the provincial services should depend on rules or legislation, and if on legislation whether such legislation should be central or provincial;

(7) whether there is any difficulty in giving effect to the proposals of the Commission regarding the treatment of the two branches of the Indian Service of Engineers;

(8) whether Indians in the Services in the reserved field should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State in Council; if so, whether arrangements of the kind suggested in paragraph 13 of this letter for securing for each province a reasonable proportion of natives of that province are suitable;

(9) what conditions should be prescribed for future Indian recruits in the All-India Services to govern the circumstances contemplated in (4) above.

15. In conclusion I am to request that in view of the great importance of arriving at an early decision on these general questions, the Government of India may receive the reply of the Government of Madras, etc., to this letter not later than the 4th August 1924.

GOVERNMENT OF MADRAS.

PUBLIC DEPARTMENT.

LETTER FROM N. E. MARJORIBANKS, ESQ., C.S.I., C.I.E., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF MADRAS, PUBLIC DEPARTMENT, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, NO. 547, DATED FORT. ST. GEORGE, THE 4TH AUGUST 1924.

In reply to your letter No. F.-178|9|24-Ests., dated the 20th June 1924, I am in the first place to say that as intimated in my letter No. 472|O.-1, dated the 23rd July 1924, His Excellency the Governor in Council accepts in principle the propositions (1) that All-India Services operating in the reserved fields should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State, and (2) that the services operating in the transferred fields should, as far as future recruits are concerned, be appointed and controlled by Local Governments, the rights of existing members being safeguarded.

2. So long as there are reserved services and so long as Parliament retains direct jurisdiction over the fields of administration where these services are employed, the control must be with the Secretary of State. On the other hand, where the field of administration is transferred the services employed therein should not be subject to extra-provincial control. It follows also in the opinion of His Excellency the Governor in Council that when the transfer of a subject takes place it should be accompanied by the transfer of the services dealing with that subject, the rights of existing members being safeguarded.

3. In the practical application of these principles there will however be some difficulties arising from the facts that some services are employed both in reserved and transferred fields and that individual members of reserved services are employed in the administration of transferred subjects. In this Presidency the most notable instance of the kind is the Indian Engineering Service which is employed both on Irrigation, a reserved subject, and on Roads and Buildings, a transferred subject. The question of dividing the service into two separate branches has more than once been discussed and the general conclusion reached has been that the division would not only involve considerable increase in expenditure on establishment but would not conduce to economy in work or efficiency. The territorial charges of Irrigation and of Buildings and Roads in this Presidency are coterminous as major and minor systems of irrigation are scattered all over the country and it is impracticable to isolate irrigation areas. A separate executive and other staff for each branch would not have enough work to occupy them whole time. For the time being, therefore, until Irrigation becomes a transferred subject, His Excellency the Governor in Council considers that the Indian Service of Engineers must be an exception to the proposed rule, so far as that portion of the service working in the transferred field of Roads and Buildings is concerned ; and must remain an All-India Service appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State.

As stated in paragraph 11 of the letter under reply certain officers of the Indian Educational Service are engaged on European education which is a reserved subject. It is noted that this case will be dealt with separately.

Lastly certain officers of the Indian Civil Service, a reserved service, are employed in the administration of transferred subjects, e.g., in the appointments of Excise Commissioner, Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Director of Industries. Such officers will also remain an exception to the general rule.

4. Subject to these exceptions, His Excellency the Governor in Council considers that all services engaged on transferred subjects may be provincialized and placed under the control of Local Governments provided that questions of recruitment, pay, pension and the like are placed on a legal basis by legislation and a Public Service Commission is set up. The constitution and functions of such a Commission will be discussed separately in replying to your letter No. F.-178|14|24-Ests., dated 1st July 1924. In regard to the legislation referred to, His Excellency the Governor in Council considers that an Act should be passed by the Central Legislature as early as possible for the benefit both of the existing Provincial services and of the services that will be provincialized. Such legislation should deal in broad lines with the subjects enumerated in paragraph 8 of the letter under reply and should reserve sufficient rule-making power to Local Governments to enable them to adapt the main provisions of the Act to the special conditions of each province.

5. The provincialization of the services employed on transferred subjects further involves the safeguarding of the rights and status of existing members as officers of All-India Services. The proposals of the Royal Commission to secure this end in the case of British members of the services are contained in paragraph 74 (v) of their report. His Excellency the Governor in Council accepts these proposals but feels constrained to point out that they do not meet the consequences of the prospective loss of career involved. It is insecurity of career that is more calculated to deter candidates of the right stamp than any other reason. For this however His Excellency the Governor in Council sees no practicable remedy. As regards officers already in the service, while it might be contented that those who entered within the last fifteen years ought to have been aware of the inevitable result of the Indianization of the executive Government which began in 1909-10, the same cannot be said of older entrants : indeed, few of those who entered service before the declaration of August 1917 can have been in a position to forecast later developments. However, as the proposals proceed on the idea that those who are willing shall stay on under personal safeguards and work under the new conditions, His Excellency the Governor in Council finds it difficult, more especially in view of the mixed motives that must influence individual officers, to make any stipulation that provision should be made for compensating transferred officers for loss of careers in addition to granting them proportionate pension.

6. In regard to the question raised in paragraph 12 of the letter under reply, His Excellency the Governor in Council is of opinion that the balance of advantage decidedly lies in maintaining the equal status of Indians and Europeans in the reserved All-India Services and he has no objection to the arrangements proposed in paragraph 13 of your letter for securing for each province a reasonable proportion of natives of that province.

7. On the further question whether Indians recruited in future should be able, if the field of service for which they have been recruited is transferred, to claim all the privileges which are recommended in paragraph 74 (v) of the Commission's Report in the case of British recruits, His Excellency the Governor in Council, while disinclined to make any racial distinction, cannot see that there is equal reason to promise to Indian recruits the same terms as to proportionate pensions as the Commission proposes in the case of British recruits, if, as presumably will be the case, Indian recruits will continue to seek service, notwithstanding the prospect of 'transfer,' as readily as heretofore.

8. The Honourable the Ministers, I am to say, adhere generally to the views expressed by them in the memorandum forwarded with my letter No. 472|O.-1, dated the 23rd July 1924. In regard to the particular points discussed in this letter they are opposed to the retention of the Indian Engineering Service as an All-India Service and consider that it should be wholly provincialized notwithstanding that it is employed in part on the reserved subject of Irrigation. They consider that the conditions, etc., of Provincial Services should be regulated by provincial rather than central legislation. They are opposed to the proposals of the Royal Commission in paragraph 74 (v) of their report whether applied to British officials or Indian.

62. My telegram of the 6th August regarding your five letters on Lee Commission's Report. Government has arrived following decisions, subject so far as minority concerned to reservation already stated with regard to Secretary of State controlling.

Your letter No. 178-9-24. Questions 1 and 2 accepted, also 3 save that minority would limit safeguarding of rights to existing members, and not future recruits.

Question 4 accepted except by minority.

Questions 5 and 6 will be dealt with in reply to letter on Public Service Commission.

Question 7. No difficulty.

Question 8 accepted save that minority object generally to Secretary of State controlling as previously explained.

Question 9 future Indian recruits should not have right of retirement on proportionate pension ; they should be warned accordingly before recruitment.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL, No. 9223-A., DATED THE 2ND AUGUST 1924.

I am directed to refer to your letter No. F.-178|9|24-Ests., dated the 20th June 1924, regarding certain recommendations of the Royal Commission on the superior Civil Services in India. The views of the Government of Bengal have been asked on 9 points and I am to reply to these points seriatim as follows :—

(1) & (2). As intimated in letter No. 8258-A., dated the 9th July 1924, the Governor in Council has already accepted these two recommendations.

(3) The Governor in Council accepts the principle that when the transfer of a subject takes place, it should be accompanied by the transfer of the service dealing with that subject the rights of existing members being safeguarded.

(4) The Governor in Council considers that the suggestions made by the Commission in paragraph 74(V) of the Report for dealing with British members of the services if and when a transfer of these subjects for which they have been recruited takes place appear generally to be reasonable. I am to point out, however, that the Report only mentions that existing members of All-India Services operating in the transferred field will retain all the rights of officers of an All-India Service and that future British recruits to an All-India Service may retain their All-India status if and when the field of service for which they have been recruited is transferred. I am to suggest that this privilege might be definitely extended to existing members of All-India Services now operating in the reserved field. I am further to suggest that in order to avoid difficulties of interpretation, the right to retire on proportionate pension should be extended to all officers recruited before the 1st of January 1920.

(5) The Governor in Council is of opinion that full powers should be conferred on local Governments in regard to all classes of provincial services.

(6) This Government has already agreed in the letter referred to above to the enactment of Public Service Acts. The Governor in Council considers that these Acts should be provincial and should govern the subordinate as well as the provincial services. Security of tenure, pensions, etc., as regards individuals would, however, have to be provided by contract and not left open to arbitrary variation by the legislature as against officers already in service, and a certain amount of detail, e.g., in connection with examination rules, would have to be left to be regulated by rules made under the Acts.

(7) There would be no difficulty in Bengal in giving effect to the proposals of the Commission regarding the treatment of the two branches of the Indian Service of Engineers.

(8) & (9). The Governor in Council accepts the view that at present, at any rate, the balance of advantage lies in maintaining the equal status of Indians and Europeans in the All-India Services in the reserved departments. He would also agree to give Indians in the All-India Services all the privileges recommended in paragraph 74(V) of the Report. If these officers are fairly treated, retirements on proportionate pension are not likely to be numerous.

2. The Governor in Council agrees to the suggestion made in paragraph 13 of the letter under consideration.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED PROVINCES, No. 3764, DATED THE 26TH JULY 1924.

I am directed to reply, on behalf of the Governor in Council, to the Home Department letter No. F.-178-9-24-Ests., dated the 20th June 1924. The questions raised will be dealt with in paragraphs corresponding with the headings in paragraph 14 of that letter, where the points at issue are summed up under nine heads. The reply is subject to the note of the Honourable Home Member forwarded as an annexure to this Government's letter No. 3328, dated July 8, 1924. A copy of that note* is attached for reference. (1) "Whether the services operating in the reserved field should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State in Council".

The Governor in Council has already intimated his general acceptance of this proposal in reply to letter No. F.-172-24-Ests., dated June 18, 1924. The constitutional argument in favour of recruitment and control by the Secretary of State is complete. As long as there is a Government which is at least partially responsible through the Secretary of State to the Parliament of Great Britain, it is essenial that that side of it which is so responsible should be able to command the services of officers appointed and controlled by the authority whose agent it is. Further, experience during the last three years has amply demonstrated that only on this condition can the requisite European element in the services be obtained. The only alternative controlling agency, viz., the Government of India is, in fact if not in theory, becoming more and more amenable to the Indian legislature and is barred by that consideration. There is no hope that men will be forthcoming from England for service in India, if their destinies are ultimately to be controlled by the Indian Legislature.

(2) "Whether the services operating in the transferred field, with the exception of the civil side of the Indian Medical Service, should, so far as future recruits are concerned, be appointed and controlled by Local Governments, existing members of these services retaining their present rights and status as officers of All-India Services".

This proposal was also accepted in the reply referred to under (1). In his reply to the questionnaire of the Royal Commission the Governor in Council dealt with this question in some detail. He realised that the completeness of a Minister's responsibility for a subject which has been transferred, is impaired unless the Minister is empowered to determine the conditions of employment of his agents and to exercise full control over them. It was not suggested that this consideration must necessarily override all others, and it was recognised in the case of the most important of the services concerned, namely the Educational, that any decline in efficiency, such as might result from the practical cessation of recruitment from Europe, would have serious and far-reaching results. Nevertheless the conclusion was faced that even in regard to this important service the balance of argument was in favour of establishing full ministerial control. In the sphere of primary and university education the exercise of Government control through European agency is already at a minimum, because recent legislation has greatly enlarged the powers both of local bodies and of universities. Secondary education is still formally controlled by Government, but the extent of that control has in practice been greatly weakened by the changes just referred to, and the influence of European officers is a factor of rapidly decreasing strength. The Governor in Council, though not without serious misgivings, thinks that the entire educational service had better now be made over to the control of the responsible Minister.

In the Buildings and Roads branch of the Indian Service of Engineers, the tendency is to transfer obligations to local bodies, and probably more will be done in this direction in future. A decided move along these lines has recently been made in this province. Such provincial work as remains rarely requires the finest professional skill; and it should be possible to leave it to an agency similar to the educational agency contemplated above. It may be hoped that pressure from the Legislative Council and the extended employment of big contractors will provide sufficient safeguards against deterioration.

The same general considerations apply to the Indian Agricultural Service and the Indian Veterinary Service. It is undoubtedly of the utmost consequence to this agricultural country that everything possible should be done to improve its crops and cattle. At the same time there is no such compelling argument in favour of maintaining a service of officers recruited by the Secretary of State as can override the arguments in favour of letting Ministers select their own men. In all the four services named above the Governor in Council would stop therefore the present type of recruitment. He does not pretend to welcome this conclusion, but he sees no practical alternative.

(3) " Whether the principle can be accepted that when the transfer of a subject takes place it should be accompanied by the transfer of the service dealing with that subject, the rights of existing members being safeguarded ".

If it were at this stage necessary to lay down any such general principle, it would be difficult to resist the conclusion here suggested. It would, however, be sounder to refuse to enunciate new principles which are not yet inevitable. There is no reason why the Government of India should tie their hands now, when the problem to be settled may eventually be settled in circumstances widely differing from those of the present day. If the question had to be answered now, there would seem to be only one possible reply, but the Governor in Council does not regard it as sound policy to affirm any principle of general application until the question as a whole has arisen in practical form. It is not by any means certain that logic or constitutional theory will shape all future developments. It is impossible to foresee the mould into which Indian political development may run. What seems inevitable to-day may be susceptible later on of variation, by agreement or otherwise, in an altogether different atmosphere. It is accepted that the subjects hitherto transferred should involve the transfer of the services employed upon them. This would seem to meet all requirements at the present stage.

(4) " Whether the suggestions made by the Commission in paragraph 74 (v) of the Report for dealing with British members of the Services, if and when a transfer of the subject for which they have been recruited takes place, appear generally reasonable ".

The proposals are accepted as generally reasonable. There can be no objection to the alternatives allowed by (a) and (b) of paragraph 74 (v) in the Commission's report. With regard to (c), however, the wisdom of restricting eligibility for proportionate pension to one year is not apparent. The danger is that this restriction will in practice force into retirement officers who might otherwise continue to serve. There was established a time limit when the existing rules of retirement on proportionate pensions were first promulgated in 1921. It was recognised later that the time limit would drive into retirement a number of officers who were content to stay so long as the gate of exit was not finally locked and barred. The same considerations apply here with added force. The Governor in Council is of opinion that the right to retire on proportionate pension should be unrestricted. He believes that this will result in greater stability and in fewer premature retirements. In any case account must be taken of the fact that officers have leave due to them when they decide to retire. In the 1921 rules the apparent liberality by which a decision was postponed till March 1924 was neutralised by the condition that all leave had to be taken before that date. If any time limit is placed on eligibility for proportionate pension on the transfer of a reserved service, it should be designed to permit of adequate experience of the new system without the risk of losing leave due. With regard to the Commission's proposal regarding the statutory commission of 1929, it seems unnecessary to formulate a decision now. If, however, a decision is considered to be required, the Governor in Council recommends that the right to retire on proportionate pension should be unrestricted. The concession should obviously be extended to officers who joined the services since 1st January 1920. Any such radical alteration of the conditions of service as is involved in the transfer of a service hitherto reserved to the transferred side of the Government should be treated as creating a new situation which entitled all officers then in service to elect for this equitable measure of relief.

(5) " Whether full powers should be conferred on Local Governments in regard to all classes of provincial services ".

There seems no alternative to complete provincial control of the services operating in the transferred departments. Any other solution would perpetuate the complaint which exists to-day, namely that the Ministers and legislatures which are responsible for transferred subjects have not full control of the services concerned with those subjects. No limitation of complete control can be justified in regard to any of the items discussed in the Government of India letter. In the United Provinces the Ministers have already protested against the rules which empower the Governor in Council to regulate the recruitment, etc., of the existing provincial services working in the transferred sphere, and the Governor in Council has supported them. If the All-India Services dealt with in this reference are transferred, the transfer should be complete. The immediate safeguards must be looked for in the Public Service Acts and in the Public Service Commission; and the ultimate safeguards in the possibility of altering the rules under section 96-B (2) of the Government of India Act to meet new conditions. In regard to the services, which administer the reserved subjects the powers of superintendence and control now vested in the Secretary of State and the Government of India must of course be retained; but, subject to this condition, the Governor in Council can see no objection to the transfer of full authority to Local Governments. In practice these services are already regulated by Local Governments and the few restrictions which still exist, can safely be removed.

(6) "Whether the provisions safeguarding the provincial services should depend on rules or legislation and if on legislation whether such legislation should be central or provincial".

In the case of the services in the transferred departments, the provisions contemplated should depend, as far as possible on legislation. It is impossible indeed to embody in legislation the very numerous provisions which affect the constitution, recruitment, pay, pensions, leave, promotion, transfer and discipline of a number of services. Legislation can, on many points, only provide for the framing of detailed rules. But the object should be to leave as little as possible to rules which can be easily changed and to embody in the Acts all fundamental principles on which the stability of the services depend.

The treatment of this subject is of vital importance to the future stability of the administration. Any marked deterioration in the quality of the services will strike at the roots of good government. The services have hitherto enjoyed in essentials full security from political pressure. Popular control in India will inevitably be capricious at the outset and every reasonable precaution should be adopted to forestall the reaction of political influences on the efficiency and security of the services. The services which administer the reserved subjects stand on a different footing. Their efficiency will not suffer if their recruitment and regulation remain in the hands of the Executive Government. In their case there is not the same need for the security promised by legislation. At the same time it is not improbable that, if legislation regulating the services in the transferred departments is proposed, there will be a demand, which it may be difficult to resist, for its extension to the reserved services. The Governor in Council thinks that it should be left to each Local Government to decide, if and when the time comes, whether the legislation to be undertaken should include these services.

The legislation should be provincial for reasons both constitutional and practical. If the services operating in the transferred field of Government are to be made over to the control of Ministers, their regulation must rest with the legislature, to which Ministers are responsible; and even in the case of the services, which administer the reserved departments, it is difficult to see how their pay, pensions and provident funds which are subject to the vote of the Legislative Council, could be regulated by central legislation. It would be impossible moreover to provide by such legislation for conditions which differ so widely from province to province. The central legislature could at most lay down a few broad principles, and even an enactment so restricted would be resented by Indian opinion as an unwarrantable intrusion into the provincial sphere.

(7) "Whether there is any difficulty in giving effect to the proposals of the Commission regarding the treatment of the two branches of the Indian Service of Engineers".

This proposal presents no difficulty in the United Provinces.

(8) "Whether Indians in the Services in the reserved field should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State in Council; if so, whether arrangements of the kind suggested in paragraph 13 of his letter for securing for each province a reasonable proportion of natives of that province are suitable".

The Commission have rejected without discussion (and therefore for reasons which can only be conjectured) the suggestion pressed on them by many witnesses that only the holders of that proportion of posts which was reserved for Europeans should in future constitute the All-India Services, and that the other vacancies as they occurred should be filled by Indians as members of provincial services. The case for and against a differentiation in the status of Europeans and Indians has, however, been fairly summarised in paras. 13 to 15 of the minute by Professor Coupland. Undoubtedly differentiation would secure certain substantial advantages. Indians would be recruited, as provincial opinion desires, on a provincial basis, and the best material available would be obtained on rates of pay markedly lower than those which are now being paid. Nor is the Governor in Council much impressed by some of the counter arguments advanced by Professor Coupland. It does not seem to him incompatible with the responsibility of Parliament for the reserved field of Government to separate a public service, which operates in a reserved department, into two sections, one of which would be recruited and controlled by a Provincial Government; the reserved departments have for long been administered largely through the agency of provincial services. Again, he is unable to see that this separation would necessarily reduce the benefits derived by Indian officers from association with English officers, or that it would prejudge the development of the constitution. He does, however, attach importance to the second and third of Professor Coupland's arguments. Indian opinion, always sensitive of racial distinctions, would resent the division of Europeans and Indians into two services, and attacks, inspired by racial antagonism, on the European officers, so far from diminishing would tend to increase. Moreover—a point not touched upon by Professor Coupland—if the posts to be held by Indian officers were included in provincial services, the recruitment of officers to fill these posts would in practice be controlled by the Legislative Council, since their pay and pensions would be subject to its vote. The stability and the ordered progress of India have hitherto been dependent on public services controlled by the Secretary of State, and it is important that his control should not be reduced further than is inevitable. The Governor in Council acquiesces therefore in the view that the balance of advantage lies in maintaining the equal status of Indians and Europeans in these services.

At the same time there is no reason, so far as the United Provinces are concerned, why the retention of an All-India status should connote the acceptance of candidates from other provinces. The United Provinces rank as one of the educationally backward provinces, but they have done well at the last two examinations for the I. C. S. and are quite prepared to find their own staff. The Indian Services in these provinces are probably equal to those of any other province, if not actually in intellectual capacity, at least in many of the other attributes of administrators. The unifying ideal of services drawn from different provinces is far ahead of the times, and it is certain that public opinion in this province would be unanimous in favour of provincial recruitment. If the supply of suitable candidates in the more technical services ran short, it would be easy to arrange for their provision from elsewhere. This should be the only reason for going outside the province.

(9) "What conditions should be prescribed for future Indian recruits in the All-India Services to govern the circumstances contemplated in (4) above".

Future Indian recruits must abide by the political changes of their own country. The Governor in Council sees to reason whatever for making special provision for them provided that the rights of existing members of the services are safeguarded. He thinks that they should be informed at the time of recruitment that they would be liable to be placed later under the control of provincial governments, and he would not guarantee that the existing rates of pay would continue to be paid after such transfer. Future Indian entrants will join the services with their eyes open to the possibilities. Their risks are in no way comparable with those undertaken by Europeans who leave distant homes on what can only in future be regarded as an adventure of great hazard. The European element is retained because it is necessary and the safeguards in this instance are a necessary preliminary to securing that element. There seems no reason to think that Indian recruits will not always be available for services in their own provinces on any reasonable terms.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PUNJAB, No. 18859-GAZ., DATED THE 4TH AUGUST 1924.

I am directed to refer to your letter No. F.-178|9|24-Ests., of the 20th of June 1924, on the above subject and to convey the following views of the Governor in Council on the nine questions summarized in paragraph 14 of your letter.

2. The Governor in Council accepts without hesitation the recommendation that the Services operating in the reserved field should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State in Council. It is true that certain incidents in the actual exercise of that control have in the past proved embarrassing both to the Government of India and to Provincial Governments; while there have been occasions on which the services may have had reason to doubt whether its exercise really tended to give them that sense of security which they felt to be essential to contented working. Nevertheless, both on the theoretical and practical side, the arguments used by the Royal Commission in favour of their recommendation are really conclusive. Whatever attractions may be presented by the claim of politicians that control over members of these services should be handed over to the Government of India, the existing form of constitution demands that control should rest with the authority to which the Government of India is itself subordinate in respect of the subjects entrusted to the services in question; while the retention of the control of that authority is, if this Government be not mistaken, essential in the interests of recruitment. It is certain that the devolution of control to the Government of India would, rightly or wrongly, be viewed with suspicion by existing members of the services.

3. The Governor in Council also accepts the recommendation that the Services operating in the transferred field, with the exception of the civil side of the Indian Medical Service, which is not now under consideration, should be appointed and controlled by Local Governments, existing members of these Services retaining their present rights and status as officers of All-India Services. He would, however, qualify this acceptance by two stipulations, first that the transfer to Local Governments of control over the Services in question should be accompanied by the establishment of a strong and impartial Public Service Commission; and secondly, that the present rights and status of existing members of these Services should be carefully defined, preferably by rules made by the Secretary of State in Council under Section 96-B. (2) of the Government of India Act. The Governor in Council has reason to believe that some apprehension is felt by members of the Services in question in regard to this latter point. The members of the Indian Educational Service in the Punjab have represented that the institution of a selection grade, which now constitutes the most substantial factor in the prospects of the existing members of the service, be assured to them in future, and that in any reduction of the cadre of the service which may hereafter be affected under the proposals for provincialization, the present number of posts in the selection grade should be retained, so that the prospects of advancement which existing members now enjoy may not be in any way impaired. The point of this representation is that the number of selection grade posts has been fixed on a percentage of the total cadre, and it would appear to be inevitable that as existing members of the Service retire the total strength of the cadre must be diminished.

4. The next question referred to in your letter is whether the principle can be accepted that when the transfer of a subject takes place it should be accompanied by the transfer of the Service dealing with that subject, the rights of existing members being safeguarded. No specific recommendation to this effect was made by the Royal Commission, though as pointed out in your letter, the principle appears to be assumed in paragraph 74 (v) of the Report. Having accepted the recommendation that the services dealing with the present transferred subjects should be provincialized, the Governor in Council considers that it must logically follow that future transfers should be accompanied by a similar provincialization.

5. In paragraph 6 of your letter you further ask for the views of this Government on the actual suggestions made by the Commission in paragraph 74 (v) of their report. Though the point is not entirely free from doubt, it is assumed that these suggestions in paragraph 74 (v) (c) refer to all existing members of the services, both British and Indian, operating in reserved fields. If so, the Punjab Government regards the proposals as generally reasonable. There does not appear to be adequate reason to exclude Indian Members now in All-India Services from the right of retirement on proportionate pension if the field in which their service operates is transferred after 1929. There is one point in this connection in regard to which the Report is somewhat obscure. It has been represented to the Local Government, and evidence to this effect was, it is understood, given before the Royal Commission, that the privilege of retirement on proportionate pension should be extended to officers who joined an All-India Service after the passing of the Government of India Act, subject to the condition that the privilege must be exercised before the publication of the Report of the Statutory Commission of 1929, even though such officers may continue to work in the reserved field. Many such officers joined when it was impossible to foretell on what lines the reformed constitution would develop and it is, in the opinion of the Governor in Council, only reasonable that if the conditions of their service are radically changed they should be given the privilege of retirement on proportionate pension. It would appear from the final sentence of paragraph 74 (v) (c) of the Report that the Royal Commission considered this claim to be reasonable, but only in the case of the transfer of the subject on which such officers are engaged. The Governor in Council (the Honourable Sardar Bahadur Sardar Sundar Singh, Majithia, dissenting) would go somewhat further and would extend this privilege to officers who continue to be employed in a reserved department, provided they joined the service before the 1st January 1923. By that date the lines on which the new constitution was likely to develop were clearly marked.

6. In regard to the question whether full powers should be conferred on Local Governments in regard to all classes of provincial services, the Governor in Council considers that all future members of Provincial Services must be subject to the unfettered control of Local Governments acting either as Executive Governments or with their Legislatures. As regards present members of the provincial services, I am to point out that certain rules affecting the provincial services have been made by the Secretary of State under Sections 45-A., and 96-B. (2) of the Government of India Act, and to urge that any delegation of power now made, to whatever authority, should safeguard the position given to the present members of the Provincial Services by the existing rules.

7. The sixth question propounded in your letter is whether the provisions safeguarding the Provincial Services should depend on rules or legislation, and if on legislation whether such legislation should be central or provincial. On this question the Governor in Council holds that the rule-making power conferred by Section 96-B. (2) of the Government of India Act must be delegated to Local Governments ; but that Local Governments must in the interests of the services be bound by certain fundamental restrictions to be laid down by the legislature, such as, that no rule will be valid as against a Government servant if it operates to reduce the pensionary prospects held out by the rules in force when he entered the service ; that no order of dismissal or reduction be made without an explanation being demanded ; that all officers adversely affected by any order be given at least one appeal ; and so forth. This list of restrictions is not of course exhaustive. As restrictions of the kind indicated would be fundamental, the Governor in Council considers that they should be universal, and embodied in an enactment of the Central Legislature.

8. As regards the seventh question referred to in paragraph 14 of your letter, the two branches of the Indian Service of Engineers have already been separated in the Punjab. There would be, therefore, no difficulty in giving effect to the recommendation of the Royal Commission that the Irrigation Branch should remain an All-India Service, while the Buildings and Roads Branch should, so far as future recruitment is concerned, be provincialized.

9. The Governor in Council has given careful consideration to the question whether Indians in the Services operating in the reserved field should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State in Council. He recognizes the force of the arguments summarized in paragraph 13 of Professor Coupland's Minute of the 30th of April 1924, in favour of recruiting Indians to those Services by promotion from the Provincial Services or of transferring the vacancies not filled by British recruits to the cadre of Provincial Services. He is satisfied that many Indians who have been recruited for some years past to the Indian Civil Service, and probably also to other All-India Services are no better qualified than those recruited for the Provincial Services, and that to this extent we are paying above the market rate for Indian recruits to the All-India Services. At the same time he feels that the recommendation of the Royal Commission in favour of the continuance of the present system, (which was advocated by this Government in its reply to the Commission's questionnaires) has many cogent arguments in its favour. So long as the Secretary of State is ultimately responsible for the conduct of the reserved subjects, he must have control of the whole of the services operating in that sphere. The Governor in Council at the same time considers that as far as possible the principle should be accepted that Indian recruitment to such services should be made in India, appointment merely being confirmed by the Secretary of State, and that this principle should be recognized in practice when rules regarding recruitment come under review.

As regards the subsidiary question whether arrangements of the kind suggested in paragraph 13 of your letter for securing for each province a reasonable proportion of natives of that province are suitable, the Governor in Council would prefer that the examinations in India for the All-India Services should be so organized as to admit of candidates from each province competing only among themselves. This suggestion is one that has been carried out in the examinations for the Indian Police. Experience has shown that recruits from other provinces do not as a rule make successful officers in the Punjab ; and the Governor in Council has no doubt of the ability of this province to produce candidates who, taking all factors into consideration, will be as satisfactory as those who can be obtained from other provinces.

10. The ninth question propounded in your letter is whether future Indian recruits recruited to the All-India Services should be entitled, if the field of service for which they have been recruited is transferred, to claim all the privileges recommended for British recruits in paragraph 74 (v) of the Report. The Governor in Council considers it only fair that Indian recruits should in the circumstances contemplated be given the option either to retain their All-India status or to enter into new contracts with Local Governments. Nor does he doubt that, in justice, they should be given the option to retire on proportionate pension ; whatever feelings may be entertained in the political world regarding the obligation of Indian Servants of the Crown to accept without demur any political change which may affect their status as such servants, Government could not be excused if it imposed on the Indian Members of All-India Services so drastic an exhibition of artruism. There are notoriously many Indian Members of the services who feel quite as keenly as their British colleagues the disabilities imposed on them by the changes effected under the Reform Scheme.

GOVERNMENT OF BIHAR AND ORISSA.

APPOINTMENT DEPARTMENT.

LETTER FROM E. L. L. HAMMOND, ESQ., C.B.E., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, No. 1965-A.R., DATED RANCHI, THE 2ND AUGUST 1924.

SUBJECT.—Proposals of the Royal Commission on Superior Civil Services in India regarding the control and organization of the All-India Services.

I am directed to reply to your letter No. F.-178—9-24, dated the 20th June 1924, on the recommendation of the report of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India as regards the control and organization of the All-India Services. In paragraph 2 (a) of my letter No. 1689-A.R., dated the 22nd July 1924, the Local Government accepted the proposals of the Royal Commission that officers of the All-India Services operating in reserved fields should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State, and that, as a corollary to the system established by the Reforms, the services operating in transferred fields (apart from the civil side of the Indian Medical Service, which will form the subject of separate consideration), should, so far as future recruits are concerned and without derogation of the rights and status of existing incumbents, be appointed and controlled by Local Governments. As regards the first two points, therefore, raised in paragraph 14 of your letter under reply, I am to state that His Excellency in Council accepts both propositions.

2. As regards the remainder I am to submit the views of the local Government as follows :

(3) When the transfer of a subject takes place, it is difficult to withstand the consequence that it should be accompanied by the transfer of the service dealing with that subject. If, at some date hereafter, an attempt is made to introduce full provincial autonomy, the risks inherent in the acceptance of the principle will be real and serious, but if they are considered to be too great to be undertaken, the true remedy is the postponement of provincial autonomy, and not an attempt to restrict its actual working in a manner which would certainly engender friction, even if, given the attainment of that stage it was practical politics, which almost certainly, it would not be. In any event, the rights of existing members of the service transferred should, of course, be safeguarded.

The Honourable Sir Hugh McPherson does not accept this proposition unreservedly as regards the Indian Civil Service and the Indian Police. He considers that, whatever degree of provincial autonomy may in the future be introduced, the ultimate control of these two services must remain with the Secretary of State. This applies also to the question discussed in the next sub-paragraph.

(4) The Local Government accept the suggestions made in paragraph 74 (v) of the Commission's Report as generally reasonable. The case of future Indian recruits as regards this question is dealt with later.

(5) Subject to the safeguarding of the rights of existing members of the services, whether those services have previously been provincial services or have been transferred, His Excellency in Council thinks that full powers should be conferred on Local Governments, with such safeguards only as may be provided by rules or legislation under Section 96-B. (2) of the Government of India Act.

(6) His Excellency in Council considers that provisions designed to safeguard the provincial services can best be made by rules framed by the Local Government in exercise of the powers delegated to it under Section 96-B (2) of the Government of India Act. Rules appear to be safer and simpler than legislation. There are great difficulties about central legislation and grave objections to provincial legislation, and though the Local Legislature will doubtless attempt to influence the Executive as regards the substance of the rules, it will be less directly and completely concerned than would be the case if the matter were determined by local legislation. The only real safeguard for a future recruit will be definite rules laying down the conditions of his service, and a legally enforceable contract on which he could sue in the event of a breach of them.

The Honourable Minister in the Education Department would depend on legislation as far as the main principles are concerned, but on rules for the details. He considers that legislation should not be central but provincial, as each province is in the best position to know its own requirements and finances.

(7) Separate recruitment for the two branches of the Indian Service of Engineers has not yet been introduced in this province, but its introduction should present no difficulty. The annual number of recruits to each branch would be small, and though there might be a certain loss of elasticity the proposals of the Commission that the irrigation branch should remain an All-India Service so far as future recruitment is concerned, while the Roads and Buildings branch should be provincialized, appear to be generally suitable.

(8) In the matter of appointment and control of Indians in the services in reserved fields, it seems desirable to distinguish between recruitment by promotion and recruitment by direct appointment. So far as promoted recruits to services in the reserved fields are concerned, the appointment has hitherto always rested with the Local Government. His Excellency in Council is of opinion that, though the nominal appointment might be made on the Local Government's nomination by the Secretary of State, as has already been done in the case of promotions in the Police Service, the virtual appointment must be continued on the existing basis. So far as directly appointed recruits are concerned, there are two methods :

(a) appointment by nomination, and

(b) appointment by competition, open or limited.

In the case of nomination, which will probably be on a very restricted scale, the Local Government will virtually appoint, subject to formal confirmation by the Secretary of State. In the latter case, the appointment will be given as a result of competition, whether open competition throughout India or the compartmental system of competition by provinces (as now obtains in the Indian Police), or some such system as that advocated in paragraph 13 of your letter under reply. In all these cases His Excellency in Council considers that the appointment should be by the Secretary of State. It is only in the case of the Local Government's nominations, in respect of promoted officers and recruits appointed otherwise than by competition, that the Secretary of State's appointment would in practice be formal.

As regards the system advocated in paragraph 13 His Excellency in Council is doubtful whether the results in certain provinces might not be extremely unfortunate. The reservation of three-quarters of the average annual direct recruitment of Indians into the service to natives of the province concerned would probably admit into the service of this province candidates of very poor quality, whose place on the India list would be absurdly low. This would cause natural resentment to superior candidates from other provinces who failed to obtain appointments, and the examination, as a competitive test, would become a farce.

As regards the All-India Services on the reserved side, His Excellency in Council considers that the choice has got to be made between two principles. Either candidates should go to their own provinces in order of passing, the balance of provincial requirements (if any) being made up at the discretion of the final authority for these services, such weight as is given at present attaching to candidates' preference : or (as now in the Police) the provincial compartmental system should be frankly adopted. The suggestion of the Government of India has all the disadvantages of a compromise which infringes both principles, and the Governor in Council is unable to defend the adoption of 75 per cent. or any other figure as the minimum for provincial recruits. It is the old trouble of seeking to work to arbitrary percentages. Provincial feeling will almost certainly press for provincial recruits, either sooner or later. The Honourable Sir Hugh McPherson would be willing to accept the solution of the Government of India but on a 50 per cent. basis and with the proviso of a high qualifying minimum total of marks.

As regards service in the transferred field (ex hypothesi to be provincialized) it appears certain that local opinion will at once demand that recruitment be restricted to persons domiciled in the province. The Honourable Minister in the Department of Education adheres to his opinion expressed before the Royal Commission that Indians operating in reserved fields should not be appointed by the Secretary of State in Council, and he is not in favour of fixing any minimum percentage for the natives of the province.

(9) His Excellency in Council would prefer not to discriminate on racial lines as regards the conditions of service to be prescribed for future Indian recruits in the All-India Services. These gentlemen will be recruited to the reserved services on the same terms as European recruits, except that the latter will get overseas pay and certain advantages in the matter of passages and remittance benefits. Accepting this position, the question is whether, should their services be transferred at some future date, they should be entitled to the same options as are proposed to be given to European recruits [paragraph 74 (v) of the Report], and more particularly the right to go on proportionate pension. The ordinary Indian recruit will not, in fact, want to go on proportionate pension and, on the whole, His Excellency in Council considers that there is not sufficient cause for differentiation. The Honourable Minister in the Department of Education considers that no concession of the kind recommended in the report should be extended to Indian recruits but that, when recruited, they should be given to understand that they may be liable to be placed at any time under the control of the provincial Governments.

GOVERNMENT OF BURMA.

APPOINTMENT DEPARTMENT.

LETTER FROM MR. F. LEWISOHN, C.B.E., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BURMA, HOME AND POLITICAL DEPARTMENT, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, No. 404-A.-24, DATED RANGOON, THE 30TH JULY 1924.

SUBJECT.—Recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India, for the appointment and control of the Services.

I am directed to convey the views of this Government on the nine points enumerated in paragraph 14 of your letter No. 178—9-24-Ests., dated the 20th June 1924.

(1) & (2). This Government accepts the view that the services employed in Reserved fields should be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State and those employed in Transferred fields (other than Medical Services) should so far as future recruits are concerned be appointed and controlled by Local Governments, the existing members of these services maintaining their present rights and status as officers of All-India Services. I am at the same time to say that the Honourable the Finance Member and the two Ministers would have preferred the solution set out in their answer to the Royal Commission's Questionnaire, namely, that recruitment to the present All-India Services (whether working in the Reserved or in the Transferred fields should cease forthwith, and their duties and functions be transferred gradually to new services organized on a Provincial basis for which a minimum proportion of European recruitment would be laid down by the Secretary of State, who would recruit Europeans on behalf of the Local Government, but would not control them, although their contracts would provide for an appeal to him from any order of the Local Government affecting emoluments or prospects. I am to attach a Note in which the Honourable the Finance Member has explained his position more fully.

There is no doubt that in Burma it will for some years to come be difficult, if not impossible to find enough suitable recruits for all the technical services, such as the Service of Engineers. It will therefore be necessary for the Local Government to seek recruits from elsewhere. In replying to the Commission's Questionnaire in a sense differing from that of their colleagues, as set out above, His Excellency the Governor and the Honourable the Home Member took the view that if the principle that the Services in Reserved fields should be All-India Services and those in Transferred fields Provincial Services were adopted for the whole of India, it was politically impossible to adopt a different principle in dealing with Burma, now that Burma has been given the same measure of dyarchy as the Indian Provinces.

(3) This Government accepts the principle that when a subject is transferred, the Service dealing with that subject should be transferred also, the rights of existing members being safeguarded. The Honourable the Finance Member and the Ministers express the view that if their solution had been accepted, the only alteration consequent on the transfer of a subject would be the reduction in the percentage of European Officers to be recruited in future.

(4) The suggestions made by the Commission in paragraph 74 (v) of the Report for dealing with British members of the Services in the case of a subject being transferred appear to this Government to be generally reasonable.

(5) This Government agrees that full power should be conferred on Local Governments in regard to all classes of Provincial Services, it being understood that it would still be open to them to recruit to these Services through the Secretary of State and, when officers are so recruited, to provide in their agreement for an appeal to the Secretary of State and any other safeguards which they may wish to provide.

(6) This Government considers that the provisions safeguarding Provincial Services should eventually depend on Provincial legislation but that it may be convenient at the start to depend on rules.

(7) This point does not arise in Burma.

(8) In view of the special conditions of this province, which have often been represented to the Government of India and which have been recognized in the first sentence of paragraph 6 of Government of India, Home Department Resolution No. 2559, dated the 1st December 1920, in which it is laid down that while the open competitive examination in London would be open to all, Indians successful in that examination would not be allotted to Burma nor successful Burmans to India, it is impossible for this Government to acquiesce in the proposals contained in paragraph 13 of your letter, and it is essential that all non-Europeans who may be appointed to All-India Services in Burma in future should be Burmans, i.e., persons born and domiciled in Burma. It follows that vacancies in the Indian Civil Service and in the Indian (Imperial) Police in Burma cannot be filled by means of open competitive examination at Allahabad. This Government therefore proposes that in addition to the open competitive examination at Allahabad there should be a simultaneous open competitive examination at Rangoon for the Indian Civil Service and for the Police. The number of Burmans to be recruited annually should then be obtained either through the open competitive examination held in London or by the open competitive examination held in Rangoon, the number of vacancies to be filled by the latter means being the total number of vacancies for the year minus the number of Burmans who secure a place in the open competitive examination in London in the preceding year. This means that, apart from the London examination, Burmans will compete for appointment in the Indian Civil Service and in the Imperial Police only with Burmans. The results of the open competitive examination at Allahabad have not been very satisfactory from the point of view of Burman candidates; of the two or three who have gone up for the examination only one has been successful. This may be in part due to the great reluctance of the young Burman to go so far afield as Allahabad for the examination. The Local Government believes that if the examination is held in Rangoon the results will be much more satisfactory. It would no doubt be necessary to prescribe a minimum qualifying mark. Should the number of candidates who qualify at this competitive examination in Rangoon be insufficient, the balance should be made up for that year by the promotion of senior officers from the Burma Civil Service and from the Burma Police Service to listed appointments, even though this may involve an increase in the number of listed appointments beyond the maximum which may be prescribed.

(9) If this system is adopted and if it is definitely decided that non-European entrants into the Services in Burma must be persons born and domiciled in Burma this Government considers that the privilege of retirement on proportionate pension should not be offered to them. They should be informed at the time of recruitment that they would be liable to be placed later under the control of the Provincial Government but that their existing rates of pay would be guaranteed.

2. With regard to the remarks on the subject contained in paragraph 12 of your letter, I am to say that this Government considers that so long as Burmans are recruited to the Indian Civil Service and to the Indian (Imperial) Police by means of open competition in London or simultaneous competition in Rangoon, Burmans and Europeans alike should be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State.

Note by the Honourable the Finance Member on points (i) and (ii), viz., that the Services employed in reserved fields should be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State and that the Services employed in transferred fields (other than Medical Services) should be recruited by Local Governments.

I think that these two recommendations are fundamentally unsound. Hitherto all the superior public services have been on the same footing, and it is admitted that in practice the fact that the superior services in the transferred fields have been appointed by the Secretary of State has not been detrimental to the carrying out of Ministers' policies. There is no reason why it should be ; public services should be outside politics. To introduce the principle that the transfer of a subject to the control of ministers involves a change in the control of the public services by which the administration of the subject is conducted is calculated to establish the view that the services are not outside politics, and to encourage the clamour for the transfer of all reserved subjects. The services are there, not to lay down policies but to carry them out, and so long as the authority which lays down the policies to be followed is appointed by the Secretary of State, the latter is in a position to discharge his responsiblities to Parliament for the good government of the reserved subjects. It is no doubt anomalous to maintain the control of the Secretary of State over the superior services which are the agents employed by the ministers in giving effect to their policies to such an extent that his sanction is required to the creation of any new or the abolition of any existing permanent post in these services or to an increase or reduction in the pay of any post, but it is not necessary, in order to remove this anomaly, that the Secretary of State should abandon the power to declare the extent to which Europeans shall be employed in these services as the Commission proposes to do in Recommendation (ii) . . . . . The joint authors of the Report on Indian Constitutional Reforms remarked in paragraph 323 that "the English members of the services will continue to be as necessary as ever to India" and they certainly never contemplated the entire elimination of English members from any of the existing All-India Services. The present proposal is put forward to satisfy an entiring reasonable demand for the relaxation of the excessive control which is at present exercised by the Secretary of State and goes a good deal further than is necessary in Burma where it must be recognised that the retention of European recruitment in all services is for some time to come essential.

If the Secretary of State abandons the power to prescribe a minimum proportion of Europeans recruitment for the superior services ministers will find it impossible, however, convinced they may be of the necessity of continuing to recruit Europeans to a certain proportion of the posts in these services, to resist the pressure of popular opinion that all posts should be filled by Burmans. My opinion in brief is that the Commission's proposals go too far in the case of transferred subjects and do not go far enough in the case of reserved subjects.

W. J. KEITH.

LETTER FROM A. E. NELSON, ESQ., C.I.E., O.B.E., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE CENTRAL PROVINCES, No. 2837-1275-III, DATED THE 25TH JULY 1924.

I am directed to reply to Government of India letter No. F.-178,9|24-Ests., dated the 20th June 1924, asking for the views of the Local Government on the main problems connected with the control and organisation of the All-India Services which arise out of the recommendations of the Report of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India.

2. Paragraph 14 of Government of India letter.—Points (1) and (2).—The two main recommendations of the Commission are :

(a) that the services operating in the reserved field as specified in paragraph 13 of the Report should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State in Council ;

(b) that the services operating in the transferred field as specified in paragraph 14 of the Report (with the exception of the civil side of the Indian Medical Service, which will be treated separately), should, so far as future recruits are concerned, be appointed and controlled by Local Governments. Existing members of these services, however, should retain all their present rights and status as officers of All-India Services.

With regard to (a), the Local Government has no hesitation in supporting the proposals of the Commission, and rejecting any suggestions for the transfer of the Secretary of State's control to the Government of India. Such transfer would, the Local Government agrees, probably be fatal to continued recruitment from England.

With regard to (b), the Local Government's previous recommendation was that the services operating in the transferred field, with the exception of the Indian Educational Service, should, so far as future recruits are concerned, be appointed and controlled by Local Governments, but in the Education Department twelve posts should be filled by Europeans recruited and controlled by the Secretary of State.

In view of the unanimous opinion of the Commission, the Local Government agrees that the constitutional change effected by the Government of India Act should be carried to its logical conclusion by transferring the recruitment and control of all the services working in the transferred departments to the Local Government. The risk of any loss of efficiency on this account must be faced. The acceptance of the views of the Royal Commission on this point involves the withdrawal by the Local Government of its previous recommendation in favour of the reservation of certain posts in the Educational Department.

3. Point (3).—From the acceptance of the proposals of the Commission regarding the control of the services working in the transferred field, it logically follows, the Local Government considers, that when the transfer of a subject takes place in future it should be accompanied by the transfer of the service dealing with that subject, the rights of existing members being safeguarded.

4. Point (4).—In paragraph 74 (v) of the Report the Royal Commission have recommended that in the case of all future British recruits to the All-India Services a rule should be made and a clause inserted in their contracts giving them certain options, if and when the field of service for which they have been recruited is transferred. These suggestions, which are made in the interests of recruitment, are regarded as reasonable by the Local Government. It is difficult to see what additional incentives to recruitment could be provided under a constitution which is liable to modification at regular intervals.

5. Points (5) and (6).—The Local Government agrees that full powers over present and future provincial services should be delegated to Local Governments by means of rules under section 96 (B) (2) of the Government of India Act. To secure the satisfactory treatment of questions connected with recruitment, pay, pension, etc., of the provincial services, the Local Government would prefer to proceed by way of legislation rather than by rules. A statute, which requires time and persuation for its modification, is likely to give the services a stronger sense of security than a set of rules which can be altered more easily. Whether the legislation should be provincial or central depends on the service conditions in the various provinces. If, as is thought to be the case, these conditions do not vary in essentials, then the Local Government would favour central legislation. The ideal arrangement would, the Local Government considers, be an Act by the central legislature laying down on the broadest lines the conditions of service for the provincial services, supplemented by provincial legislation for the subordinate services, further supplemented in both cases by provincial sets of rules to cover the details of the respective services.

6. Point (7).—The proposal of the Commission that the Irrigation Branch of the Indian Service of Engineers should remain as an All-India Service, while the Buildings and Roads Branch, will, so far as future recruitment is concerned, be provincialised, presents no difficulty in this province where the two branches have already been separated.

7. Point (8).—With regard to Indians in the services in the reserved field, the Local Government's previous recommendation was that in the Indian Civil Service and Indian Police Service, both the Indian and European element should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State in Council. In the other two services operating in reserved fields, viz., the Indian Forest Service and the Indian Service of Engineers (Irrigation Branch), while the European element should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State, the Indian element should be organised into a superior branch of the provincial service. In making this recommendation the Local Government was influenced mainly by considerations of economy. The recommendation of the Royal Commission is based on the principle that the services should be controlled by the authority which is ultimately responsible for the administration of the subjects. Having regard to this principle, and the fact that there is a strong desire among Indians for equal treatment, while the extra expenditure involved in equal treatment will not be excessive, the Local Government is now prepared to accept the recommendation of the Commission that both the European and the Indian element in the services operating in the reserved field should be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State.

The Honourable Mr. Standon, however, while agreeing that the advantages to be derived from acceptance of the Commission's Report as a whole warrant acquiescence in proposals which would not otherwise commend themselves, desires to state his view that, if on consideration of opinions expressed by Local Governments or in the legislature the Secretary of State so amend the proposals of the Commission as to disturb the balance of conflicting views represented by the Report, the question of the recruitment by Local Governments to Indianised posts now in the cadre of All-India Services should be reconsidered on the ground that it is of great importance for the future welfare of the country that the scale of pay should be reduced as soon as possible to that which is sufficient to attract the type of man required and that the least objectionable means of doing this is by provincialisation of Indianised posts. He further desires to say, with reference to Mr. Coupland's note on "the control of the services", that this course will not affect the ability of the Secretary of State to discharge his constitutional responsibility. The business of the reserved departments is already largely conducted by officials provincially recruited and the transfer of some more posts to provincial recruitment will not necessarily prejudice the position of the Secretary of State. It would be a question in each case whether the measure of transfer proposed was such as to affect the maintenance of the desired standard of administration.

8. Assuming that Indians in the services in the reserved field will continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State, the next question for consideration is the best method of securing that a reasonable proportion of this Indian element shall be recruited from natives of the province concerned. The Local Government considers that there would be practical difficulties in carrying out the suggestion of the Government of India that a certain minimum of natives of each province should be prescribed who must be recruited each year. The principle which appears to the Local Government to be most suitable to the circumstances of this province is that the natives of the province should be taken first, provided they reach the requisite standard; if residents with the necessary qualifications are not forthcoming, then the appointments should be given to outsiders. In the case of services, for which recruitment is by competitive examination, this will involve the fixation of a qualifying standard.

9. Point (9).—The last question for consideration is what conditions should be prescribed for future Indian recruits in the All-India Services if the field of service for which they have been recruited, is transferred. The Local Government considers that the inducements suggested in paragraph 74 (v) of the Report for recruitment of British Officers are not required in the case of Indians and that it is not necessary either to offer them the privilege of proportionate pension or to allow them to retain their All-India status. The Local Government considers that Indian recruits might reasonably be informed at the time of recruitment that they will be liable to be placed later under the control of provincial Governments, but that existing rates of pay will be guaranteed to them.

GOVERNMENT OF ASSAM.

THE GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL.

APPOINTMENT AND POLITICAL DEPARTMENT.

APPOINTMENT BRANCH.

LETTER FROM A. W. BOTHAM, ESQ., C.I.E., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF ASSAM, APPOINTMENT AND POLITICAL DEPARTMENT, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, NO. APPTT.-1144—4249-A.P., DATED SHILLONG, THE 4TH AUGUST 1924.

With reference to your letter No. F.-178-9-24—Ests., dated the 20th June 1924, on the subject of the main problems connected with the control and organisation of the All-India Services which arise out of the recommendations of the Report of the Royal Commission on the Superior Services in India, I am directed to communicate the views of the Government of Assam.

2. The recommendations of the Royal Commission and the Government of India's proposals which are developed from them are apparently based on the assumption that there is a clear cut distinction between services operating in the reserved field, and those operating in the transferred field; and among the former the Commissioners have included, for instance, the Indian Civil Service. This classification is perhaps not strictly correct. As Professor Coupland has pointed out in paragraph 5 of his minute on the control of the Services at page 116 of the Report, the Indian Civil Service is at present employed both in the reserved and in the transferred field. Under Devolution Rule 11, when an officer performs duties both in a department dealing with reserved subjects and in a department dealing with transferred subjects, the decision as to the department he shall be deemed to be serving in is vested in the Governor. In cases therefore where a transfer of subject from the reserved to the transferred field takes place, and where the service hitherto dealing with that subject still retains bilateral functions after such transfer, the provisions of Devolution Rule 11 will presumably still apply.

3. Subject to these remarks, I am now to indicate the views of the Government of Assam on the several points enumerated in paragraph 14 of your letter :

(1) The Government of Assam accept the view that services operating in the reserved field should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State in Council.

(2) The proposition that services operating in the transferred field, with the exception of the civil side of the Indian Medical Service, should, so far as future recruits are concerned, be appointed and controlled by Local Governments, existing members retaining their present rights and status as officers of All-India Services, is similarly accepted.

(3) That the transfer of a subject from one field to another should be accompanied by the corresponding transfer of the service dealing with that subject, would appear to be the logical outcome of such transfer. The rights of existing members of services affected by such transfer must of course be duly safeguarded and the interests of new entrants must also receive adequate protection.

(4) As intimated in my telegram No. 4115-A.P., dated the 22nd July 1924, the Honourable Ministers are of opinion that all future British recruits to the All-India Services should, in the event of the field of service for which they were recruited being transferred, be given merely the option of entering into new contracts with the Local Government or of retiring on proportionate pension. They feel that, if such officers were allowed to retain their All-India status, serious complications might arise. The Governor in Council apprehends that British recruitment would be seriously hampered if British officers were deprived of the option of retaining their All-India status in the event of the service for which they were recruited being transferred. On the other hand, it is undeniable that cases might arise in which it would not be in the public interest to retain an officer with an All-India status in a service under the control of a Minister, and it is not unreasonable to allow the Local Governments of the future some freedom of action in the matter. The Governor in Council accordingly suggests that in addition to the alternatives laid down in paragraph 74 (v) of the Commission's report it should be provided that, if an officer wished to remain in service retaining his All-India status and the Local Government did not agree, it should be open to the Local Government to compel him to retire on proportionate pension, granting him, in addition to all leave earned, a lump sum, which might amount to one year's pay, as compensation for the loss of his career. The Honourable Ministers would be willing to accept this compromise in lieu of their former proposal that officers, remaining after the transfer of the service to which they belong, should not in any case be allowed to retain their All-India status.

(5) and (6). The questions whether full powers should be conferred on Local Governments in regard to all classes of provincial services, and if so, how the necessary safeguards should be provided, are closely connected and it is proposed therefore to consider them together. The whole Government are agreed that Local Governments must be given powers of control over all classes of provincial services, but they are not agreed as to the degree and scope of protection which should be afforded to these services, or as to the means through which this protection should be secured. The Honourable Ministers consider that, in as much as conditions differ in the various provinces, the enactment of the requisite safeguarding legislation should be left to the provincial legislatures. The Governor in Council, on the other hand, anticipates considerable difficulty in inducing provincial legislatures to tie their own hands by providing reasonable and adequate safeguards, and it seems certain that if the matter was left to them, there would be great variations not only in details but also in material conditions of service between different provinces. The main principles required to guard against nepotism in making appointments and promotions, and to provide security of tenure and an adequate right of appeal against injustice, will be the same in all provinces, and in the opinion of His Excellency in Council, they should be laid down by some authority outside the provincial legislatures. It might be possible for the Secretary of State to frame Fundamental Rules laying down basic principles for general application and to give Local Governments power to frame subsidiary rules for the detailed application of these principles to the services under their control. On the other hand, if the Secretary of State is in future to have no concern with the provincial services, this course might be constitutionally incorrect, and in that case it might be best to pass a short Act through the Central Legislature, laying down the broad principles, and giving Local Governments power to frame detailed rules not inconsistent with the Act. It might also be advisable, at any rate in the case of the more important services, to devise a mutually binding legal covenant on the lines suggested in paragraph 85 of the Commission's report for members of the All-India Services.

(7) As in Assam the whole of the Public Works Department is at present reserved, there will be no difficulty in applying the proposals of the Commission to it. For the reasons given in paragraph 14 of my letter No. 447-C., dated the 1st July 1924, dealing with the working of the reformed constitution in Assam, the Governor in Council proposes that the Public Works Department should continue to be a reserved department for the present and is unable to recommend the transfer of a portion.

(8) The Indians employed in the reserved field referred to in this clause are presumably those belonging to All-India Services. If this presumption is correct, the Government of Assam agree that they should continue to be appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State in Council. As to whether arrangements of the kind suggested in paragraph 13 of your letter would be suitable for securing to each province a reasonable proportion of natives of that province, opinions are much divided. No candidate from Assam has hitherto succeeded in passing into the Indian Civil Service or the Indian Police Service by open competition, and those who have qualified for appointment by nomination have usually appeared low down in the lists. If, therefore, Indian recruitment for the All-India Services were confined to natives of the province, as is proposed by one of the Ministers, there would be serious risk of the general standard of efficiency being lowered. The Honourable Mr. Webster would regulate Indian recruitment by unconditioned open competition, but in that case the services in Assam would be staffed entirely by Indians from other provinces, and it is doubtful whether they would be more acceptable than British recruits. Experience moreover shows that Indians from other provinces are not infrequently apt to become discontented with service in Assam. On the whole the Governor in Council would be prepared to try a scheme on the lines indicated in paragraph 13 of your letter, provided that a qualifying standard were laid down and that no candidate who failed to reach that standard would be entitled to an appointment. Actual experience of recruitment under the new conditions, both in England and in India, will however be necessary before any scheme can be finally adopted.

(9) As to the conditions to be prescribed for future Indian recruits in the All-India Services in the event of these services being transferred, the Honourable Ministers consider that two alternatives only should be admissible, viz., either unqualified acceptance of the new conditions by the Civil Servant concerned or retirement on proportionate pension. In the opinion of the Governor in Council, the decision on this point must depend on the decision arrived at in regard to (8) above. If the admission to All-India Services operating in the provinces is to be based on unrestricted open competition, then all Indians affected by subsequent constitutional changes should be given the same protection as British recruits. If on the other hand Indian recruitment for the province is to be confined wholly or mainly to natives of the province, it would not be unreasonable to stipulate that future Indian recruits should be bound to accept transfer to provincial control provided that their existing rates of pay were guaranteed.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

ESTABLISHMENTS.

LETTER FROM THE HON'BLE MR. J. CRERAR, C.S.I., C.I.E., SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, TO ALL LOCAL GOVERNMENTS, NO. F.-178/10/24-ESTS., DATED SIMLA, THE 21ST JUNE 1924.

With reference to my letter No. 172/24-Ests., dated 18th June 1924, I am directed to address you regarding the proposals for Indianisation of the All-India Services contained in the Report of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India. It will be observed that in the Services in the transferred departments it is proposed that it should be left to the local Government, i.e., the Governor acting with his Ministers to decide whether it will recruit any more Europeans. The question of Indianisation, therefore, as hitherto understood, namely the determination by the Secretary of State of certain proportions of Indians to be employed in the All-India Services, will, if the proposals of the Commission are accepted, be confined to the four Services dealing with reserved subjects, namely the Indian Civil Service, the Indian Police Service, the Irrigation Branch of the Indian Service of Engineers and the Indian Forest Service in those provinces in which the subject of 'Forests' has not been transferred.

2. In these four Services the Commission have proposed a very appreciable advance in the proportion of Indians. The present rate of recruitment for the Indian Civil Service is approximately 60 Europeans to 40 Indians; the Commission propose that it should be 60 Indians to 40 Europeans. In the Indian Police Service they suggest that the present rate of recruitment of 33 per cent. Indians should be raised to 50 per cent. In the Irrigation Branch of the Indian Service of Engineers the rate proposed is 40 Europeans to 60 Indians and in the Forest Service 25 Europeans to 75 Indians.

3. As was pointed out in the Montagu-Chelmsford Report, it is not possible to alter the personnel of a Service in a day. A Service is an organism of slow growth and the action taken now does not begin to show any effective results for some 8 or 10 years. Certain schools of Indian political opinion, impressed by the inevitably slow process of substituting Indian for European agency in the Services, have pressed for the maximum acceleration by stopping altogether, professedly for a period only, the recruitment of Europeans. The Commission, it will be observed, have not accepted this remedy. Though they have not discussed the point, it may be assumed that they were influenced by the argument that the cessation of European recruitment or even its temporary reduction appreciably below the proportion which it is designed ultimately to achieve would disorganise a Service and would render it difficult, if not impossible, to resume European recruitment later on a larger scale. If this line of argument is accepted the conclusion would be that the rate of recruitment is within fairly narrow limits the factor which really determines the ultimate composition of a Service, and that attention should therefore be concentrated rather on the present rate of recruitment than on any hypothetical eventual composition of a Service.

4. The statement of the Commission's proposals for the Indian Civil Service is somewhat obscured by a compromise between two points of view. It seems to be suggested that the object aimed at is the attainment of equal numbers of Europeans and Indians in the cadre. On the other hand the fact that the comparatively distant period of 15 years has been fixed for the attainment of that result suggests that the Commission were of opinion that any lower rate of recruitment than that which they propose would be dangerous to the country and to the future of European recruitment. If that is so, the point which has to be determined is not whether a half and half composition of the Service should be achieved in 10, 15 or 20 years, but whether a rate of recruitment of 40 Europeans to 60 Indians which may eventually lead to a 40·60 composition of the Service is approved. It is extremely difficult to conjecture the period within which this rate of recruitment would produce a half and half composition of the Service. A considerable number of retirements on proportionate pension would accelerate the period appreciably, and it must be borne in mind that there is a possibility that the required number of European recruits will not be forthcoming. These factors perhaps render any conjectures regarding the period at which equal numbers will be obtained of little practical value. But if the attainment of equal numbers within a definite period appeals to any sentiment, I am to ask whether the Government of Madras, etc., think it would be reasonable to guarantee that this result would be achieved in not more than 15 years. The Commission however suggest in paragraph 36 of their Report that steps should be taken, if necessary, to prevent the attainment of this result in a shorter period than 15 years. I am to ask whether there is any necessity, in the opinion of the Government of Madras, etc., to impose such a restriction.

5. The Commission propose that only 80 per cent. of the recruitment should be direct, 40 per cent going to Europeans and 40 per cent. to Indians, and that the remaining 20 per cent. should be obtained by promotion from the Provincial Service. The feasibility of this proposal appears to depend largely on whether a more suitable system can be devised for bringing officers from the Provincial Service into the Indian Civil Service. The matter requires detailed consideration and will form the subject of a separate letter.

6. The Commission recognised in paragraph 34 of their Report that there are essential differences between the various provinces. They have not however made any suggestions as to the distribution of European recruits among the provinces. It appears probable that the same proportions are not required for all provinces. The present system of distribution of Europeans is haphazard and unsatisfactory. No definite proportion has been laid down for each province. The practice has been so far as possible to assign Indians to their provinces of origin and the Europeans have been placed in the vacancies that remain. It is clearly unsound that the important question of the proportion of Europeans and Indians in the various provinces should be left to be decided by the chance results of a competitive examination. It seems desirable therefore that definite recruitment proportions should be determined for the various provinces—the whole working out at the proportion which may be finally accepted for All-India.

7. I am to suggest that the acceptance of the general proportion proposed by the Commission might possibly lead to the following proportions in the provinces :—

(a) The standard proportion of 40—60 might be adopted for Bombay, the United Provinces, Bihar and Orissa and the Central Provinces.

(b) In Madras and Bengal the proportion of Europeans might be one-third instead of two-fifths.

(c) In the Punjab, Burma and Assam the proportion might be half and half.

The larger proportion of Europeans in the Punjab and Assam might be justified on account of the special circumstances of the administration and in Burma on account of the difficulty of recruiting any large number of Burmans and the prejudice against employing Indians. I am to ask whether the Government of Madras, etc., would consider such a distribution of European recruitment as reasonable.

8. The Commission have recommended that of every 100 recruits for the Indian Police, 50 should be Europeans recruited directly, 30 should be Indians directly recruited and the remaining 20 should be obtained from the Provincial Service. The question of the proportion of Indians to be drawn from the Provincial Service will, as in the case of the Indian Civil Service, be reserved for discussion in a separate letter. The present reference is confined to the general proposition that recruitment for the Police Service should be half European and half Indian. I am to ask whether this is accepted as a reasonable proportion.

9. As in the case of the Indian Civil Service it seems necessary to indicate the probable proportions of Europeans that would be recruited for the different provinces, if the half and half proportion for All-India is accepted.

(a) The standard proportion of one half might be applied to Bombay, the United Provinces Burma, Bihar and Orissa and the Central Provinces. Burma has been included among the Provinces to which the standard proportion might be applied, although in the case of the Indian Civil Service special treatment has been suggested and although at the present time the rate of recruitment for the Police in Burma is only 22 per cent. Indians as against 33 per cent. for most provinces. But the Government of India think it possible that there should be less difficulty in obtaining suitable Burmans for employment in the Police Service than for employment in the Indian Civil Service.

(b) In Madras and Bengal a proportion of two-fifths Europeans might be sufficient

(·) The Punjab and Assam might be above the standard figure and for the propo t'on of three-fifths Europeans might be suitable. It has not been ove looked that the Punjab cadre includes 24 officers for the North-We t Front'er Province where the proportion of Europeans may have to be particularly high.

10. For the Indian Forest Service the Commission recommend the recruitment of only 25 per cent. Europeans as against 75 per cent. Indians. I am to ask whether the Government of Madras,* etc., consider this suitable. It is doubtful whether there is any necessity to suggest any different proportion of Europeans for different provinces. In the case of Bombay and Bu ma, where Forest administration is transferred, no proportion of Europeans would be laid down, as in accordance with the general proposals of the Commission, future recruitment to the Forest Service in these Provinces would be left at the discretion of the transferred side of the local Government.

11. In the Indian Service of Engineers proposals for Indianisation are required only for the Irrigation Branch. The Commission have proposed that recruitment should be in the proportion of 40 Europeans to 60 Indians. I am to ask whether this proportion is considered suitable by the Government of Madras, etc.

(In Madras, etc., the two branches of the Indian Service of Engineers have not been separated, and the Commission have proposed that where this is the case no change should be made in the existing ratios of recruitment, the whole of the Service remaining on an All-India basis. This would mean that 50 per cent. of the combined Service would continue to be recruited in England and 50 per cent in India ; while of the 50 per cent. recruited in England 10 per cent. would be Indians. The arrangement does not at first sight appear very satisfactory and I am to ask for the views of the Government of Madras, etc., on this question generally and in particular as to the feasibility of separating the Irrigation from the Buildings and Roads Branch in the event of the general principle of the Commission's recommendations regarding the treatment of the two branches being accepted.)

[In Assam the whole of the public works administration remains reserved, The proposal of the Commission therefore may be taken to be that, as in the case of provinces where the two branches of the Indian Service of Engineers have not been separated, the existing ratios of recruitment should continue. I am to ask whether this is considered suitable by the Government of Assam.]

12. To sum up, I am to ask for the views of the Government of Madras, etc., on the following points :—

(1) Whether the rate of recruitment of a Service should be maintained in a reasonably close relation to the ultimate composition aimed at,

(2) whether a rate of recruitment for the Indian Civil Service of 40 Europeans to 60 Indians is accepted, with or without conditions about the attainment of a half and half composition in not more than 15 years,

(3) if so, whether the distribution of European recruitment in the Indian Civil Service suggested for the different provinces is considered reasonable,

(4) whether a rate of recruitment of 50 Europeans to 50 Indians is accepted for the Indian Police Service,

(5) if so, whether the distribution of European recruitment in the Indian Police Service suggested for the different provinces is considered reasonable,

(6) whether a rate of recruitment of 25 Europeans to 75 Indians is accepted for the Indian Forest Service,

(7) whether the proposed rates of recruitment for the Indian Service of Engineers are accepted.

13. In view of the great importance of arriving at an early decision on these points I am to request that the reply of the Government of Madras, etc., may reach the Government of India not later than the 4th August 1924.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF MADRAS, NO. MIS.-569, DATED THE 7TH AUGUST 1924.

In my letter No. 472-O.-1, dated the 23rd July 1924, the views of His Excellency the Governor in Council on the main recommendations of the Royal Commission on the superior Public Services were stated. In regard to the proposals for the Indianisation of the All-India services operating in reserved fields, His Excellency the Governor in Council accepted, subject to two reservations, the ratio of recruitment of Europeans and Indians recommended by the Commission. I am now to discuss more fully the reasons for the reservations made and to reply to the further remarks on the subject made in your letter No. 178-10-Ests., dated 21st June 1924.

2 In regard to the relation between the rate of recruitment and the ultimate composition aimed at, it appears to His Excellency the Governor in Council that the Commission took in the case of each service the composition they considered that it would be expedient to attain at the end of a given period and then fixed the ratio of recruitment which in their opinion would produce the composition desired at the end of the period specified in each case. His Excellency the Governor in Council considers that the method followed by the Commission preferable to that which appears to be suggested in the letter under reply, namely, that the ratio of recruitment should approximate to the proportion ultimately desired.

3. In the case of the Indian Civil Service, for example, the Commission considered that it would be fair and prudent to have fifteen years hence a 50—50 cadre of Europeans and Indians and they calculate that a ratio of recruitment of 40 Europeans to 60 Indians (20 of the latter from the Provincial Service) should now be adopted to produce a 50—50 cadre fifteen years hence. There is nothing in the report that avowedly draws a distinction between the various provinces, but His Excellency the Governor in Council sees no reason to take exception to the view suggested in the letter under reply that these figures and proportion are liable to modification in their application to particular provinces provided the totals approximate to the figures recommended by the Commission.

4. In the case of Madras, His Excellency the Governor in Council is prepared to agree that for the Indian Civil Service a proportion of one-third of Europeans in cadre fifteen years hence may be accepted as the standard. It is difficult to estimate what ratio of recruitment would be calculated to produce this result. The rate of retirement in the future may not improbably exceed the average considerably and there may be difficulty in getting recruits of the kind desired. If however it is understood that the Secretary of State shall have power to make such adjustments in the rate of recruitment as may be necessary to prevent the proportion of one-third being reached in a shorter period than fifteen years, His Excellency the Governor in Council would be prepared to accept a rate of recruitment of 25 per cent, i.e., of one European to three Indians.

5. I am here to refer to the first reservation made in my letter of the 23rd July. For the Judicial branch of the Civil Service in this Presidency, His Excellency the Governor in Council would propose as the standard to be reached fifteen years hence, a proportion of one European to three Indians, while the standard for the executive and judicial branches taken together would be one European to two Indians as proposed above. A greater measure of Indianisation is recommended for the Judicial branch, firstly because of the absence of anything like the Hindu-Moslem tension which probably necessitates the continuance of the European District and Sessions Judge longer in many provinces of Northern India than in the south; secondly, because of the high quality of the work in Madras of the subordinate judiciary and Indian District and Sessions Judges in the past; and lastly, because of the admitted legal aptitude of Indian officers in South India and the comparatively high general level of legal and educational attainments amongst them.

Furthermore, His Excellency the Governor in Council observes that no provision is made in the Commission's recommendations for a continuance of the system of recruitment from the Bar which at present obtains. His Excellency the Governor in Council presumes that it is not intended to discontinue this form of recruitment. The exact method to be followed will be examined in replying to the communication promised in paragraph 5 of the letter under reply.

6. Coming next to the Police Service, it is observed that the Commission contemplate a cadre of 50—50 in 25 years' time and recommend a rate of recruitment of 50 per cent. Europeans and 50 per cent. Indians, 20 per cent. being obtained by promotion from the Provincial Service. The letter under reply suggests a rate of recruitment of 40 Europeans to 60 Indians for Madras. His Excellency the Governor in Council, while prepared to accept a lower rate of European recruitment than in other provinces for the Indian Civil Service, does not see any sufficient justification for a similar differentiation in the case of the Police and considers that the rate of recruitment proposed by the Commission in the case of the Indian Police Service should be applied to all provinces alike.

7. In the case of the Indian Forest Service His Excellency the Governor in Council has already indicated his dissent from the ratio of recruitment proposed by the Commission—paragraph 4 of my letter of 23rd July. The evidence taken by the Commission has not been published, and accordingly His Excellency the Governor in Council does not wish to refer to it except to say that the views of this Government on this subject of the recruitment to the Indian Forest Service were not placed before the Commission: and therefore it is necessary to state them here in some detail. Whatever may be the case when the Dehra Dun College is ready to train men for the Imperial Service, the experience in this Presidency during the last three years has been that candidates suitable both by educational qualification, physique and temperament for the Forest Department are not yet forthcoming in sufficient numbers to fill 75 per cent. of the vacancies. It may be said without hesitation that if 75 per cent. of the vacancies are to be filled by local selection the standard of efficiency in the Forest Department must inevitably fall off to a very serious extent. Neither the Islington Commission nor the Lee Commission appears to have realized that it is in the case of the Forest Department not merely a matter of paper qualification nor of physique. A Forest Officer's success depends very largely on his being temperamentally suited for the lonely and sometimes strenuous life which he has to lead and it is in this direction that educated Indians have so far not shown themselves in any large numbers suited for, or willing to enter, the Forest Service. The Madras Government have just entered upon large developments in their forest policy, the outcome of which may very likely be that the ordinary routine forest work in this Presidency will be relegated to a Provincial Service while the higher and more technical branches will be in the hands of men specially trained for the purpose. It would in the opinion of His Excellency the Governor in Council be fatal to these developments if at the present juncture a rigid rule were laid down that out of every four new officers entering the department three were to be locally recruited. On this ground and also because, until this Government has seen Dehra Dun College at work, His Excellency the Governor in Council cannot form any opinion as to the material which the College will get and the finished product which it will turn out, His Excellency the Governor in Council would strongly urge that the present proportion of Indian recruitment, which amounts to about one half, should remain unchanged for a further period of at least 5 years.

8. In regard to the Indian Service of Engineers, His Excellency the Governor in Council has in another connection (my letter No. 547, dated the 5th August 1924, in reply to your letter No. F.-178-9-1924-Fsts., dated 21st June 1924) stated that the Irrigation branch cannot at present, with due regard to efficiency and economy, be separated from the Roads and Buildings branch and that therefore for the present the Indian Service of Engineering must remain an All-India service appointed and controlled by the Secretary of State. In the circumstances His Excellency the Governor in Council accepts the recommendation of the Commission that the existing ratio of recruitment should be maintained, namely, that 50 per cent. of the combined service should continue to be recruited in England and 50 per cent. in India; and of the 50 per cent. recruited in England 10 per cent. (or 5 per cent. of the whole) should be Indians.

9. The Hon'ble the Ministers adhere to the views expressed by them in the Memorandum forwarded with my letter No. 472-O-1, dated the 23rd July 1924. The Hon'ble Sir Muhammad Habib-ul-lah having been a Member of the Royal Commission does not wish to associate himself with any proposal that conflicts with those made by the Royal Commission.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL, No. 9171-A., DATED THE 2ND AUGUST 1924.

I am directed to refer to your letter No. F/178-10-24-Ests., dated the 21st June 1924, regarding the proposals for Indianization of the All-India Services contained in the Report of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India. I am to say that the Governor in Council has considered the points which have been summarised in paragraph 12 of your letter and his reply to all of the questions is in the affirmative. In the opinion of the Governor in Council, no conditions need be made regarding the attainment of equal numbers within 15 years, as this depends on contingencies which it is impossible to forecast.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED PROVINCES, No. 1036, DATED THE 28TH JULY 1924.

I am directed to reply on behalf of the Governor in Council to the Home Department letter No. F.-178/10/24-Ests., dated July 21, 1924. As in the other replies the paragraphs in this letter will correspond with the headings in the summary. This letter is subject to the note of the Hon'ble Home Member which was forwarded as an annexure to this Government's No. 3328, dated July 8, 1924. A copy of the notes* is enclosed for reference.

(1) "Whether the rate of recruitment of a Service should be maintained in a reasonably close relation to the ultimate composition aimed at."

If a particular ratio of European to Indian recruitment is adopted, it will not be practicable to alter that ratio at some future date in favour of the European element. The Commission seem to have overlooked this consideration in their proposals regarding the Indian Civil Service, since, whilst their ostensible aim is the attainment of equal numbers of Europeans and Indians in the cadre, they have recommended a rate of recruitment, which if it yields that equality in 15 years, will produce a 40 European 60 Indian composition within, say, 20 years. The rate of recruitment must clearly be settled on the assumption that the Indian proportion cannot be subsequently reduced, and with regard to the composition which on this assumption will eventually be reached. The Governor in Council understands that this is what is meant by the proposition, that the rate of recruitment of a service should be maintained in a reasonably close relation to the ultimate composition aimed at, and if so, he is in agreement therewith.

(2) "Whether a rate of recruitment for the Indian Civil Service of 40 Europeans to 60 Indians is accepted, with or without conditions about the attainment of a half and half composition is not more than 15 years."

The Governor in Council is prepared to accept a rate of recruitment of 40 Europeans to 60 Indians for the Indian Civil Service. This rate in fact agrees very closely with that recommended by him in his reply to the Commission. In existing conditions it seems probable that on this basis a half and half composition of the service will be attained within 15 years. But the Governor in Council would certainly give no guarantee that this result will be achieved in that period. A 40—60 ratio marks a very great advance upon the rate adopted only a few years ago, and there could be no reasonable ground for complaint if per improbabile the process should take a little longer than 15 years.

*Not printed with this letter.

(3) " If so, whether the distribution of European recruitment in the Indian Civil Service suggested for the different provinces is considered reasonable."

The Governor in Council though prepared to accept a rate of recruitment of 40 Europeans to 60 Indians, must demur strongly to the suggestion that a smaller proportion of Europeans is required in these provinces than in the Punjab, Burma or Assam. In no province, not excepting even the Punjab, are Hindu-Muhammadan relations more strained, and in none, as recent disturbances have demonstrated to conviction, is there greater need in the interests of law and order for a Strong European element. If the European recruits are to be distributed in varying proportions amongst the different provinces, he must press strongly for the assignment to these provinces of a proportion at least as large as that conceded to any other province.

(4) " Whether a rate of recruitment of 50 Europeans to 50 Indians is accepted for the Indian Police Service."

The proposal is accepted as giving a reasonable proportion.

(5) " If so, whether the distribution of European recruitment in the Indian Police Service suggested for the different provinces is considered reasonable."

For reasons which have been stated above, the Governor in Council considers that the proportion of European officers allotted to these provinces should be at least as large as that assigned to any other province.

(6) " Whether a rate of recruitment of 25 Europeans to 75 Indians is accepted for the Indian Forest Service."

The Governor in Council views this proposal with grave misgiving. Indians of the right stamp are especially difficult to secure for the Forest Service. The value of the forests is enormous; the danger of their deterioration in unskilled hands or in consequence of changes made under political pressure is very great. The Governor in Council would prefer not to go beyond a 50 per cent. rate of recruitment for the present. At the same time if the recommendations of the Royal Commission are to be treated as interdependent, then in view of other and more vital considerations the Governor in Council thinks it better to acquiesce in this particular proposal than to dissent from it.

(7) " Whether the proposed rates of recruitment for the Indian Service of Engineers are accepted."

This proposal is accepted.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PUNJAB, No. 18836-GAZETTE, DATED THE 4TH OF AUGUST 1924.

I am directed by the Governor in Council to reply to the questions summarized in paragraph 12 of your letter No. 178-10-24-Ests., dated the 21st June 1924. The Punjab Government have already, in replying to paragraph 2 (d) of your letter No. 172-24-Ests., dated the 18th of June 1924, accepted generally the rates of recruitment for the various services proposed by the Royal Commission, subject to the proviso that in the provincial allotment of recruits regard should be had to the special conditions of the Punjab.

2. (1) " Whether the rate of recruitment of a Service should be maintained in a reasonably close relation to the ultimate composition aimed at ".

For the reasons given by the Government of India the Punjab Government accept this proposition.

(2) " Whether a rate of recruitment for the Indian Civil Service of 40 Europeans to 60 Indians is accepted, with or without conditions about the attainment of a half and half composition in not more than 15 years."

With regard to the first part of this proposition, I am to invite a reference to paragraphs 7 and 8 of Punjab Government letter No. 26225-Gaz., dated the 25th of October 1922. Since that letter was written, the difficulties arising from the paucity of British officers of the Indian Civil Service in the Punjab have increased rather than diminished. The following statement showing the number of Executive and Judicial appointments in the Punjab held by Europeans and Indians respectively in June 1924 illustrates clearly the need for caution in increasing the rate of Indian recruitment for the Indian Civil Service :—

	Appointments.	Europeans.	Indians.
(a) Executive Branch.	Commissioners	3	2
	Deputy Commissioners ..	18	11
	Settlement Officers	2	2
	Sub-Divisional Officers ..	5	13
(b) Judicial Branch.	District and Sessions Judges ..	8	13

The Governor in Council would accordingly urge most strongly that a rate of recruitment for the Indian Civil Service of 50 Europeans to 50 Indians should, in practice, be maintained for the Punjab. Subject to this reservation he has no objection to the adoption of a 40—60 rate of recruitment for India as a whole.

With regard to the second part of the proposition, the Governor in Council considers that the prescription of any period for the attainment of a half and half composition in the Indian Civil Service is to be avoided. It is likely that circumstances will lead to the antedating of the process rather than its retardation but the true method of changing the composition of the Service is by the acceleration of recruitment.

(3) " If so, whether the distribution of European recruitment in the Indian Civil Service suggested for the different provinces is considered reasonable."

As indicated above the Governor in Council considers the half and half distribution proposed for the Punjab in paragraph 7 (c) of the letter of the Government of India, to be not only reasonable but necessary.

(4) " Whether a rate of recruitment of 50 Europeans to 50 Indians is accepted for the Indian Police Service."

The remarks made in the reply to question (2) above apply with equal force to the Indian Police Service, the position in June 1924 being illustrated by the following statement :—

Appointments.	Europeans.	Indians.
Deputy Inspectors General	4	..
Superintendents of Police	23	13

The Governor in Council is prepared to accept a rate of recruitment of 50 Europeans to 50 Indians for the Indian Police Service as a whole, but would prefer a lower rate of Indian recruitment for the Punjab.

(5) " If so, whether the distribution of European recruitment in the Indian Police Service for the different provinces is considered reasonable."

The Punjab cadre of the Indian Police Service serves the North-West Frontier Province, Baluchistan and Delhi. The proportion of Europeans required for police appointments in these three administrations has, so far, been high and will possibly remain so. In order that the true rate of Indianisation may be preserved in the Punjab the Governor in Council would suggest that the posts in the North-West Frontier Province, Baluchistan and Delhi should be excluded from the calculation. For the Punjab alone he would accept a proportion of 3-5ths Europeans as suitable, and would deprecate a distribution of European recruits at any lower rate.

(6) " Whether a rate of recruitment of 25 Europeans to 75 Indians is accepted for the Indian Forest Service."

The Governor in Council considers that the rate of Indian recruitment proposed is dangerously high for the Punjab. The Punjab cadre of the Indian Forest Service serves not only the Punjab but the North-West Frontier Province and Baluchistan ; and much of the Forest work done immediately under the Punjab Government lies in Indian Hill States. The number of posts in the cadre is 39. Of these posts 10 are already held by Indians and I am to urge that for the Punjab the precentage of European recruitment should be higher than that now proposed. The Governor in Council would be prepared to accept a rate of one-third Europeans and two-thirds Indians.

(7) " Whether the proposed rates of recruitment for the Indian Service of Engineers are accepted."

The rate of Indian recruitment proposed for the Indian Service of Engineers (Irrigation Branch) the cadre of which in the Punjab is already largely Indianised appears to the Governor in Council to be unduly high, so far as the Punjab is concerned. The financial prosperity of the province depends largely upon the efficiency of this department and the fact that its officers in the Punjab discharge functions in regard to assessment which are closely akin to those of Revenue officers makes it advisable that a considerable European element should for the present at all events, be retained. The following statements illustrate the position of the Department as it stands at present.

(a) Number of Indians and Europeans actually serving in the cadre of the Indian Service of Engineers. (Irrigation Branch.)

	Chief Engineers.	Superintending Engineers.	Executive Engineers.	Assistant Executive Engineers.	Total.
Indians		3	16	28	47
Europeans	3	11	55	17	86

(b) Posts in the department as a whole actually held by Indians and Europeans respectively (including members of the Punjab Engineering Service; temporary Engineers and subordinates in charge of sub-divisions).

	Chief Engineers.	Superintending Engineers.	Divisional Officers.	Sub-Divisional Officers.	Total.
Indians		4	22	141	167
Europeans	3	14	49	38	104

The Governor in Council recommends that if the rate of recruitment proposed for the Service as a whole is accepted a half and half allotment of recruits may be made to this province.

GOVERNMENT OF BURMA.

Appointment Department.

Letter from Mr. F. Lewisohn, C.B.E., Chief Secretary to the Government of Burma, Home and Political Department, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department, No. 404-A.-24, dated Rangoon, the July 1924.

Subject :—Recommendation of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India for Indianization of the Services.

I am directed to convey the views of this Government on the seven points enumerated in paragraph 12 of your letter No. 178—10-24-Ests., dated the 21st June 1924.

(1) This Government agrees that the rate of recruitment to Services must be maintained at a reasonably close relation to the ultimate composition aimed at.

(2) & (3) This Government accepts the recommendation of the Commission that the ratio of recruitment for the Indian Civil Service in Burma should be 40 Europeans and 60 Burmans on the assumption (which would appear to be approximately correct) that this will produce a 50-50 cadre in about 15 years. This Government does not consider it necessary that any definite guarantee should be given that a 50-50 cadre will be achieved in that time, but recruitment should, if necessary, be varied so as to ensure that that result is approximately achieved. Past events point to the conclusion that any decision which may be arrived at now regarding the ratio of recruitment will be varied long before 15 years are past. This Government does not consider it necessary to restrict the proportion in Burma to half and half. Although higher education is not nearly so widespread in Burma as it is in India, the level of general intelligence and natural ability is high. In fact the Local Government would strongly urge that the same proportion should be adopted for Burma as it may eventually be decided to adopt for Bombay and the United Provinces.

(4) & (5) This Government accepts the proposed rate of recruitment of 50 Europeans to 50 Burmans for the Indian (Imperial) Police.

(6) This point does not arise in this Province as the Indian Forest Service will in future become a Provincial Service in Burma.

(7) The proportion of 40 Europeans to 60 Burmans for the Indian Service of Engineers is accepted.

APPOINTMENT DEPARTMENT.

LETTER FROM E. L. L. HAMMOND, ESQ., C.B.E., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, No. 1969-A.R., DATED RANCHI, THE 2ND AUGUST 1924.

SUBJECT :—Proposals of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India for the increased Indianization of the All-India Services.

I am directed to reply to your letter No. F.-178-10-24-Ests., dated the 21st June 1924, and to submit the views of the local Government on the proposals for the increased Indianization of the All-India Services contained in the report of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India.

2. In paragraph 2 (d) of my letter No. 1689-A.R., dated the 22nd July 1924, the local Government generally accepted these proposals as being an integral part of the compromise, but, as pointed out in Mr. Rainy's letter No. 173-A., dated the 6th January 1923, opinions differ on the merits of finality of any endeavour to fix racial recruitment on a basis of percentages. Any such attempt must be speculative, and can only be accepted as offering, for the present, reasonable rates of recruitment. In the future there must inevitably be changes and adjustments that cannot now be foreseen, and there is little certainty that the assumptions now made will in practice be fulfilled. Any discussion as to what precise rates should be prescribed must be theoretical and seems unreal.

3. Subject to these general remarks, I am to report the following views of the local Government on the specific points raised in paragraph 12 of your letter :—

(1) It is desirable that the rate of recruitment should bear a reasonably close relation to the ultimate composition of the service. An immediate disproportionate reduction in the rate of European recruitment, out of consideration of the fact that the present European element in the composition of a service is comparatively high, would almost certainly at some future date, when the ideal composition had been attained, preclude any increase in the European proportion of recruitment so as to maintain the desired composition, even if in the meantime it had not been altogether killed.

(2) His Excellency in Council is prepared to accept, as part of the general compromise, the proportions suggested for the Indian Civil Service, viz., 40 per cent. European, 40 per cent. Indian directly recruited and 20 per cent. to be obtained by promotion from the Provincial Service. He anticipates no difficulty in obtaining the necessary number of recruits by promotion. At present there is a limit of 16 per cent. to listed posts, and there would seem to be no difficulty in raising this gradually to 20 per cent., without prejudicing the vested interests of existing members of the service, if the plan be followed of restricting direct recruitment to 80 per cent. of the superior posts. It is observed, however, that the Government of India propose to address local Governments separately on the subject of promotion from the Provincial Service, and the point need not therefore be further examined at present.

His Excellency in Council does not consider it desirable to impose any condition or offer any guarantee that within 15 years or any other specified period, the composition of the Indian Civil Service shall include a moiety of Indians. Nor on the other hand does he consider it necessary to take any immediate steps or prescribe any restriction which will prevent the attainment of this result in a shorter period. He would apply the rates of recruitment recommended by the Commission and leave it to future administrators to decide what action may be necessary to modify the results flowing therefrom or to meet the situation that may be created by future and unforeseen developments. The Hon'ble Sir Fakhr-ud-din considers the guarantee should be given, and no restriction imposed.

(3) As regards the inter-provincial distribution of European recruitment, the local Government accept for Bihar and Orissa the standard proportion of 40 Europeans and 60 Indians.

(4) For the Indian Police, the Governor in Council accepts as reasonable the genéral proposition that recruitment should be half European and half Indian.

(5) His Excellency in Council accepts the proposal that the standard proportion of one-half should be applied to the Indian Police Service of Bihar and Orissa. The Hon'ble Minister in the Department of Education would prefer the rate of 40 Europeans to 60 Indians.

(6) As regards the Indian Forest Service, this province has already obtained its full complement of staff, and it is doubtful whether for some years to come any further recruitment will be necessary. The local Government, however, accept the general rates of recruitment now proposed, viz., 25 per cent. European and 75 per cent. Indian.

(7) As regards recruitment for the Indian Service of Engineers, the local Government accepts the rate of recruitment proposed by the Commission for the Irrigation branch, viz., 40 Europeans to 60 Indians. The Governor in Council does not see any insuperable difficulty in recruiting separately for the Irrigation branch in a 'mixed' province; at present the two branches have been separated in this province, although they still draw upon one common cadre.

In accepting the rate of recruitment proposed by the Commission, His Excellency in Council has not overlooked letter No. E.-73, dated the 8th July 1924, from the Government of India, Department of Industries and Labour. The very elaborate statistics and calculations contained in that letter show, what is comparatively obvious without so much arithmetic, that the new rate of recruitment will take some time to produce a service composition of the same proportion, and the Hon'ble Mr. Sinha would prefer that, in order to attain proportions of 40 European, 40 Indian direct recruited and 20 Indian promoted within a period of 10 or 15 years, the recruitment ratios of 21, 53 and 26 respectively should be at once adopted. This, however, goes beyond the recommendations of the Commission, and to these recommendations His Excellency in Council would adhere.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE CENTRAL PROVINCES, No. 2803—1276-III, DATED THE 23RD JULY 1924.

I am directed to reply to the Government of India letter No. F.-178-10-24-Ests., dated the 21st June 1924, asking for the views of the local Government on the proposals for Indianisation of the All-India Services contained in the Report of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India.

2. The local Government accepts the principle laid down by the Government of India that the rate of recruitment of a service should be maintained in a reasonably close relation to the ultimate composition aimed at.

3. The local Government accepts the rate of recruitment suggested by the Royal Commission for the Indian Civil Service of 40 Europeans to 60 Indians, and agrees that this standard proportion should be adopted for this province subject to a re-examination of the rate when the 50-50 cadre is reached. The local Government does not consider that the circumstances of this province require steps to be taken to ensure that equality in the cadre is not reached in a shorter period than 15 years.

4. The local Government accepts the rate of recruitment of 50 Europeans to 50 Indians for the Indian Police Service, and considers that this standard proportion is suitable to the conditions of this province.

5. In accepting the rate of recruitment of 25 Europeans to 75 Indians for the Indian Forest Service, the local Government assumes that the Government of India are satisfied regarding the practicability of obtaining Indian recruits with the necessary qualifications to the extent desired. In its recommendation regarding the Indian Forest Service to the Royal Commission, the local Government, while agreeing with the principle of complete Indianisation, expressed the opinion that this should proceed only at the rate at which suitable material became available. In view of the importance of the interests involved, the local Government desires to emphasize its objection to any lowering of the standard of efficiency merely for the sake of Indianisation.

6. The proposed rates of recruitment for the Indian Service of Engineers are accepted as suitable for this province. The Royal Commission do not consider how long it will take for these rates to produce a similar ratio in the total cadre, but in a note forwarded with letter No. E.-73, dated the 8th July 1924, from the Government of India, Department of Industries and Labour, Public Works Branch, the period is shown to be about 25 years. The local Government regards this as unnecessarily long and considers that the rate of recruitment should be adjusted as proposed in the aforesaid note so as to secure a service with a 40—40—20 constitution in a period of about 15 years.

GOVERNMENT OF ASSAM.

THE GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL.

APPOINTMENT AND POLITICAL DEPARTMENT.

APPOINTMENT BRANCH.

LETTER FROM A. W. BOTHAM, ESQ., C.I.E., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF ASSAM, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, No. APPTT. 1166—4250-A. P., DATED SHILLONG, THE 4TH AUGUST 1924.

I am directed to invite a reference to your letter No. 178—10—24-Ests., dated the 21st June 1924, on the subject of the proposals for Indianisation of the All-India Services contained in the Report of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India, and to communicate the views of the Government of Assam on the points enumerated in paragraph 12 of your letter:—

(1) The Government of Assam are prepared to accept the formula that the rate of recruitment for a service should be maintained in a reasonably close relation to the ultimate composition aimed at. There can be no doubt that Indian sentiment attaches importance to the ideal that a half and half composition should be reached within a definite period. The Hon'ble Ministers, for example, propose that in the case of the Indian Civil Service, this composition should be reached within ten years. Unless however there was a general exodus of European officers on proportionate pension, it would be impossible to attain this result in Assam, even if European recruitment were entirely suspended for the next ten years. As the Government of India have pointed out, it is extremely difficult to conjecture the period within which any specified rate of recruitment will produce the composition which it is ultimately desired to reach, and in the circumstances it does not seem possible at present to base recruitment on any other principle than that proposed by the Government of India. It is clear however that the results would be uncertain, and I am to suggest that the proportions now fixed should be regarded as provisional and subject to revision after five years in the light of the experience which will by then have been obtained.

(2) and (3) Subject to the foregoing remarks, the Governor in Council is prepared to accept the proposed distribution of Indian and European recruitment for the Indian Civil Service. As the Government of India have recognised, the special conditions of Assam make it undesirable to accelerate unduly the process of Indianisation. There are at present only four Indian officers, all under 9 years' service, in a total cadre of 47, and in present circumstances it would not be prudent to recruit Indians in a larger ratio than 50 per cent., even if the attainment of a half and half composition were thereby delayed beyond fifteen years.

(4) and (5) The Hon'ble Ministers consider that recruitment for the Indian Police Service in Assam should be so regulated that a half and half composition would be attained within 15 years. The Governor in Council is unable to accept this scheme as either practicable or desirable. It is from the Police Service that the largest number of retirements on proportionate pension have occurred in Assam, and in view of the special conditions of the province, surrounded as it is by hill districts inhabited by wild tribes in a primitive stage of civilisation and containing in the plains a large immigrant population from all parts of India on the tea gardens, any sudden or drastic reduction in the European element in the Police force would be fraught with grave risks. Subject, however, to the remarks on point (1) above, the Governor in Council is prepared to accept the distribution proposed by the Government of India of European recruitment for the Indian Police Service.

(6) The suggested rate of recruitment of 25 Europeans to 75 Indians for the Indian Forest Service is accepted.

(7) The Government of Assam agree that with regard to the Indian Service of Engineers, the existing ratios of recruitment should continue.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

ESTABLISHMENTS.

LETTER FROM THE HON'BLE MR. J. CRERAR, C.S.I., C.I.E., SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, TO ALL LOCAL GOVERNMENTS, No. 178-11/24/ESTS., DATED SIMLA, THE 21ST JUNE 1924.

With reference to my letter No. F.-172/24-Ests., dated the 18th June 1924, I am directed to address you regarding the proposals of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India about the pay of the All-India Services. These proposals are contained in Chapter VI of the Report. It will be observed that, apart from the Indian Police Service and the Indian Service of Engineers, for which certain recommendations are made which will be dealt with below, the Commission do not propose any increase in basic pay. But they propose for all Services alike an increase connected with overseas pay, which in the case of European officers in the time-scales rises to a maximum of Rs. 200 a month on a 1*s.* 4*d.* basis with effect from the 12th year of service. I am to ask in the first place whether this general scale of increase, apart from possible modifications in detail, is accepted by the Government of Madras, etc., as reasonable.

2. The Commission have failed to reach an agreement regarding the treatment of officers above the time-scales. The actual proposals of the Commission in this respect show some traces of confusion. The Commission were unanimous that officers in the selection grades in the various Services should receive the full benefit which has been recommended for officers in the time-scales. With regard to certain administrative posts which carry an incremental pay of Rs. 1,750—100—2,150, the Commission have recommended in the body of their Report that the pay instead of being fixed on an incremental basis should be fixed at Rs. 2,150 and should carry with it no remittance benefit. On the other hand, in Appendix IV where the English members set out their separate views regarding the treatment of officers above the time-scales, they have recommended that the equivalent of Rs. 200 a month on a 1*s.* 4*d.* basis should be granted to all officers, with the exception of Judges of the High Court, whose pay does not exceed Rs. 4,000 a month. In making this recommendation they had presumably forgotten the proposal to which they had already committed themselves in paragraph 55 of the Report regarding the officers on a pay of Rs. 1,750—100—2,150. Their actual proposal in that paragraph, while generous to junior officers of this rank (and indeed giving Indian Officers on promotion a rise of no less than Rs. 800 from the top of the time-scale) would have the effect of making the senior men in this grade the only officers who would not receive the full benefit of Rs. 200 a month; while those who are already on a pay of Rs. 2,150, would receive no relief at all. This can hardly have been the real intention of the English members, and their proposal should therefore be considered as one for the grant of uniform relief to all officers above the time-scales as far as the upper limit which they themselves have laid down.

3. The Indian members, on the other hand, definitely stand by the proposal made in paragraph 55 of the Report and decline to go beyond it—that is to say they propose that no administrative officers except those holding what they have described as the lower administrative posts such as Deputy Inspector Generals of Police, Superintending Engineers and Conservators of Forests should get any relief at all. The view of the Indian members is based on two grounds. In the first place they hold that the financial conditions of these officers do not call for relief. In the second place they are opposed to introducing any differentiation between the pay of Europeans and Indians in administrative posts.

4. With regard to the latter point it has to be considered what are the circumstances which are held to necessitate absolute equality of remuneration in administrative posts, when a differentiation amounting to Rs. 450 a month is accepted as reasonable in posts on the time-scales. It is true that it might be undesirable that superior officers should draw actually less pay than officers working under their orders, and any system of differentiation in the pay of administrative posts must not ignore this consideration. It has also been argued that uniform remuneration to Indians and Europeans should be granted in the administrative posts on the ground that such posts entail obligations which are independent of domicile. This argument however hardly seems to express the real point. Overseas pay is given because an overseas domicile involves special expenditure. It is obvious that such special expenditure does not cease when an officer attains administrative rank. In effect the discontinuance of overseas pay may be held to be only formal. The real fact appears to be that the pay and overseas pay of the administrative posts have been combined, and instead of Europeans being deprived of overseas pay Indians have received it. If that is so, the practical effect of the present arrangement is that Indians on attaining administrative rank are granted overseas pay. An example may make the case clearer. An Indian officer of the Indian Civil Service, not entitled to overseas pay draws at the top of the time-scale Rs. 2,250: his European contemporary draws Rs. 2,500. When the European officer is promoted to be a Commissioner, he receives an additional Rs. 500; when the Indian officer is promoted he receives an additional Rs. 750. If the proposals of the Commission are accepted, which create a difference of Rs. 450 at the top of the time-scale between the Indian and the European, and the pay of Indians and Europeans in administrative posts remains identical, this discrepancy on promotion will be still more marked. In the light of these considerations I am to ask how far the Government of Madras, etc., attach importance to the principle of equal remuneration in the administrative posts on which the Indian members have laid stress.

5. If no special importance is attached to this principle the question whether relief should be extended to officers in administrative posts is one that should apparently be decided on a consideration of the financial necessities of such officers. The Members of the Commission are all agreed as to the necessity of relief in the lower administrative posts in the Uncovenanted Services, though their actual proposal in paragraph 55 of the Report is open to obvious objection. It would be difficult indeed not to grant the same relief to officers holding these posts as is given to officers in the time-scales. If this were not done various anomalies would arise. For instance it is not clear how it could be held that a Deputy Inspector General of Police on Rs. 2,150 requires no relief, while an officer in the higher selection grade in the Educational Service on Rs. 2,000 or a Collector at the top of the time-scale on Rs. 2,500 would each receive an additional Rs. 200.

6. Above the lower selection posts in the Uncovenanted Services come what may be described as the higher selection posts chiefly Heads of Departments which include a great variety of rates of pay. Inspectors General of Police are for the most part on a pay of Rs. 2,500 rising to Rs. 3,000, though in three provinces they are paid on a lower scale. Chief Conservators of Forests receive a pay of Rs. 2,500 rising to Rs. 2,750; Chief Engineers Rs. 2,750 rising to Rs. 3,000; Directors of Public Instruction for the most part Rs. 2,250 rising to Rs. 2,750 or Rs. 2,500 rising to Rs. 3,000 though in three provinces the pay is on a lower scale. At whatever point the relief is discontinued, it would appear that this point must be determined by pay and not by posts, and in making proposals the effect of discontinuance on posts with an incremental basis and on the ladder of promotion should not be ignored.

7. If it is not proposed to discontinue relief below Rs. 3,000 the Rs. 3,000 stage will require special consideration. This is the maximum pay of Inspectors General of Police, Chief Engineers, some Directors of Public Instruction, and various officers in the Central Services. It is also the point at which the selection posts of the Indian Civil Service start. It is the pay of Commissioners and first grade District and Sessions Judges. If it were proposed to discontinue the relief at the Rs. 3,000 stage, the effect on the scales of pay of Inspectors General of Police, Chief Engineers, etc., would have to be considered. The difference between the pay of a Collector and the pay of a Commissioner which at present stands at Rs. 500, would also be disturbed. If this difference were reduced to Rs. 300 by leaving the Commissioners still on their existing pay, it is a matter for consideration whether the disadvantages anticipated by the Chairman of the Commission in his separate note in Appendix IV would arise.

8. Above Rs. 3,000 excluding a few isolated appointments, come Members of Board of Revenue, Financial Commissioners and Judicial Commissioners and certain Commissioners in Bombay, who all draw Rs. 3,500. Above these are Chief Secretaries in Madras, Bombay and Bengal, and one Member of the Board of Revenue in Madras and Bengal—all of whom draw Rs. 3,750. Above these are Secretaries to the Government of India and High Court Judges drawing Rs. 4,000. If it is decided to continue the full relief up to Rs. 3,000, it is a matter for consideration whether it should be carried higher and if so to what point, and whether in the highest paid appointments to which relief is extended the full relief should be given or some diminished rate. In this connection it may be borne in mind that before the revision of pay of 1919 the pay of these important posts rising to Rs. 4,000 was the same as it is now, while their incumbents were also entitled to exchange compensation allowance which added on a 1*s.* 4*d.* basis approximately Rs. 138 to their pay. If relief is not discontinued at some lower point there might be some advantage in giving to these officers Rs. 100 a month in the shape of overseas pay in addition to the passage concession which is equivalent to Rs. 50 a month and withdrawing exchange compensation allowance finally. The present arrangement under which exchange compensation allowance is drawn by some officers and not by others is admittedly unsatisfactory. It is also a matter for consideration whether it is possible in the event of the proposal of the English Members to carry relief up to the Rs. 4,000 stage being accepted, that High Court Judges drawing Rs. 4,000 should be omitted from the relief. The particular ground on which the English Members recommended the omission of High Court Judges drawing Rs 4,000 is not strictly accurate. The remuneration of High Court Judges is determined by the Secretary of State in Council under section 104 of the Government of India Act, and is not specifically laid down in the Act.

9. The question whether relief in the matter of pay should be confined to Europeans is one of some difficulty. On the one hand the case for relief is clearly based on the special needs and expenses of officers with European domicile. There is moreover a considerable body of Indian political opinion which holds that the existing pay of Indians in the Services, so far from being inadequate, is excessive. On the other hand Indian officers at present in the Services have urged very strongly their claim to equal treatment with the Europeans. Three main lines of argument have been adopted:—

(a) It has been argued that hitherto Indians and Europeans have received identical treatment and that Indians entered the Services with the belief that they would continue to receive identical treatment. The argument receives some support from the action taken when overseas pay was first introduced. Although overseas pay was granted in consideration of a non-Asiatic domicile, all Indians already in the Services at the date of the introduction of overseas pay have received it. It is suggested that this forms a precedent for the extension to Indians of any further relief now given to Europeans. But the circumstances are not parallel. In many cases the increases in total pay made in 1919 were so small that, had Indians not been granted overseas pay, they would have had no increase or even a decrease on their previous emoluments, whereas the cost of living of Indians had admittedly risen considerably. There was thus a very special reason, apart from any theoretical considerations of equality, for granting overseas pay to Indians already in the Services in 1919. Further it is not strictly accurate to say that Indians and Europeans have always received identical remuneration. Exchange compensation allowance was confined to officers of European domicile and up to 1919 European officers in more than one of the Services received by means of this allowance a larger number of rupees than their Indian contemporaries.

(b) It has been argued by many Indian Officers that in fact their expenses are as great as those of Europeans. The difficulty in this matter is that the standard of living of Indians in the Services varies greatly. There are those who live in Indian style; there are those who live in European style; and finally there are those with overseas commitments either through education of their children in England or through marriage with English wives. It is impossible to expect that any decision will fit all these varying conditions. It is certainly impossible to base pay on a European style of living. This would, for instance, lead to the grant of overseas pay to Anglo-Indians, a position which could not be accepted. The only firm basis in this difficult matter appears to be that of domicile. This was clearly laid down by the Secretary of State in his Despatch No. 187-Public, dated the 25th December 1919 in which he announced the institution of overseas pay. He said, "as the allowance is to be granted expressly as a measure of compensation for disadvantages to which officers serving outside their own country are subject, it appears to me essential that the grant of the allowance should ordinarily be strictly confined to officers of non-Indian domicile."

(c) Finally, it has been argued that those Indians who have been appointed by examination in London have undergone risks and incurred expenses, which justify their receiving a higher remuneration than Indians who have never left their country. In the case of the Indian Civil Service, the chief service in which Indians secure appointments in London, an advantage has hitherto been enjoyed by Indians appointed in England, because they draw overseas pay which is denied to those appointed in India. It should be considered whether the present overseas pay may be regarded as sufficient recompense for the expenses and risks of an English education.

10. A further consideration is that if the financial relief now recommended for European officers were extended to Indians, a very large differentiation in pay would be introduced between one Indian and another on grounds which it would not be easy to justify. It is not suggested that any Indian should receive an increase in pay except those who are now in receipt of overseas pay. But this privilege is based in many cases on no more reasonable ground than the chance date of appointment. There are many Indians who are in receipt of overseas pay who have never been out of India. It is difficult to see how a fortuitous advantage of this nature could be made the basis of a differentiation amounting to as much as Rs. 450.

11. On the other hand it may be argued that those Indian officers who have overseas commitments may reasonably receive special treatment. It is true that these commitments are voluntary and can therefore be distinguished from those of European officers. But the Commission have suggested in paragraph 54 of their Report that Indian members of the Services who are already entitled to overseas pay should be granted the full relief, if they can satisfy the High Commissioner that they have a wife or children in Europe. I am to ask for the views of the Government of Madras, etc., on this recommendation.

12. Apart from this special recommendation it will be noted that the Commission have made a proposal which is a compromise. They do not suggest that the remittance concession should be granted to Indian officers except those who have overseas commitments. But they propose that the overseas pay of Indians should be increased by the sum of Rs. 50 from about the age of 30. If the form of relief which the Commission propose is finally accepted, it may be necessary to accept this proposal which is an integral part of the scheme as it stands. But I am to enquire whether in the opinion of the Government of Madras, etc., there is any justification in theory for extending financial relief at the present time to Indian officers in the services.

13. The Commission have not proposed any reduction in the existing basic pay of Indians. It is pointed out in the paragraph 43 of the Report that there are many who hold that the basic pay is excessive. It is argued that Indianisation will entail some loss of efficiency and that the country should insist on the quid pro quo namely cheapness. It is recognised that the European Services have set a high standard of pay and it is felt that, as those Services cease to be predominantly European, the standard of pay should be brought down to a level which really suits Indian conditions.

14, The Government of India fully recognize the force of these arguments and the increasing importance for the future of the finances of India that an excessive standard of remuneration for Indians in the public services should not be stabilised. At the same time there are considerations which support the conclusions of the Commission. The introduction of overseas pay in 1919 effected a considerable economy in the payment of Indians. This economy has been disguised by the fact that the existing Indian members of the Services received overseas pay. But its effect will be felt increasingly every year. It must be remembered that any reduction in basic pay now carried out will in the same way make its effect felt only gradually, as it obviously cannot be applied to Indians already in the Services. The present basic pay is somewhere in the neighbourhood of the pre-war pay of the Services. The increase of pay now proposed would be confined practically to Europeans. This means in effect a further economy on the pay of Indians as compared with Europeans. The economy in fact is represented roughly by the whole increase that the rise in prices since the War has entailed. This is by no means a negligible saving. If the proposals of the Commission are accepted, Indian officers of the future in the Superior Services from the 12th year of service onwards will be receiving Rs. 450 a month, or with the passage concession Rs. 500 a month, less than their European contemporaries.

15. There is a further consideration of some importance in this connection. In the case of the Services in the transferred departments the remuneration of future entrants will be at the discretion of the transferred side of the Government. Provinces will therefore be able to experiment with lower pay in these Services, if there should be a political demand for this. It might be argued that it would be an advantage, pending the result of the experience thus gained, if the basic pay of the Services in the reserved field remained unaltered.

16. The Commission have proposed that the main relief in the matter of pay should be provided by means of a remittance privilege. Every European officer in receipt of overseas pay is to be allowed to remit the whole of his overseas pay at the rate of 2 shillings to the rupee. This scheme maintains a nominal equality between the overseas pay of Indians and of Europeans. But it entails certain obvious disadvantages :—

(a) In order to give the Europeans the relief proposed, it is necessary to increase the overseas pay of Indians by Rs. 50. If it is held that this is not really justified on practical grounds, an expenditure of approximately 2 lakhs a year would be incurred without any real necessity.

(b) The scheme rests on the conversion of rupees at the rate of 2 shillings. This may be attacked as an extravagant rate, thus diverting attention from the real point to be considered, which is whether the actual relief given to the Services is a reasonable amount. Further it would create what might prove to be an embarrassing precedent by granting a right to convert money at 2 shillings to the rupee.

(c) The scheme nominally bases the relief required by officers on the necessity of actually remitting money to England. But the young married officer with his wife and family in India does not require to make any remittances to England and may yet be in urgent need of assistance. These officers will require their overseas pay in rupees in India, and having been given the privilege of remitting their rupees to England at a favourable rate will then be forced to bring the money out again to India—re-converting it into rupees. This process is clumsy and open to misconception.

17. If the remittance scheme proposed by the Commission is not accepted, there remain the alternatives of giving the relief by a simple addition to the rupee overseas pay or of making an addition to overseas pay and stating the whole or part of the overseas pay in sterling. If overseas pay were stated in sterling, it would be disbursed in London. If an officer required the money for expenditure in India, he would have to make his own arrangements for remitting it to India. Indians would however have their overseas pay expressed and paid in rupees in India.

18. The following considerations might be advanced in favour of this scheme :—

(a) It is natural that overseas pay should be stated in overseas currency. This has the advantage of emphasising the special nature of this overseas pay.

(b) The rupee pay of all officers, both Indian and European, would be the same. This might be held to have certain advantages but this condition would not arise, unless the whole of overseas pay were stated in sterling.

(c) The payment of the money in England is likely on an average to be at least as convenient to European officers as payment in India. Whether the money is paid in England or in India, there will be a considerable number of officers who wish to expend it in the other country. At the present time large numbers of officers have to make remittances to England every month. Under the scheme suggested, a number of officers would no doubt have to bring their overseas pay from England to India. Those, on the other hand, who are at present remitting from India to England would be saved the trouble.

(d) The reduction in the number of rupees drawn in India is likely on the whole to promote economy and saving.

(e) The effect of stating overseas pay in sterling is to make the rupee value vary with the fluctuations of the rupee. This may prove acceptable to the services, as it gives them a kind of insurance against the consequences of a fall in the value of the rupee, though at the same time they would draw fewer rupees if the value of the rupee rises.

19. Enquiries have been made from the Secretary of State whether overseas pay disbursed in sterling in London would be liable to British income-tax. He has replied that so long as an officer is not chargeable to British income-tax as a person residing in the United Kingdom, no liability to British income-tax would arise in respect of disbursements of overseas pay in London. There appears, therefore, to be no objection to the proposal on this ground.

20. If both the remittance privilege of the Commission and the scheme for stating overseas pay in whole or part in sterling are rejected, the final alternative is to make an addition to the overseas pay in rupees. This alternative has the merit of simplicity, though certain attractive features in the other schemes are missing. If this alternative were adopted officers of over 12 years' service would receive Rs. 450 a month overseas pay instead of the present Rs. 250, and all idea of exchange compensation and of making payments vary with the rate of exchange would be dropped,

21. It will be noted that the proposals of the Commission give an uneven amount of increase in the first 12 years of service. This arises from the fact that the Commission has employed alternately two different principles, that of length of service and that of age. The existing overseas pay is based on the principle of age. Excluding the Police who are treated somewhat differently, all officers on first joining get Rs. 150 overseas pay. This is raised to Rs. 200 at approximately age 30 and to Rs. 250 at approximately age 33. The Commission have proposed that some of their concessions should be given after a particular number of years' service and others should be given when an officer reaches a particular rate of overseas pay, the latter being determined by age.

22. The proposals of the Commission work out as follows, excluding the Police :—

(a) The benefit for all Services starts at the 5th year of service irrespective of age. The benefit is Rs. 75.

(b) This is increased to Rs. 175 at the age of 30.

(c) The benefit decreases to Rs. 125 between age 33 and the 12th year of service.

(d) It increases to Rs. 200 at the 12th year of service.

23. This combination of two different principles leads to some confusion. If a decision is to be made between the two, it would seem desirable that the relief should be given on the basis of age and not of length of service. This would be consistent with the decision which the Secretary of State made in 1921 that overseas pay should be fixed on the basis of age and not of length of service. This conclusion could be justified on the ground that the relief to be given is required mainly by married men, and men in all Services tend to marry about the same age.

25. If the form of relief recommended by the Commission is accepted, it may be advisable to accept their proposals as they stand in spite of the anomalies. If, however, it is decided to state overseas pay in sterling or to make a rupee addition to overseas pay, it might be considered whether the scale of increase should not be amended so as to produce a more uniform rise which will yield approximately the same result. A possible scale of this nature would be—

	Existing O. P.	Addition with rupee at 1*s.* 4*d.*
Age 27	150	+ 75 = 225 Total O. P.
Age 30	200	+125 = 325 Total O. P.
Age 33	250	+200 = 450 Total O. P.

25. The Commission have proposed to improve the basic pay of the Police, which, in spite of the recent revision is still on the footing of length of service appreciably lower than the other Uncovenanted Services. I am to ask whether the Government of Madras, etc., accept the new rates of basic pay proposed by the Commission.

26. With regard to overseas pay, if some such scale as is suggested in paragraph 24 were adopted, it would seem necessary to grant rather more favourable terms to the Police than a strict application of the age rule would yield. The Police at present receive Rs. 200 overseas pay at age 28 instead of age 30 and Rs. 250 at age 31 instead of age 33. This concession would naturally be reproduced. In that case the scale of overseas pay for the Police would be—

	Rs.
1st to 3rd year, age 20—22	100
4th and 5th year, age 23 and 24	150
6th to 8th year, age 25—27	225
9th to 11th year, age 28—30	325
12th year onwards, age 31	450

27. The Commission have proposed that the basic pay of the Indian Service of Engineers should be raised by Rs. 75 a month so as to absorb the present technical pay. It is probable that this increase of basic pay in the Indian Service of Engineers is not called for on the merits of the case. It is recommended only because the introduction of technical pay has created an invidious distinction which appears to cause serious dissatisfaction, and it is not clear in what way this undesirable anomaly can be removed except by absorbing technical pay in basic pay. I am to enquire whether the Government of Madras, etc., accept the proposal of the Commission.

28. The Commission have also recommended that for the future the judicial pay of Rs. 150 in the Indian Civil Service should be abolished. If this recommendation is accepted, it will be necessary to consider carefully which officers should be entitled in future to draw this pay. The Commission recommend that no officer appointed to the judicial branch after the date of their Report should receive judicial pay. The principle is unexceptionable. But the difficulty arises in deciding what may be regarded as appointment to the judicial branch. Most officers officiate as judge for several years before they are comfirmed. It would seem to be inequitable that officers who have already definitely elected for the judicial branch but who have not yet been appointed permanently should not be entitled to judicial pay. Some rule therefore may have to be devised which will ensure in practice that no officer who has already substantially elected for the judicial branch, should be deprived of judicial pay. I am to enquire whether the Government of Madras, etc., can suggest any rule which would yield equitable results.

29. In paragraph 56 of their Report the Commission point out that the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service is paid on a lower scale than the other All-India Services. The Commission think that this Service has a claim to some improvement in its emoluments but not necessarily to the same extent as the concessions recommended for the All-India Services generally. In considering the case of the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service it must be remembered that they already receive four second class return passages during their service and consequently the new passage concessions would be of comparatively little advantage to them. Their present overseas pay is Rs. 50 a month throughout their service. I am for purposes of discussion to suggest the following tentative scale—

Years of service.	Existing. O. P.	Addition.	Total O. P.
1 to 5	50	0	= 50
6 to 8	50	50	=100
9 to 11	50	100	=150
12 onwards	50	150	=200

30. To sum up I am directed to ask the opinion of the Government of Madras, etc. on the following points :—

(1) whether the general scale of increase proposed is accepted ;

(2) whether relief should be given to officers above the time-scales ; if so, up to what point this relief should be carried, what should be the amount, and whether it should be accompanied by a withdrawal of exchange compensation allowance from those officers at present entitled to it ;

(3) whether on general grounds there is any case for giving relief to Indian officers already in the services ; if so, to what classes and to what extent ;

(4) whether the basic pay of future Indian recruits in the All-India Services should be reduced ;

(5) whether the relief should be given (a) in the form recommended by the Commission, i.e a small addition to overseas pay combined with the privilege of remitting the whole overseas pay at 2/- to the rupee, or (b) by making an addition to overseas pay and stating the whole or part of overseas pay in sterling to be disbursed in London ; or (3) by making an addition to overseas pay in rupees to be paid in India ;

(6) in the event of the adoption of 5 (b) or 5 (c), whether the scale suggested in paragraphs 24 and 26 of this letter for the earlier years of service would be suitable ;

(7) whether the basic pay of the Police should be raised as proposed by the Commission ;

(8) whether the basic pay of the Indian Service of Engineers should be raised by Rs. 75, so as to absorb the present technical pay ;

(9) whether judicial pay should be abolished for future entrants ; if so, what would be an equitable rule for determining which officers should continue to draw judicial pay ;

(10) what would be a suitable scale of relief for the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service.

31. The Government of India desire it to be understood that their purpose in setting out some of the arguments for and against particular proposals made by the Commission or possible alternatives is merely to help in elucidating the questions for decision. Nothing in this letter should be taken as an expression of the views provisional or otherwise, held by the Government of India.

32. In view of the great importance of arriving at an early decision on the points discussed. I am to request that the reply of the Government of Madras, etc., may reach the Government of India not later than the 4th August 1924.

Copy of a letter No. F.-178/11-24-Ests., dated the 4th July 1924, from the Officer on Special duty with the Government of India in the Home Department, to all local Governments.

I am directed to invite a reference to paragraphs 13, 14, 15 and 30(4) of my letter No. 178/11-24-Ests., dated the 21st June 1924 regarding the basic pay of future Indian recruits to the all-India Services. Some of the arguments for and against a reduction were there stated and the opinion of the Government of Madras, etc., was asked as to whether the basic pay should be reduced. In this connection I am to point out that a suggestion which has been commonly put forward is that the basic pay should be two-thirds of the pay which may be sanctioned for European officers who would receive another third for overseas pay. I am to request that if the opinion of the Government of Madras, etc., is in favour of a reduction of the basic pay for future entrants, it may be stated whether this scale of two-thirds should be adopted with or without modifications for any or all of the four services* : or, if any other scale is recommended, sufficient details may be given to make it clear exactly what scales of basic pay are considered appropriate for each of these Services. It should also be considered generally whether a reduction in the rates of basic pay in the all-India services would involve a reduction in the pay of the Provincial services, and whether this would be an advantage.

GOVERNMENT OF MADRAS.

PUBLIC DEPARTMENT.

LETTER FROM N. E. MARJORIBANKS, ESQ., C.S.I., C.I.E., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF MADRAS, PUBLIC DEPARTMENT, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, NO. 559, DATED FORT ST. GEORGE, THE 5TH AUGUST 1924.

In continuation of paragraph 5 of my letter No. 472/O.-1, dated 23rd July 1924, I am directed to communicate the views of His Excellency the Governor in Council on the points raised in your letter No. 178/11-24-Ests., dated 21st June 1924, on the subject of the pay of the All-India Services.

2. As intimated in my letter, dated 23rd July 1924, His Excellency the Governor in Council accepts the general scale of increase proposed. Reasons were also given there in support of his concurrence with the views of the English members of the Commission regarding the need for relief to officers above the time-scale. It is true as pointed out in your letter under reply that these proposals read with the recommendations in paragraph 55 of the report confer a double and very considerable benefit on junior officers in lower administrative posts on the scale of Rs. 1,750—100—2,150. It is difficult to see why a recommendation so unequal in its operation as that in paragraph 55 of the report should have been made especially as the pay of officers of this rank has been raised appreciably in recent years. His Excellency the Governor in Council would have preferred to have given these officers only the remittance concession recommended by the English Commissioners, but having regard to the remarks of the Commission in paragraph 103 of its report, he is prepared to accept the recommendation in paragraph 55 as well.

In regard to officers in the higher administrative posts, particularly in the Indian Civil Service, I am to point out in support of the view taken in paragraph 5 of my letter of the 23rd July that not only has their substantive pay not been increased, but, owing to the abolition of exchange compensation allowance during a brief period of high exchange, their salary is now actually less than that of their predecessors a few years ago.

In all cases where exchange compensation is still admissible, it should in the opinion of His Excellency the Governor in Council be withdrawn on the grant of the remittance concession recommended.

3. His Excellency the Governor in Council has carefully weighed the considerations set out in paragraphs 9 to 12 of the letter under reply and he is of opinion that the proposals of the Commission should be accepted, namely, that Indian members of the services who are already entitled to overseas pay should be granted the full relief if they can satisfy the High Commissioner that they have wives or children in Europe and that the overseas pay of Indians should be increased by the sum of Rs. 50 from about the age of 30.

4. On the further question mentioned in paragraphs 14 and 15 of your letter, His Excellency the Governor in Council does not consider that any change in the basic pay of future Indian recruits in the All-India Services is now either justifiable or expedient and agrees in the argument advanced in paragraph 5 of your letter.

5. As regards the form in which the remittance benefit should be given (paragraphs 13 to 20 of the letter under reply), His Excellency the Governor in Council does not perceive much difference between the form recommended by the Commission and the proposal to make an addition to overseas pay and state the whole or part of the overseas pay in sterling, but considers the form proposed by the Commission preferable, firstly, because the benefit is proposed in cases where no overseas pay is payable as such, and secondly, because the Commission's form will make it easier to differentiate between those who are entitled to it and those who are not; for example, an Indian officer who may at one time be able to satisfy the High Commissioner that he has commitments in England may not always be able to do so. As regards the third alternative of simply making an addition to overseas pay in rupees, the main objection appears to His Excellency the Governor in Council to be that the benefit rises as the exchange value of the rupee rises and decreases as exchange falls, which is contrary to the intention of the benefit.

6. His Excellency the Governor in Council agrees that the Commission has established a case for improvement of the basic pay of the Police and accepts their proposals in this respect.

7. On the other hand the arguments adduced in favour of raising the basic pay of the Indian Service of Engineers so as to absorb the present technical pay do not appear to be adequate, but as His Excellency the Governor in Council is anxious not to dissent from the recommendations of the Commission, save where he feels compelled to do so, he is prepared to accept their recommendations in this matter also.

8. For the same reason His Excellency the Governor in Council is prepared to accept the Commission's proposal that judicial pay should be abolished, but is constrained to point out that there are special objections to the proposal in this Presidency. As there are no Commissioners of divisions, Collectors are paid on a somewhat higher time-scale than elsewhere so that even with judicial pay, the judicial branch of the Indian Civil Service in Madras is at a disadvantage and comparatively few of the junior officers have selected this branch. If judicial pay is abolished, the judicial branch will be still more unpopular. It is possible however that the proposals made in reply to your letter No. F.-178/10-24, dated 21st June 1924, for an increased rate of Indianization in this branch will meet this difficulty.

Regarding the application of this recommendation to abolish judicial pay, His Excellency the Governor in Council agrees in the suggestion made in paragraph 28 of your letter that no officer who has already substantially elected for the judicial branch should be deprived of judicial pay. In this Presidency, the practice is to call on all officers of 8 years' service to state their preference whether for the judicial or executive branch. At present there are only five officers of the Indian Civil Service who have declared their preference for the judicial branch and who have not yet actually officiated as District and Sessions Judges. His Excellency the Governor in Council considers they may be admitted to judicial pay as also one officer whom it has been decided to appoint as District and sessions Judge but who has not yet returned from leave to take up such an appointment.

9. In regard to the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service His Excellency the Governor in Council considers the proposals in paragraph 29 of the letter under reply fair and reasonable.

10. The Hon'ble the Ministers adhere to the opinions expressed in their memorandum forwarded with my letter No. 472/O.-1, dated 23rd July 1924. Paragraph 8 of that letter regarding the views of the Hon'ble Sir Muhammad Habib-ul-lah also applies to this letter.

Extract from a telegram from the Government of Bombay, dated the 5th August 1924.

* * * * * * * * * *

Decisions have been arrived at in regard to pay and passages, subject always to reservation minority already communicated, viz., that minority would make no concession to services unless control of All-India Services is transferred from the Secretary of State to some authority in India.

Your letter No. F.-178/11/24.

Question 1.—Government accept scale, though doubtful whether adequate.

Question 2.—Government agree with English Commissioners and consider that all officers above the time-scale drawing Rs. 4,000 or less should get Rs. 400 remittance benefit. High Court Judges should surrender exchange compensation allowance. Reference proposal in paragraph 55 of Report for pay of certain administrative posts this Government considers that present incremental scale should be retained and remittance concession allowed rather than that pay be raised to Rs. 2,150 without concession. Minority however fix pay at Rs. 2,150 without concession.

Question 3.—Though otherwise scarcely defensible, proposal accepted as a political compromise.

Question 4.—Yes.

Question 5.—Government indifferent which method is adopted, but extent of concession should be limited to commission's proposals, should overseas pay increase when basic pay is lowered.

Question 6.—Scale suitable.

Question 7.—Accepted.

Question 8.—Accepted, but this Government considers that in regard to future Indian entrants basic pay should be lowered.

Question 9.—Yes; but all Assistant Collectors shown on the Civil List of April 1924 as having done duty in judicial branch, and being on promotion list for district judgeships, should retain their present rights to it.

Question 10.—Scale proposed in your paragraph 29 suitable.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY, NO. 3369, DATED THE 25TH AUGUST 1924.

I am directed to reply as follows to your letter No. F.-178/11/24, dated 4th July 1924, in which you raise the question whether the basic pay of future Indian recruits to the All-India Services should be reduced and if so to what extent. You have referred to a specific suggestion— which has commonly been made, namely that the basic pay of these Services should be fixed at 2-3rds of the pay which may be sanctioned for European officers, who would receive another third for overseas pay.

2. The question of basic pay has received very careful consideration and as already stated in my telegram of 5th August 1924 the Governor in Council is of opinion that it should be reduced for future Indian recruits to the three services affected in this Presidency— viz., the I. C. S., the Indian Police and the Irrigation Branch of the Indian Service of Engineers. I am further to state that as regards the extent of reduction the Governor in Council considers that the specific proposal to fix basic pay at two-thirds of the pay which may be sanctioned for European officers may be accepted as a fair guiding principle upon which to proceed, but is not prepared to accept it as a hard and fast rule to be applied to each of the Service; from top to bottom without consideration of its suitability in the case of particular appointments. It is probable that in certain cases, as for instance those of appointments above the time-scale, the rigour of the rule will require to be considerably modified.

3. I am therefore to state that while the two-thirds suggestion may in the opinion of the Governor in Council be accepted as a general guide he is not prepared to accept it without modification or to make definite proposals as regards the scales of basic pay in the All-India Services without further consideration.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL, NO. 9425-A., DATED THE 11TH AUGUST 1924.

I am directed to refer to your letters Nos. 178/11/24-Ests., and F.-178/11/24-Ests., dated the 21st June 1924, and 4th July 1924, regarding the proposals of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India about the pay of the All-India Services. In paragraph 30 of your letter, the opinion of this Government has been asked on 10 points, and I am to reply as follows:—

(1) The Governor in Council accepts the proposal for the increase in overseas pay for officers in the time-scale to the extent suggested by the Commission.

(2) The Governor in Council does not attach any more importance to the principle of equal remuneration in administrative posts than to that in the ordinary posts on the time-scale. Overseas pay is intended primarily to meet the special circumstances of overseas expenditure, and as has been pointed out, equal remuneration in administrative posts practically means that the Indian officer draws overseas pay. The Governor in Council has already replied in letter No. 8258-A., dated the 9th July 1924 that this Government concur in the views expressed by the English members of the Commission in Appendix 4, in favour of allowing relief to officers above the time-scale. In his opinion, relief should be granted to officers drawing Rs. 4,000 or less, and he sees no reason why it should be granted at a reduced rate to officers in the higher posts whose overseas demands are not likely to be less than those officers on lower pay. If the remittance privilege is given on a scale equivalent to a benefit of Rs. 200 a month with the rupee at one shilling and four pence, it is only reasonable that exchange compensation allowance should be finally abolished.

(3) and (4) These points are still under the consideration of this Government, and a reply will be submitted shortly.

(5) Provided that the overseas pay is calculated at two shillings and that there is no liability to British income-tax, the Governor in Council considers that alternative (b) would be the most satisfactory form of relief. He would express overseas pay in the form of a sterling figure payable in London for European officers.

(6) The rates suggested in paragraphs 24 and 26 of your letter are suitable, but the proposals will require modification if one-third overseas pay is adopted. An alteration having the same final financial effect would be acceptable.

(7) If the two-third proportion is ultimately adopted as the basic pay for Indians, the initial pay of an Indian police officer would be only Rs. 300. The dearth of suitable recruits for the Indian police service, whilst the best type of recruits come forward in large numbers for the Bengal Civil Service (Executive) with inferior financial prospect is probably due to dislike of the hardships of the service and to the vilification to which it is subjected in the press. A small alteration in the initial pay in either direction is in the opinion of the Governor in Council unlikely to make the slightest difference.

(8) The Governor in Council agrees that the basic pay of the Indian Service of Engineers should be raised by Rs. 75 so as to absorb the present technical pay.

(9) The Governor in Council accepts the principle that judicial pay should be abolished for future entrants. There appear to be difficulties regarding the method in which effect should be given to the proposal owing to the different systems in force in different provinces. In Bengal there is no officer who had less than 7 years' service at the date of the Report of the Royal Commission, who had up to that time officiated either as Registrar of the High Court or as a District and Sessions Judge, and there was only one officer with less than 8 years' service who had done so. This officer has been officiating since April 1923, except for a period of leave due to illness. He will almost certainly continue to officiate, as there are at present an excessive number of Provincial Service officers officiating, who should revert before him, and he will be likely to be appointed permanently to the judicial side in due course. It would operate hardly if he were now deprived of the judicial allowance. The Governor in Council would therefore suggest that, as far as Bengal is concerned, officers of more than 7 years' service at the time of the signature of the Report should be paid judicial allowance in conditions under which they should have been entitled to it at the date of the Report.

(10) The Governor in Council considers that the rate of overseas pay proposed in paragraph 29 of your letter for the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service is suitable. He understands that it is intended to bring these officers into line with the members of other services by extending the new passage concession to them.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED PROVINCES, No. 1037-Z., DATED THE 28TH JULY 1924.

I am directed to reply, on behalf of the Governor in Council, to the Home Department letter No. 178/11/24-Ests., dated June 21, 1924. As in previous replies the paragraphs below will correspond with the headings given in the summary in para. 30 of that letter. The reply is subject to the note of the Hon. Home Member forwarded as an annexure to this Government's letter No. 3328, dated July 8, 1924. A copy of the note* is attached for reference.

(1) " Whether the general scale of increase proposed is accepted."

This general scale of increase, apart from possible modifications in detail, is accepted. In replying to letter No F.-172/24/Ests., dated June 18, 1924, which deals with the main outlines of the Commission's report, the Governor in Council indicated his agreement with the Secretary of State in attaching great importance to the point emphasised in para. 108 of the report regarding the inter-dependence of the recommendations. He urged that the main proposals were vitally inter-dependent and that violence would be done to the whole structure of the recommendations if substantial alterations were made. From this point of view H. E. in Council is prepared to accept the general scale of increases proposed as reasonable. The Commission have summarised in paragraphs 43—51 of their report the reasons which convinced them that an improvement in emoluments is absolutely necessary. They admit the existence of strong evidence to show that a considerable proportion of married officers now serving are either falling into debt or only avoid doing so by economies which may be detrimental to their contentment and efficiency. They obtained independent confirmation of this view from banks and financial houses and were satisfied that this state of things is in no sense due to extravagance and is one which calls for early alleviation. They note that the scales in force for the All-India Services up to 1919 were considered by the Islington Commission to be inadequate in 1914, and they concede that the present rates of pay are far below " the level which proved attractive 20 years ago ". After comparison with the remuneration paid by commercial houses, the Commission felt and said that the disparity was so conspicuous that something should be done without delay to restore contentment. With the urgent need of economy in Indian administration prominently before them, the improvements proposed are described as absolutely necessary. It is obivous therefore that additions to the overseas pay drawn under the time-scales varying from nothing to Rs. 200 per mensem are the lowest increases which could possibly be suggested to meet an admitted rise of 60 per cent in prices in India and of 50 per cent in the cost of education in England (para. 47). In all the circumstances of the time the Governor in Council, whatever his own opinion may be, does not propose to argue that the suggested increases are inadequate. He feels that they will contribute little towards stimulating European recruitment, but he recognises the difficulty of the problem and he admits that the Commission's conclusions represent a fair compromise between conflicting interests. He hopes that the compromise will be similarly respected by critics who are disposed to complain of the high cost of the European personnel. He desires, however, again to emphasise the inter-dependence of the Commission's recommendations. The proposals regarding overseas pay are linked with those relating to passages, medical attendance and house-rent as well as with improved pensions in the uncovenanted services and the Governor in Council accepts the former only on the assumption that the recommendations of the Commission are adopted in their entirety :

In this connection I am to observe that in one respect the Indian Educational Service and the Indian Agricultural Service may require special treatment. If the future recruitment for these services is so conducted as to reduce the numerical strength of the existing cadres, the number of selection posts will be automatically reduced. This will affect the prospects of existing members in regard to both pay and pension. In this province, the six junior selection grade posts and the two senior selection grade posts in the I. E. S. and the two selection posts in the Indian Agricultural Service should be retained for so long as there are officers, at present serving, qualified by merit to hold them. Otherwise the Commission's recommendations for improving emoluments would be largely nullified. If there is any disposition to reject this proposal, the matter might well be raised in a separate reference, when this Government's views could be stated in greater detail and supported by tables which would be inappropriate in the reply to the present reference.

In the P. W. D., B. and R. branch the abolition of certain posts of Superintending Engineer and Executive Engineer, actually now proposed in the United Provinces, stands on a different footing and may be treated as a separate question, involving as it does the problem of existing and accruing rights. Sanction will have to be obtained to the proposed abolition, and the matter can well be taken up when sanction is applied for.

(2) "Whether relief should be given to officers above the time scales; if so, up to what point this relief should be carried, what should be the amount, and whether it should be accompanied by a withdrawal of exchange compensation allowance from those officers at present entitled to it".

In reply to the Home Department letter no. F. 172-24-Ests., dated June 18, 1924, the Governor in Council stated that he strongly supported the views expressed by the English Commissioners in Appendix IV. In making this statement he had not overlooked the recommendation in para. 55 regarding the officers on a pay of Rs. 1,750—100—2,150, but he considered the proposal of the English Commissioners to be one for the grant of uniform relief to all officers above the time scale as far as the upper limit laid down by them; and it was as such that he supported it.

The arguments of the Indian members on this subject seem to the Governor in Council either inaccurate or merely academic. It is certainly not the case that the financial conditions of the officers concerned do not call for relief. The pay of Europeans and Indians in the administrative posts is already differentiated in favour of the latter by the fact that they serve in their own country. The differentiation is expressed on a cash basis in the time scales. If it is right there, it is equally right above the time scales and for the same reason. The Government of India expressly disavow (para. 31) any intention of expressing their own views in the arguments adduced in para. 4 of their letter. None the less those arguments seem to this Government conclusive. The Governor in Council attaches no greater importance to the principle of equal remuneration, on which the Indian members have laid stress, in the case of administrative posts than in that of other posts. He is impressed by the known difficulties of officers above the time scale. Not only are incumbents of these posts in manifest difficulty at the present time; but they have for years served on pay which at every stage has been shown conclusively by the Commission itself to be well below the old standard of contentment; in the I.C.S. and the Police promotion has in these provinces been blocked for a generation whereas time scales were only introduced after the war; whilst it is a significant fact that officers now holding posts outside the time-scale receive emoluments which, thanks to the disappearance of exchange compensation allowance, were actually reduced by the revision of 1919. A further, if relative, reduction is out of the question. It is well to remember that officers will submit to hardship in the early and intermediate periods of their service if they can look forward to reasonable comfort later on. The existence of higher posts stimulates many officers who will themselves never reach them. Under the conditions imposed by the Indian Commissioners in Appendix IV, it will make little material difference to an I. C. S. officer whether he is a commissioner or a collector, and to the I. P. S. officer whether he is a superintendent or a deputy inspector general. The remarks of the Chairman in his note to Appendix IV are based on sound common sense. The Governor in Council has no hesitation in recommending that the remittance benefits be conceded to all officers above the time scale whose salaries do not exceed Rs. 4,000 per mensem. He is satisfied from personal observation that all these officers are involved in the general financial stress. Their pay has suffered a progressive reduction in purchasing power during the last ten years. The relief proposed is modest in the extreme, and it would be a grave mistake to attenuate it by applying a diminished rate. H. E. in Council would include even High Court Judges in this moderate concession.

The Governor in Council would not withdraw exchange compensation allowance from any officer who at present receives it. Too many past revisions purporting to improve pay and prospects have given with one hand and taken away with the other. A conspicuous instance of this was the withdrawal of exchange compensation allowances on the introduction of the time-scales in 1919. The impression produced on men affected by measures of this kind is always disproportionately bad. The improvements in emoluments proposed by the Lee Commission are not such as to justify any action of the kind suggested, and the Governor in Council strongly deprecates it. Apart from general considerations it can be shown that the abolition of E. C. A. would result in actual loss to certain officers, even if all the unanimous recommendations of the Commission are accepted. If there is any disposition to abolish this allowance, the Governor in Council would ask for a further opportunity of developing his views in detail.

(3) "Whether on general grounds there is any case for giving relief to Indian officers already in the services; if so, to what classes and to what extent?"

The Governor in Council can find no valid grounds for extending financial relief to Indians. In his opinion there was no real justification for the grant in 1919 to Indians already in the services of overseas pay. It is too little recognised that overseas pay is, as its designation indicates with sufficient precision, intended to compensate for exile, for strenuous work in a bad climate, for the disruption of family life and for the loss of all that makes life in Europe attractive. The compensation is assessed at a figure which in all the circumstances can only be classed as extremely moderate. On the merit the Governor in Council would indeed be prepared to go further. He believes (and he pressed this view upon the Commission) that if all but business considerations were excluded, there is an overwhelming case for the reduction of the basic pay for Indians. For reasons noted below he now accepts on this point the recommendation of the Commission. If Indian opinion on the subject is not strong enough to make itself felt effectively, the country must continue to pay the sanctioned rates of basic pay, which are well above those for which the material available could be obtained. Similarly it seems impossible to defend on economic grounds any further concessions to Indian officers. Nevertheless, whilst this is the view which the Governor in Council takes on the merits, he considers that if the other recommendations of the Commission are accepted, it would be inexpedient to refuse to Indian officers who now draw overseas pay, the extra concessions recommended in paragraph 54 of the report. To do so would lend colour to the charge, which is being freely made in certain quarters, that the Government are concerned only with the interests of their European employés. The proposals of the Commission in paragraph 54 regarding Indian officers must be treated as an integral part of their scheme, and accepted as such.

(4) " Whether the basic pay of future Indian recruits in the All-India Services should be reduced."

On this point it is for the country to make its voice heard. The Governor in Council has indicated his own opinion, but he has no choice but to accept the Commission's decision as it is evident that it would not have taken this form if public opinion had been sufficiently strong on the other side. Until the political voice of India can make an effective demand for reduction, the country must continue to pay for the Indian members of its services at rates which are believed to be above the market rates for the material obtained. The forthcoming debate in the Assembly may give an opportunity of gauging public opinion on this point, if the discussion extends beyond criticism of the proposals affecting European public servants. In any case, as the Government of India point out, it will be possible to apply practical tests to the strength of Indian feeling in this matter in the new provincial services which are to be organised in the transferred departments.

(5) " Whether the relief should be given (a) in the form recommended by the Commission, i.e., a small addition to overseas pay combined with the privilege of remitting the whole overseas pay at 2/ to the rupee, or (b) by making an addition to overseas pay and stating the whole or part of overseas pay in sterling to be disbursed in London ; or (c) by making an addition to overseas pay in rupees to be paid in India."

The important point is that the concession should be granted, and on the whole the Governor in Council thinks that it had better be granted in the form recommended by the Commission. The alternative scheme described in paras. 17 and 18 of the Government of India's letter is perhaps in itself preferable, but its superiority to that of the Commission's is not very marked, and on the general ground that the proposals of the Commission should be accepted, unless there are very strong reasons for rejecting them, the Governor in Council recommends that their plan be adopted.

(6) " In the event of the adoption of 5 (b) or 5 (c), whether the scale suggested in paragraphs 24 and 26 of this letter for the earlier years of service would be suitable ".

The balance of expediency seems to be in favour of leaving the Commission's proposals as they stand. The adjustments suggested are slight, and on the whole not worth making, more especially as the net result is negligible.

(7) " Whether the basic pay of the Police should be raised as proposed by the Commission."

This is accepted.

(8) " Whether the basic pay of the Indian Service of Engineers should be raised by Rs. 75 so as to absorb the present technical pay ".

This is accepted.

(9) "Whether judicial pay should be abolished for future entrants; if so, what would be an equitable rule for determining which officers should continue to draw judicial pay".

The most equitable rule is to continue judicial pay to all who have at any time received it and to stop it in new cases from the date on which orders are finally passed accepting this recommendation. The Governor in Council agrees that there is no justification for judicial pay in future.

(10) "What would be a suitable scale of relief for the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service".

The scale recommended is:—

Years of service.	Addition overseas pay.	Total overseas pay.
1 to 3	Nil.	50
4 to 6	50	100
7 to 9	100	150
Above 9	150	200

As the Governor in Council has suggested no alternative in basic pay for Indians, it is unnecessary to reply in any further detail to the Home Department letter No. F. 178-11-24-Ests. of July 4, 1924.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED PROVINCES No. 3779, DATED THE 29TH JULY 1924.

I am directed to enclose for the consideration of the Government of India a representation* on paragraph 55 and Appendix IV of the Royal Commission's report received from the United Provinces Indian Civil Service Association. Two printed communications from the Honorary Secretary of the Association to the President of the Commission are referred to in the body of the representation and are attached to the enclosure to this letter as annexures.

2. The Governor in Council has submitted his opinion on the whole question of the extension of remittance benefits to officers outside the time scales in my letter No. 1037-Z., dated July 28th, 1924. He has strongly supported the views of the English Commissioners set forth in Appendix IV, and has urged that the moderate concession embodied in the Commission's proposals for granting remittance benefits to officers in the time-scales should be extended to all officers above the time-scale whose salaries do not exceed Rs. 4,000 per mensem.

3. It is only necessary to add in forwarding this representation that the concession asked for is one which concerns the whole service, present and future. This is not a matter affecting only a few senior officers who will soon pass into retirement. It has already been pointed out in answering the Home Department letter No. 178-11-24-Ests., dated the 21st June, 1924, that the higher posts in a service stimulate the energies and ambition even of those who will never reach them. Prior to 1919 a Commissioner drew Rs. 2,916-10-8 per mensem plus exchange compensation allowance amounting to Rs. 138-14-3, when the rupee stood at 1*s*.4*d*. as against Rs. 2,250 plus Rs. 138-14-3 exchange compensation allowance drawn by a first grade Collector, a difference of Rs. 666-10-8. After the revision of 1919, the senior Collector's pay rose to Rs. 2,500, the Commissioner's being reduced to Rs. 3,000 per mensem nett by the abolition of exchange compensation allowance. If only the unanimous recommendations of the Royal Commission are accepted, the senior Collector's emoluments will be valued at Rs. 2,700 whilst the Commissioner's pay remains unchanged at Rs. 3,000, thus reducing the Commissioner's advantage of five years ago from Rs. 666-10-8 to Rs. 300 per mensem. There will in fact be very little difference between the pay of the so-called prize posts, reserved for senior officers of more than average merit, and the maximum pay of the time-scale.

4. The same argument applies mutatis mutandis to the other officers above the time-scale. Though the Islington Commission proposed to compensate them for the loss of exchange compensation allowance by adding permanently to their pay a sum roughly equal to the maximum exchange compensation admissible, it was finally decided to leave the pay unchanged though exchange compensation was abolished. As in the case of Commissioners, the acceptance of the Indian Commissioners' views would now result in a further relative reduction in the pay of these posts, and therefore the same arguments apply.

* Not printed with this letter.

5. There is no doubt that officers above the time-scale are involved in the general economic pressure. The Governor in Council is in close touch with the facts, and is satisfied that the Indian Commissioners are wrong in their assertion that no relief is actually needed in the case of officer holding the higher administrative appointments. Unless remittance benefits are extended to officers above the time-scale, there will be little justification for the term "prize post," which is already a misnomer. Even the English members of the Commission have lost sight of the fact that officers outside the time-scale have spent most of their service on rates of pay admittedly below the level of contentment. The Islington Commission thought the scale in force up to 1919 to be inadequate in 1914, and the Lee Commission do not consider that the increases given in 1919 were commensurate with the rise in prices before and after 1914. Yet officers above the time-scale with a few anomalous exceptions actually found their emoluments reduced in 1919. If the officers referred to in this representation are ever, in the new conditions, to meet their social obligations to Indians, it is essential that this second attempt since 1914 to bring pay into some relation with actual conditions should not result in a second reduction in the relative emoluments of officers above the rank of Collector and District Judge.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PUNJAB, No. 18987-GAZETTE, DATED THE 6TH OF AUGUST 1924.

I am directed to refer to your letter No. 178-11-24-Ests. of the 21st of June, 1924, on the above subject and to convey the following views of His Excellency the Governor in Council:

2. As explained in my letter No. 26-Camp-Gazette, dated the 30th of July 1924, the Governor in Council is sceptical whether the increase of pay proposed by the Royal Commission will be sufficient to attract recruits of the required stamp in the United Kingdom. He is convinced by the memorials received from various "Service" Associations that it will not be sufficient to allay the discontent or to relieve the financial embarrassments of the existing members of the Services. Nevertheless the Governor in Council is prepared, in view of existing conditions, to accept the general scale of increase proposed in spite of the criticisms received from the various "Service" Associations. He views the proposals of the Royal Commission as a compromise between two conflicting sets of interests, and he considers that the best course would be to accept it without substantial modifications, on the clear understanding that no attempt will be made to reduce the amount of relief to be given to the Services below what is recommended by the Royal Commission.

3. As regards the question whether relief should be given to officers above the time-scales, the Governor in Council desires to repeat the view stated in paragraph 9 of my letter No. 26-Camp-Gazette of the 30th of July. He accepts the view of the English Commissioners as set forth in Appendix IV (1) to the Report, with the exception that he would not give any relief to officers in receipt of salaries of Rs. 4,000 p. m. or more.

In reply to the subsidiary question whether relief to officers above the time-scales should be accompanied by a withdrawal of exchange compensation allowance from those officers at present entitled to it, the Governor in Council understands that the only officers now in receipt of this allowance in the Punjab are Indian Police Officers—recruited before 1906 and certain judges of the High Court who were in receipt of the allowance in question before 1919. The number of these officers is limited and in view of the comparatively small amount of saving that would be effected by the withdrawal of the allowance, the Governor in Council is not in favour of a withdrawal, unless the pay of the officers in question is to be increased by an amount at least equivalent to the allowance which they now enjoy.

I am to add that the Hon'ble Sardar Bahadur Sardar Sundar Singh Majithia, Revenue Member of this Government differs from his colleagues in regard to the main question of relief to officers above the time-scale, and prefers the view taken by the Indian Commissioners in Appendix IV (ii) to the Report.

4. Paragraphs 9 to 12 of your letter deal with the question whether on general grounds there is any case for giving relief to Indian officers already in the Services, and if so, to what classes and to what extent. In regard to this question, the Governor in Council is in favour of accepting the proposals of the Royal Commission, viz., that Indian members of the Services who are already entitled to overseas pay should—

(a) receive the substantive increase in overseas pay recommended for officers of non-Asiatic domicile; and

(b) should enjoy the proposed remittance concessions provided that they can satisfy the High Commissioner that they have wives or children in Europe.

In forming this opinion the Governor in Council has been influenced both by the argument, on which so much stress has been laid by the Royal Commission itself, that their proposals should be treated as parts of an integral whole, and also by the consideration that it is highly desirable in the interests of the smooth working of the administration, that Indian officers should not feel that they have been deprived of the privilege of equal treatment with their European colleagues to which they considered themselves entitled, when they entered the Service. The Governor in Council has reason to believe that there is a strong feeling amongst Indian officers of the All-India Services on this subject. I am forwarding to you separately a representation received from one such officer which bears out this view.

5. As regards the question whether the basic pay of future Indian recruits to the All-India Services should be reduced, the Governor in Council is of opinion that the weight of the arguments is on the whole against any such discrimination in the case of the four Services that will, under the proposals of the Royal Commission, retain their All-India character. It is true that in replying to the questionnaires of the Royal Commission this Government expressed the view that the present rates of pay were adequate or more than adequate for Indians. As, however, the Royal Commission has not itself suggested any such reduction the Governor in Council is not in favour of taking this question into consideration in connection with the recommendations of the Commission. He would prefer to treat the matter as one for the determination of Provincial Governments, if and when the subjects with which the Services in question deal are transferred, and the Services themselves consequently become provincialized.

As the local Government is not in favour of any reduction in the basic pay for future Indian entrants, it is not necessary for me to send a separate reply to your letter No. 178-11-24-Ests. of the 4th of July last on this subject.

6. I now turn to the consideration whether the remittance privilege, or its equivalent, should be given—

(a) in the form suggested by the Royal Commission in paragraph 54 of the Report, or

(b) by means of a sterling payment disbursed in London, or

(c) by means of an addition in rupees to overseas pay.

The Governor in Council has consulted Heads of Departments in regard to this matter and finds that there is among them a considerable difference of opinion. His own view, however, is strongly in favour of sterling payments in London, as that method would in his opinion emphasise the purpose for which the relief is given. He notes that the Government of India have satisfied themselves that sterling payments in London will not subject the recipient to the levy of British income-tax on that or any portion of his income.

7. In reply to the sixth question stated in paragraph 30 of your letter I am to say that the Governor in Council would accept the scale of remittance privileges proposed by the Royal Commission as it stands in spite of its anomalies.

8. As regards the increase proposed by the Commission in the basic pay of the Police, I am desired to forward for the information of the Government of India an extract from a letter dated the 22nd of July, 1924, from the Inspector General of Police which may be accepted as representing the general view taken by the Service regarding the proposed increase. It is clear from this letter that the proposals of the Royal Commission will do little towards allaying the existing discontent in the Police Service, nor is it likely in itself to stop retirements on proportionate pension. At the same time, though sympathizing with the natural desire of the Service for a larger measure of relief than is recommended, the Punjab Government does not feel itself in all the circumstances of the case able at present to recommend a greater increase in the basic pay of the Police.

9. The Governor in Council has consulted the Heads of Departments concerned on the proposal that the basic pay of the Indian Service of Engineers should be raised by Rs. 75 so as to absorb the present technical pay. He agrees with the Heads of the Departments concerned that this proposal should be accepted.

10. As regards the question whether the judicial pay of Rs. 150 p. m. for the Indian Civil Service should be abolished, I am directed to forward for the information of the Government of India a copy of a letter No. 26401-G. of the 10th of June from the Registrar of the High Court at Lahore. It will be observed that the Hon'ble Judges are strongly opposed to this proposal, but the Governor in Council regrets that he is unable to share this view. There has always been some doubt whether a special allowance for officers serving in the judicial branch could be justified on the merits of the case, and since this allowance was introduced in 1919 applications for transfer from executive to judicial work have become more common than in the past. The Governor in Council would, therefore, accept the proposal of the Royal Commission, but he suggests that the orders giving effect to this decision should be qualified by the two following provisos :—

(a) that no officer actually in receipt of judicial pay on the 27th of March, 1924, shall by reason of these orders cease to draw such pay,

(b) that no officer whom the local Government certifies to have selected definitely (and with the approval of the local Government) for the judicial department before the 27th of March, 1924, shall be debarred by these orders from drawing judicial pay.

11. The Governor in Council accepts the scale of overseas pay proposed in paragraph 29 of your letter for the Women's Educational Service as suitable. He suggests, however, that the scale of pay should be regulated according to age and not according to years of service.

SUBJECT.—Recommendations of the Lee Commission regarding Pay.

I have the honour to refer to the two letters on the above subject, numbered F.-178-11-24-Ests., and dated the 21st of June and the 4th of July, 1924, respectively, from the Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department, to Local Governments, and to submit the following representation regarding the recommendations of the Lee Commission in so far as they affect the pay of the Indian Police Service :—

As has already been pointed out, the recommendations of the Commission with regard to the pay of the Indian Police Service are both inadequate and inconsistent. The Commission lay great stress on the importance and unpleasantness of Police work, the need for slower Indianisation and the urgency of keeping the force efficient. They also place the Indian Police Service next in importance to the Indian Civil Service. In spite of this, however, the Commission's recommendations leave the pay and prospects of the Indian Police Service below those of all other Services, mainly, it appears, to avoid disturbing the relative position of the Service to other Uncovenanted Services. The age for age comparison which is so frequently used as an argument for retaining the Indian Police Service in an inferior position, overlooks the fact that the Police officer has served in the East three years longer than the Forest officer and 2½ years longer than the Engineer, and that he reaches the various stages in life at an earlier age. He takes leave earlier, marries earlier (in the Punjab the actual average age at which Police officers marry has been ascertained to be 28 years, whereas in other Services it is 30) and possibly loses his health earlier. He also discharges responsible duties of vital importance to the administration at an earlier age; while on the other hand, his promotion to the more highly paid posts comes at a later age. In the Punjab the average of reaching administrative rank in the P. W. D. is 44, in the Forest Department, 44 and in the Police Department, 47. The service for service comparison is the more natural one in dealing with the cases of Europeans serving in India and the failure to accept this principle is the cause of much discontent in the Indian Police Service, particularly in view of the recognised difficulty and unpleasantness of the duties to be performed.

After all that had been said by the Commission regarding the importance, etc., of the Indian Police Service, the logical conclusion would have been to recommend a more generous scale of pay without reference to other Uncovenanted Services, most of which are destined to be provincialised. It is, however, apparent that the exaggerated statements regarding the finances of India or the desire to arrange a compromise with the Indian members induced the Commission to whittle down the improvements in the pay and prospects of the Indian Police Service which were obviously indicated. As evidence of this, the following remarks of Sir Reginald Craddock in para. 3 of his minute on the emoluments of the Superior Civil Services in India may be quoted :—

> "It is really impossible to justify annual increments of only Rs. 25 per mensem in the case of the Police as compared with increments of Rs. 50 in other Services. Indeed, the rate of annual increment in the Police is smaller in many instances than in some of the Provincial Services."

In spite of these remarks, a perusal of the time-scale recommended for the Indian Police Service will show that for no less than four years in succession the increment is only Rs. 25.

The Police case submitted to the Commission included a carefully prepared statement of the cost of living based on the actual requirements of a European Police officer. This the Commissioner made no attempt to challenge. It is maintained that the scale of pay suggested therein represents the very minimum "necessary to obtain recruits of the right stamp and to maintain them in such a degree of comfort and dignity as will shield them from temptation and keep them efficient for the term of their service." The inclusive scale suggested (further particulars of which are given in the attached statement) is briefly as follows :—

	Rs.
Time Scale	500 to 2,300
Selection Grade	2,500
Deputy Inspectors-General	2,570
Inspector General	3,000 to 3,500.

This scale, it will be observed, is less generous than that at present in force in the Indian Civil Service, with which the Indian Police Service is repeatedly classed as an essential security service, and, if the value of other benefits recommended by the Commission be deducted, the resulting scale becomes still more modest. The attached statement shows that the scale claimed has been granted in full in the first four years and in the eighth year of service, and in the fifth, sixth, seventh, ninth and tenth year even more has been granted; while from the eleventh year onwards the scale falls short of that claimed at a steadily increasing rate until it actually reaches Rs. 600 in the 21st year. This means that the Police are, from their eleventh year of service, to be, as heretofore, hopelessly underpaid, and that they will continue to suffer from that financial stress which is the basis of the present discontent which the Commission was appointed to remove. It can only be assumed that the well-tried principle has been followed of making conditions sufficiently attractive to lure recruits into service and to keep them content until such time as they may reach an age at which it is impossible for them to withdraw, when they can safely be left to bewail the hopelessness of their position. The report of the Commission is admittedly a compromise; but it is not to be expected that members of the service will appreciate the argument that, owing to political and financial considerations over which they have no control, they should be content with less than a living wage.

From the point of view of Government, I would emphasise the need of making the conditions of service in the Police attractive. The large number of trained and experienced Police Officers who have already left the service on proportionate pension in disgust would have been sufficient to man more than half of the districts in the Punjab. But at the present time it has become impossible to find suitable officers for the more important districts; and two-thirds of the superior appointments, which, until recently were held by European Superintendents of Police, are now filled by Indians, Deputy Superintendents, or junior and inexperienced Assistants. The Commission demonstrate the necessity of preserving the efficiency of the Indian Police but there is ample evidence available to show a very serious and rapid decline in the numbers and efficiency of the superior European staff and in the outturn of work by the Department generally. The plain fact of the matter is that the Police Department at the present time is, for want of a sufficiency of good officers approaching a stage where very little more is required to produce a break-down. This fact does not appear to be recognised by Government.

The report does not claim to be exhaustive and the question of increasing the number of posts above the time-scale in the Indian Police Service, which was represented by most of the Police witnesses, has not been taken up. It is urged that the percentage of such posts should be increased from 10 to 15. This is the percentage in most of the corresponding All-India Services and there can be no logical reason for leaving the Police in a position of inferiority. The result of such an arrangement would be to raise the number of Selection Grade Posts in the Punjab from 5 to 11, which would remove the present grievance of the slowness of promotion in the Service.

If granted in full the relief recommended by the Commission will be very welcome to Police Officers, most of whom are struggling under a load of debt; but the improvements proposed are not likely to have any effect on the problem of recruitment, nor are they sufficient to induce officers contemplating retirement on proportionate pension to change their minds. The improvements are not sufficiently generous to meet the needs of present day realities nor to ensure contentment in the Service. The total cost of the increased pay and the remittance concession recommended in so far as Police officers in the Punjab are affected, is estimated during the current financial year at less than one lakh of rupees, and it is claimed that, if the value of the recommendations had been doubled, no financial embarrassment would have been caused to Government. Enough has already been said to show that, while the proposal to improve the time-scale in the case of the Indian Police Service is very acceptable, this proposal does not go far enough.

COPY OF A LETTER No. 36401-G., DATED THE 10TH JUNE 1924, FROM THE REGISTRAR, HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT LAHORE, TO THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PUNJAB.

I am directed to say that the Judges observe that the Report of the Royal Commission on the Superior Public Services in India contains a recommendation that Judicial Pay should not be drawn by future entrants into the Judicial Branch of the Indian Civil Service.

2. I am to say that, as no indication of any such recommendation was, as far as they can see, foreshadowed in the Questionnaire issued by the Commission, it has taken the Hon'ble Judges entirely by surprise, and they trust that as they had no opportunity of expressing their opinion before the Report their views will be considered by the Government of India and the Secretary of State even now.

3. In the first place the Judges wish to assert their firm conviction that at any rate for some time to come it is essential to the efficiency of the Judicial Service of this Province that a substantial proportion of the appointments should be filled by members of the Indian Civil Service.

4. The Judges find themselves unable to agree with the view that the Judicial Service is as attractive as the Executive Service and they very much fear that the proposed step, if carried into effect, will result in their getting in future still fewer recruits of the stamp required than are at present made available by the local Government. Except for those who have a natural bent for Judicial work,—who are few—recruits to the judicial branch can be appropriately described as those who are attracted either by the higher pay, or by the fact that a District and Sessions Judge can sit quietly at his headquarters and does not have to undertake the exertion of touring about a district. The Judges think that if the attraction of extra pay is withdrawn, great majority of applicants for employment on the judicial side will be those, who—to put it frankly—shirk the more active part of a District Officer's work, and are found unfit for the Executive. Such officers are not likely to be any more fit for the Judicial Service.

5. It is possible that the chance of being promoted to the High Court has been regarded as an incentive to a member of the Indian Civil Service to join the Judicial Service but if this is so the Judges think that the idea is a fallacy. In the Punjab the maximum number of permanent High Court Judgeships open to the I. C. S. is four. If the present Temporary Additional posts are taken into account the number becomes six, but this is a maximum, and except for short officiating appointments it is never likely to be more than five. Against this an Executive Officer has open to him a much larger number of posts both within the Province and outside in the Government of India and in Indian States which are not only well paid but also have the additional attraction of residence in the hills during the hot weather. It is unnecessary to specify the number of such posts which are at present held by members of the Punjab Commission for the facts are already well-known to Government.

6. If a demonstration be needed that the Judicial Branch is not particularly attractive in spite of the present judicial pay, it is only necessary to point out that while the normal strength is 16 officers, there are at the moment only six members of the Punjab Commission working as District and Sessions Judges in the Punjab, while of those on leave or officiating in the High Court only five are likely to return and the Judges anticipate that it will be extremely difficult, if not impossible, to fill all the vacancies. Of those officers who are willing to transfer to the Judicial side the Local Government will only spare the services of a very small proportion and the Judges are doubtful whether even these would have elected to come over but for the attraction of the judicial pay.

7. The Judges trust that these remarks will suffice to show that the contemplated step will not be in the best interests of the Judicial Administration, but I am to say that if it is decided nevertheless that judicial pay should be withdrawn the Judges still consider that the proposal that an officer shall have not only elected for the Judicial Branch but must also have been appointed to it before the date of the Commission's Report, i.e., 27th March 1924, is one that will operate very harshly in a number of instances. There are several cases of officers in the Punjab who have long since elected to join the Judicial Branch, but who owing to no fault of their own have not yet been appointed to it. The Judges feel that the inclusion among those who will be entitled to draw judicial pay on appointment as District and Sessions Judges of such officers as shall have made a bonâ fide election for the Judicial Branch before the date of the Report will not add a very great burden to the finances of the country and will prevent a certain number of instances of real hardship. If it is desired to add a safeguard, a proviso might be made that such election shall have been directly or impliedly approved by the Judges of the High Court before a certain date to be fixed subsequently.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PUNJAB, No. 18988-HOME-GAZETTE, DATED THE 6TH AUGUST 1924.

With reference to paragraph 4 of my letter No. 18987, dated the 6th August, 1924, I am directed to enclose for the information of the Government of India a copy of a note by Mr. A. Latifi, O.B.E., I.C.S., on the proposals of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India which affect Indian Officers of the Indian Civil Service. The Governor in Council, while not endorsing all the arguments used by Mr. Latifi, considers that his note may be of interest to the Government of India as illustrating the feeling of Indian Officers in regard to those proposals which discriminate between them and their European colleagues.

The Lee Commission Report as it affects the Indian officers of the I.C.S. recruited before 1915.

(A. LATIFI, I.C.S.)

This note deals only with my own case as affected by the Lee Commission Report. I am an Indian Officer of the Indian Civil Service of over 21 years' standing, and I belong to the class recruited in London before 1915, that is to say, before the purchasing value of the rupee fell heavily below its pre-War level, and before competition for admission to this Service came virtually to an end.

2. In this note I only touch the Report at the points where it suggests discrimination between the class I represent and my British and Colonial colleagues, that is to say, in regard to—

(a) passage concessions (para. 63),

(b) remittance privileges (para. 54),

(c) facilities for medical attendance (para. 93).

3. My case is that I joined the Service on the clear understanding that it has no compartments, and that I should get the same emoluments and amenities as would be sufficient to attract to it the best Englishmen of the older English Universities. I had a versatile and what was considered, a brilliant career behind me when I entered the Service. I was also considered a good speaker, and a good manager of men, and in the opinion of my friends I had other equally good professions open to me besides the I. C. S. It was after hesitation that in the end I chose the Service. Had I known at the time that at some subsequent stage the Secretary of State would decide to pay me not in the way originally understood, but in accordance with what he thought were or should be the habits of myself, my wife, my sons and my daughters, I would not have chosen the Service. I submit that any differentiation now from my British colleagues on the lines proposed by the Commission would break the spirit as well as the letter of the Proviso to the second sub-clause of section 96-B of the Government of India Act.*

4. In the annexure† to this note I give a summary of my academical career. The work I did for Cambridge during the three years (1899-1901) preceding the I. C. S. Open Competition was about equal to twice what one did for an average first class Honours Degree. This work helped me only for one-fourth of the subjects I offered in the I. C. S.

*"Provided that every person appointed before the commencement of the Government of India Act, 1919, by the Secretary of State in Council to the civil service of the Crown in India shall retain all his existing or accruing rights or shall receive such compensation for the loss of any of them as the Secretary of State in Council may consider just and equitable". Section 96-B (2), Government of India Act.

"The Committee think that every precaution should be taken to secure to public servants the career in life to which they looked forward when they were recruited, and they have introduced fresh provisions into this clause to that end." Joint Select Committee's Report on the Government of India Bill, 1919.

Open Competition; that is to say, three-quarters of the work I did for the I.C.S. was over and above that which I put in for the University. What I did before and after I joined the I.C.S. (see annexures* I—III) fully justifies the view of my friends that the I.C.S. was not the only opening for me in 1901, and that my qualifications helped by my family connections would have led me to a distinguished professional career in Bombay, my native place.

5. I may here record a somewhat obvious fact that people often lose sight of. This I.C.S examination for which I sat was held in London, and not in any place settled in deference to my domicile. But no one paid my expenses for the journey to London. The examination dovetailed into the curricula of the English Public Schools and Universities, especially with their classical, mathematical and science sides. It was by no means adapted to the needs of Indian students or to the curricula of the Indian Universities. And yet I was given no concession in this examination in consideration of my Indian domicile. No grace marks were, for example, awarded to me even in such a subject as the essay in English—to me a foreign idiom. I ran with a heavy handicap.

With all this in the background, to jettison me now because of my Indian domicile does not strike me as being altogether "cricket."

6. But it may be urged—though perhaps not seriously by the trained administrators, who will decide this question—that there is really no proposal for a differentiation in emoluments. "You will get the same pay and overseas allowance as your British and Colonial colleagues. Whatever increase they get in these, will be for you also. You never had free passages for your family before. This is a new concession we are giving to Englishmen because of their pressing need. So you have no grievance."

I will meet this argument as far as possible in the words of the Report itself:—The Commissioners say that "the principle (hitherto) adopted has been that emoluments should be fixed on a scale sufficient to cover the cost of passages and that the officer should be left to make his own arrangements" (para. 62). The purchasing value of the rupee having now fallen it is becoming "increasingly difficult for officers to meet passage charges." To meet this difficulty the Commission recommend the passage concession (para. 63). The Commissioners go on to explain that the proposal in effect means an addition of Rs. 50 p.m. to the British officer's salary and of Rs. 25 for his Indian colleague (para. 65). The reason why the concession is not given "in the form of an unconditional increase of ordinary pay" is that there would in that case be the risk of its being imprudently diverted to other purposes (para. 64).

Who can say in the teeth of all this that the passage concession will not be in effect part of the emoluments of officers? The Commissioners are good enough to recommend that this concession should be extended to Indian officers of the Indian Civil Service, who receive overseas pay. They give, however, no reason for their further recommendation that "it should not extend to their families." Did the Commissioners, I wonder, picture to themselves the Indian I. C. S. Officer—his wife safe in the zenana in the charge of his grandmother—disporting himself in the Casino at Monte Carlo or better still on the Boulevards of Paris, during long leave on half average salary?

7. Similar arguments, mutatis mutandis, apply to remittance privileges. The Commission would allow the unmarried British Officer, for whom according to Sir Reginald Craddock even the present rates of pay are "fairly adequate", "to speculate in Exchange at the cost of the State" (p. 149 passim), but they would not allow the full privilege to the Indian with a family.

The Report recognizes that Indian officers drawing overseas pay may legitimately expect to educate their children in Europe (para. 54), and it needs little argument to show that neither the remittance privilege nor the sum that can actually be remitted bears any relation to the actual cost of educating children in Europe. The privilege can at best be regarded only as a means for creating a fund, by way of children's education policies or otherwise, that, spread over the whole of his service, goes some way to compensate an officer for loss consequent on the fall in the purchasing value of the rupee.

And again, is there any reason why the Indian Officer should not also get the privilege for purposes other than the forming of an education fund? Why should he not have it, for example to pay for books, instruments, club subscriptions and other similar items?

*Not printed.

8. In the matter of medical attendance I ask that the recommendations in para. 93 of the Report should be so applied that officers of my class should not in at any time get less qualified medical attendance than what a British Officer of the same class in the same station would be entitled to. An illustration will perhaps make this clearer. A is an Indian Officer and B a British Officer, both stationed at Hissar. The medical officer at Hissar is an Indian, L.M.S. (Lahore). If the only privilege B gets is that of being attended to say by a Military Assistant Surgeon of his own race stationed at Gurgaon. A will have no grievance. A will be satisfied with the L. M. S. (Lahore). But take another case. A and B are still at Hissar with old L. M. S. (Lahore). B is now allowed to call in X (M. D., London) from Ferozepore. There are two doctors at Ferozepore X English and Y (also M. D., London) an Indian. A will now legitimately expect to have the services either of X or of Y, as may be convenient to Government. In such matters the Indian officers of the Indian Civil Service look only to qualifications, and not to race or nationality: for as a class they are singularly free from race or communal bias.

9. The Indian Commissioners, if not all the Commissioners, seem to have approached the question of emoluments and amenities in the I.C.S. with the primary object of "meeting the pressing needs of the European members" or rather the married European members thereof (p. 110). They were right of course to do this. The Europeans constitute the bulk of what in the past was emphatically known as a "European Service" and the emoluments of a service can only be adjusted by a reference to the needs, pressing or otherwise, of the great majority of its members. But all this cannot affect the statutory right of any given individual or group in the Service to absolute equality of treatment with the rest, regardless of the question of needs. My claim, as urged in the foregoing paragraphs, in substance amounts to this: that by providing me and my family with the same facilities for travelling, education and self-improvement as are open to my British colleagues, the Secretary of State should secure to me the career in life to which I looked forward when I was recruited, or to put it in another way, that I should retain unimpaired my existing and accruing rights in regard to emoluments, amenities and otherwise in perfect equality with my British colleagues (cf. note to p. 2).

10. The question of individual necessity is not, therefore, really relevant to this discussion. I should have preferred to keep clear of it. But it seems to have influenced some, at least of the recommendations about Indian officers, and I have got perforce to say something about my own needs.

11. I come of a very distinguished family from Western India, and my people have, for many generations followed the injunction of the Prophet of Islam "to seek knowledge even though it be in China". They travelled far and wide in search for learning or for a career. They discovered Europe some three generations back, and they saw that it was good: and my children will now be going there in the fourth generation. My father and mother expatriated themselves for many years with the sole object of supervising the education of their children in Europe. My wife as well as myself have been educated in Europe. As we now stand, therefore, an education in Europe is quite as much a necessity for my children as the Grand Tour was a necessity for the upper class of Englishmen in the 18th century, or as a Public School education (against one in a Board School) is a necessity for the children of my British colleagues. An European education for my children is not a luxury—it is "a pressing need."

12. In some ways, indeed, I have greater difficulties to face for the education of my children than many of my British colleagues have to. It is open to the latter to send their children to their own country in the entire charge of relations or even of school authorities. In any case they have no fear that their children will grow up alien to their religion or to the traditions of their family and of their country. Things are not so easy for me. It is not open to me to leave my children for years together in England in the hands of strangers. I would be sending them there with the sole object of making them better Indians and more efficient citizens of their own country: and to keep them from the peril of denationalisation my wife or myself will have to live near them for long periods in the years that are coming.

13. But it is not merely to look after their children that Indian officers and their wives want to travel to Europe. They have to go there for self-improvement. One of my journeys was, for example, made entirely for the purpose of writing "The Effects of War on Property" (Annexure* III). I could not possibly have written the book in India, for there are no facilities here yet for such work. But apart from special work there is such a thing as general self-improvement. London after all is not merely the political capital of India—capital in a more intimate sense than of the rest of the Empire: it is India's intellectual metropolis. From there our cultural life draws its inspiration. Our administrative methods as well as our political ideals come from England. What England thinks to-day we have to follow perforce at least the day after to-morrow. An officer of the Imperial Services degenerates if he does not, from time to time, refresh his spirit and his intellect in its crisp oxygenated air. Unless he spends, like the go-ahead American, at least the "sabbatical year" in Europe, he becomes a "back-number", and carries a handicap in his career as compared with his fellows. And it is the same for his wife. Both the Indian and the European members of the Lee Commission appear to have been ignorant of the social habits of the bulk of the Indian officers of the Indian Civil Service; else they would not have made their incredible recommendation about the passages. The wives of most of us are not in Purdah. They have an equal place with us in the sun.

14. For British officers of the All-India Services this aspect of a journey to England is as important as for the Indians. People often forget this. They talk as if the British Officer only needed to go home for his health or for his private affairs. But it wants little thought to show that this is not all. What is the chief asset of the British Officer of the administrative services? Is it not that which is compendiously termed the "British spirit"? Now, except in a select few this spirit is apt to become jaded if not renovated by periodical visits to England. Even if the British Officer did not himself want to go, it would be in India's interest to compel him to go home for at least the "sabbatical year". Here again the Indian is, if anything, at a disadvantage. He goes to one place to see to his private affairs, and to another—England—in order to bring himself up-to-date. His British colleague kills two birds with one stone.

15. Before I close, I should perhaps say that in restricting this note to Indian officers of the I.C.S. appointed before 1915 I do not mean to imply that Indian officers outside my class are not entitled to similar privileges. I have dealt with the claim of a small group with the object of simplifying the issues and thus clarifying the discussion. Further, I have made the argument designedly personal in the belief that nothing helps so well towards the understanding of a general principle as a clear concrete illustration. I have no doubt that some of my Indian colleagues will be in a position to present even a stronger case than mine for the consideration of Government.

16. I cannot conclude without expressing disappointment that in this Commission of nine members not one seat could be found for a representative of the University of Cambridge. Cambridge has of all English institutions done the most to train Indian administrators for the top-most ranks of the public services of this country, and to inspire them with the highest traditions of English public life. It is still more disappointing that the Commission did not include a single representative of the Indian officers of the All-India Services, with whose present as well as future it was so largely concerned—or for that matter include a single Indian who had received education in Europe. The witnesses were not cross-examined from the special point of view of this type of officer and their evidence has consequently lost much of the value it might otherwise have possessed. A representative of this class would have brought to the Commission a wider sympathy, a farther outlook and a clearer vision of the new India that is taking shape in the furnace of these days: and would have thus helped to save the Report from much of the criticism to which it is now justly exposed. As it is, the Commission's recommendations, in so far as they adversely affect the rights of the Indian officers of the All-India Services, should be altogether discounted.

GOVERNMENT OF BURMA

APPOINTMENT DEPARTMENT.

LETTER FROM F. LEWISOHN, ESQ., C.B.E., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BURMA, HOME AND POLITICAL DEPARTMENT, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, No. 404-A.-24, DATED RANGOON, THE 28TH JULY 1924.

SUBJECT.—Recommendation of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India regarding the Pay of the All-India Services.

I am directed to convey the views of this Government on the ten points enumerated in paragraph 30 of your letter No. 178—11-24-Ests., dated the 21st June 1924.

(1) The general scale of increase proposed for the Services is accepted.

(2) This Government considers that relief should be given to officers above the time-scales to the extent advocated by the English Members of the Commission. his concession should be admissible to Judges of the High Court as well as other officers since the remuneration of High Court Judges is not specifically laid down in the Government of India Act. It should include Deputy Inspectors-General of Police, Superintending Engineers and Conservators of Forests. I am to point out that, unless this measure is adopted a senior Collector holding an appointment like that of Excise Commissioner carrying with it a Duty Pay of Rs. 250 a month might receive emoluments only Rs. 50 per mensem less than those of a Commissioner of a Division.

(3) In the case of a Indian Officer already in the Services this Government strongly advises that the considered recommendations of the Commission contained in paragraphs 54 and 63 of the Report should be accepted. The Local Government is also strongly in favour of allowing Indian Officers who receive Overseas Pay at present under existing orders to enjoy the concessions recommended in paragraph 53. With regard to Overseas Pay, the position is that Officers recruited after 1925 will not be eligible for this particular concession. Those, however, who have been allowed the concession should be allowed the concession to the same extent as their European confréres.

The Hon'ble the Finance Member dissents from all the recommendations under this head and considers that although the exclusion of non-European officers already in the Services from the concessions allowed to their European colleagues will be resented by these officers, there will be still greater resentment on the part of new non-European recruits to the Services if they find that they are refused concessions which are enjoyed by their countrymen merely by reason of the fact that they joined the Services before a particular date. The reason for proposing any concession is the difficulty of recruiting Europeans, and the marked tendency on the part of Europeans already in the Services to take advantage of the provision for retirement on proportionate pension.

(4) This Government is opposed to the proposal to reduce the basic pay of future Indian recruits in the All-India Services. The proposal forms no part of the Commission's recommendations, and this Government can see no advantage and very many disadvantages in endeavouring to tack a radical and unpopular change of this nature on to the Commission's recommendations.

The Hon'ble the Finance Member, however, is in favour of the proposal and considers that the basic pay of future Indian recruits to the Indian Civil Service should be reduced to two-thirds of the present rate of pay.

(5) This Government is strongly in favour of giving relief in the precise form recommended by the Commission, i.e., a small addition to Overseas Pay combined with the privilege of remitting the whole Overseas Pay at two shillings to the rupee. The alternative schemes proposed by the Government of India possess certain undeniable advantages but they suffer from the objection that they are not the schemes put forward in the Lee Commission's unanimous Report.

(6) In view of the answer to No. (5) above, this Government does not consider it necessary to make any remarks on the scale suggested in paragraphs 24 and 26 of your letter.

(7) The Local Government strongly supports the proposal to raise the basic pay of the Police as proposed by the Commission. It is universally admitted that the Indian (Imperial)

Police is poorly paid in consideration of its heavy responsibilities and by comparison with other All-India Services.

(8) This Government accepts the proposal to absorb the present technical pay of Rs. 75 in the basic pay of the Indian Service of Engineers.

(9) This Government is opposed to the proposal to abolish Judicial Pay. I am to enclose a copy of letter No. 911—16-156, dated the 27th June 1924, from the Registrar, High Court of Judicature at Rangoon, from which it will be seen that the Hon'ble Judge view the suggestion with dismay. They point out that the Judicial Services are frankly unpopular with the Provincial as well as with the Indian Civil Service and that it is only the prospect of extra remuneration that attracts sufficient candidates. The Local Government believes that this statement of the case is not in the least exaggerated. If Judicial Pay is abolished, there is always the danger that the Judicial Branch may attract to itself officers, who seek to find in Judicial work a refuge from the more strenuous existence of the Executive Officer. The Local Government regards it as of the highest importance to attract to the Judicial Branch the very best men in the Services. A weak judiciary may do incalculable harm both in India and in Burma.

(10) This Government accepts the proposal made in paragraph 29 of your letter for raising the Overseas Pay of the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service.

The Hon'ble the Education Minister's concurrence in the above recommendations is subject to the qualifications set out in my telegram No. 790, dated the 21st July.

2. Finally, with reference to paragraph 5 of your letter No. F.-178—19-24-Ests., dated the 28th June 1924, I am to say that this Government entirely concurs with the view expressed by the Commission in paragraph 97 of their Report that it is unnecessary to interfere with the existing Burma Allowance. After nearly four years' experience of Burma His Excellency the Governor can personally testify that the cost of living in Burma is far higher than the cost of living in those parts of India with which he is acquainted, and that Burma Allowance makes up none too adequately for the difference.

FROM R. M. MACDOUGALL, ESQ., I.C.S., REGISTRAR, HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT RANGOON, TO THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BURMA, HOME AND POLITICAL DEPARTMENT, No. 911—16-156, DATED THE 27TH JUNE 1924.

SUBJECT.—Lee Commission's Report.

In reply to your Appointment Department letter No. A-24, dated 20th June 1924, I am directed to say that the Hon'ble Judges view with dismay the suggestion that the judicial pay be abolished in accordance with the recommendations of the Lee Commission.

His Excellency the Governor in Council is well aware of the difficulty experienced in securing suitable recruits for the Judicial Services from any source whatsoever. The Judicial pay is granted not only to members of the Indian Civil Service, but to officers holding listed posts and to Barristers appointed direct to the Judicial Service. The Judicial Services are frankly unpopular with the Provincial as well as the Indian Civil Service and it is only the prospect of extra remuneration that attracts sufficient candidates. Moreover as this has been a part of the emoluments of the post of District and Sessions Judges for nearly five years there would be dissatisfaction amongst members of the Bar appointed in future to such posts were the remuneration to be arbitrarily reduced by Rs. 150 per mensem.

In the Burma Judicial Service also there are four Special Pays of Rs. 150 per mensem granted to Additional Judges of Sessions Courts. These are given on the analogy of the judicial pay granted to District and Sessions Judges and were the latter to be abolished it would be necessary also to retrench this special pay as well. This would undoubtedly create a feeling of hardship amongst the senior members of the Burma Judicial Service and react unfavourably both on efficiency and recruiting.

In the circumstances the Hon'ble Judges trust that His Excellency the Governor in Council will not support the recommendation of the Royal Commission to abolish judicial pay.

GOVERNMENT OF BURMA.

APPOINTMENT DEPARTMENT.

LETTER FROM F. LEWISOHN, ESQ. C.B.E., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BURMA, HOME AND POLITICAL DEPARTMENT, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, No. 404-A.—24, DATED RANGOON, THE 28TH JULY 1924.

SUBJECT.—Basic pay of future Indian Recruits to the All-India Services.

In reply to your letter No. F.-178-11-24-Ests., dated the 4th July 1924, I am directed to say that the local Government is opposed to the suggestion that the basic pay of future Indian recruits to the All-India Services should be two-thirds of the pay which may be sanctioned for European officers. In the first place any proposal of this sort would lead to the pay of Indian members of the All-India Service being reduced to approximately the same level as the pay of the existing Provincial Service working in the same field. The gradual extinction of the All-India Services and their replacement by the existing Provincial Services expanded for the purpose is a natural process which is in fact favoured by the Hon'ble the Finance Member and the two Ministers, but that is a very different thing from having in addition to the Provincial Service a bisected All-India Service, the Indian Branch of which would be drawing much the same pay as the existing Provincial Service.

2. But the main objection to the proposal in the opinion of this Government is that it is not contained in the recommendations of the Royal Commission and is not a corollary necessarily arising out of those recommendations. The proposal could not be super-imposed on the Commission's recommendations without affecting the general complexion of the whole report and affecting it in a sense which should be regarded as prejudicial to the interests of Indian aspirants to those Services. It is hardly necessary to emphasise the political inexpediency of such a course.

3. The Local Government considers that a scale of two-thirds would clash inconveniently with the level of pay in the existing Provincial Services. The pay of these Services has only recently been revised, and there has been no drop, since the revision, in the cost of living, which would justify any reduction at the present time.

4. The Hon'ble the Finance Member dissents from the foregoing conclusions in respect of the basic pay of future Indian recruits to the Indian Civil Service which he considers could be reduced to two-thirds of the present scale.

GOVERNMENT OF BIHAR AND ORISSA.

APPOINTMENT DEPARTMENT.

LETTER FROM E. L. L. HAMMOND, ESQ., C.B.E., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BIHAR AND ORISSA, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, No. 1966-A.R., DATED RANCHI, THE 2ND AUGUST 1924.

SUBJECT :—Proposals of the Royal Commission on the superior Civil Services in India regarding the pay of the All-India Services.

I am directed to reply to your letter No. 178—11-24-Ests., dated the 21st June 1924, regarding the proposals of the Royal Commission on the superior Civil Services in India relating to the pay of the All-India Services. In the limited time available for an examination of these proposals, it has not been possible to obtain many opinions, either from officers concerned or from others, but the replies received generally take the view that the proposals of the Royal Commission should be accepted together as a reasonable compromise, and should not be regarded as open to separate discussion in detail. Dissentient opinions on the one hand are that the proposed increase will impose a financial burden which provincial and Imperial revenues cannot carry ; on the other, that the Commission's proposals fail to restore the Indian Services to their former position. His Excellency in Council adheres to the opinion given in paragraph 2 (e) of my letter No. 1689-A.R., dated the 22nd July 1924.

2. The views of the local Government on the various points raised in paragraph 30 of your letter under reply are as follows :—

(1) The general scale of increase proposed is accepted.

(2) The views of the local Government (including the dissentient opinions of the Hon'ble Indian Member of the Executive Council and the Hon'ble Ministers) regarding the extension of the remittance benefit to all administrative grades, excluding those which carry, or may under the proposals of the Royal Commission, carry an extra pension, have already been reported to the Government of India in the letter mentioned above. His Excellency in Council does not consider that the principle of equal remuneration in the administrative posts should be carried so far as to exclude from suitable relief the European incumbents of these posts, whose circumstances call for assistance. The true criterion is whether the relief proposed is necessary and on this point His Excellency in Council entertains no doubt whatever. It is common knowledge that many officers holding the rank of Commissioner, Superintending Engineer and the like, have to make heavy home remittances. He is, therefore, of opinion that the remittance benefit proposed by the Royal Commission should be extended to all administrative posts which do not carry an increased pension. The question to what extent, if any, this concession should be extended to Indian incumbents of these posts is discussed in the next sub-paragraph.

In the case of the lower administrative grades, the local Government would remove the anomaly of the Commission's proposals by fixing the incremental pay at Rs. 1,950—50—2,150 and allowing in addition the remittance benefit as now advocated for all administrative grades.

The local Government are of opinion that exchange compensation allowance should be abolished if any officer now drawing it becomes entitled to the remittance benefit.

(3) The question whether relief should be extended to Indian officers arises only in the case of those who are already in the service and while on the time-scale have drawn overseas pay. It does not apply to future Indian entrants nor to existing members on the time-scale, who are not receiving overseas pay. On this point various opinions have been received, but His Excellency in Council, taking the view that it is desirable to adhere as closely as possible to the recommendations of the Commission (which formed a delicately poised compromise), is prepared to accept the Commission's liberal proposals that the Indian officers who are now in receipt of overseas pay should get the same increase of overseas pay as has been proposed for their European colleagues, but that they should not get the remittance benefit unless they satisfy the High Commissioner that they have wives and children in Europe. The remittance benefit subject to the same condition, should be granted to Indian incumbents of administrative posts, which do not carry overseas pay.

The Hon'ble Minister in the Department of Education considers that the overseas pay of Indians should not be increased.

(4) As stated in my previous letter the local Government accept the proposal of the Commission that, except in the Police Service, there should be no alteration in the rate of basic pay, so far as existing members of the services are concerned. As regards future recruitment, they only accept it, if this is to be regarded as an essential portion of the compromise ; if the question may be held to be still open, they are strongly in favour of a reduction for the reasons already explained.

The question of new basic scales has been raised in your supplementary letter No. F.-178-11—24-Ests., dated the 4th July 1924. It is, perhaps, premature to discuss this before the principle of reduction has been accepted but to the local Government it seems that a basic Indian scale of about two-thirds of the total European emoluments (including the proposed increase in overseas pay and the value of the remittance benefit and passage allowance) would ordinarily be sufficient to attract suitable Indian recruits. Such remuneration will still remain sufficiently above the time-scale salary of the Provincial Service to avoid any complication on that account.

(5) The local Government prefer the form of relief recommended by the Commission, i.e., in the case of officers on the time-scale, a small addition to overseas pay combined with the privilege of remitting the whole of the overseas pay at two shillings to the rupee, and in the case of administrative posts the remittance of Rs. 400 per mensem at this privileged rate.

It may here be noted, though the question has not been specifically raised, that, in the opinion of the local Government the remittance benefit should continue when an officer is on leave. It appears equitable to grant the full concession to an officer on leave on average pay, and one-half of the maximum when the officer draws half average pay, on furlough. The need for the remittance benefit is equally insistent while an officer is on leave.

(6) If either of the alternative forms of relief suggested by the Government of India are adopted in preference to the Commission's recommendations, the scales proposed in paragraphs 24 and 26 of your letter under reply are accepted by the local Government.

(7) Subject to the general opinion expressed above as regards future entrants, His Excellency in Council agrees that the basic pay of the Indian Police should be raised as proposed by the Commission.

(8) Similarly, and subject to the same condition, His Excellency in Council agrees that the basic pay of the Indian Service of Engineers should be raised by Rs. 75 a month so as to absorb the present technical pay.

(9) The local Government accept the Commission's recommendation that judicial pay should be abolished for future entrants. As regards officers now in the service, the Commission would continue the allowance to an officer who elected for the judicial branch and was appointed to it. I am to suggest that the word "allotted" should be substituted for "appointed." As an example, I am to mention the case of an officer of the Bihar and Orissa cadre who elected for the judicial branch and whose services the High Court were anxious to secure, but who was detained on the executive side, for administrative convenience, to complete a land settlement. In default of this substitution, any officer who has been allotted, but not yet appointed, should be given a chance of reconsidering his election.

(10) The local Government accept the scale of relief suggested by the Government of India for the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service in paragraph 29 of their letter.

3. In conclusion, I am to add that, in respect of the pay of the services, the Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha, would follow the general principle of accepting the proposals of the Commission as they stand, as being part of the compromise, but would in no case go beyond them. As regards the emoluments of officers holding the higher administrative posts, his agreement with the Indian Commissioners has already been reported in paragraph 2 (e) of my letter No. 1689-A.R., dated the 22nd July 1924, and is repeated in paragraph 2 (2) above.

GOVERNMENT OF BIHAR AND ORISSA.

APPOINTMENT DEPARTMENT.

LETTER FROM E. L. L. HAMMOND, ESQ., C.B.E., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, No. 3313-A.R., DATED RANCHI, THE 16TH AUGUST 1924.

SUBJECT.—Proposals of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India regarding the pay of the All-India Services.

In continuation of my letter No. 1966-A.R., dated the 2nd August 1924, I am directed to forward a copy of a letter from the Registrar of the High Court of Judicature at Patna, No. 5041, dated the 1st August 1924, with enclosures, forwarding the views of the Hon'ble Judges on the above subject, I am to point out that the local Government have already accepted the Commission's recommendation that judicial pay should be abolished for future entrants subject to the reservation that the pay should be continued to an officer who has elected the judicial branch and has been allotted to it. The question of acting promotion in the selection grade of District Judges is being considered separately by the Government of India. It has not been dealt with by the Commission, and was not referred to the local Government by the Government of India.

2. As regards the two points dealt with in the minutes appended to the Court's letter I am to say that the local Government have already recommended in paragraph 2 (e) of their letter No. 1689-A.R., dated the 22nd July 1924, that the Judges of the High Court be excluded from the remittance benefit as they enjoy an extra pension. The District Judges of the selection grade will, however, receive this concession if the view of the English Commissioners, which the local Government have accepted, prevails. The Judges of the High Court will also get passage allowances if the Commission's recommendations are accepted.

LETTER FROM J. F. W. JAMES, ESQ., I.C.S., REGISTRAR OF THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT PATNA, TO THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BIHAR AND ORISSA, No. 5041, DATED PATNA, THE 1ST AUGUST 1924.

In reply to your letter No. 1533, dated July 19th, 1924, asking for the opinion of the High Court on the recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India regarding pay of the All-India Services, I am directed to say that the Acting Chief Justice and Judges consider that any relief which is afforded to officers above the time-scale ought not to be withheld from the Judges of the High Court. It may be observed that the salary of the Judges of the High Court was fixed at the present rate many years ago, and that the cost of living has risen very greatly since that time.

2. With regard to the proposal that judicial pay should not be drawn by future entrants into the Judicial Branch of the Indian Civil Service, I am to say that this proposal has taken the High Court by surprise, since there was nothing in the questionnaire of the Commission which foreshadowed anything of the kind. If competent members of the Indian Civil Service are to be attracted to the Judicial Branch of the Service, the judicial pay should be continued. In any case judicial pay ought to be continued to those officers who have already acted as District Judges, and have drawn it in that capacity, even though they may not yet have been formally allotted to the Judicial Branch.

3. The Acting Chief Justice and Judges are of opinion that the basic pay of Indian recruits to All-India Services should not be altered at present.

4. In this connection, I am directed to draw the attention of the local Government to the question raised in the Court's letter No. 1-T.R., dated the 20th August 1921, in which the Judges recommended that officiating promotion in the first grade of District Judges should not be withdrawn. It is understood that a favourable decision has been given on the same question in the case of the Indian Police, and there is nothing to differentiate the case of District and Sessions Judges from that of the Police. It is to be remembered that for over a year nobody has drawn the pay of a first grade District Judge.

5. I am to forward separately the minutes of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice L. C. Adami, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice T. S. Macpherson and the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

Minutes of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice L. C. Adami.

1. It will be found that throughout the Report of the Royal Commission the Judges of a High Court are excluded in any proposals for the amelioration of the conditions of pay and service of Government officers. It is plain that, as pointed out by the Government of India, the Committee were under the impression that the salary of a Judge of the High Court is fixed at a certain sum by express provision of an Act of Parliament and therefore no increase of pay could be given. This view is altogether incorrect; the Secretary of State has power to fix the remuneration, and it was fixed by the Secretary of State at Rs. 4,000 a month over fifty years ago when this salary could be considered high but befitting the position a High Court Judge should hold. Since then the amount has remained the same but the cost of living, house rent, etc., have increased enormously and a high rate of income-tax has to be paid. The result is that the pay does not attract the best members of the Bar to become Judges, and the Court must suffer accordingly.

2. Similarly there is an impression that, the salary of a High Court Judge being fixed by the Act, and there being a provision that a Judge shall not be entitled to any emoluments or advantages over and above his salary, an officer of the Indian Civil Service who has been appointed to the High Court is not entitled to receive and enjoy any of the benefits and advantages which may be extended to members of the Indian Civil Service generally. It is forgotten that the Secretary of State can direct that a Judge of the High Court may also enjoy these advantages.

3. The Secretary of State should be asked to consider the question of increasing the salary of the Judges of a High Court to make it meet present conditions, and to rule that a member of the Indian Civil Service who is a Judge of a High Court is entitled to all the advantages which it is proposed to extend to other members of the Civil Service. There is no reason why a Civilian Judge of the High Court should not be allowed to draw overseas pay, or be entitled to at least one return passage for himself and his family. I would press very strongly that the Secretary of State should be moved to declare that a Judge of the High Court, who is a member of the Civil Service, is entitled to each and all of the advantages which it is proposed to give to officers of like standing in the Executive Branch.

4. The proposal to deprive District and Sessions Judges of the extra Rs. 150 a month which they now draw should be resisted. The Judicial Service with its long hours of sedentary work is not an attractive one, and young officers who have to choose between it and the Executive Branch, will always choose the latter with its much freer life and more varied work, offering as it does, too, many more chances of reaching a high and well-paid appointment. If the proposals to separate the Executive and Judicial functions of a District Magistrate are carried into effect, there can be no doubt that the work of the District Magistrate will be far lighter than that of the District Judge. If the object of the proposal to take away the extra Rs. 150 is to dissuade members of the Civil Service from entering the Judicial side and altogether to Indianise the Judiciary, the proposed reduction will be effective, but it has to be remembered that it is through the British administration of Justice that we have perhaps the greatest hold on the hearts and confidence of the Indian people. In any case those young officers who have already chosen the Judicial Service but have not yet been confirmed as District Judges should be allowed to continue to draw the extra Rs. 150.

The 22nd July 1924.

Minutes of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice T. S. Macpherson.

The question raised in the Court's letter No. 1-T.R. of 20th August 1921 should be pressed. The Court strongly recommended that officiating promotion in the first (Selection) grade of District Judges should not be withdrawn, and the local Government supported the recommendation (as was also the case in Bengal). A favourable decision has been given on precisely the same question in the case of the Indian Police. The right to officiating promotion was withdrawn on an audit objection in 1921. Mr. Monahan has suffered a great deal and 4 or 5 other Judges to a considerable extent.

As to the points on which opinion is asked for, I would reply :

(1) The increase proposed is not only ungenerous but altogether inadequate to the needs of the occasion. In my own case pay as District Judge is in figures twelve rupees more than at the outbreak of the War ten years ago and the purchasing power of that pay is certainly not more than 60 per cent. of what it then was. It is idle to suggest that much hardship is not involved and the present proposals do practically nothing to mitigate it. The hardship is most felt by married men, the bulk of whose pay has to be remitted, and the proposed increase of Rs. 50 in overseas pay is simply petty and in no way to be regarded as reasonable.

(2) The relief should certainly be accorded to officers above the time-scale.

The officers in the Judicial Department who are concerned are—

(a) the two District Judges of the Selection Grade and Judges who would, if the proposals of the Court recommended by the local Government were accepted would act in that grade :

(b) Judges of the High Court. Both classes were detrimentally affected by the withdrawal from future entrants of exchange compensation allowance. The Government of India themselves point out in their letter that pay really consists, in the case of officers above the time-scale, of a sum representing pay and overseas allowance continued. Obviously the practical effect of the present arrangement is merely to grant overseas pay to Indians on attaining administrative rank. The financial necessities of European officers on the time-scale, unless they are bachelors or have no families, call for an extension of the relief afforded by the right to remittance at a special rate. It will not be much relief but it will be something. They do not even get the benefit of the small increase in overseas allowance, and this measure of assistance will be a mitigation and some measure of compensation for the loss of exchange compensation allowance.

As a matter of fact the selection grade, if this privilege is not granted, will only mean the addition of Rs. 200 to the pay of the "selected" officers.

Similarly the same relief should be accorded to High Court Judges from whom exchange compensation has been withdrawn. The Secretary of State can under section 104 of the Government of India Act allow the increase as he once allowed and then disallowed exchange compensation allowance. It is curious to note that while three European Judges of the Court still draw exchange compensation allowance the other three have drawn it but are not now entitled to do so! Doubtless the exchange compensation allowance would have to be merged in the new allowance which would always be more advantageous.

Minutes of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Kaluant Sahay.

I agree with Adami J. that there ought to be an increase in the salary, but I think there ought to be no difference in pay or allowances between a Civilian Judge and any other Judge.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE CENTRAL PROVINCES, No. 2886—1277-III, DATED THE 29TH JULY 1924.

I am directed to reply to Government of India letter No. F.-178-11-24-Ests., dated the 21st June 1924, in which the opinion of the local Government is asked regarding the proposals of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India, relating to the pay of the All-India Services, (Chapter VI of the Report).

2. Paragraph 30 of Government of India letter Point (1).—The general scale of increase proposed by the Commission in connection with overseas pay is accepted by the local Government as reasonable.

3. Point (2).—The Indian members of the Commission are opposed to introducing any differentiation between the pay of Europeans and Indians in administrative posts above the time-scale. The Indian members base their views on two grounds, firstly, the importance of the principle of equal remuneration in these posts, and secondly, the absence of any real need for relief among the officers concerned. In paragraph 4 of their letter the Government of India have dealt with the first ground, and the local Government agrees that no special importance need be attached to this principle. The grounds for the grant of the remittance benefit are the same as those for the grant of the passage concession, viz., that overseas domicile involves extra expenditure and it is illogical to refuse the one while giving the other. Whether the European holds an administrative post or not, he has to incur considerable extra expenditure owing to his being employed outside his own country. The argument that uniform remuneration should be granted because the posts entail obligations which are independent of domicile is an argument that might be applied to any post. As regards the ground of financial necessity, the fact that an officer holds an administrative post in no way lessens the economic pressure to which he is subject or the need for relief. If relief is granted to a Deputy Commissioner, for instance, it is difficult to see how it can be refused to a Commissioner whose position necessitates greater expenditure than that of a Deputy Commissioner. It must also be emphasized that by the time an officer attains one of the posts in question, his family is normally at its most expensive age. Finally, I am to refer to the administrative inconveniences which would result from the acceptance of the views of the Indian members. Table A attached to this letter shows that the difference in emoluments between the top of the time-scale and the administrative posts in several departments will be insufficient to allow for the additional responsibility and the additional expenses involved, and the local Government may find it difficult to persuade officers to accept some of the higher posts. For these reasons the local Government would prefer to accept the views of the English members of the Commission.

Excluding the executive Members of Council (whose pay is fixed by Statute) the highest pay attached to any post in this province is that of the Judicial Commissioner, which is Rs. 3,500. The local Government recommends that the remittance benefit should be given to the occupants of all posts above the time-scale up to and including the Judicial Commissioner.

4. Point (3).—The proposals of the Commission regarding the grant of relief to Indian officers in the services are :—

(a) that the Indians already entitled to overseas pay should draw the increase proposed in such overseas pay, i.e., an increase of Rs. 50 per mensem from about the age of 30 ;

(b) that Indians already entitled to overseas pay should only be entitled to the remittance privilege if they can satisfy the High Commissioner that they have wives or children in Europe.

The effect of these proposals will be more easily appreciated when the list of Indians entitled to overseas pay is examined. There are altogether in this province, in receipt of overseas pay, 13 Indian Civil Service officers (to be increased by those who succeed in the London open competition examination of 1924), one Police officer, one officer of the Indian Educational Service, two officers of the Indian Medical Service and one officer of the Indian Service of Engineers. The number of officers affected is thus small. These officers have hitherto been given the same treatment as European officers and the local Government considers it inadvisable to create a grievance by introducing differential treatment at this stage. The Association of Indian Officers in this province has urged equality of treatment and I am to attach a copy of their remarks on this point. Without committing itself to an acceptance of all the arguments advanced by the Association, the local Government considers that a reasonable case has been made out for the acceptance of the Commission's proposals, which constitute, moreover, an integral part of the structure of the Commission's recommendations as a whole.

5. Point (4).—The question of the basic pay of future Indian recruits to the four services operating in the reserved field is discussed in paragraphs 13, 14 and 15 of the Government of India letter ; and in their supplementary letter No. F.-178-11-24, dated the 4th July 1924, the Government of India refer to a definite suggestion that the basic pay should be two-thirds of the pay which may be sanctioned for European officers. The local Government has given careful consideration to this difficult question, and its conclusion is that so long as the Indian and British elements remain members of the same service, recruited and controlled by the same authority, any differentiation in basic pay is inadvisable. A reduction in the basic pay would entail so marked a difference between the emoluments of the two sets of officers as in effect to lead to the creation of a European corps d'elite. In this matter the local Government regards the political as more important than the economic aspect, and at a time when it is essential to maintain the efficiency of the administrative services, would deprecate any measure likely to affect the morale of the Indian element. The local Government is satisfied that no material reduction in the pay of the provincial services is practicable, and it is reasonable that the difference between the responsibilities of the All-India and the Provincial Services should be marked by substantial difference in pay. Moreover in some services, e.g., the Indian Forest Service, there is reason to believe that a reduction in the basic pay would make it difficult to secure recruits of the required standard. Finally, the proposal of the Commission regarding basic pay is an integral part of the compromise on which the Commission's report is based and could not be modified without upsetting the general balance of the report. The local Government accepts, therefore, the opinion expressed in paragraph 15 of the Government of India letter, that, pending the result of the experience gained in the transferred departments, the basic pay of the services in the reserved field should remain unaltered.

The Hon'ble Mr. Standen (Revenue Member) while accepting this conclusion considers that if the report is not accepted as a whole, and substantial changes are made in the other recommendations of the Commission, the basic pay, after provincialisation of the Indianised posts, might be reduced approximately as follows :—

	Rs.	Rs.
Indian Civil Service	.. 300 to	1,500
Indian Police Service	.. 250 to	1,150
Indian Forest Service	.. 300 to	1,100
Indian Service of Engineers	.. 300 to	1,100

He thinks that with these scales it would be possible to reduce the pay at the latter end of the time-scale of the provincial services. The Hon'ble Sir Moropant Joshi (Home Member) is of opinion that while the basic pay up to Rs. 1,000 should be the same, the increments after Rs. 1,000 for Indians should be on a two-thirds scale.

6. Point (5).—In paragraphs 16-20 of their letter the Government of India discuss the proposals of the Commission that every officer of non-Asiatic domicile should be permitted to remit his overseas pay through the High Commissioner at a rate of two shillings to the rupee or to draw it in London at sterling at that rate. Of the alternatives mentioned by the Government of India, the local Government prefers the statement of the overseas pay in sterling at the rate of two shillings to the rupee. This proposal has the merit of simplicity and seems to be covered by the wording of the report. If the Government of India desire that the overseas pay should in the main be expended in England, the local Government suggests that officers should be allowed to pay contributions from their overseas pay into a Provident Fund to be maintained by the High Commissioner, London, as a substitute for contribution to the Provident Fund in India. This arrangement would be popular with officers who would regard it as adding to the security of their Provident Fund. The local Government is definitely opposed to the proposal that an addition in rupees should be made to the overseas pay, as the variations in sterling remuneration due to vagaries of exchange, would then remain. In connection with this remittance benefit, I am to point out that at present three officers in the Judicial Branch of the Indian Civil Service draw personal allowances to compensate them for the loss of exchange compensation allowance, while eleven members of the Indian Police Service, who were appointed prior to 1906, draw exchange compensation allowance. The local Government understands that in the first case the personal allowance will be reduced by the amount of the remittance benefit and in the second case the exchange compensation allowance will cease to be drawn.

7. Point (6).—With regard to the changes in the overseas scale of pay suggested in paragraphs 24 and 26 of the Government of India letter, the local Government, while agreeing that the proposals of the Government of India are perhaps more logical than those made in the report, would prefer to accept the proposals of the Commission as they stand.

8. Point (7).—The local Government agrees that the basic pay of the police should be raised as proposed by the Commission. The local Government desires to take this opportunity of suggesting an increase in the number of select posts in the police cadre. Under the terms of the Government of India Resolution No. D.-449, dated the 26th July 1921, the number of select posts is so fixed that the total percentage of posts above the time-scale will not exceed 10 per cent. of the provincial cadres. The effect of this rule in this province is to limit the number of select posts to one. The local Government would like to see this number raised to two.

9. Point (8).—The local Government agrees that the introduction of the technical allowance of Rs. 75 in the Indian Service of Engineers has caused much discontent, and is not justified. The addition of the technical pay to the basic pay will not, the local Government thinks, give the Indian recruit to the Indian Service of Engineers any undue advantage over Indian recruits in other services. His maximum pay in the ordinary time-scale at the age of 46 will be only Rs. 25 more than that of the police officer excluding the selection grade and of the officers of the Educational and Forest Services, and Rs. 75 more than that of the officers of the Indian Agricultural Service and Indian Veterinary Service. He will draw less than the police officer in the earlier years of his service, but after reaching the age of 35 years, he will generally draw more. Throughout his service he will draw slightly more than the officers of the Educational Service and the Forest Service. There is, in the opinion of the local Government, nothing unreasonable in the position so created and though on the merits of the case it agrees with the Commission that the increase in basic pay is not necessary for the Indian, the proposals appear to be the least unsatisfactory method of abolishing the technical pay. The local Government, therefore, accepts the proposals of the Commission on this point.

10. Point (9).—The local Government agrees that a case cannot be made out for the retention of judicial pay for future entrants. As regards an equitable rule for determining which officers should continue to draw judicial pay, the local Government considers that the judicial pay should continue to be drawn by every officer borne on the list of the Judicial Department at the date of the report, irrespective of whether he has officiated as a District Judge or not.

11. Point (10).—In paragraph 29 of their letter, the Government of India suggest a tentative scale of relief for the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service. There are only two European members of this service in this province and in view of the difficulties attached to the position of these ladies, especially in the early years of their service, the local Government desires to put forward a slight improvement on the Government of India scale. The table below compares the present scale with the scales proposed by the Government of India and the local Government, respectively :—

Remarks by the Central Provinces and Berar Association of Indian Officers regarding equality of treatment.

Indian officers of the All-India Services and particularly of the Indian Civil Service, have always insisted on receiving perfect equality of treatment with their European colleagues. In the past this equality of treatment was accorded to Indians without demur, with one exception, viz., in respect of Exchange Compensation Allowance. Of this one differentiation Indians made no grievance as, in the first place, it pre-existed the entry into the service of many of them and, secondary, their numbers were, till recently, too few to permit of their taking concerted action with a view to the removal of a distinction which was inconsistent with the traditions of their service, whatever justification it may have had on economic grounds. The Exchange Compensation Allowance was abolished in 1919, when the pay of the services was reorganised on a time-scale basis. No differentiation was then made between European members of this service and Indians in the matter of basic and overseas pay. It has been argued that the grant of overseas pay to Indians was due, not to any theoretical consideration of equality of treatment, but on other grounds. A more recent instance will, however, prove that this all important principle was accepted in extending the benefit of the special leave rules to the existing Indian members of the services recruited in England, as it was evidently recognised by the Secretary of State that not to do so would have been inequitable and inexpedient. The passage advance rules promulgated in January 1923, may be cited as an instance of the disregard of the principle referred to above. My Association would point out, however, that no publicity was given to these rules and that many Indian officers were at the time ignorant of their existence. The attention of Indian members of the Indian Civil Service and other All-India Services was not drawn to them, at least in this province; when they were passed. My Association would reiterate this principle now and request that it should be borne in mind in arriving at a decision on the recommendations of the Lee Commission. Any departure from it would be inequitable and administratively mischievious, and would be attended by disastrous reaction on the prestige, contentment, morale and efficiency of a class of public servants on whose success will depend the ultimate success of the scheme of progressive Indianisation of the services. In the next generation Indian efficiency will in large measure be judged by our efficiency and our failure will to a great extent be the measure of the failure of Indians as a nation in the craft of administration.

Standard of living and domicile.—My Association would point out at the outset that a standard of living is not synonymous with a style of living. The argument developed by the Government of India is vitiated by this confusion of thought. An Anglo-Indian's style of living may approximate to that of a European in the outward signs of it, viz., mode of dress, ways of cooking and taking food, etc. But that does not surely mean that his standard of living is as high as that of a European in superior government service. In other words, the standard of living of a guard on the Bengal-Nagpur Railway is not identical with that of a European Deputy Commissioner in the Central Provinces. It is surprising that the Government of India have been betrayed into advancing, even for argument's sake, a line of reasoning so palpably fallacious. My Association asserts and is prepared to support the assertion by concrete facts and figures that the standard of an Indian Officer in the superior services is no whit lower than that of his European colleagues ; in the matter of dress, number of servants, mode of conveyance, social habits, entertainment. This is particularly true in the case of Indians in the Indian Civil Service, which contains by far the largest number of Indians at present in the superior civil services and in which Indians were admitted earlier than in any other service. Their prolonged residence in England, their intimate contact with British young men at one or the other of the great Universities of Great Britain (in the majority of cases Cambridge or Oxford), the footing of perfect equality on which they have stood and worked with their British colleagues in the superior civil services in India, and which was never challenged till lately, all these have inevitably influenced their standard of living, for good or for evil. Some of these officers send their families to England and make occasional trips to Europe. The more senior from among them already educate their children in England. The younger officers have every intention of giving their children an education not ess advanced and liberal than what they themselves have received. These commitmenlts which are the inevitable corollary of the standard of living that was forced on them by circumstances (and which they were encouraged by Government to maintain and indeed obliged to maintain sometimes on pain of official displeasure) cannot now be justly described as voluntary. Domicile in itself is a misleading test. It may have an important bearing on the question, because it determines the standard of living, but it is the latter which is the only firm basis in this difficult matter. This, as has been pointed out above, is identical with that of their colleagues of European domicile. Moreover, there are social and religious obligations peculiar to Indians and from which they cannot escape, however Europeanised they might have become, which constitute an additional drain on their purse. There are several Indians who maintain a double establishment in order to be able to entertain their Indian friends as well as their European ones. The claims of the families on them are insistent, a fact which my Association think nobody who is not born in India can rightly appreciate. My Association would not have enlarged on this question, had it not been for the necessity of demonstrating the weakness of the otherwise ostensibly plausible line of argument advanced by the Government of India with regard to it.

Risks and expenses of an English education.—The Government of India explain in paragraph 9 (a) of their letter that overseas pay was granted to Indians in 1920 because the increases in total pay made in 1919 were so small that, had the Indians not been granted overseas pay, they would have had no increase or even a decrease on their previous emoluments, whereas the cost of living of Indians had admittedly risen considerably. My Association, therefore, fails to understand how the same overseas pay can be regarded as sufficient recompense for the expense and risks of an English education, which moreover was the only avenue for entry into many superior services, particularly the Indian Civil Service. The extent of these risks and expenses has not, my Association is afraid, been fully realised. There are many Indians who start their career saddled with large debts incurred to meet the cost of an English education preparatory to entry into the Indian Civil Service and other services recruited in England. The case of a junior Indian Civil Service officer who is in his fifth year of service is paying Rs. 200 per month out of his pay to one of his creditors (for debt contracted before he sailed for England) which my Association would quote is by no means exceptional. Another officer, who is in the Indian Medical Service, and was occupying a high administrative post in one of the larger provinces required 17 years before he was rid of the debts he had contracted for the purpose of his foreign education. My Association could prove to demonstration that the present overseas pay that Indians receive is an inadequate recompense for the expenses and risks of an English education.

Differentiation between Indian and Indian.—The grounds on which such a differentiation is based are real and not dependent on the chance date of appointment. There may be Indians who are in receipt of overseas pay, though they have never been out of India, but it needs no argument to show that they are the exception and not the rule. Their existence is surely no reason for denying relief to those who have been out of India, much the larger number. As stated above, the latter entered service on the understanding that no distinction would be made between them and Europeans, an understanding that was one of the attractions of the service. Their standard of living has been affected irrevocably by this consideration. Future Indian recruits will enter service with a full realisation of the distinction which will be made, and will have no legitimate reason for grievance on the ground of being taken unawares.

GOVERNMENT OF ASSAM.

THE GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL.

APPOINTMENT DEPARTMENT.
APPOINTMENT BRANCH.

LETTER FROM A. W. BOTHAM, ESQ., C.I.E., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF ASSAM, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, NO. APPTT. 1107—4251-A.P., DATED SHILLONG, THE 4TH AUTUST 1924.

With reference to your letter No. 178/11/24-Establishments, dated the 21st of June 1924, on the subject of the Royal Commission's proposals regarding the pay of the All-India Services, I am directed to communicate the views of the Government of Assam.

(1) The Government of Assam are prepared to accept the general scale of increase proposed. It will be seen from the enclosed representation from the Assam Association of European Government Servants that it falls considerably short of what most of the services draw, but in view of present financial conditions this Government are not prepared to press for a further increase.

(2) His Excellency the Governor and the Hon'ble Mr. Webster agree with the European members of the Commission that relief in the matter of remittance benefit should be granted to officers above the time-scale, but would restrict it to those who do not draw more than Rs. 3,000 a month. The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Kutubuddin Ahmad on the other hand and both the Hon'ble Ministers support the views of the Indian Members of the Commission.

(3) In the opinion of this Government no relief to Indian officers already in service is called for.

(4) As regards the basic pay of Indian recruits to the All-India Services, the Hon'ble Minister for Local Self-Government considers that all future Indian recruits should be placed on a separate and reduced scale of pay suited to local conditions. The remaining members of Government are, however, opposed to any reduction of basic pay at present in the All-India Services.

(5) With regard to the three alternative methods discussed in paragraphs 16 to 20 of your letter of giving effect to the Commission's recommendation regarding the remittance concession, the Government of Assam do not favour the third alternative. The second is admittedly attractive from certain points of view, but is open to the objection that a change of policy on the part of the income-tax authorities in England might materially detract from its value and necessitate its subsequent revision. On the whole, therefore, the Governor in Council favours the adoption of the first alternative which has the advantage of being the form of relief recommended by the Royal Commission.

In this connection the Assam Association of European Government Servants have drawn attention to the fact that the Report of the Royal Commission is silent regarding the rate at which overseas pay may be drawn by officers on leave as part of their leave salary. They have pointed out that the expenditure which overseas pay was designed to meet—education of children at home, etc.—continues when an officer is on leave, and that had the rate of exchange remained at two shillings the whole of an officer's leave salary would have been payable at that rate. They consider, therefore, that so much of the leave salary as represents overseas pay should be converted into sterling at two shillings to the rupee. This suggestion appears to the Government of Assam to be reasonable. Its adoption would entitle an officer on full average pay to the remittance concession in respect of his full overseas pay, and an officer on half average pay would benefit to the extent that half his overseas pay would be drawn in sterling at the same rate.

(6) The Government of Assam do not consider that any modification of scales on the lines suggested in paragraphs 24 and 26 of your letter is called for, and would prefer to accept the Royal Commission's recommendations as they stand.

(7) The Government of Assam agree that the basic pay of the Police should be raised as proposed by the Commission.

(8) There appears to be no sufficient reason for raising the basic pay of the Indian Service of Engineers by Rs. 75 a month merely for the purpose of absorbing the present technical pay.

(9) In the opinion of this Government the reasons which led to the grant of special judicial pay no longer exist, and this special rate should be abolished for new entrants. The Government of Assam have no judicial posts on their cadre and borrow from Bengal such judicial officers as they require from time to time. They would therefore leave it to the Government of Bengal to advise on the rule which should be made applicable to an officer who was, at the time of the issue of the Report, officiating in a judicial appointment but had not been confirmed.

(10) No member of the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service is at present serving in Assam, and this Government do not propose to offer an opinion on what would be a suitable scale of relief for that service.

ASSAM ASSOCIATION OF EUROPEAN GOVERNMENT SERVANTS.

LETTER FROM THE HONORARY SECRETARY, ASSAM ASSOCIATION OF EUROPEAN GOVERNMENT SERVANTS, TO THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF ASSAM, DATED SHILLONG, THE 17TH JULY 1924.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your memorandum No. Appt. 934—3698—711, dated the 28th June 1924, with which you forward for an expression of opinion from this Association a copy of letter No. F. 178/11/24-Ests., dated the 21st June 1924, from the Government of India, in which are discussed the proposals of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India about the pay of the All-India Services. In reply I am again to invite attention to the evidence placed before the Royal Commission by this and other Service Associations, and to the replies given by this Association to paragraphs 3, 5, and 6 of Part II of the questionnaire. I am also to reiterate and emphasise our observations in paragraph 2 of my letter of the 14th June last.

With regard to the points summarised in paragraph 30 of the Government of India letter, I am to forward very briefly the further views of this Association.

(1) The proposal to keep basic pay where it is would not be objected to by this Association if the proposed increase in Overseas pay were adequate for our needs. A reference to paragraph 18 of our evidence before the Royal Commission shows clearly that it is not.

(2) In view of the anomalies pointed out by the Government of India in paragraphs 2 to 8 of the letter under reference and the strong argument enunciated in paragraph 4, we are of the opinion that, at whatever point the relief is discontinued, this point must be determined by pay and not by posts. The arguments for the case my Association wishes to make have been fairly set out in Appendix IV (i) to the Report by the European Members of the Commission, strongly supported by the Chairman, and my Association has little to add beyond drawing attention to the actual results of the proposals as they stand in certain Departments. Unless the recommendations of the majority of the Commission are accepted, not only will one of the principal attractions which the Services offer to prospective recruits be removed, but the great incentive which "prize posts" offer to good work throughout the early years of service will be lost. Again, even in the later years, the pecuniary gain on promotion to a higher Administrative post will be so small as to discourage competent officers from seeking or accepting promotion, in view of the heavier work, responsibility and expense involved. In some cases a senior officer on a time-scale will actually stand to lose by promotion.

The concession recommended by the majority of the Commission will, in most cases, just turn the scale in favour of the higher appointments, and the addition to the cost of the proposals of the Commission should not be considerable. In asking that the proposals outlined in Appendix IV (i) should be accepted, my Association urges that they represent the barest minimum that will secure the general efficiency and contentment of the Services.

The maximum pay of Superintending Engineers, in the Indian Service of Engineers, was fixed at Rs. 2,000 plus exchange compensation allowance, equivalent in all to Rs. 2,125 as long ago as the year 1905, a figure which is Rs. 25 less than the maximum of Rs. 2,150 now proposed. At the reorganisation of 1908, the maximum was reduced to Rs. 2,000, by the omission of exchange compensation allowance for the more junior men, and in 1919-20, owing to the adoption of a common scale for Imperial and Provincial Officers, the latter benefitted to the extent of an increase of 34 per cent. in maximum pay, whilst the former received a small increase which meant little more than the restoration of exchange compensation allowance previously withdrawn. The fallacy underlying the argument of "equal pay for equal work" is demonstrated in the Note by the European Commissioners, Appendix IV (i), and you will appreciate the feelings of these officers if the justice of their claims is set aside owing to political expediency.

The time at the disposal of the Commissioners was insufficient for a minute examination of every individual case and my Association believes that they were not fully cognisant of the history of these appointments as set forth in the previous paragraph.

The importance of "prize posts" in a service is emphasized by the English Commissioners and the Chairman in Appendix IV, and my Association begs to bring to your notice the remarkable manner in which the comparative value of these Administrative posts has decreased during successive reorganisations in the last 19 years. In the year 1905, the maximum pay of an Executive Engineer, including exchange compensation allowance, was Rs. 1,063 compared with the maximum pay of Rs. 2,125 in the case of Superintending Engineers, a difference of Rs. 1,062 per mensem. In the 1908 and 1919 reorganizations, the difference was successively reduced to Rs. 750 and Rs. 525. Under the present proposals of the Commission, the difference would further shrink to Rs. 325 per mensem, whilst in the case of the Police Service the difference between the maximum pay of a District Superintendent in a selected post and that of a Deputy Inspector General would be only Rs. 250 per mensem. Although in the case of the posts of Heads of Departments concerned, a substantial difference of pay still exists, my Association desires to make it clear that such appointments can be held by very few and that the lower administrative appointments of Deputy Inspector General, Conservator and Superintending Engineer are the highest which the average officer can hope to reach.

The form of relief recommended in paragraph 55 for officers holding these appointments is the conversion of the present time-scale of Rs. 1,750—100—2,150 into a flat rate of Rs. 2,150. There can be no doubt that the Commission was actuated by the desire to afford equitable treatment for these officers, and at first sight this readjustment of pay appears to be not ungenerous. A detailed examination, however, which was beyond the power of the Commission to make, shows that the proposals operate most unfavourably for the majority of officers at present holding these appointments, whilst in the case of the officers most favourably affected they compare unfavourably with the relief recommended by the Commission for all other Government servants. This Association is of the opinion that it would be fairer to the majority of the officers concerned if the present time-scale of Rs. 1,750—100—2,150 were allowed to remain and the remittance benefit extended to all Deputy Inspectors General, Superintending Engineers and Conservators of Forests, etc.

(3) Our demands for relief for Europeans were made on the basis of the actual needs of Europeans as such, and as established by family budgets ; and we are not in a position to offer an opinion on the actual needs of Indians which would justify an extension to them of similar relief, especially in view of the fact that any commitments they may have outside India are voluntary and not inevitable.

(4) This Association does not desire to express any opinion on this point.

(5) There is great force in the argument contained in paragraph 16 (a). Paragraph 16 (c) is not correct. Even early in married life and before family expenses assume serious proportions, provision for the future has to be made at home by insurance or otherwise. This Association agrees entirely with the facts put forward in paragraph 18, and is in favour of making an adequate addition to overseas pay and stating the whole of it in Sterling to be drawn in England (or the Dominions). Provided that the Home Income-tax authorities do not revise their regulations and declare hereafter that any person who draws regular pay at Home is to be deemed to be resident in the United Kingdom for purposes of Income-tax administration. In such an eventuality the interests of the services should be safeguarded. I am to add that this Association is of opinion that this concession should be extended to officers whose Indian Domicile is purely technical.

(6) This Association would have no objection to an amendment of the scale to produce a more uniform rise which would yield the same result and considers that overseas pay should be fixed on the basis of age.

(7) The Police are at present excluded from membership of this Association.

(8) Technical pay is given in recognition of the superior education and training obtainable in England and this Association can see no reason for its application to those who have not obtained these expensive qualifications.

(9) This Association agrees that the reasons which led to the grant of special judicial pay no longer exist and that for future entrants this special rate of pay should be abolished. They consider however that an officer who has acted for a considerable time in a judicial appointment and failed to be confirmed through no fault of his own, has acquired an 'accruing right' which should be recognised.

(10) This Association would be prepared to agree to the scale proposed.

The letter of the Government of India to the Local Government naturally contains no reference to Central Services. But this Association contains Central Officers and it is only through it that they have an opportunity of being heard.

The Ecclesiastical Department draws no Overseas pay, and therefore the Remittance recommendations will give them no relief at all. This cannot have been the intention of the Royal Commission (see paragraph 57 on page 31 of the Report and paragraph XXV of the Summary on page 68). Moreover, they are a very low-paid Service and are badly in need of some such relief. Similarly in the Audit and Accounts Service there is no Overseas pay. That Service draws a similar amount but it is called "Addition to pay"—presumably in order to enable Indians as well as Europeans to draw it. Unless these two Services therefore take this opportunity of representing that they are in equity entitled to similar Remittance privileges, there is every probability that their claims will be overlooked.

I am desired to refer to the fact that the Report of the Royal Commission is silent regarding the rate at which overseas pay may be drawn by officers on leave as part of their leave salary. It is unnecessary to point out that the expenditure for which overseas pay is granted—education of children, etc., continues when an officer is on leave; moreover had the rate of exchange remained at 2*s.* the whole of an officer's leave salary would have been payable at that rate. I am therefore to express the hope that, with reference to Fundamental Rule 91, so much of the leave salary as represents overseas pay will be converted into sterling at 2*s.* a rupee in the event of it not being decided to fix and pay overseas pay in sterling.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

ESTABLISHMENTS.

LETTER FROM THE HON'BLE MR. J. CRERAR, C.S.I., C.I.E., SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, TO ALL LOCAL GOVERNMENTS, NO. F.-178/12/24-ESTS., DATED SIMLA, THE 22ND JUNE 1924.

With reference to my letter No. 172/24-Est., dated 18th June 1924, I am directed to address you regarding the proposals of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India for the grant of passages to officers and their families when travelling to Europe on leave. The Commission recommend that the passage concession should be granted by means of an addition to overseas pay which should be credited at once to a general passage fund. Free passages would then be granted to officers, their wives and children according to a certain scale. The system of a passage fund has certain obvious advantages. It has been generally recognised that it would be unsatisfactory to make an addition to pay with a view to covering the cost of passages without taking any steps to ensure that the money is not dissipated in every-day expenditure. This objection could be removed by insisting that every officer should place the money intended for passages in his individual provident fund. This would have the desired effect of compulsory saving, but it is doubtful whether it would be such a satisfactory concession to the Services as the institution of a general passage fund. The passage fund has the great advantage of giving the maximum immediate benefit. It would take from 4 to 5 years for an officer to build up by means of an individual provident fund the sum required for the passage home of himself and his wife. The passage fund on the other hand would give an officer and his wife a free passage at once. Further the passage fund has the advantage of providing automatically for the actual needs of the wife and family. If a system of individual provident funds were adopted, it would be necessary for Government to make different additions to the pay of the married and the single. This may not be thought desirable, and unless the differentiation is to go into further family details in regard to the number of children, it is certain that some officers would get more than they require for the purpose of passages and others would get less. Finally the system of a passage fund is likely to be on the whole more economical to Government. Pay once credited to an individual provident fund must be the property of the individual officer whether it is expended on passages or not. But under the passage fund system if officers do not take the full benefits to which they are entitled the sum saved would accumulate as a balance at the credit of the fund and it might be possible later to reduce payments into the fund. This system would ensure at any rate that no more money was paid out by Government than was actually required for the purpose for which it is given.

2. On the other hand it is possible that some legal difficulties might arise in deciding whether money thus paid compulsorily into a general fund could properly be regarded as part of an officer's pay and therefore non-votable. The legal position is being examined. Should the difficulties appear to be real, it might be necessary to abandon the idea of the fund. In that case a further communication will be made regarding possible alternatives.

3. It is recommended that each officer entitled to the concession should receive 4 return passages during his service on the standard of P. and O. 1st class B, that provision on a similar scale should be made for his wife and that one single passage should be granted for each child. It is estimated that these benefits could be provided by the payment of Rs. 50 a month by each officer. The first question for decision is whether this general scale of benefit is reasonable.

4. If the scale of benefit is accepted as reasonable, the question arises of the exact form which the concession should take. The Commission propose to give actual passages at a first class P. and O. rate. Many officers, however, would prefer to travel less comfortably, if the financial difference could be devoted to additional passages. Further there would be a practical difficulty, if all officers of the Superior Civil Services were entitled to passages at a 1st class P. and O. rate. It may be taken as certain that none would elect to travel more cheaply and less comfortably when the saving would merely accrue to Government. This would mean that lines other than the P. and O. which carry at present a considerable number of Government servants would lose the whole of this connection and they would have reasonable cause for complaint.

5. This line of argument would suggest that it might be wiser to give a larger number of passages on the scale of second class A. P. and O. in place of a smaller number on the scale of 1st class B. But this solution again would not be altogether satisfactory. Those who travel first class, and it cannot be said that this is an unreasonable course in the case of senior officers, would never be able to secure from Government the full amount which they expend on any particular journey.

6. It is possible that the simplest solution would be not to grant the value of actual passages at either 1st or 2nd class rates, but to credit each officer with the value of 4 passages 1st class B. P. and O. for himself and the appropriate number for his wife and children, and allow him to draw against this credit the sums which he actually expends on passages for himself, his wife and children. It would then rest with the officer to devote the available credit to a smaller number of expensive passages or to a larger number of cheap ones—the only restriction being that the credits of the officer, his wife, and each child should be separate and non-transferable. It might be necessary to devise some method of adjusting the credits when passage rates are either raised or lowered but the Government of India think that this could be done without much difficulty. I am to enquire whether this solution appears reasonable to the Government of Madras, etc.

7. The Commission recommend that passages should be granted to officers of non-Asiatic domicile only, with the one exception that Indian officers of the Indian Civil Service in receipt of overseas pay should also receive this privilege. It may reasonably be held that passages should be granted only to those officers whose circumstances render periodical visits to England inevitable, and therefore that as a general rule the privilege should be confined to officers with a non-Asiatic domicile. It is difficult to see how any exception to this general rule can be made in favour of Indian officers of one particular Service as suggested by the Commission. I am directed to enquire whether the Government of Madras, etc., have any recommendation to make in favour of extending any passage concession to any officers of Asiatic domicile.

8. It would seem advisable to leave it to officers to draw on the passage fund to meet the cost of passages whenever it suits them to do so. It would be possible to lay down that each passage should be earned only after certain periods of service, but such a rule would give rise to a multitude of hard cases. The health of the officer or his family or the convenience of Government work often determine the date of leave home. From causes beyond his control an officer might be forced to make a voyage a few months before a passage became due. It may be wiser to avoid these occasions of hardship by allowing officers to take the passages when it suits them.

9. It is necessary to lay down a scale for officers now in service. The Commission suggest that an officer with less than 7 years' service should be entitled to 4 passages: with 7 years and less than 14 years to 3 passages ; with 14 and less than 21 years to 2 passages ; with 21 years and over to 1 passage. I am to ask whether the Government of Madras, etc., accept this scale. In the case of an officer who is already married at the date of the intoduction of the system the wife would naturally be entitled to the same number of passages as the officer is entitled to under the approved scale. With regard to marriages which take place subsequent to the introduction of the system, it seems advisable that the number of passages to which the wife is entitled should be reduced on the same scale as that proposed for officers now in service, that is to say if an officer marries within his first 7 years of service, his wife would be entitled to the full number of 4 passages ; if he marries after 7 years' service but with less than 14 years the wife would be entitled to 3 passages and so on.

10. With regard to children the Commission have proposed that the value of one single passage should be allowed for each child. In considering this proposal it should be remembered that one child under 3 years of age is carried free, and children who are not less than 3 years but less than 12 years of age are charged only half fare. It would seem necessary to lay down some restriction in the definition of children. When the system has been working for some time it may be anticipated that the whole credit of each child will be used up while it is still young, but at present senior officers will obviously have children of more mature years for whom claims may be made. I am to enquire whether it would be reasonable to prescribe that passage money should be drawn only for unmarried daughters and for sons under the age of 21.

11. The Commission appear to contemplate a separate passage fund administered by each local Government. It seems probable however that for the purposes of convenience and stability it would be preferable that there should be only one fund administerd by the Government of India. It would be necessary for the Government of India to assure itself that the payments into the fund would on the present level of passage rates cover the benefits laid down. It is probable however that in the first year or two after the introduction of the scheme there would be unusually heavy demands on the fund as officers who may have been for years unable to afford to take leave would be likely to take advantage of the new privilege. It is possible therefore that in the first two years there would be a temporary deficit in the fund, and it would seem necessary for the Government of India to finance this deficit.

12. It has been decided that in accordance with the recommendation of the Commission the financial relief which may be sanctioned for the Services should have effect from the 1st April 1924. This date, it is recognised, cuts right into the middle of the leave season and it is no doubt the case that a considerable number of officers and their families must have proceeded home during the month of March and would thus miss the concession by a few weeks or days. It is impossible to agree to any retrospective effect earlier than the first April 1924. To mitigate the hardship however it might be provided that any officer (or the family of an officer) who has proceeded to England before the 1st April but returns after that date would be entitled to draw against his credit the value of a single passage when the return journey takes place. It would have to be laid down that any sum thus drawn should be applied by the officer in the immediate reduction of any passage advance that may be outstanding against him.

13. It will be observed that the recommendations of the Commission are confined to officers of the Superior Civil Services. The recommendation excludes officers of the Provincial Services who are at present entitled if of non-Asiatic domicile to receive passage advances without interest. It is not possible for the Government of India or the Secretary of State to prescribe the remuneration of such officers or to direct that local Governments should grant them overseas pay for the purpose of enabling them to join the general passage fund. It would be open to any local Governments to grant them the necessary sum in the form of overseas pay and thus to secure their admission to the benefits of the fund, but this is a matter which must be left entirely to the option of the local Governments.

14. To sum up I am to ask for the views of the Government of Madras, etc., on the following points :—

(1) whether the principle of a passage fund is accepted, provided no legal difficulties are likely to arise.

(2) whether the scale of benefits proposed by the Commission is accepted.

(3) whether the value of these benefits should be credited to officers, who would be allowed to draw against these credits, as suggested in paragraph 6 of this letter.

(4) whether the benefits should be confined to officers of non-Asiatic domicile or whether any concessions should be given to any officers of Asiatic domicile.

(5) whether the suggested scale of reduction for officers now in service and for wives in the case of future marriages is appropriate.

(6) whether the suggested restriction on the definition of children is accepted.

(7) whether the proposal to have one single fund administered by the Government of India is approved.

(8) whether the concession suggested in paragraph 12 of this letter for officers who have proceeded home before the 1st April 1924, but return to India after that date is approved.

15. I am to invite attention to paragraph 31 of my letter No. 178/11/24-Ests., dated 21st June 1924 and to say that in this letter also it must be understood that arguments and practical considerations have been stated only with the object of facilitating discussion, and must not be taken as indicating any expression of views on the part of the Government of India.

16. In view of the great importance of arriving at an early decision on the points discussed in this letter I am to ask that the reply of the Government of Madras, etc., may reach the Government of India not later than the 4th August 1924.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF MADRAS, No. 546, DATED THE 4TH AUGUST 1924.

In reply to your letter No. F.-178/12/1924-Ests., dated 22nd June 1924, on the subject of the recommendations of the Royal Commission regarding passages, I am directed to say it appears to His Excellency the Governor in Council unnecessary to explore the various aspects of the subject presented in the letter under reply. The recommendation of the Commission is in substance that free passages should be given according to a specified scale; their estimate of the financial cost and the establishment of a pro forma fund appear to be only ancillary suggestions.

2. His Excellency the Governor in Council has no objection to the opening of a pro forma fund if it is decided that this will be the best method of keeping the power of grant in the hands of the Secretary of State and the Government of India. At the same time this plan appears rather clumsy and certain to provoke adverse criticism. His Excellency the Governor in Council would prefer to place the grant of passages as the Commission itself proposes in the contracts made between the Secretary of State and the officers of the various services concerned, such contracts being made retrospective from the 1st of April 1924. The provision of funds to meet the cost of passages each year would then be placed in the budget and would be votable, but the power of the Governor General and of Governors to certify and restore under Section 72-D (2) (a) of the Government of India Act should be exercised if the grant is refused. So far as the power of a Governor is concerned there can be little doubt that clause VII (4) of the Instrument of Instructions which charges him to safeguard the members of the services in the enjoyment of all recognised rights and privileges and to see that all things are ordered justly and reasonably in this regard would amply justify his granting the certificate necessary in order to carry out a legal obligation to the officers concerned.

3. His Excellency the Governor in Council accepts the scale of benefits proposed but can see no reason why the value of the benefit should be credited to individual officers or why they should be allowed to draw against these credits. They should be provided with passages in accordance with the numerical scale laid down. The actual cost of a passage taken should be allowed subject to the limit laid down, namely, a first class B passage by the P. and O. Line. His Excellency the Governor in Council does not anticipate that this will make officers travel by P. and O. exclusively, for many people prefer other lines, and, during the passage season, the P. and O. ships run full and could not take many more than they do now.

4. Regarding the point raised in paragraph 7 of the letter under reply His Excellency the Governor in Council would grant the privilege of free passages on the numerical scale laid down to officers of Asiatic domicile if they can satisfy the High Commissioner that they have wives or children in Europe.

5. His Excellency the Governor in Council accepts the numerical scale of passages set out in detail in paragraph 9 of your letter under reply for officers now in service and their wives and children. If the actual cost [subject to the limit, i.e., cost of 1st class (B), P. & O.] of the passages allowed is paid by Government there will be no complications to be provided for.

6. According to this Government's reading of the Commission's report, their recommendation in regard to children is that the cost of the passage of a child once from India to England is all that should be paid. As there is no charge for a child under 3 years of age, the reference can only be to children 3 years old or over. His Excellency the Governor in Council would fix the limit of age at 18.

7. If the device of a pro forma fund is adopted, His Excellency the Governor in Council considers it should be a single one maintained by the Government of India.

8. In paragraph 12 of the letter under reply the case of officers who have proceeded home before the 1st April 1924 and who return after that date is discussed. His Excellency the Governor in Council considers that such an officer may be given the option either of receiving the cost of a single passage from England to India according to the accommodation actually paid for by him and losing one of the passages which would otherwise stand to his credit, or of receiving nothing and retaining the full number of passages to his credit that the scheme allows.

9. Lastly, I am to refer to the case of an officer going home on leave preparatory to retirement. His Excellency the Governor in Council presumes that there will be no objection to allow such an officer the cost of the single passage home, provided he has a passage still to his credit. The point is mentioned as the Commission's recommendations seem to refer exclusively to return passages.

10. The views of the Honourable the Ministers are stated in their Memorandum forwarded with my letter No. 472-O., dated the 23rd July 1924.

Extract from a telegram from the Government of Bombay, dated the 5th August 1924.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL, No. 9398 A., DATED THE 9TH AUGUST 1924.

I am directed to refer to your letter No. F.-178/12/24-Ests., dated the 22nd June 1924, regarding the proposals of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India for the grant of passages to officers and their families when travelling to Europe on leave. Eight specific questions are raised in your letter. They have been considered by the Governor in Council and I am to reply to them as follows:—

(1) This Government accepts the principle of a passage fund, provided no legal difficulties are likely to arise.

(2) The Governor in Council accepts the scale of benefits proposed by the Commission.

(3) This Government agrees that the value of these benefits should be credited to officers who would be allowed to draw against these credits as suggested in paragraph 6 of your letter.

(4) The Governor in Council would modify the recommendation of the Commission by giving to officers for whom a training in England is a necessary preliminary to their appointment to Government service the same concessions as are allowed to non-Asiatic member of the service.

(5) For officers now in service with considerable seniority who have not derived the benefits now proposed in the matter of overseas pay and remittance, there appears to be a case for more liberal treatment than suggested. It is suggested that the proposals be modified as follows:

(a) Officers with less than 7 years' service to get four passages.

(b) An officer with 14—21 years' service will normally get 3 passages but if he had had less than one year's leave in terms of average salary at the date when the report was signed, he would get 4 passages.

(c) Similarly an officer with 14—21 years' service would get 3 passages if he had had less than two years' leave in terms of average salary; and

(d) an officer with more than 21 years' service would get 2 passages if he had had less than three years' leave in terms of average salary.

2. The Governor in Council accepts the suggestions as regards wives, subject to modification on the lines proposed above.

(6), (7) and (8). The Governor in Council approves of all these suggestions.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED PROVINCES, No. 3762, DATED THE 26TH JULY 1924.

I am directed to reply, on behalf of the Governor in Council, to Home Department letter No. 178/12/24-Ests., dated the 22nd June, 1924. As in other replies on the Commission's report, the paragraphs in this letter will correspond with the heads of the summary in paragraph 14. The reply is subject to the note of the Hon'ble Home Member forwarded as an annexure to this Government's letter No. 3328, dated the 8th July, 1924. A copy of that note is attached* for reference.

(1) "whether the principle of a passage fund is accepted, provided no legal difficulties are likely to arise."

Though the Commission's proposal has taken a somewhat ingenious financial form, it is in itself simple and straightforward and has appealed to service opinion as providing an immediate and reasonable solution of this particular difficulty. It is undesirable that the concession should be hedged round with intricate detail. The proposed fund will have all the advantages, stated with the object of facilitating discussion in paragraph 1 of the Home Department's letter, and it has the great merit of limiting actual expenditure to the object which it is desired to secure, namely the provision of a definite number of passages earned by certain definite conditions of service. It is clear too that the fund will pay its way. The proposed concessions run no risk of straining the financial stability of the fund. An officer will earn a passage concession on the Rs. 50 a month calculation well within each of the several periods of service which entitle him to it, whilst the single claim granted to officers of over 21 years service will be based on payments made during the whole of the rest of their service, a period which may extend to 14 years. The principle is therefore accepted provided no legal difficulties arise.

(2) "whether the scale of benefits proposed by the Commission is accepted."

This is accepted, though the scale is illiberal to officers of over 21 years service.

(3) "whether the value of these benefits should be credited to officers, who would be allowed to draw against these credits, as suggested in paragraph 6 of this letter."

* Not printed with this letter.

The Governor in Council accepts this solution. It involves no serious departure from the proposals of the Commission, and it obviates the difficulty, to which the Government of India draw attention in para. 4 of their letter.

(4) "whether the benefits should be confined to officers of non-Asiatic domicile or whether any concessions should be given to any officers of Asiatic domicile."

The Governor in Council can find no valid reason for granting passage concessions to officers of Asiatic domicile. The visits of European officers to England stand on an entirely different footing from those of Indian officers. The former have been from the beginning implicit in the terms of service, and the whole structure of the European leave rules is due to this fact.

With regard to paragraph 8 the Governor in Council considers that the rules on the subject should be as elastic and as free from restrictions as it is possible to make them.

(5) "whether the suggested scale of reduction for officers now in service and for wives in the case of future marriages is appropriate."

This is accepted. It has, however, been remarked that the scale is illiberal to officers of over 21 years standing. It would be a simple and equitable improvement of the scale to lay down that such officers, on completing a further period of 7 years service, should thereby become entitled to one additional passage concession applicable, as in other cases, to wife and children.

(6) "whether the suggested restriction on the definition of children is accepted."

This is accepted as a reasonable solution.

(7) "whether the proposal to have one single fund administered by the Government of India is approved."

So long as there is a single public account, it is advisable that this fund should remain Imperial. But should the accounts of the provinces ever be separated, then the fund, being financed from provincial moneys directly, should form part of the resources that would then be presumably handed over to the provinces.

(8) "whether the concession suggested in paragraph 12 of this letter for officers who have proceeded home before the 1st April, 1924, but return to India after that date, is approved."

Officers might well be given this option. It would create a good impression and involves no extention of the ultimate financial obligations. The recommendations of the Royal Commission are, taken together, clearly minimum recommendations. The Commission's discussion of pay and allowances in chapter VI of their report makes it clear that in more propitious circumstances they would have made more liberal recommendations. They describe the improvement in emoluments recommended as absolutely necessary. They have clearly yielded only such ground as was absolutely indefensible, in view of the urgent need for economy in Indian administration. This being so, the Governor in Council attaches great importance to a frank and full acceptance of the recommendations made. He would again refer to paragraph 108 of the Commission's report where the interdependence of the recommendations is so emphatically insisted upon. The improvements in pay and emoluments proposed in chapter VI are bound up with the passage concessions, with the provision of European medical attendance, with the recommendations for recalculating house rent and with improved pensions in the uncovenanted services. It is in every way desirable that within the limits of the actual recommendations, the utmost freedom and elasticity should be aimed at in the consequential rules and regulations. The position contemplated in paragraph 12 affords an opportunity for the liberal application of the passage concession. The cost will be nothing, and the impression will be good. The Governor in Council recommends that the suggestion be carried out.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PUNJAB, No. 18929-GAZETTE, DATED THE 5TH OF AUGUST 1924.

I am directed by the Governor in Council to reply to the questions summarised in paragraph 14 of your letter No. F.-178/12/24-Ests., dated the 22nd of June 1924, on the above subject. In replying to paragraph 2 (f) of your letter No. F.-172/24-Ests., dated the 18th of June 1924, the Punjab Government have already expressed their general agreemen with the proposition that provision should be made for passages for officers and their families at a cost approximately equivalent to Rs. 50 per mensem for each officer.

2. (1) "Whether the principle of a passage fund is accepted provided no legal difficulties are likely to arise".

The Governor in Council accepts this principle.

(2) "Whether the scale of benefits proposed by the Commission is accepted."

The scale of benefits proposed by the Commission appears to this Government to be suitable, but I am to suggest (a) that the term "passage" should be held to include the cost of the journey by land to and from the port of embarkation in India; and (b) that a considerable economy could be effected by excluding from the benefit of the scheme unmarried officers of more than seven years' service, who are, in the opinion of this Government, well able to afford to pay for their own passages. A suggestion has been made by a certain service association that on an officer's retirement, the officer and his wife should be allowed extra single passages for their return to Europe in addition to the passages permissible under the scale proposed. The Governor in Council is not, however, prepared to support this claim.

(3) "Whether the value of these benefits should be credited to officers who would be allowed to draw against these credits as suggested in paragraph 6 of the letter of the Government of India".

The procedure contemplated by this proposition commends itself to this Government as suitable.

(4) "Whether the benefits should be confined to officers of non-Asiatic domicile, or whether any concessions should be given to officers of Asiatic domicile".

The Governor in Council is of opinion that the benefits should be confined to officers of non-Asiatic domicile with one exception, which is noted below. He regrets that he is unable to follow the recommendation of the Royal Commission that it should be extended to Indian officers of the Indian Civil Service in receipt of overseas pay, but should not extend to their families. In the first place it appears to the Governor in Council that any such discrimination in favour of a single service is bound to cause much discontent. Secondly, a partial extension of the concession cannot, in his view, be justified. Indian Officers should either be excluded entirely or given the full benefits. In the view of the Governor in Council it is impossible to accept the position that a voyage to England is in the case of Indian Officers absolutely necessary for their bodily and mental recuperation, and experience has shown that in actual practice Indian officers of the Indian Civil Service very seldom revisit England. In any case it is difficult to justify a passage to England in preference to, say, America or Japan. For these reasons the Governor in Council would give Indian officers only travelling expenses to their home in India.

An exception to this principle should, however, be made in favour of European officers of technically Asiatic domicile, who are now in receipt of overseas pay. Many such officers are for practical purposes domiciled in Europe. They send their children to England for education, visit England on leave, and contemplate settling on retirement in England. Their exclusion from the benefits of the passage concession would, in the opinion of this Government, be a hardship.

(5) "Whether the suggested scale of reduction for officers now in service and for wives in the case of future marriages is appropriate".

It has been represented to the Governor-in-Council that the scale of reduction proposed does not confer sufficient benefits on officers now in the service. I am accordingly to suggest the substitution of the following scale for the scale proposed in paragraph 63 of the Royal Commission's report:

Officer's service at the date when the Scheme comes into effect.	Number of return passages for the officer and his wife.
Less than 10 years	4
Over 10 years and less than 20 years	3
Over 20 years and less than 25 years	2
25 years and over	1

With regard to marriages which take place subsequent to the introduction of this system, the Governor-in-Council agrees to the proposal contained in paragraph 9 of your letter, it being understood that the scale of reduction should correspond to any scale approved for officers now in service.

(6) " Whether the suggested restriction on the definition of children is accepted ".

The Governor-in-Council accepts the proposed restriction but would suggest that the term children be taken to include step-children dependent on the officer.

(7) " Whether the proposal to have one fund administered by the Government of India is accepted ".

This proposal is accepted.

(8) " Whether the concession suggested in paragraph12 of the letter of the Government of India for officers who have proceeded home before the 1st of April 1924, but return to India after that date, is approved."

This proposal is approved.

GOVERNMENT OF BURMA.

APPOINTMENT DEPARTMENT.

LETTER FROM MR. F. LEWISOHN, C.B.E., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BURMA HOME AND POLITICAL DEPARTMENT, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, No. 404-A.-24, DATED RANGOON, THE 28TH JULY 1924.

SUBJECT :—Proposals of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India in respect of grant of passages.

I am directed to convey the views of this Government on the eight points enumerated in paragraph 14 of your letter No. E.-178—12-24-S., dated the 22nd June 1924. This Government is strongly in favour of the principle of a passage fund. It considers that the scale of benefits proposed by the Commission is suitable. This Government is in favour of the solution suggested in paragraph 6 of your letter whereby each officer will be credited with the value of four passages 1st class by B. P. and O. for himself and the appropriate number for his wife and children and allowed to draw against his credit the sums which he actually spends on passages for himself, his wife and his children. The Hon'ble the Finance Member, however, considers that the value of passages by the Bibby line should be credited in the case of officers serving in Burma. The question whether benefits should be confined to officers of non-Asiatic domicile is a difficult one, and there is no doubt that there is much to be said for the suggestion in paragraph 7 of your letter that passages should be granted to officers whose circumstances render periodical visits to England inevitable. There are obviously cases in which an Asiatic member of the Indian Civil Service married to a European wife might have as good a claim for the passage concession as a European member of the Service. There are however almost insuperable difficulties in introducing a criterion of that sort. On the whole, in view of the paramount importance of accepting the Commission's recommendations wherever possible and not whittling them down, the Local Government is of opinion that the concession to Indian officers of the Indian Civil Service, recommended by the Commission in paragraph 63 of the Report, should be accepted as it stands. The Hon'ble the Finance Member, however, is opposed to the acceptance of this recommendation. The Local Government accepts the scale for officers now in the service, suggested by the Commission, and the scale proposed in paragraph 9 of your letter in the case of officers who marry on a date subsequent to the introduction of the scheme. The Local Government accepts the proposals that passage money should be drawn only for unmarried daughters and for sons under the age of 21.

2. The Local Government is strongly in favour of a separate passage fund administered by each Local Government. It is not anticipated that the necessity for financing the initial deficit will be beyond provincial resources. On the other hand each Province is clearly entitled to the financial advantage which will accrue from having the custody of the fund, when the scheme is in full working.

3. The Local Government accepts the proposal made in paragraph 12 of your letter to the effect that any officer (or the family of an officer) who proceeded to England before the 1st April 1924 but returned after that date, should be entitled to draw against his credit the value of a single passage when the return journey takes place, the sum so drawn to be applied in the immediate reduction of any passage advance that may be outstanding against him.

4. The Hon'ble the Education Minister's concurrence in the recommendations made in this letter is subject to the qualifications indicated in my telegram No. 790, dated the 21st July.

GOVERNMENT OF BIHAR AND ORISSA.

APPOINTMENT DEPARTMENT.

LETTER FROM E. L. L. HAMMOND, ESQ., C.B.E., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BIHAR AND ORISSA, APPOINTMENT DEPARTMENT, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, No. 1967-A.R., DATED RANCHI, THE 2ND AUGUST 1924.

SUBJECT :—Proposals of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India regarding the grant of passages.

I am directed to reply to your letter No. F.-178—12-24-Ests., dated the 2nd June 1924, on the subject of the proposals of the Royal Commission on the superior services in India for the grant of passages to officers and their families when travelling to Europe on leave. The views of the local Government on the points raised in paragraph 14 of your letter are as follows :

(1) The principle of a passage fund is accepted, provided there be no legal difficulties. It appears to be preferable to any of the other alternatives suggested.

(2) The scale of benefits proposed by the Commission is accepted by the local Government.

The Hon'ble Minister, Department of Education, would restrict the concession of free passages to officers themselves and not extend it to their families.

(3) The system proposed in paragraph 6 of your letter appears to His Excellency in Council to offer the simplest solution of the question. It would also seem advisable as proposed in paragraph 8, leave it to officers to draw on the passage fund to meet the cost of passages when it suits them to do so.

(4) The Commission have recommended that the passage concession should be restricted to officers of non-Asiatic domicile, except that it should also be granted to Indian officers of the Indian Civil Service recruited by the Secretary of State who receive overseas pay, in respect of themselves, but not their families. As pointed out by the Government of India, it is difficult to understand why this limited exception was made in favour of a particular service or to justify it. His Excellency in Council considers that it is impossible to make an exception in favour of Indian officers in one particular service. If an exception is to be made at all it would have to be made to the same extent in favour of all the superior services, but the local Government do not think there is sufficient justification for granting this concession to any Indian officers. All such officers in the superior services, who are entitled to overseas pay, will reap considerable advantage from the increases granted in that allowance (though neither that pay nor its increase was primarily designed to meet their necessities), and also from the remittance benefit, where that is applicable, and the local Government are not therefore in favour of making any exception in favour of Indian officers in respect of this additional concession [~

(5) The suggested scale of benefit for officers now in the services and for wives in the case of future marriages, is accepted as appropriate.

(6) His Excellency in Council agrees that it is reasonable to prescribe that passage money should be drawn only for unmarried daughters and for sons under the age of 21.

(7) The proposal that there should be one central passage fund administered by the Government of India, is strongly supported by the Local Government.

(8) His Excellency in Council agrees to the arrangement regarding return passages suggested in paragraph 12 of your letter in respect of officers (and their families) who went home in the last leave season just before the 1st April 1924.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE CENTRAL PROVINCES, No. 2887—1287-III, DATED THE 29TH JULY 1924.

I am directed to reply to Government of India letter No. F.-178/12/24-Ests., dated the 22nd June 1924, regarding the proposals of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India for the grant of passages to officers and their families when travelling to Europe on leave.

2. Paragraph 14 of Government of India letter, Point (1).—The principle of a passage fund is accepted, provided no legal difficulties are likely to arise.

3. Point (2).—In its original recommendation to the Royal Commission the local Government recommended the grant of the cost of a second class passage, by the P. & O., for an officer, his wife and children once every four years, the maximum number granted in an officer's service being five return passages, plus a single passage on retirement. The local Government now accepts as reasonable the scale of benefits proposed by the Commission.

4. Point (3).—The solution proposed by the Government of India in paragraph 6 of their letter, that each officer should be given a certain credit and allowed to draw against that credit, has the advantage of giving elasticity to the concession and is approved by the local Government. The local Government desires to put forward a further suggestion that those officers, who have passage advances outstanding on the 1st April 1924, should be given the option of having the advances refunded and debited to their passage account. This suggestion will come as a relief to a number of officers who have mortgaged their future pay by these advances and will not add to the cost of the concession.

5. Point (4).—Regarding the grant of the passage concession to officers of Asiatic domicile, the Association of Indian Officers in this province has submitted the following representation:

> "As the Commission has given no reasons for its recommendations, my Association can only guess the reason that influenced them in recommending that free passages should be granted to Indian Officers of the Indian Civil Service in receipt of overseas pay. The largest number of Indian Officers in the Superior Services in India belong to the Indian Civil Service, and it is in this service that the need of men who are alive to British traditions of service, or who possess a breadth of outlook in administrative matters, is greatest. This consideration no doubt induced the Commission to recommend the extension of the passage concession to Indian Officers of the Indian Civil Service. The latter's claim to equality of treatment with European officers must also have been partially recognised. It will not, my Association thinks, be denied that the general standard of living and the outlook on life of Indians in the Indian Civil Service, which is permanently influenced by their long sojourn in England, make it only natural that they should undertake periodical visits to England not only for the purpose of recuperating their health, but also for keeping in touch with modern British tradition and European thought. My Association is confident that the increase in their efficiency as a result of these visits to England will be more than commensurate with the small additional expenditure that will be incurred by the extending to them of the free passage concession. Further, my Association is unable to understand why the Commission has not recommended any passage concessions for the wives and children of Indian Officers of the Indian Civil Service. This is an anomalous position and my Association considers that this concession should be extended to the wives and children of Indian Officers on the same conditions as those of European Officers. My Association also thinks that similar passage concessions should be extended to all Indian Officers who are in receipt of overseas pay."

The local Government does not consider the case for the grant of the concession to any officer of Asiatic domicile to be strong and is, therefore, unable to support it.

6. Point (5).—The suggestions made in paragraph 9 of the Government of India letter, regarding the scale of reduction for officers now in service and for wives in the case of future marriages, are accepted as appropriate by the local Government.

7. Point (6).—The restriction of the definition of children, suggested in paragraph 10 of the Government of India letter, is approved by the local Government. The local Government also suggests that no credit should be given for a child in an officer's account until the child has attained the age of 3 years.

8. Point (7).—The proposal to have one single fund administered by the Government of India is approved.

9. Point (8).—The concession suggested in paragraph 12 of the Government of India letter for officers who have proceeded home before the 1st April 1924, but return to India after that date, commends itself to the local Government.

GOVERNMENT OF ASSAM.

THE GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL.

APPOINTMENT AND POLITICAL DEPARTMENT.
APPOINTMENT BRANCH.

LETTER FROM A. W. BOTHAM, ESQ., C.I.E., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF ASSAM, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, No. APPTT.-1114—4252-A.P., DATED SHILLONG, THE 4TH AUGUST 1924.

I am directed to invite a reference to your letter No. F.-178/12/24-Ests., dated the 22nd of June 1924, and to communicate the views of the Government of Assam on the Royal Commission's proposals for the grant of passages to officers and families when travelling to Europe on leave.

(1) The Government of Assam accept the principle of a passage fund on the lines suggested in the first paragraph of your letter, provided that no legal difficulties are likely to arise.

(2) The Assam Association of European Government Servants, whose opinion on the Royal Commission's proposals was asked by this Government, consider that the scale of benefits proposed by the Commission is inadequate, more particularly from the point of view of office 's who have completed one-half or more of their service. It is represented that while the scale proposed by the Commission would be suitable for a term of service not exceeding 25 years, it cannot be said to be adequate for a term of 30 and still less for a term of 35 years, more especially as it is during the latter half of an officer's service that the need for periodic recuperation makes itself most felt. While admitting that most officers do as a matter of fact take leave home oftener than once in seven years, the Government of Assam are not prepared to recommend a more liberal scale than that proposed by the Commission. They would however commend to the favourable consideration of the Government of India a suggestion which has been put forward by the Assam Branch of the Indian Civil Service Association, that, inasmuch as an officer's passage out on joining his first appointment is paid by Government, his final passage home on relinquishing his last appointment should be similarly paid. The Association point out that single passages home for themselves and their families are granted to officers retiring on proportionate pension before the completion of their service, and urge that there are no good reasons for withholding a similar privilege from officers who have loyally adapted themselves to the new conditions and given to the Government of India their full term of service.

The Government of Assam also consider that officers proceeding on leave should be allowed to draw the actual railway fares for themselves and their families to the port of embarkation in addition to the cost of their passages by sea. This is a point of some importance to officers serving in an inland province like Assam.

(3) The Government of Assam agree that the arrangements proposed in paragraph 6 of your letter would provide the simplest solution. It is however observed that both in the Commission's report and in your letter the discussion has been confined to passages to Europe evidently because Europe is the normal destination for the vast majority of officers of non-Asiatic domicile proceeding on leave. There are, however, in the services a certain number of officers whose homes are in the British Colonies and Dominions. For such officers the Government of Assam consider that the passage concession should take the form of the equivalent of a 1st class B, P. and O. passage to London or the actual cost price of a passage to their colony, whichever is less.

(4) The question whether the proposed benefits should be confined to officers of non-Asiatic domicile, or whether any concession should be given to officers of Asiatic domicile, should in the opinion of the Government of Assam be decided solely by the criterion of domicile. As a general rule officers of Indian birth will have no equitable claim to these benefits, but the Government of Assam would not withhold them from officers who, though of Indian birth, have married an English wife or formed connections in England which have practically changed their domicile.

(5) Subject to the remarks made above regarding the adequacy of the general scale proposed, the Government of Assam consider that the suggested scale of reduction for officers now in service and for wives in the case of future marriages is appropriate.

(6) The Government of Assam are inclined to think that the definition of children proposed in paragraph 10 of your letter is unduly liberal, and would be prepared to agree to the restriction of this concession to children not exceeding 12 years of age, or, as an alternative, it might be provided that in no case should a child receive more than one single half passage.

(7) The Government of Assam support the Government of India's proposal that there should be the central passage fund under the administration of the Government of India.

(8) In the opinion of the Government of Assam the concession suggested in paragraph 12 of your letter for officers who have proceeded home before the 1st of April 1924 is equitable. It has been suggested, however, that in certain circumstances it might not pay an officer to accept this concession, if by such acceptance he lost one of the return passages to which he would otherwise be entitled under the Commission's scheme. The Government of Assam would therefore leave it to the officers concerned to decide whether they should avail themselves of the concession proposed in paragraph 12 of your letter.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

ESTABLISHMENTS.

LETTER FROM THE HON'BLE MR. J. CRERAR, C.S.I., C.I.E., SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, TO ALL LOCAL GOVERNMENTS, No. F.-178/13/24-ESTS., DATED SIMLA, THE 22ND JUNE 1924.

With reference to my letter No. F.-172/24-Ests., dated the 18th June 1924, I am directed to address you regarding the proposals of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India in respect of pensions. At present the same scale of pension is laid down for practically all officers other than officers of the Indian Civil Service and military officers, whether they belong to Superior or Provincial Services. The scale is based on sixtieths of average emoluments of the last 3 years preceding retirement. The maximum pension is earned by 30 years' service at which time a pension of 30/60 of average emoluments is earned, but the scale of sixtieths is restricted by the application of certain maxima. The maximum pension that can be earned at 25 years' service is Rs. 5,000 and the maximum at 30 years' service is Rs. 6,000. The Commission have proposed that the maximum for the pension of 25 years and over should be raised by Rs. 1,000. Thus at 25 years' service the maximum would become Rs. 6,000 instead of Rs. 5,000 and at 30 years' service the maximum would become Rs. 7,000 instead of Rs. 6,000. I am to ask whether the Government of Madras, etc., consider this increase reasonable.

2. As stated above the existing rules apply not only to the Superior but also to the Provincial Services. The Commission was dealing primarily with the Superior Civil Services. It is not stated whether they contemplate that their recommendation should apply also to any Provincial Service officers who might benefit thereby. The number of such officers would be few. No officer who retires with average emoluments which do not exceed Rs. 1,000 a month could receive any benefit from this concession. The number of officers in Provincial Services whose average emoluments on retirement exceed Rs. 1,000 a month must be very limited. The Government of India would be glad to know whether the Government of Madras, etc., consider that the amendment in the pension rules suggested by the Commission should be introduced as a general amendment or should be specifically restricted to the Superior Services.

3. It will be observed that the proposal of the Commission makes no distinction between European and Indian officers. All officers whose average emoluments on retirement exceed Rs. 1,000 a month would benefit. This conclusion might be supported on the ground that Indians in the Superior Services are by the operation of the present maxima restricted to pensions which appear in reference to their status unfavourable compared with the pensions of Indians in the Provincial Services. I am to ask whether the Government of Madras, etc., accept this view.

4. Officers of the Indian Forest Service, Indian Service of Engineers and certain other services enjoy at present the privilege of retiring after 20 years' service with a maximum pension of Rs. 4,000 a year. The Commission have made no recommendation with regard to this 4,000 rupee pension, presumably holding that there is no reason why Government should facilitate the voluntary retirement of an officer at 20 years' service by increasing his pension. I am to ask whether the Government of Madras, etc., accept the view which was evidently taken by the Commission that the maximum for the 20-year pension should remain at Rs. 4,000, though the maximum for the 25-year pension would be raised from Rs. 5,000 to Rs. 6,000.

5. The pension in the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service is governed by special rules. It has been decided that it is not desirable to encourage women to serve in India for more than 25 years. Accordingly the maximum pension for women is fixed at 25 years' service, no subsequent service qualifying for a higher pension. At the same time women are allowed to retire after 20 years' service. The rates of pension are, after 20 years 20-60ths of average emoluments with a maximum of Rs. 4,000 rising each year to 25-60ths after 25 years' service with a maximum of Rs. 5,000. The maxima are by length of service the same as those for the other Uncovenanted Services. The Commission have recommended that this service should receive equivalent benefits to those recommended for the other services. It would therefore appear that the maximum for the 20-year pension should be raised from Rs. 4,000 to Rs. 5,000 and the maximum for the 25-year pension from Rs. 5,000 to Rs. 6,000. The suggestion to raise the 20-year pension in the case of the women's branch of the Indian Educational Service can be differentiated from the suggestion of leaving the 20-year pension of the Indian Forest Service and the Indian Service of Engineers untouched, on the ground that in the one case Government does not wish to encourage retirement at 20 years' service, whereas in the other they have decided that it is reasonable that women should be allowed to retire after a shorter period of service. The 20-year pension in the case of women in fact corresponds to the 25-year pension in the case of men.

6. The proposals of the Commission in paragraph 68 of their Report that members of the Indian Civil Service who attain the rank of Member of Council or Governor of a Province should receive increased pension will be dealt with in a separate letter.

7. The recommendation that the maximum ordinary pension of the Uncovenanted Services from 25 years onwards should be raised by Rs. 1,000 seems to involve a reconsideration of the invalid pension rates. At present these rise steadily by Rs. 200 a year from Rs. 2,000 after 10 years' service up to a maximum of Rs. 4,800 at 24 years' service. Those who have not completed 10 years' service receive only a gratuity. The Commission propose to give a pension after 7 instead of after 10 years' completed service, and they amend the scale from 10 years onwards by the process of adding Rs. 1,000 in each year. It appears that this gives too great an advantage in the earlier years. It would seem that the increase should be added by degrees spread over the whole period. On the other hand it might be suggested that as a proportionate pension is granted after 5 completed years of service, it would not be unreasonable that the invalid pension should commence at 5 years' completed service instead of at 7 as proposed by the Commission. If these suggestions are approved the invalid pension might start at Rs. 1,000 after 5 years' completed service and rise steadily by Rs. 250 a year up to Rs. 5,750 at 24 years' service. I am to enquire whether the Government of Madras, etc., consider that this scale would be suitable.

8. If the rates of ordinary pension are raised as recommended by the Commission, it is necessary to consider whether the rates of proportionate pension should be proportionately increased. This is a point which has not been dealt with by the Commission. The present proportionate pension for the Uncovenanted Services is based on the assumption that an officer will be likely after 26 years' active service to have earned the full 30-year ordinary pension plus the full lower additional pension, i.e., Rs. 6,000 plus Rs. 1,500= Rs. 7,500. If the full ordinary pension plus the lower additional pension is raised to Rs. 8,500, it may be argued that the new figure should be substituted for the old in the calculations of proportionate pension. The result would be that in paragraph 3 (d) of the second schedule of the rules under section 96-B (2) and (3) of the Government of India Act regulating premature retirement on proportionate pension published with notification No. F.-868/22, dated the 1st March 1924 the figure '8500' would be substituted for '7500' and '7000' for '6000' and '9500' for '8500.' Similarly in paragraph 3 (e) dealing with relief to the women's branch of the Indian Educational Service Rs. '6,000' would be substituted for Rs. '5,000.'

9. To sum up I am to ask for the opinion of the Government of Madras, etc., on the following points :—

(1) whether the proposal to increase the maximum of the pension of the Uncovenanted Services by Rs. 1,000 from 25 years onwards is approved ;

(2) whether this concession, if approved, should be open to officers other than those of the Superior Services ;

(3) whether the concession should be granted to Indian as well as European officers ;

(4) whether the maximum of the 20 years' pension for the Indian Forest Service and Indian Service of Engineers should remain at Rs. 4,000 ;

(5) whether the maxima for the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service should be raised as suggested in paragraph 5 of this letter ;

(6) whether the rates of invalid pension for the Uncovenanted Services should be raised as suggested in paragraph 7 of this letter ;

(7) whether the rates of proportionate pension should be increased as suggested in paragraph 8 of this letter.

10. I am to invite attention to paragraph 31 of my letter No. F.-178/11/24-Ests., dated the 21st June 1924 and to say that in this letter also it must be understood that arguments and practical considerations have been stated only with the object of facilitating discussion, and must not be taken as indicating any expression of views on the part of the Government of India.

11. In view of the great importance of arriving at an early decision on the points discussed in this letter, I am to request that the reply of the Government of Madras, etc., may reach the Government of India not later than the 4th August 1924.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF MADRAS, NO. 602, DATED THE 22ND AUGUST 1924.

In reply to your letter No. 178/13/24-Ests., dated the 22nd June 1924, I am to say that His Excellency the Governor in Council accepts the proposal of the Royal Commission that the maximum pension for a service of 25 years and over should be raised by Rs. 1,000. His Excellency the Governor in Council considers further that the enhanced scale should apply generally, just as the present scale does, both to officers in the Provincial Services as well as to those in the All-India Services. Nor would His Excellency the Governor in Council make any distinction in this matter between Indian and European Officers.

2. Regarding the point raised in paragraph 4 of the letter under reply His Excellency the Governor in Council does not consider that the special pension of Rs. 4,000 a year admissible to officers of the Indian Forest Service and some others should be enhanced

The terms on which invalid and proportionate pensions are now given are liberal and there appear no special reasons why such officers retiring of their own volition after 20 years' service should get an increase in their special pension.

3. In the case of the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service, His Excellency the Governor in Council considers that, as the cost of maintenance and education of children is one of the chief items of additional expenditure the proposed increase in pension is intended to meet and as this factor will not operate in the case of pensioners of this branch of the service, no increase in the scale of pension now admissible is required.

4. It is noted that the proposals of the Commission in regard to members of the Indian Civil Service who are appointed Members of Council will be dealt with separately. His Excellency the Governor in Council is compelled however to take this opportunity to point out that the discrimination which the Commission have made in the matter of pensions between the Uncovenanted Services and the Indian Civil Service is entirely unfair to those officers of the Indian Civil Service who entered the service before 1919. The Royal Commission, it is observed, accept £250 a year as the value of the 4% contribution from their salaries paid by Indian Civil Service officers till 1919. On this basis those members of the Indian Civil Service who retire during the next few years will get a pension from the State of certainly not more than £800 a year (allowing for the refund of contributions), with a small lump sum grant, while those officers of other services who retire after holding appointments classed as "Upper Grade" are to receive a pension of £831-5-0. The Islington Commission regarded £1,000 as a suitable pension for the Indian Civil Service; but under the arrangements introduced and in force the pension given by the State to the officers already in the service is smaller in proportion as their service is longer. The illogical and inequitable nature of the arrangement becomes further evident when it is remembered that the increase in the pensions paid by the State is called for by the increase in the present cost of living. Those who required relief most were therefore those who were presently to retire. Instead of dealing with their case, however, the present arrangements give the increased pension in full to officers who retire 20 years hence when prices may well have fallen but little or nothing to those affected by the present high level.

5. His Excellency the Governor in Council considers that the inequality may well be supplied by the grant of an additional pension on a sliding scale, e.g., officers who retired in 1920 should get an extra pension of £250 and those who retired in 1921, £240 and so on, the extra pension diminishing by £10 a year till 20 years hence when an officer retiring will get no enhanced pension. If it is thought undesirable to give any retrospective effect to this relief, it may be made to apply to those only who retire after the 1st April 1924, the amount of the extra pension admissible in 1921-22 being fixed at £200.

6. His Excellency the Governor in Council agrees that the raising of the maximum ordinary pension of the uncovenanted services involves an alteration of the invalid pension rates. Bearing in mind that these pensions are to be admissible to services both Provincial and All-India and to Indians and Europeans alike, there is, I am to say, no sufficient justification in ordinary cases of invaliding for imposing the burden of a pension on the Government in the case of officers of less than 10 years' service. Special cases are provided for by the grant of wound and extraordinary pensions. For 10 years' service therefore, His Excellency the Governor in Council would fix Rs. 3,000 per annum as the maximum pension and would increase this maximum by Rs. 200 for every additional year of service till Rs. 6,000 is reached as the maximum for 25 years' service.

7. If the rates of ordinary pensions are raised as proposed by the Commisson, it follows that the rates of proportionate pension must also be raised. His Excellency the Governor in Council agrees in the proposal made in paragraph 8 of the letter under reply to substitute the new maximum limits of pension for the old in the rules relating to proportionate pensions.

8. The views of the Hon'ble the Ministers on the subject of pensions has been stated in their Memorandum forwarded with my letter No. 472/0-1, dated the 23rd July 1924 and in paragraph 8 of that letter the attitude of the Hon'ble Sir Muhammad Habibullah has been stated.

Letter No. 178-13-24. Questions 1, 3, 4, 6 accepted.

Question 2 not clearly understood. Presumably officers other than those of All-India Services are meant and it covers members of the Bombay Provincial Service holding listed posts and holders of special posts who are entitled to pensions. If so concessions should be extended to them. Questions 5 and 7 not accepted.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL, NO. 9301-A., DATED THE 7TH AUGUST 1924.

I am directed to refer to your letter No. F.-178-13-24-Ests., dated the 22nd June 1924, regarding the proposals of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India in respect of pensions. In reply to the points summarised in paragraph 9 of your letter, the opinion of the Governor in Council is as follows:—

(1) He approves the proposal to increase the maximum of the pension of the Uncovenanted Services by Rs. 1,000 from 25 years onwards.

(2) This concession should be open to officers other than those of the Superior Services.

(3) The concession should be granted to Indian as well as European officers.

(4) The maximum of the 20 years' pension for the Indian Forest Service and Indian Service of Engineers should be raised to Rs. 4,750 or Rs. 5,000 according as the proposals of the Government of India or of the Royal Commission regarding the rates of invalid pension are accepted, for if the maximum of the 20 years' pension remains at Rs. 4,000 an officer would be able to draw for the same number of years a much larger maximum if he retired on an invalid pension.

(5) The maximum for the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service should be raised as suggested in paragraph 5 of your letter.

(6) The rates of proportionate pension should be increased as suggested in paragraph 8 of your letter.

2. The question whether the rates of invalid pension for the Uncovenanted Services should be those as suggested in paragraph 7 of your letter or those recommended by the Royal Commission is still under the consideration of the Governor in Council, and a further reply on this point will be submitted shortly. I am, however, to submit an advance reply on the other points, in order that there may be no avoidable delay.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL, NO. 9876-A., DATED THE 21ST AUGUST 1924.

I am directed to refer to my letter No. 9301-A., dated the 7th August 1924. It was stated in that letter that the question whether the rates of invalid pension for the uncovenanted services should be those suggested in paragraph 7 of your letter or those recommended by the Royal Commission, was still under the consideration of the Governor in Council. The Governor in Council has now considered the point and is of opinion that the rates of invalid pension recommended by the Royal Commission should be adopted. It will follow that the maximum of the 20 years' pension for the Indian Forest Service and the Indian Service of Engineers, should be raised to Rs. 5,000.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED PROVINCES, NO. 3763, DATED THE 26TH JULY 1924.

I am directed to reply, on behalf of the Governor in Council, to the Home Department letter No. F.-178-13-24-Ests., dated June 22, 1924. As in previous letters the paragraphs below will refer separately to each head of the summary in para. 9. The reply is subject to the note of the Hon. Home Member forwarded as an annexure to this Government's letter No. 3328, dated July 8, 1924. A copy of the note* is attached for reference.

(1) "Whether the proposal to increase the maximum of the pension of the Uncovenanted Services by Rs. 1,000 from 25 years onwards is approved."

This is accepted. The inter-dependence of this recommendation with the other proposals contained in chapters VI, VII and XI should be borne in mind.

(2) "Whether this concession, if approved, should be open to officers other than those of the Superior Services."

This the Governor in Council would answer in the negative. It may be safely taken that the Commission's recommendation in this instance was intended to apply only to the superior services. Their enquiry was primarily limited to the superior civil services, and the argument from silence has here no validity. On the merits the Governor in Council would restrict the concession to the superior services. The superior services are paid at higher rates as being employed on more important duties and this fact is sufficient to justify more liberal pension rates. The fact that few officers of the present provincial services would qualify for a rate higher than Rs. 5,000 per annum, does not in itself furnish a compelling reason for the suggested extension of the maxima. The chief consideration however which impresses the Governor in Council is that under the new systems of recruitment for the All-India Services liberal provision is made for the promotion of deserving officers from the existing provincial services. It is clear that in future the best men will not be shut out from the higher rates of pension, and this being so, His Excellency in Council thinks it unnecessary to go further.

(3) "Whether the concession should be granted to Indian as well as European officers."

The Governor in Council would answer this in the affirmative. It would, he considers, be invidious to differentiate in the matter of pension. Such differentiation as is politic already exists in the time scale. Further differentiation, if found at any future time to be necessary, should operate in the direction of bringing basic pay into more exact relation with Indian market rates. Pensions are calculated automatically on pay and on the basis of pay the Governor in Council would treat the pensions of Europeans and Indians alike.

(4) "Whether the maximum of the 20 years' pension for the Indian Forest Service and Indian Service of Engineers should remain at Rs. 4,000."

The Governor in Council sees no reason why the Government should further facilitate the voluntary retirement of an officer at 20 years' service by increasing his pension, especially in view of the fact that officers of this standing are and will be for some time to come eligible for higher rates if they elect to retire on proportionate pensions.

(5) "Whether the maxima for the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service should be raised as suggested in paragraph 5 of this letter."

This is accepted. In the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service the 20-years pension corresponds with the 25-years pension for men, and the 25-years pension corresponds with the 30-years pension for men. It is only reasonable that the maxima should be raised as suggested.

(6) "Whether the rates of invalid pension for the Uncovenanted Services should be raised as suggested in paragraph 7 of this letter."

The Governor in Council considers the scale suggested by the Government of India to be suitable. It reduces the existing period which qualifies for an invalid pension from ten years to five and provides a reasonable increase in existing rates at every stage. The Commission proposed to reduce the ten years minimum to seven, but did not attempt to grade the resulting pensions otherwise than by adding Rs. 1,000 at every stage. The Governor in Council agrees that the latter is too rough and ready a proposal for adoption and is not justified by the fact that the final pension is to be raised by Rs. 1,000.

(7) "Whether the rates of proportionate pension should be increased as suggested in paragraph 8 of this letter."

These rates are accepted and should follow as a matter of course on the raising of the ordinary and special pension rates.

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PUNJAB, No. 18930-GAZ., DATED THE 5TH AUGUST 1924.

I am directed by the Governor in Council to reply to the questions summarised in paragraph 9 of your letter No. 178-13-24-Ests., dated the 22nd of June 1924, on the above subject. In replying to paragraph 2 (g) of your letter No. 172/24-Ests., dated the 18th of June 1924, the Punjab Government have already agreed to the general enhancement of the pensions of the uncovenanted services as a necessary but not over-liberal concession.

2. (1) "Whether the proposal to increase the maximum of the pension of the uncovenanted services by Rs. 1,000 from 25 years onwards is approved."

The Governor in Council approves this proposal, but would add that the increase does not err on the side of liberality, and that the recommendations of the Royal Commission with regard to pensions have caused some disappointment in the services concerned.

(2) "Whether this concession, if approved, should be open to officers other than those of the Superior Services."

In the opinion of this Government, it is not necessary to extend this concession to members of the Provincial Services, for which an ample supply of recruits is forthcoming. The Royal Commission's recommendation should be strictly interpreted, and the enhancement of pension should be specifically restricted to the Superior Services.

(3) "Whether the concession should be granted to Indian as well as European Officers."

The concession should be of general application, and should be granted to Indians as well as Europeans.

(4) "Whether the maximum of the 20 years pension for the Indian Forest Service and the Indian Service of Engineers should remain at Rs. 4,000."

The Governor in Council agrees with the view evidently taken by the Royal Commission that the 20 year pension should not be raised to Rs. 5,000. He does not consider that any encouragement should be given to members of the technical services to retire after 20 years' service.

(5) "Whether the maxima for the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service should be raised as suggested in paragraph 5 of the letter of the Government of India."

The proposal appears to this Go ernment to be appropriate.

(6) "Whether the rates of invalid pension for the uncovenanted Services should be raised as suggested in paragraph 7 of the letter of the Government of India."

The Governor in Council concurs in the suggestion referred to.

(7) "Whether the rates of proportionate pension should be increased as suggested in paragraph 8 of the letter of the Government of India."

It is clearly fair that proportionate pensions should be calculated on the rates in force for ordinary pensions, and the Governor in Council therefore concurs in this suggestion.

3. In conclusion, I am to invite a reference to paragraph 77 of the report of the Royal Commission, and to say that some anxiety is felt by members of the services with regard to the delay in the establishment of a family pension fund. It is presumed that this matter will be considered by the Government of India in due course.

GOVERNMENT OF BURMA.

APPOINTMENT DEPARTMENT.

LETTER FROM MR. F. LEWISOHN, C.B.E., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BURMA, HOME AND POLITICAL DEPARTMENT, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, No. 404-A.-24, DATED RANGOON, THE 28TH JULY 1924.

SUBJECT.—Proposals of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India in respect of pensions.

I am directed to convey the views of the Local Government on the seven points enumerated in paragraph 9 of your letter No. 178—13-24, dated the 22nd June 1924.

(1) The Local Government approves the proposal to increase the maximum of the pension of the Uncovenanted Services by Rs. 1,000 from 25 years onwards.

The Hon'ble the Finance Member, however, would restrict the concession to Europeans, while the Hon'ble the Education Minister accepts the proposal with some hesitation on the understanding that no heavy addition be made to the tax-payer's burdens.

(2) The Local Government agrees that this concession should be open to officers other than those of the Superior services.

The Hon'ble the Finance Member, however, is in favour of confining it to the Superior services.

(3) The Local Government agrees that the concession should be granted to Indian as well as European officers. The Commission made no distinction between European and Indian officers in this matter, and to introduce such a distinction now would be to cause justifiable discontent among Indian members of the Services.

The Hon'ble the Finance Member's contrary opinion has been indicated above.

(4) The Local Government agrees that the maximum of the 20 years' pension for the Indian Forest Service and the Indian Service of Engineers should remain at Rs. 4,000.

(5) The Local Government agrees that the maximum for the Women's Branch of the Indian Education Service should be raised as suggested in paragraph 5 of your letter.

(6) The Local Government accepts the proposals made in paragraph 7 of your letter in the matter of invalid pensions.

(7) The Local Government is averse from making any immediate alteration in the scale of proportionate pensions, while not prepared to say that the introduction of the Commission's proposals may not make the suggested increase necessary hereafter.

The Hon'ble the Education Minister's concurrence in the views expressed in this letter is subject to the proviso that the proposals as a whole be not found to throw a heavy burden on the tax-payer.

GOVERNMENT OF BIHAR AND ORISSA.

APPOINTMENT DEPARTMENT.

LETTER FROM E. L. L. HAMMOND, ESQ., C.B.E., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, NO. 1968-A. R., DATED RANCHI, THE 2ND AUGUST 1924.

SUBJECT.—Proposals of the Royal Commission on the superior civil services in India in respect of pensions.

I am directed to reply to your letter No. F.-178—13-24-Ests., dated the 22nd June 1924, regarding the proposals of the Royal Commission on the superior civil services in India in respect of pensions. The Government of India have already been informed in paragraph 2 (g) of my letter No. 1689-A. R., dated the 22nd July 1924, that as a general proposition, the increase proposed in the pensions of the uncovenanted (Superior) Services appears to the Governor in Council to be both reasonable and justifiable.

2. As regards the specific points raised in paragraph 9 of your letter the opinion of the Local Government is as follows:—

(1) The proposal to increase the maximum of the pension of the uncovenanted services by Rs. 1,000 from 25 years onwards is approved.

The Hon'ble Minister for Education, who is generally opposed to any increase in pension, considers the proposed increase to be excessive.

(2) His Excellency in Council is opposed to any extension of the concession of an increase beyond the range of officers for whom it was intended by the Royal Commission, that is, the superior or All-India services which are uncovenanted. The main object of the Commission's proposals is to raise the remuneration (including pension) of those services to a level which will keep existing members (more particularly European members) contented, and which will attract an adequate supply of suitable recruits. An increase in the pension of the previously existing provincial services goes beyond the scope of this object. The pay and pension of these services are adequate at present to secure a satisfactory class of recruit and there appears no need to increase either. It may be true that at present rates of pay the number of provincial officers who would benefit is few, but the number may rapidly increase in the future, and the local Government are opposed to any unnecessary change which will increase the burden of service charges. His Excellency in Council is of opinion, therefore, that the proposed increase of pension should be kept as strictly limited as possible, so that as Indianization and provincialization proceed, the general cost of the services will tend to diminish.

(3) For the same reasons the Governor in Council would limit the proposed increase of pension to existing Indian members in the Superior Services who are in receipt of overseas pay. Any differentiation between them and their European colleagues would be undesirable. In their case the principle of equal pension equal pay should be followed. But there appears to be no justification for extending the concession to those Indian recruits who may have been taken into the services in question on a lower scale of remuneration, i.e., on basic pay without overseas allowances, nor to future Indian entrants into the reserved superior services, who will not get overseas pay, and may, if the opinion of the local Government be followed, be recruited on reduced basic pay. Future entrants, whether Indian or European, to the superior services which are now proposed to be transferred should, in the matter of pension, remain on the same basis as the existing provincial services, subject to any modifications which the local Government may find necessary to attract recruits of a particular class.

(4) His Excellency in Council considers that the maximum of 20 years' pension for the Indian Forest Service and the Indian Service of Engineers should remain at Rs. 4,000. It may be anomalous that this rate will be considerably lower than the revised invalid pension rates, and the result may be to destroy the value of the concession of retirement after 20 years' service, but on the general ground that there is no need to facilitate premature retirement, this result is not to be deprecated.

(5) The local Government accept the proposed increases of maxima in the case of the women's branch of the Indian Educational Service but would confine this concession, as suggested generally in dealing with paragraph 9 (3) of your letter, to the existing European members of the service and those Indian members who draw overseas pay. It is unnecessary to extend the concession to future entrants into the service after it has been provincialized.

(6) His Excellency in Council considers the scale of invalid pensions suggested in paragraph 7 of your letter to be preferable to that proposed by the Commission. The latter appears to him to be too generous in the earlier years, and he deprecates the introduction of any change which will stimulate premature retirements.

I am to mention two points in this connection for the consideration of the Government of India:—

(a) No reference is made to compensatory pensions granted on the abolition of appointments. The local Government consider that any such pension should be subject to the same limits as ordinary pensions.

(b) It follows from the opinion expressed in sub-paragraph (2) above that the local Government are not in favour of any general alteration in the scale of invalid pensions for the existing provincial services, but the question whether such pensions should commence at the completion of five years' service is one that may be considered separately on its merits.

(7) His Excellency in Council is definitely opposed to any increase in the existing scale of proportionate pension on premature retirement, as being likely to defeat one of the chief objects of the recommendations of the Royal Commission which was to retain the services of European officers. He considers the existing scale of proportionate pension to be sufficiently generous, and would deprecate any increase likely to stimulate the flow of retirement. Any such proposal would certainly be strongly resented by the Indian public.

Nor does he consider that the scale of proportionate pension should be increased in the event of future changes such as are contemplated in paragraph 74 (v) (c) of the report, although it is possible that the option of taking such a pension might have to be extended to some to whom it is not at present available. Under such circumstances the officers concerned will be in the same position as officers belonging to services which are now proposed to be transferred.

The existing rates of proportionate pension up to the 24th year of service are considerably higher than the new rates of invalid pension proposed by the Government of India.

In the case of all voluntary retirements therefore proportionate pensions might be stereotyped at the existing standard, whether for the existing members of the service or for future entrants. The case of compulsory retirement stands on an entirely different footing. In that case the terms must be settled by the Secretary of State for all officers who are entitled to his protection, according to the merits of the case.

LETTER FROM A. E. NELSON, ESQ., C.I.E., O.B.E., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE CENTRAL PROVINCES, No. 2802—1288-III, DATED THE 23RD JULY 1924.

I am directed to reply to Government of India letter No. F.-178-13-24-Ests., dated the 22nd June 1924, in which the opinion of the local Government is desired on the proposals of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India in respect of pensions.

2. Point 1. Increase in the pension rates of the Uncovenanted Services.—Although the increase in the pension rate now proposed is slightly less than that suggested by this Government in its recommendation to the Royal Commission, the local Government accepts the revised rates as suitable. I am to add that for European officers the local Government regards this as one of the most essential recommendations in the Report.

3. Point 2. Grant of the increased pension rate to officers other than those of the superior services.—The Government of India desire to know if the local Government approves of the grant of the concession of an increased rate of pension to officers other than those of the superior services. The number of provincial officers outside the superior services who would benefit by the increase is small in this province, and for the reasons stated by the Government of India the local Government would have no objection to the amendment in the pension rules suggested by the Commission being introduced as a general amendment, instead of being specifically restricted to the superior services.

4. Point 3. Grant of the increased pension rates to Indian members of the service.—The local Government considers that the rupee rates proposed are not excessive for Indian officers, who even on retirement are expected to keep up some position. The local Government, therefore, accepts the view of the Commission that no distinction in this respect should be made between European and Indian officers.

5. Point 4. Retention of the present maximum of 20 years' pension for the Indian Forest Service and Indian Service of Engineers.—The local Government agrees that there is no reason why Government should facilitate the voluntary retirement of an officer at 20 years' service by increasing his pension and accepts the view of the Commission that the maximum for the 20' years' pension for the Indian Forest Service and Indian Service of Engineers should remain at Rs. 4,000.

6. Point 5. Increase in pension rates for the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service.—For the reasons given by the Government of India, the local Government accepts the proposal that the maxima for the pension of the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service should be raised from Rs. 4,000 to Rs. 5,000 after 20 years' service and from Rs. 5,000 to Rs. 6,000 after 25 years' service.

7. Point 6. Rates of increased pension for the Uncovenanted Services.—The local Government considers that the scale of invalid pension suggested for the Uncovenanted Services in paragraph 7 of the letter of the Government of India is suitable.

8. Point 7. Increase in the rates of proportionate pension.—The local Government agrees that the rates of proportionate pension should be increased as suggested in paragraph 8 of the Government of India letter. As the pension is compensation for enforced retirement, it should, the local Government considers, be fixed with reference to the pension that would be earned if the officer were able to remain in service.

GOVERNMENT OF ASSAM.

GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL.

APPOINTMENT AND POLITICAL DEPARTMENT.

APPOINTMENT BRANCH.

LETTER FROM A. W. BOTHAM, ESQ., C.I.E., I.C.S., CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF ASSAM, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, HOME DEPARTMENT, No. APPTT.—1145-4257-A.P., DATED SHILLONG, THE 4TH AUGUST 1924.

In reply to your letter No. F.-178-13-24-Ests., dated the 22nd of June 1924, I am to communicate the views of the Government of Assam on the Royal Commission's proposals in respect of pensions.

(1) The Government of Assam agree that the maximum of the pension of the uncovenanted services should be increased by Rs. 1,000 per annum from 25 years onwards.

(2) The extension of this concession to officers of the Provincial services may be left to local Governments. It would only complicate the issues to go beyond the All-India Services in the present connection.

(3) The Government of Assam consider that this concession should be given to Indian as well as to European officers of the All-India Services.

(4) In the opinion of this Government the maximum of the 20 years' pension for the Indian Forest Service and the Indian Service of Engineers should remain at Rs. 4,000.

(5) No member of the Women's Branch of the Indian Educational Service is at present employed in Assam and the local Government have no opinion to offer on this point.

(6) The Government of Assam see no reason for raising the rates of invalid pension for the uncovenanted services as suggested in paragraph 7 of your letter.

(7) Nor do they consider that there is any justification for raising the rates of proportionate pension as suggested in paragraph 8.

In connection with the general subject of pensions, a representation received from the Assam Association of European Government Servants is submitted.

ASSAM ASSOCIATION OF EUROPEAN GOVERNMENT SERVANTS.

LETTER FROM THE HONORARY SECRETARY, ASSAM ASSOCIATION OF EUROPEAN GOVERNMENT SERVANTS, TO THE CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF ASSAM, DATED SHILLONG, THE 10TH JULY 1924.

I am directed by the Council of this Association to acknowledge the receipt of your Memorandum No. Appt.-938-3741-54, dated the 28th June 1924, with which you forward for an expression of this Association's opinion, a copy of letter No. F.-178-13-24, dated the 22nd June 1924, from the Government of India, regarding the proposals of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India, in respect of pensions. In this connection, I am to invite a reference to the evidence on this subject, placed before the Commission by this Association, and by all Associations representing the Uncovenanted Services. I am to say that the proposals of the Royal Commission on this matter are totally inadequate, and are by no means acceptable to this Association. Except in the case of the Indian Civil Service it is, I am to say, considered quite impossible to justify the disparity which exists, between the pension scales of the so called Uncovenanted Services and those of the Indian Army and the Indian Medical Service. These services are recruited from the same classes and have the same expenses on retirement. Further, the argument in favour of technical or professional Services cannot be adduced as an argument for the retention of this disparity, as, included among the Uncovenanted Services, there is at least one highly technical Service, namely, the Indian Service of Engineers, appointment to which is preceded by an expensive and long specialised education. I am further to point out, that the ordinary pension for service up to 25 years, was fixed as long ago as 1855, and, in Indian currency, remains the same to this day. But the sterling value of the ordinary pension has actually depreciated. Certain small additional pensions for service in certain administrative posts have been added; but, with respect to the ordinary pension, (and the prospects of members of this Association reaching administrative rank were never worse than they are at present), the officer who retires before completing 29 years' service, receives a smaller sterling pension than did his predecessor nearly 70 years ago, while he who completes 30 years' service is only 5 per cent. better off. Pension is deferred pay; yet the ratio of pensions to pay has steadily declined during the period when pay itself has depreciated in relation to the cost of living. All that the Royal Commission proposes to do to alleviate this extraordinary situation is to add Rs. 1,000 per annum to the pension at 25 years and onwards.

With regard to paragraph 9 of the Government of India's letter, I am to reply as follows:—

(1) The proposed increase for the Uncovenanted Services is totally inadequate as we have already pointed out in paragraph (iv) of my letter of June the 11th. It is a matter for regret, that the Royal Commission have not even mentioned our request, that pensions should be fixed in sterling as is the case with the Indian Civil Service, Indian Medical Service and Military pensions. As regards additional pensions (lower and higher grade) the Royal Commission propose to leave them as before, and have also absolutely ignored our very fair request that the addition should be calculated on each month's service in a scheduled post. The existing system, which renders valueless for this purpose any period short of a completed year, is most unjust. As already pointed out, undue stress has been laid upon these extra pensions for administrative posts, as if the majority of officers could expect to qualify for them. I am to point out that it is the ordinary pension which cries for adjustment, as very few officers now in Service can hope to earn these extra pensions in view of the rapid provincialisation and abolition of such posts. Our arguments in support of the requests we made are on record, and in our opinion are unanswerable. We regard the question of the amount and security of pensions as among the most important items in our case; and yet it seems to have received less consideration than any other. Sir Reginald Craddock, in paragraph 41 of his 3rd Minute, admits the urgency of the question, and seems to have committed a deliberate meiosis in saying, "the recommendations in our Report appear to me to be very moderate"; and we are justified in inferring that he regards them as considerably less than just."

(2) My Association is of the opinion that whatever pension increases are allowed to the Superior Services should be allowed proportionately to Provincial Services.

(3) In regard to Indian officers, this Association would prefer not to commit itself to an expression of opinion. Our demands for Europeans were made, as already stated, on the basis of actual needs: and we do not know the actual needs of Indians which would justify the increased expenditure.

(4) Although the Royal Commission in making their proposals for an increase of Rs. 1,000 to the 25 years' pension, have not specifically stated that this increase should also be allowed on the 20 years' pension, it appears to this Association to follow logically that this was the intention, as in the proposals for invalid pensions the Commission have suggested an invalid pension Rs. 5,000 at 20 years' service. In any case, however, I am to say that this Association holds most emphatically that any increase granted on the 25 years' pension should be proportionately allowed on that permissible at 20 years' service, for the Services referred to. This right of retirement at 20 years in these Services is a very highly prized privilege. When some years ago, the Secretary of State proposed to withdraw it, as a condition of acceptance of the then new pension scale, such an emphatic protest was made that the condition had to be omitted.

(5) I am to say that the reply of this Association in this connection is in the affirmative.

(6) This Association agrees with the general principle that there should be an increase in Invalid Pensions, pro rata with the increase in Retiring Pensions.

(7) To this Association it appears that it must follow logically and necessarily, that Proportionate Pensions must increase pro rata with the increased rate of ordinary Retiring Pensions.

In connection with the question of pensions, I am desired to enquire whether separate communications may be expected on the subjects of Extraordinary Pensions, Provident Fund, Family Pension Fund and Commutation of Pensions, and also regarding the pension security question, as in respect of all these, this Association desires to be heard.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Wednesday, 10th September, 1924.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

MEMBER SWORN.

Maulvi Badi-uz-Zaman, M.L.A. (Bhagalpur Division : Muhammadan).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

TENDERS FOR THE SUPPLY OF BRITISH PORTLAND CEMENT FOR THE SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.

1695. Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to an advertisement by the South Indian Railway calling for tenders on or before 25th July 1924 for three thousand barrels of first class British Portland cement ?

(b) If the reply to the above be in the affirmative will Government be pleased to say whether the South Indian Railway has failed to find amongst the various manufactures of cement in India, quality suitable for their purpose ?

(c) Are Government aware that many Departments of the Central and Provincial Governments have found Indian cement to be of the quality they require, and will Government be pleased to state why the South Indian Railway is asking for tenders for British Portland cement to the exclusion of Indian cement ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) Before they received notice of the question, the Railway Board wrote to the Railway Company concerned and inquired why they had considered it necessary to specify British Portland cement. They have now ascertained, in the first place, that the engineers of the Railway prefer British cement as in their experience it is more uniform in quality. The point here of course is whether Indian cement is sufficiently good for their purposes, and this point will be taken up with the Agent. Secondly, as regards Northern India cement, it is more expensive than British cement and, in addition, it is packed in bags instead of barrels. The result is that there is risk of loss in transit, and moreover the cement is more apt to deteriorate in the damp climate of the South Indian area.

(c) The Government of India are aware of course that many Departments of Government have found Indian cement to be sufficiently good for their purposes and that is the very reason why they took up the matter with the South Indian Railway. They are inclined to think that the question of packing is one of great importance in connection with the extended use of Indian cement on Indian Railways, and this is a point on which the Tariff Board's report on the cement industry will no doubt throw considerable light.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Are Government aware that the Alipore Test House have declared that certain varieties of Indian cement are as good as British cement, if not better ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Yes.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Have they brought that to the notice of the Agent concerned ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Will they do so, which will knock out the ground that the Railway bought British cement because it was superior to Indian cement ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Certainly.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Do they propose to consult the Tariff Board on the subject ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : We are awaiting a further report.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Would it not be advisable to inquire from them now and ask for their opinion on the subject because it will take a longer time before acceptance of tenders ?

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Are Government aware that for commercial purposes in Southern India Indian cement is being used ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : I am aware of that fact.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Therefore, the ground of deterioration due to the damp climate of Southern India does not hold good ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : That depends upon the quantity required and the amount kept in stock.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : What is the average quantity kept by the Railway concerned ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : I am not aware of that.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Would that not be relevant to know when Government talk about the dampness of the South ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : I have already told the Honourable Member, through Mr. Parsons, that we are taking up this question with the South Indian Railway.

PILGRIM TRAFFIC ON THE BARSI LIGHT RAILWAY.

1696. Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of passengers carried by the Barsi Light Railway to Pandharpur and back from Pandharpur every year ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the normal volume of this traffic from month to month during the last three years ?

(c) Are Government aware that goods wagons are freely used for the transport of pilgrims to Pandharpur ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state the number of third class passenger carriages available for the transport of pilgrims to Pandharpur over the Barsi Light Railway ?

(e) Are Government aware that the Pilgrim Committee recommended the stoppage of this practice as early as practicable, and will Government be pleased to state why they have not pressed this successfully on the Barsi Light Railway till now ?

(f) Will Government be pleased to state the charge that the Barsi Light Railway makes for the transport of third class passengers from Kuruduwadi to Pandharpur ?

(g) Is it a fact that the Barsi Light Railway charge the maximum rate that is permissible ?

(h) Will Government be pleased to state the dividend declared by the Barsi Light Railway during the last five years ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). A statement showing, month by month, the number of passengers carried to and from Pandharpur during the last three financial years is laid on the table.

(c) Government are aware that goods wagons are used when there is a heavy rush of pilgrims during the principal fairs at Pandharpur, but these wagons are fitted with seats and electric lights.

(d) The number is 34.

(e) Yes. The problem on this Railway is a difficult one. The Honourable Member will see from the statistics laid on the table that the pilgrim traffic comes in rushes in July and November. In July the average number of passengers carried during the last 3 years was 137,441 ; in November it was 69,545. In the remaining months of the year, the average was only 31,224. Thus if the Barsi Light Railway were to provide coaching stock sufficient to deal with the maximum pilgrim traffic, they would have to quadruple their present complement of 3rd class carriages, and in the result, about 75 per cent. of such carriages would be idle for over 10 months in the year. In the circumstances, and in view of the improved accommodation mentioned in (c) above, Government have not taken any action in the matter.

(f) The charge is 10 annas and 9 pies.

(g) Yes.

(h) The dividend has been 6 per cent. with a bonus of 2 per cent. in 1918-19 and a bonus of 6 per cent. per annum in the subsequent four years.

Statement showing the number of outward and inward passengers carried at Pandharpur during the period of the last three years month by month, as shown below.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : It means the dividend, together with the bonus, comes to between 8 to 12 per cent. ? Am I correct in putting it like that ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The dividend with the bonus works out to 12 per cent.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Do not the Government think that this is rather an exorbitant rate of earning in any railway in India ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : I may say that since that answer was drafted, we have had a communication from the Honourable Member himself, and that communication has been forwarded to the Agent, who will take the matter up with him.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Are the Railway Board convinced from my communication that they must move on now ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : The Honourable Member's communication indicated that there was a case for the Agent, and an inquiry has been begun.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : This case was made out by the Pilgrims' Committee some years back.

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : That is a matter for argument.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : All that I will say is that I have not put in my note anything in addition to what the Pilgrims' Committee brought to the notice of the Railway Board more than six years back.

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : The Pilgrims' Committee objected to the conveyance of passengers by goods wagons. May I ask what action has been taken by the Railway Board in connection with that matter ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : The whole question was discussed in the Council of State two years ago, and as a result all railways were addressed on the subject. They were asked to abolish this practice altogether, if possible ; at any rate, to reduce it as much as possible. Those instructions have been fully observed in all the railways ; some have been able to do away with the use of goods wagons altogether ; in others it has not proved possible for the reasons indicated in the reply given to this particular question.

TRANSFER OF THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE SALT DEPARTMENTS IN ORISSA TO THE NORTHERN INDIA SALT REVENUE DEPARTMENT.

1697. Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the necessity for maintaining two separate Salt Departments in the Province of Bihar and Orissa,—one directly under the Government of India, and the other under the control of the Local Government ?

(b) Is there any other Province in India where two separate Salt Departments are maintained ?

(c) If the answer to the above is in the negative, will the Government be pleased to state what special necessity exists in Bihar and Orissa for the upkeep of two Salt Departments ?

(d) Are the Government prepared to take early steps, in order to place all salt operations in the Province of Bihar and Orissa under the control of the Government of India ? If so, will Government be pleased to give some definite date on which these changes will take effect ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The question of transferring the administration of the Salt Department in Orissa to the Northern India Salt Revenue Department under the control of the Central Board of Revenue is under consideration ; and I hope that the matter will be settled shortly.

REVISION OF THE INDIAN RAILWAYS ACT, 1890.

1698. Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : Will the Government be pleased to state whether there is any intention to undertake a general revision of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, in the near future ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : It is intended that the question whether a revision of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, should be undertaken, should be examined by the President of the proposed Rates Tribunal. Government are in correspondence with the Secretary of State regarding the establishment of the Tribunal.

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : May I ask when this Tribunal is likely to be appointed ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am afraid I cannot state the exact date. Government are still in correspondence with the Secretary of State.

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : You cannot say even approximately ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No.

IMPOSITION OF CERTAIN CONDITIONS ON FOREIGN INSURANCE COMPANIES OPERATING IN INDIA.

1699. Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : (a) Will Government be pleased to state how many foreign insurance companies (fire, life, marine, accident) were closed in India on the outbreak of the war as being insurance companies with head offices in Germany or Austria ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state how many foreign, (i.e., non-Indian insurance companies) have been working either as branches or through agencies in India since 1914 ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state if it is their intention to introduce a bill in the Assembly making it compulsory for all insurance companies to—

(i) deposit a certain amount before they are allowed to start work here,

and

(ii) invest a certain proportion of the premium income in India.

(d) Are Government aware that conditions such as those mentioned in (c) above are compulsory before an insurance company is allowed to work in most other important countries in the world, and if so, will Government be pleased to state the reasons why they have not enforced similar conditions in India before allowing non-Indian companies to start work in India ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : (a) 24 Agencies doing insurance business in India and having Head Offices in Germany or Austria were ordered to be closed during the war under the Enemy Trading Act, 1916.

(b) The number of Insurance Companies incorporated elsewhere than in India but working in India at the end of the year 1922-23 was 127.

(c) Government propose shortly to introduce an Insurance Bill to make provision for the deposit of securities by all Insurance Companies working in India and other matters, but the precise scope of the Bill has not yet been finally settled.

(d) Government are aware that the condition in part (c) (i) of the question is compulsory in most important countries. They are not aware that it is usual for the law to make provisions on the line suggested in part (c) (ii), but in some countries the law prescribes that insurance companies, particularly life insurance companies, must hold assets in the country equivalent to the amount of their liabilities. One reason why Government have not enforced similar conditions in India is that there is at present no law by which they could do so.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : When do Government expect to introduce this Bill ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : That I cannot say, but I hope that I will be able to circulate it for opinion quite shortly.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Thank you. It looks satisfactory.

DATE OF EXPIRY OF THE SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY CONTRACT.

1700. *Haji S. A. K. Jeelani : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) when is the contract with the South Indian Railway Company to expire,

(b) what do the Government propose to do after the expiry of the contract ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Secretary of State has the option of terminating the contract with the South Indian Railway Company on the 31st December 1945 or at the end of any succeeding fifth year.

(b) Government have not considered the question which will not arise for over 20 years.

PROVISION OF INTERMEDIATE CLASS ACCOMMODATION ON ALL LONG DISTANCE TRAINS ON THE SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.

1701. Haji S. A. K. Jeelani : Are the Government aware that on the South Indian Railway there is no provision for intermediate class in trains other than mail trains ? Are the Government prepared to advise the company to provide intermediate class on all long distance trains ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. With regard to the second part Government are informed that intermediate class accommodation is not provided on passenger trains, as there is no demand for it.

Sardar V. N. Mutalik : What steps have been taken by Government to ascertain that there is no demand for intermediate class accommodation ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : We were informed that there was no demand for it by the Agent.

OVERCROWDING OF THIRD CLASS PASSENGERS IN MAIL TRAINS ON THE MADRAS AND SOUTHERN MAHRATTA AND SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAYS.

1702. Haji S. A. K. Jeelani : Are the Government aware of the trouble that third class passengers are put to in the mail trains both on the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway and the South Indian Railway owing to overcrowding ? Are the Government prepared to advise the Company to remove overcrowding by strictly enforcing the rule as to limit of Passenger, or by some other means as are open to the Railway companies ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No. This question has been carefully examined by the Railway Administrations concerned and it has been found that, with the exception of two trains, the average number of passengers travelling is less than the number of seats provided.

Rules are in force with the object of preventing overcrowding and in the circumstances Government do not propose to take any action.

STRIKE ON THE SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.

1703. *Haji S. A. K. Jeelani : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) What is the origin of the strike on the South Indian Railway in June last ?

(b) What was the cause of the recommendation of the Railway Board to effect a retrenchment of one lakh of Rupees ?

(c) What was the amount of dividend declared and paid to the company's shareholders last year ?

(d) What was the approximate amount of loss sustained by the company owing to the strike ?

(e) What is the liability of the company to the public in the event of a strike being declared suddenly ?

(f) Has any complaint been received from passengers who had suffered by the strike or any case been filed for damages ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) There were two separate strikes, one of firemen and the other of the shop staff of the Podanur shops. The origin of the former was explained in a reply given on the 11th June 1924 to Diwan Chaman Lall. The reasons which led to the strike in the latter case are obscure, but it seems to have been to some extent connected with an order of the Civil authorities prohibiting Dr. Naidu from going to Podanur to preside at a meeting for the formation of a Labour Union.

(b) The South Indian Railway Company was asked in common with other Railways to investigate and give effect to any practical measures which would result in economy in expenditure on working expenses. The Railway Board did not recommend or suggest any figure by which the expenditure should be retrenched.

(c) The dividend paid in 1924 is not known yet but it was 8 per cent. including guaranteed interest at 3½ per cent. during the three years prior to 1924.

(d) Government have no information and it is not proposed to call for any as it is difficult to calculate even approximately the losses suffered by Railways due to strikes.

(e) A Railway Company's liability consists in providing the best service possible under the conditions obtaining.

(f) No complaints or suits of this nature have come to the notice of Government.

Mr. Chaman Lall : May I know whether any cases brought against the strikers have been withdrawn ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Will you give me notice please ?

CANTONMENTS IN INDIA.

1704. *Haji S. A. K. Jeelani : Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing (1) the total number of cantonments (2) the total population living in each cantonment according to the latest census report (3) the income of each during the last financial year, and (4) the nature of its administration, namely, whether administered by the Board or Officer Commanding ?

Mr. E. Burdon : I will furnish the Honourable Member separately with a statement containing the information which he desires.

Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally : Is such a statement not for the benefit of the House ?

Mr. E. Burdon : I did not think it would be of general interest, therefore I thought it was not desirable to go to the expense of having it printed up for the proceedings.

Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally : I think the information should be laid on the table for the information of the House.

Mr. E. Burdon : If a number of Honourable Members desire to have this information printed up, of course it can be done.

1705. (This question was answered† on the 8th September.)

GRANT OF FREE RAILWAY PASSES TO MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

1706. Haji S. A. K. Jeelani : (a) Was it ever interpellated in the Assembly that Government should encourage by granting free Railway passes, to the Members of the Assembly to tour in their respective constituencies to ascertain their needs and requirements once a year ?

(b) If the answer is in the affirmative will the Government be pleased to furnish a copy of the answer and if in the negative to state whether the Government have been aware of such feeling among the Members of the Assembly now ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : (a) The answer is in the negative.

(b) Government have no information on the subject.

REPORT OF THE INDIAN BAR COMMITTEE.

1707. Haji S. A. K. Jeelani : (a) What action have the Government so far taken or do they propose to take on the Report of the Indian Bar Committee ?

(b) What is the total amount of expenditure the Government had to incur on account of that Committee and how was that amount distributed ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : (a) The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given to Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan's question No. 1267 on the 5th June 1924.

(b) The accounts of the Committee have not yet been finally adjusted, but as stated in the Home Department Resolution published along with the report, the estimated expenditure of the Committee, including that incurred in the printing of the Report, was Rs. 1,17,000.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Have Government any information as to the action contemplated by the different High Courts on the recommendations of the Bar Committee ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I have received letters from certain Local Governments explaining the action taken, but replies have not been received from all the Local Governments.

† Vide page 3021 of Vol. IV of the Legislative Assembly Debates.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : Do Government propose to issue any orders on the recommendations of the Committee ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : Certainly when we receive the replies from the Local Governments.

PROVISION OF INTERMEDIATE CLASS ACCOMMODATION ON THE M. S. M. AND SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAYS.

1708. Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to an article from Mr. T. K. Doraiswami Aiyangar on " A Railway grievance " in the Swarajya, dated 30th May 1924 ?

(b) Do the Government propose to remedy the grievance complained of ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) Government are informed that intermediate class accommodation is not provided on certain sections of the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway and on passenger trains on the South Indian Railway, because there is no demand for it.

INCONVENIENT TIMINGS ON THE MADRAS AND SOUTHERN MAHRATTA RAILWAY.

1709. Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar : Are the Government aware that the timings of the M. and S. M. Railway are so inconveniently arranged :

(a) that there is no train on the metre gauge (Gudur to Katpadi) which immediately connects with the Mettupalayam Mail at Katpadi ?

(b) that passengers from Madras, Bangalore and Villupuram sides reaching Katpadi junction by night trains have all to wait till about 4 A.M. for going to Chittoor, Tirupati, etc. ?

(c) that the shuttle train service between Katpadi and Chittoor during the night was abolished to the great inconvenience of passengers ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The metre gauge train is timed to connect with the Madras-Bangalore mail, and not with the Mettupalaiyam mail, since the former halts at more intermediate stations than the latter. Government understand that this arrangement gives greater convenience to the public than a connection with the Mettupalaiyam mail would provide.

(b) A train leaves Katpadi for Chittoor, Tirupati, etc., at 3-30 and not 4-0. This timing is arranged to serve trains arriving from Villupuram at 21-35, from Madras at 1-21, and from Bangalore at 2-45.

(c) Government understand that this service was withdrawn, because it was not sufficiently patronised. A count of passengers for a specified period shewed that few passengers used this service.

Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar : Are the Government aware that on the Katpadi platform passengers are exposed to the cold weather when they have to wait for hours at night ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I do not think the question arises, but I am not aware of it.

ABOLITION OF THE NIGHT SHUTTLE TRAIN BETWEEN KATPADI AND CHITTOOR ON THE MADRAS AND SOUTHERN MAHRATTA RAILWAY.

1710. *Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar: Are the Government aware that representations from the Chittoor Bar Association, the Municipal Council and the District Board about the shuttle train service were not complied with ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to (c) of his immediately preceding question.

Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar : Are Government aware that communications have been made by respectable public bodies and are still uncomplied with ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have just informed the Honourable Member that the representations were not complied with and the reasons for it.

CONVEYANCE IN SEPARATE RAILWAY CARRIAGES OF TUBERCULAR PATIENTS TO THE SANATORIUM AT MADANAPALLI.

1711. *Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar: (a) Are the Government aware that in the trains running between Pakala and Dharamavaram only one composite 1st and 2nd class carriage is attached ?

(b) Are the Government aware that the Sanatorium at Madanapalli is frequented by patients suffering from tuberculosis and that such patients travel in the same 2nd or 1st class compartment in which other such passengers have to travel ?

(c) Do the Government propose to consider the question of directing that Railway Companies must keep separate carriages suitable for conveyance of patients at important junctions and available at stated notice and moderate charges ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes. This is in accordance with the requirements of the traffic.

(b) and (c). For the purposes of the Indian Railways Act tuberculosis is not an infectious disorder, for which reserved accommodation is necessary. Spare carriages, which can be reserved on due notice at the usual charges, are kept at Pakala and Renigunta junctions for the convenience of passengers requiring them.

Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar : Are Government aware that a single passenger cannot engage a full compartment and will Government make arrangements for engaging a separate compartment for them on such occasions ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I cannot give any such undertaking, Sir.

Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar : Do the Government see the necessity of preventing passengers suffering from tuberculosis from travelling with other passengers ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I must ask for notice of that.

SUPPLY TO INDIAN 1ST AND 2ND CLASS PASSENGERS OF REFRESHMENTS IN THEIR COMPARTMENTS.

1712. *Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar : (a) Are the Government aware that under the management of Indian refreshment rooms by the Railway Companies at some junctions refreshments are not supplied to 1st and 2nd class passengers in their compartments whereas similar supplies are made from European refreshment rooms ?

(b) If so do the Government propose to direct such supply in future ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Refreshments and meals are not, except in special cases such as illness, etc., supplied from European refreshment rooms to passengers in carriages. Early morning tea, however, is so supplied, and it is understood that Indian I and II Class passengers are mostly prepared to drink tea supplied by European refreshment rooms.

For the benefit of passengers Indian refreshment rooms are worked as cheaply as possible, and, if such rooms were to supply refreshments in trains, their working cost and consequently their charges would increase. On the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway it is understood that tea can be supplied from Indian refreshment rooms through passengers' servants, if desired.

(b) In the circumstances Government do not propose to issue any instructions in the matter.

IMPORT OF FOREIGN SALT.

1713. Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the quantity and value of foreign salt imported into India during the years 1920-21, 1921-22, 1922-23, and 1923-24 ?

(b) Are the Indian factories unable to produce a sufficient quantity of salt to avoid any importation of foreign salt ? If so, why ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) The quantity and value of foreign salt imported during the last four years is as follows :

	Quantity.	Value.
	Tons.	Rs.
1920-21	6,20,964	2,28,13,456
1921-22	4,72,427	1,51,68,057
1922-23	5,42,133	1,68,79,854
1923-24	4,74,696	1,10,36,070

(b) The chief obstacle in the way of Indian salt displacing foreign salt is neither the incapacity of the factories in India to produce a sufficient quantity nor (in the case of some Indian salts) the superiority of the imported article ; it is the question of freight. Foreign salt is usually imported in vessels which come to India for export cargo and it is not possible either for coastingships or for the railways to quote freights which can compare with the favourable rates offered by vessels which would otherwise have to come to India in ballast.

OPENING OF A POST OFFICE IN THE VILLAGE OF GUDIPALA IN THE CHITTOOR DISTRICT.

1714. Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar : (a) What is the total number of (1) post offices (2) telegraph offices in the Chittoor and the Madras Ceded Districts ?

(b) What is the average number of villages and population which each post office and telegraph office in the said area serves ?

(c) Have there been frequent requests for opening a post office in the village Gudipala in Chittoor taluk of the Chittoor District ? If so, what is the result ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) and (b). A statement containing the information desired is laid on the table.

(c) The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. An experimental post office will shortly be opened.

Statement showing the total number of post offices and telegraph offices in the Chittoor and Madras Ceded Districts and the average number of villages which each post office and telegraph office in the said area serves.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE INDIAN BAR COMMITTEE.

1715. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether the Local Governments have furnished them with their views, as well as the views of the High Courts, Judicial Commissioners' Courts and of legal associations on the recommendations of the Indian Bar Committee ?

(b) If not, by what time are they expected to be furnished to them ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : (a) and (b). The views of most of the major Local Governments, and of the authorities consulted by them have not yet been received. Every effort is being made to expedite them, but it is not possible to say at present by what date they will be received.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : Is it a fact that the report is being circulated not only to the High Courts but also to legal associations and other public bodies ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I believe that is so.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : Is that the procedure adopted in regard to any other Committee's recommendations ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I am not prepared to say off hand.

PRICES OF SALT AFTER THE INCREASE OF THE SALT DUTY AND AFTER ITS REDUCTION.

1716. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state the prices of salt per rupee, (a) after the increase of duty from Rs. 1-4-0 to Rs. 2-8-0, (b) after the reduction of duty from Rs. 2-8-0 to Rs. 1-4-0 ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The Honourable Member is referred to the statistics of salt prices published in the official gazettes from time to time. It may, however, interest him to know that the average retail price of salt in India was 12 seers 9 chtks. per rupee in February 1923, that it rose to 9 seers 2 chtks. in July 1923, and that it has now again fallen to about 12 seers 8 chtks., i.e., to the same level as before the duty was raised.

PAUCITY OF VOTES POLLED IN ASSAM DURING THE LAST LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY ELECTIONS.

1717. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : With reference to the statement laid on the table in reply to unstarred question No. 218, asked in the Council of State in the last Simla session regarding the voters on the Electoral Rolls of the Legislative Assembly, will the Government be pleased to state whether there was any special cause which led to the result that out of 27,183 voters in the Assam Province only 2,832 voters recorded their votes as compared with the voting in the other provinces ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The candidates for 3 seats from Assam to the Legislative Assembly were returned unopposed. The figure, 2,382, referred to by the Honourable Member is the number of votes polled for the remaining seat which was contested. If the Honourable Member will refer to my answer to Mr. Gaya Prasad Sing's question No. 1103, dated the 30th May 1924, he will see that the percentage of electors who voted in the constituency, namely, 44 per cent. was about the average percentage for all contested constituencies for the Legislative Assembly at the general election of 1923.

RESEARCH INSTITUTE AT INDORE.

1718. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state whether the scheme for the establishment of the Research Institute at Indore was prepared at the instance of the Government or of the States which contributed to the scheme ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : The proposal for the establishment of a Research Institute in Central India originated with the Government of India in 1920 but was held in abeyance owing to financial stringency. The Indian Central Cotton Committee however put forward the scheme which has now been sanctioned.

COST OF ROADS IN BRITISH BALUCHISTAN AND SEISTAN.

1719. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : With reference to unstarred question No. 292, re cost of roads in British Baluchistan and Seistan, asked in the Council of State during the last Simla session and its reply, will the Government be pleased to state if the information called for has been furnished to them, and if so what is the information ?

Mr. E. Burdon : The necessary information has been received and I will furnish the Honourable Member with a statement containing the desired particulars.

MILITARY ROADS IN WAZIRISTAN AND KURRAM.

1720. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : With reference to unstarred question No. 293, re military roads in Waziristan and Kurram, asked in the Council of State during the last Simla session and its reply by Government, will the Government be pleased to state if the inquiry made by them has been completed, and if so, what is the result ?

Mr. E. Burdon : Yes, as a result of the inquiry made, the following reply was furnished to the Honourable Member who asked the question referred to :—

(a) The cost of maintaining metalled roads in South Waziristan is higher than it is in North Waziristan or in the Kurram.

(b) No. The high cost is due to other causes, such as the very high cost of labour, materials, transport, etc. The roads in South Waziristan are, moreover, subject to serious damage from spates and heavy rains.

(c) There is no evidence to show that any extensive wilful damage has been done to the roads in South Waziristan by tribesmen or contractors, though damage does occur in minor ways on the Sorarogha-Razmak and the Jandola-Sarwakai roads which are both nearing completion.

(d) When any malicious damage, however slight, does occur, the political authorities bring pressure to bear on the tribes concerned to prevent a recurrence. Under prevailing local conditions, however, it is not possible entirely to prevent minor damage of a malicious nature.

No instances have occurred of the destruction of roads by tribesmen in the Kurram.

RAIDS BY BORDER TRIBES.

1721. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) The number of raids on British India by the border tribes during the last 3 years respectively, namely in 1923-24, 1922-23, 1922-21 ;

(b) The result of each of these raids ; and

(c) The cost incurred by Government in meting out punishment to the raiders ?

Mr. Denys Bray : (a) The number of raids in Baluchistan and the North-West Frontier Province in the three years ending last March was successively 226, 159 and 84.

(b) Statistics of persons killed, wounded and kidnapped in each year are given in a statement which is laid on the table. The preparation of a statement showing the result of each individual raid would involve labour disproportionate to its value.

(c) It is impossible to apportion the expenditure on border defence between the defence of the frontier districts and the defence of India as a whole, or further to sub-divide the former into expenditure on the repelling and intercepting of raiders on the one hand and their punishment on the other.

Statement showing the number of raids on British India (North-West Frontier Province and Baluchistan) during the years 1921-22, 1922-23, and 1923-24, with particulars of losses, etc., sustained.

Year.	Number of raids.	NUMBER OF PERSONS.
		KILLED.				WOUNDED.				KIDNAPPED.
		Hindus.	Mohamedans.	Others.	Total.	Hindus.	Mohamedans.	Others.	Total.	Hindus.	Mohamedans.	Others.	Total.
1921-22	226	22	71	..	93	10	69	1	80	49	119	2	170

1923-24	84	8	35	2	45	4	43	1	48	9	14	1	24

Lala Duni Chand : Are Government doing anything to prevent these raids ?

Mr. Denys Bray : The answer surely is contained in the answer I have just given. When I have said that we have brought down raids during the past three years from 226 to 84, the answer surely is there in the germ.

Lala Duni Chand : Are Government prepared to guarantee that the number of raids will decrease every year ?

Mr. Denys Bray : I wish, Sir, they could.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : May I ask, Sir, what steps are being taken to arm the villagers to defend themselves.

Mr. Denys Bray : The villagers are being armed increasingly from year to year. I think the Honourable Member would be satisfied if I could provide him with figures—which I have not got in my head—to show that that is the case.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : Are telephone connections established from village to village ?

Mr. Denys Bray : That is rather a large order. But we are doing what we can.

COST OF SOUTH AFRICAN COAL IMPORTED INTO INDIA.

1722. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : With reference to the reply given by Government to the unstarred question No. 301, asked in the Council of State during the last Simla session, will the Government be pleased to state the reason why the average cost of coal imported into India from South Africa during the year ending March 1924, was so high as Rs. 26 per ton while the average price of Indian coal shipped to foreign countries during the same period was so low as Rs. 17 per ton ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : The cost of imported coal includes insurance and freight from the country from which it comes to the port of import. The price of exported coal includes only the freight from the colliery to the port of export.

DISMISSAL OF EMPLOYEES OF THE AUDIT OFFICE OF THE BENGAL AND NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

1723. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether they have got the information that 69 employees of the Audit Office of the B. & N. W. Railway have been dismissed simply because they stayed out of office for a few minutes ?

(b) If they have not got the information, will they be pleased to get it, and communicate it to this House ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: (a) and (b). The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply given to question No. 1057 asked by Mr. Bhabendra Chandra Roy during the last session in the Legislative Assembly debates, dated the 27th May 1924.

COUNTERVAILING DUTY ON SOUTH AFRICAN COAL.

1724. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : With reference to the statement laid on the table, in reply to the unstarred question No. 249, asked in the Assembly during the last Delhi session, will the Government be pleased to state, (a) the reason why they have not taken action on the Resolution " on countervailing duty on South African Coal " ? (b) whether they propose to take action on it, and if so, when ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given to Mr. Neogy's question No. 1539, dated 11th June 1924. The Government hope shortly to be able to make an announcement on the subject.

HAJ PILGRIMS.

1725. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : With reference to the reply given by Government to starred question No. 1075, asked in the last Simla session of the Assembly, will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether the return tickets purchased by the 649 pilgrims last year at Bombay and Karachi, were purchased by them of their own free will, or at the instance of the authorities concerned ?

(b) the cost at which Government assisted in the repatriation of 1,716 pilgrims ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : (a) The pilgrims concerned purchased the return tickets of their own free will.

(b) Rupees 35,300.

COST OF DEPUTATION OF INDIA'S REPRESENTATIVES TO THE IMPERIAL CONFERENCES AND MEETINGS OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

1726. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state the cost of the deputation of the representatives of India to the Imperial Conferences and the meetings of the League of Nations respectively in the following years :

Imperial Conference :—1917, 1918, 1921, 1923 ;

League of Nations :—1920, 1921, 1922, 1923 ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The information is being collected and will be laid on the table.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Singh : Will the Government be pleased to state if Maharajas and Ruling Chiefs who join such deputations as representatives of India at the Imperial Conference and the League of Nations, also charge the expenses of their journey ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I am sorry I do not carry that in my head. I should like notice of the question.

RENT FOR SHORT PERIOD OCCUPATION OF SINGLE QUARTERS AT LONGWOOD HOTEL.

1727. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether short period occupants of a single quarter at Longwood are charged at the rate of Rs. 3 per day ?

(b) whether the Members of the Indian Legislature who are also short period occupants are charged at a higher rate ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) and (b). The answer to both parts of the question is in the affirmative.

RENT OF QUARTERS AT LONGWOOD.

1728. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : With reference to the Government reply to the fourth supplementary question asked by Mr. Duraiswami Aiyangar to my starred question No. 1095 re the rent of quarters at Longwood asked in the last Simla session of the Assembly will the Government be pleased to give a detailed reply ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : The rents charged to Government officers are calculated on a $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. rate of interest. The rents charged to Members have been fixed at higher rates for reasons explained in reply to question No. 1095 referred to by the Honourable Member.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is there any logic, Sir, or is there any sense when the Honourable Member says that any officers occupying these quarters pay at the rate of Rs. 3 per diem, while Members of this Assembly are not charged at the same lower rate—that is to say, Rs. 3 per diem ? Do Government propose to explain ?

PURCHASE PRICE OF LONGWOOD HOTEL.

1729. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state under what head the cost of the purchase of Longwood Hotel is shown ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : 41—Civil Works, Central.

OCCUPATION OF QUARTERS IN LONGWOOD HOTEL BY OFFICIALS.

1730. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that before the purchase of the Longwood Hotel, they knew that the stay of the Members of the Indian Legislature in Simla would be for short periods, and that therefore its quarters would have to be rented to outsiders ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Before Government purchased Longwood, they foresaw the desirability of allotting quarters in it to officials in non-session periods. It is the ordinary practice to try and obtain tenants for Government quarters which are empty with a view to minimising loss.

Baba Ujagar Singh Bedi : Do they propose to give it to anybody else if they want to have it on rent ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Could the Honourable Member explain what he means by anybody else ?

Baba Ujagar Singh Bedi : Any visitor who comes up to Simla and stays here.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : No, certainly not.

EXCLUSIVE USE OF LONGWOOD HOTEL BY MEMBERS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATURE.

1731. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether the Longwood Hotel consists of 3 buildings, namely, (1) the Main Block, (2) the New Block, (3) the Annexe ?

(b) whether the Main Block chiefly the upper portion of it, was ever offered to the Members of the Indian Legislature, since the purchase of the Longwood Hotel by Government, and if so, how many times ?

(c) whether they are prepared to allow the whole of the Longwood Hotel to be kept exclusively for the use of the Members of the Indian Legislature during the Simla sessions of the Council of State and Assembly ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) Longwood Hotel consists of—

(i) Main block,
(ii) Annexe,
(iii) Range,
(iv) 7 Cottages,
(v) New block ;

with blocks of out houses, stables, etc.

(b) Yes, in 1921.

(c) This would probably involve Government in additional loss. We have, however, discussed informally with Members of the Legislature the best method of utilising the buildings, having due regard to the interests of the tax-payer, and I may add that the suggestions that have been made will receive careful consideration.

Mr. K. Ahmed : May I ask what was the price at which this Longwood property was purchased by the Government in 1920 ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I should like to have notice.

OFFICER IN CHARGE OF LONGWOOD HOTEL.

1732. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) if it is a fact that an officer was always put in charge of the Longwood Hotel during the sessions of the last Assembly but that during the last Simla session no special responsible officer was placed in charge ?

(b) if so, will they please give reasons for his removal ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : The question evidently refers to the fact that in previous years an officer was brought up from Delhi during the Assembly periods to look after the comfort of the Members of the Assembly. He was, however, in no sense in charge of the hotel. He was not brought up this year, partly on grounds of economy and partly on account of the fact that his presence was considered superfluous.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are the Government aware that some Members of the Assembly, especially my Honourable friend, the representative of the Landholders of the Punjab, has suffered loss, by losing his gold watch valued at five hundred rupees at Longwood residence a couple of days ago ?

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Are the Government prepared, for the protection of this House, to take efficient measures to stop this volley of questions on this subject ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is this not the practice followed in the House of Commons in England, and if so, will the Honourable Member kindly not raise any objection, disallowing Members of the Assembly to put questions which they are entitled to put, representing the people of this country ?

Mr. M. A. Jinnah: I ask the Honourable Member to reply to my question.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I have always done my best and I shall continue to do so.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Is the Honourable Member prepared to hand over the Longwood Hotel to company management if Government cannot manage it ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is there any House Committee in existence ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : It is for the Honourable Members of this House to answer, Sir, not for me.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Did the Honourable Member try his utmost to start an organisation like that and hand over the property to them, because they cannot themselves manage it properly ?

PUNISHMENT INFLICTED ON CERTAIN BOOKING CLERKS AT HOWRAH.

1733. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : With reference to Government reply to the supplementary question re punishment inflicted on certain booking clerks at Howrah, to starred question No. 1106 asked by Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh in the Simla session of the Assembly will the Government be pleased to give the reply now ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given to the question asked by Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh in this connection.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are the Government aware that to my question on this subject the other day the Government did not give any reply beyond saying that the only information in their possession was that the booking clerks have been suitably dealt with ? I put the question, No. 1106 on the 30th May last and Mr. C. D. M. Hindley replied " I must have notice of that question ; I am afraid I cannot say off-hand." Then I put down this question and the only reply received was that Government have no information beyond the fact that the booking clerks concerned have been suitably punished. Is that an honest and a fair reply ? I asked the Government to find out what punishment had been inflicted. That is no answer.

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : The answer, Sir, was given deliberately because we did not think it was in the public interest that inquiries should be made of the Agent in such a petty matter.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Then why in reply to my question No. 1106 on the 30th May 1924,—" May I know what punishment has been inflicted on the booking clerks concerned ? ", did Mr. Hindley, replying on behalf of Government, say " I must have notice of that question ; I am afraid I cannot say offhand." ? What is the use of this camouflage, when Government did not desire to give the information ?

Mr. C. D. M. Hindley : There was no camouflage at all in the matter. The question was fired at me after a long series of questions and I said perfectly honestly that I required notice of the question. I required notice so that I could consider whether it was advisable for Government to give the answer. There was no camouflage in the matter. It was a perfectly honest answer.

OFFICERS IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE AND INDIAN PERSONNEL OF THE SERVICE IN 1861, 1887, 1913 AND THE 1ST JANUARY 1924.

1734. Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Will Government be pleased to state the total number of officers in the Indian Civil Service in the following years, stating in each case the Indian personnel of the Service in that year :

1861,
1887,
1913,
and 1st January 1924 ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : A statement giving the information so far as it could be obtained is laid on the table.

Year.	Total number of officers.	Number of Indians.	REMARKS.
1861	306*	..	* This figure is only for Madras and Bombay Presidencies. Figures for other provinces are not available.
1887	1,077†	38	† Including Statutory Civilians and officers of the mixed Commissions.
1913	1,371	66‡	‡ Include 3 Anglo-Indians.
1924	1,290 (1,380 including Listed posts).	164 (251 including Listed posts).

NEW LEGISLATIVE RULES.

1735. Mr. K. C. Neogy : 1. (a) Will Government be pleased to state the circumstances that prompted the making o fthe new legislative rules under the Government of India Act, promulgated in the Gozette of India Extraordinary dated the 21st July 1924 ?

(b) When did the question of the desirability of adding these rules (1) for the Indian Legislative Assembly, and (2) for the Provincial Councils, respectively, first come up for the consideration of Government ?

2. (a) Did Government consider the desirability of consulting the Indian Legislature before adding the aforesaid rules ?

(b) If so, what were the reasons for their decision not to consult the Indian Legislature in this particular instance ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : 1. (a) and (b). As the Honourable Member is doubtless aware, a temporary injunction was granted by the Calcutta High Court on the 7th July against the President of the Bengal Legislative Council, including in that term the Deputy President and the panel Chairman, restraining them from putting a motion relating to a supplementary grant before the Bengal Legislative Council pending the final determination of a suit which had been filed in that Court. In the course of his order directing the issue of the injunction Mr. Justice Ghosh held that the motion could not be presented to the Council because of the provisions of rule 32 of the Bengal Legislative Council Rules. It will be remembered that the Joint Select Committee in their remarks on clause 11 of the Bill of 1919 suggested that the Governor would be justified, if so advised by his Ministers, when a Council had altered the provision for a transferred subject, in resubmitting a provision to the Council for a review of their former decision. The Joint Committee intimated that they did not apprehend that any statutory prescription to that effect was required. As stated by the Secretary of State in the House of Lords on the 21st July, 1924, the Government of India and the Secretary of State agreed in thinking that the rules referred to did not in fact preclude such a motion as was proposed to be moved by the Government of Bengal. In view however of the opinion expressed by the learned Judge of the Calcutta High Court and of the fact that the Government of India understood that a similar motion was proposed to be moved in the Bombay Legislative Council, which was due to meet on the 21st July, the Government of India considered that it was desirable ex majori cautela to amend the rule. They accordingly made the necessary recommendations in regard to the Indian Legislative Rules and the Legislative Council Rules of each province. Their recommendations were sanctioned by the Secretary of State in Council and amendments to remove all doubts as to the meaning of the rules were made on the 19th July and published on the 21st July. I would merely add that Mr. Justice Ghosh in directing the issue of the injunction concluded his order by expressing the opinion that the rules required revision in the light of the events in the case before him.

2. (a) and (b). The Indian Legislature was not sitting at the time and the Government of India accordingly did not consider the question of consulting the Legislature before making the amendments in question.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Did the Government consult the Law Officers of the Crown with regard to the various points arising out of the judgment of Mr. Justice Ghosh before taking this action ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : Does the Honourable Member mean the Law Officer of the Crown at Home ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Yes.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : No, Sir.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Is it not a fact that a Member of this House was a plaintiff in the suit in the Calcutta High Court ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I was not aware of it.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know, Sir, why the Government should have thought fit to make rules in regard to the resubmission of grants when they are rejected by the Legislative Assembly without consulting the Indian Legislature and without having regard to the fact that, so far as grants in this House are concerned, no question of the Government being bound by any vote of this House arises inasmuch as the Governor General can restore grants pertaining to all Departments unlike Governors in Provinces ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The question is rather a long one ; but as regards the first point I made it clear in my answer that the reason why the Legislature was not consulted was that the Legislature was not then sitting.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar: May I know, Sir, whether the Government have now in contemplation the bringing up here again for another vote of the Assembly any grant which has already been refused by the Assembly—a position in which the enactment and operation of the Rules may be found necessary ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : Has it not produced the beneficial effect, Sir, as far as the revenue of Bengal is concerned, by the passing of the new legislative rules and getting rid of all the barristers, counsel and attorneys who were engaged in this case unnecessarily, and thereby saving a great amount of money of the general revenue after all ?

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : Are the Government aware that the remarks mentioned by the Honourable Member as occurring in the judgment of Mr. Justice Ghosh referred only to facilities for the administration and carrying on of the business of the Legislative Council and left untouched entirely the right of a private citizen and taxpayer to sue the Legislative Council when a decision of the President went wrong ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I am glad to hear it. I personally should never desire to take away the ordinary right of a private citizen to sue if he has a right of action.

Dr. H. S. Gour : Sir, what I should like to ask the Honourable the Home Member is this. Is it not a fact that the existing rules relating to the supplementary grants both in the Central and Local Legislatures were drawn up to be in conformity with the constitutional practice as obtaining in the House of Commons and whether the amendment of the rules now made by the Government of India is not a departure from that constitutional practice ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I am not prepared to say what the constitutional practice in the House of Commons is, but Government have amended the rules because they desired to bring them into conformity with what was undoubtedly the intention of the Joint Select Committee.

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : Sir, may I ask the Honourable the Leader of the House whether he is prepared to give an assurance to this House that in future before the rules are amended this House will be consulted whether it is sitting or whether it has to be assembled for the purpose ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : Certainly not, Sir. I am not prepared to give any assurance of the kind. The occurrence of this case proves the necessity of the Government at any rate retaining the power to alter these rules without consulting this House. What has been done in this case ? An immediate matter was pending before the Bombay Council and a recommendation had been made. Could we get the House together then ? I do not think so.

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : May I suggest to the Honourable Member that, so far as this House is concerned, there is no urgent necessity to amend the rules before consulting the House.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : If you are amending the rules of one Council, you must amend the rules of the others.

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : You might have done exactly the same after this House had been consulted, so far as this House is concerned, leaving Bengal and Bombay alone.

SMMUGGLING OF SACCHARINE.

1736. *Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : 1. Will Government be pleased to state the quantity of saccharine powder annually imported into India for three years preceding the 1st March 1923 when an import duty of Rs. 20 per pound was levied on that article ?

2. Will Government be pleased to state the quantity of the said article imported into India for twelve months following the imposition of the duty of Rs. 20 per pound ?

3. Are Government aware that the market price of saccharine for sometime after the levying of the additional duty was nearly Rs. 24 per pound ? Has it thereafter steadily declined ?

4. Are Government aware that at present the market price of saccharine is much below Rs. 10 per pound ? Can Government explain the causes of such an unusual decline ?

5. Have Government received complaints from public bodies and also from saccharine dealers in India about the heavy smuggling of saccharine from Singapore, Pondicherry and Goa ?

6. Will Government state how far the said complaints are justified and what steps they have taken or propose to take to prevent smuggling on such a huge scale ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The quantity of Saccharine imported for the last four years is as follows :

(1)

Twelve months 1st April to 31st March.

	Quantity of Saccharine imported. Tons.
1920-21	25
1921-22	21
1922-23	44
(2) 1923-24	14

3) to (6). I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to the replies given to similar questions put in the Council of State on the 4th June last. I may add that on that date, a Notification was issued prohibiting the importation of saccharine by land from the Foreign Settlements in India.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY THE ASSEMBLY DURING THE DELHI SESSION AND GIVEN EFFECT TO BY GOVERNMENT.

1737. *Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar : Will the Government be pleased to state which of the Resolutions passed by the Assembly during the Delhi session of the Assembly 1924 were—

(a) accepted by His Excellency the Governor General, and

(b) not accepted by His Excellency the Governor General,

(c) and are pending decision by His Excellency the Governor General ?

Sir Henry Moncrieff Smith : With reference to the form of the Honourable Member's question, I would point out to him that Resolutions adopted by the Assembly are in the form of recommendations to the Governor General in Council and it rests therefore with the Governor General in Council and not with His Excellency the Governor General to accept and give effect to such recommendations. The Honourable Member is referred to the statement which I laid on the table on the 27th May, 1924, in reply to Mr. S. Sadiq Hasan's question on the same subject. That statement is printed at pages 2261-2262 of the Legislative Assembly Debates, Volume IV, No. 39.

PURCHASE OF STORES.

1738. Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state how many of the firms under each of the three lists published by the Chief Controller of Stores in the Gazette of India dated July 12, 1924 are purely (1) Indian firms with Indian capital (2) Non-Indian firms with a portion of Indian shareholders or directors, stating in such cases the proportion of such Indian capital ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state why the purchase of articles not manufactured in India is restricted to an indent upon the Stores Department, London, and not extended to any cheaper market outside the United Kingdom if available ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) The Government of India have not the information asked for. The attention of the Honourable Member is, however, drawn to sections 32 and 248 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, from which he will see that in the case of such of these companies as have been registered under the Act, he can obtain from the Registrars, Joint Stock Companies, copies of lists of shareholders and directors, with their names and addresses, and the number of shares held by each.

(b) The Honourable Member appears to misunderstand the rules. The placing of an indent on the India Store Department, London, does not in any way restrict the market. I would invite his attention to the instructions given by the Government of India to the High Commissioner on the subject contained in their letter No. S.-360, dated the 22nd December 1921, a copy of which was laid on the table of the House on the 18th March 1922.

OVERHAULING OF THE SONE BRIDGE ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1739. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) In what year the Sone Bridge near Koelwar station, East Indian Railway, was constructed ?

(b) Whether it is a fact that trains pass over this bridge at a much slower speed than on the bridge over the Gandak, B. and N. W. Railway, and other bridges ? If so, what is the reason ?

(c) Whether they are prepared to consider the question of thoroughly overhauling the bridge referred to in (a) with a view to minimise the chances of an accident taking place in the way of a sudden collapse ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The bridge in question was constructed before 1870.

(b) Yes, there is a speed restriction over the bridge as the girders are old and below the required strength for fast trains.

(c) The matter has received attention already and the renewal of the bridge for one of the two tracks is in hand.

The other track will be taken in hand on completion of the first.

ENCOURAGEMENT OF RAILWAY INDUSTRIES.

1740. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state the amount spent so far towards the encouragement of Railway industries of the loan of 150 crores ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : It is impossible to give the information in the form in which the Honourable Member asks for it ; but up to last year just under 10 crores had been spent in India out of the 150 crores grant, and about 13½ crores have been provided in the Budget for similar expenditure during 1924-25.

CASE OF MR. N. SUBBA RAO, LATE TELEGRAPHIST OF BEZWADA.

1741. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) With reference to the reply given by Government to starred question 1138 (c) asked in the last Simla session of the Assembly, will the Government be pleased to state or lay on the table a copy of the order passed on the appeal of Mr. N. Subba Rao, telegraphist of Bezwada (Madras) ?

(b) Will the Government also please state or lay on the table, the order of the Postmaster General, passed on the explanation of Mr. M. Subba Rao, Telegraphist, Bezwada ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Copies of the orders asked for are laid on the table.

Copy of a letter No. 2-P.T., dated the 24th September 1923, from the Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Industries and Labour, Simla, to the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs, Simla.

With reference to the memorial, dated the 12th May 1923, addressed to His Excellency the Viceroy by Mr. Subba Rao, late Telegraphist, attached to the Bezwada Telegraph Office, appealing against the order of his dismissal from service, I am directed to say that the Government of India have given their careful consideration to his case and have decided to reject his memorial. I am to request that the memorialist may be informed accordingly.

Copy of Order, dated the 13th June 1922, passed by the Postmaster-General, Madras Circle, in connection with the charges laid against Mr. N. Subba Rao, Telegraphist, Bezwada.

The letter without date from A. Ramanna and B. Seetiah, Bezwada, was received by me on the 21st December 1921, and I ordered an investigation. A copy of the same letter was sent to me with D. O., dated the 22nd December, 1921, from Mr. deMonte, Deputy Director-General, Traffic, with the request that the truth of the allegations contained therein might be examined.

Mr. J. J. Barry, Superintendent, Telegraph Traffic, has made an exhaustive inquiry at Bezwada.

The letter is pseudonymous and contains charges against Mr. B. Purniah, Deputy Superintendent in charge, Bezwada Telegraph Office.

During the inquiry made by Mr. Barry evidence against telegraphist N. Subba Rau came to light and forms the basis of the memo. of charges which has been drawn up against him.

This memo. of charges is perhaps on technical grounds objectionable. In paragraph 1 it says 'there is clear evidence'; in para. 5 'clearly betrays'; in para. 6 'abundant evidence'. According to Rule 768 of Telegraph Traffic Manual, Volume I, "No opinion should be expressed at this stage as to the guilt of the accused or otherwise". The reason for this provision is presumably that the accused should not feel disheartened by any apparent prejudgment of his case and in consequence think it not worthwhile to offer any defence. In this particular case I consider that Subba Rau has not been prejudiced by the formal flaws in the memo. of charges drawn up by the office. He has submitted a full and lengthy defence. The case against him, therefore, can be considered on its merits without having regard to any technical objection that might be raised against the memo. of charges.

Count I.—The evidence on which this is based is sufficiently stated in the memo. of charges. Telegraphist Subba Rau also has admitted that he subscribed to the Tilak Swaraj Fund. In his defence Subba Rau alleges that Mr. M. Subramiah, M. Krishna Rau and B. Krishnaswamy Naidu have enmity against him. As regards P. Hanumantha Rau, he says that according to the witness Subba Rau never started the Tilak Swaraj Fund. It is clear, however, from Hanumantha Rau's statements, dated the 7th January, 1922, and the 1st March, 1922, that the subscription list was brought to him by Subba Rau.

As regards witness Muhammad Abdur Razack Sahib, Subba Rau says that this witness said nothing of the kind assigned to him and was not aware of what he was asked to sign by Mr. Barry. This I do not believe. I had no reasons to doubt that Md. Abdur Razack Sahib made the statement as taken down by Mr. Barry. That he may have subsequently denied this to Subba Rau does not shake my belief in the truth of his evidence.

There is further Subba Rau's own admission before Mr. Barry that he subscribed to the Tilak Swaraj Fund. As regards this Subba Rau invites attention to his letter to me and his letter to the Director-General. The substance of these letters is much the same, viz., that Mr. Barry took no proper steps to record Subba Rau's statement and finally kept him in the travellers' bungalow from 5-30 P.M. to midnight and improperly forced the statement out of him. From Mr. Barry's report I am satisfied that this allegation of Subba Rau is untrue. The fact is that Subba Rau took every opportunity of avoiding an interview with Mr. Barry and was only with great difficulty run to earth I have no reason whatever to believe that Mr. Barry improperly forced any statement out of Subba Rau. Subba Rau cannot get away from his admission that he subscribed to the Tilak Swaraj Fund.

There is thus ample evidence that Subba Rau either started or actively canvassed subscriptions to the Tilak Swaraj Fund in Bezwada Telegraph Office and I find this count proved. This is a violation of Rule 22 of the Rules relating to Government Servants' Conduct.

Count 2.—This charge is to the effect that N. Subba Rau has been associating with non-co-operators, attending their meetings, discussing non-co-operation theories in the office and propagating those theories among the office staff.

As regards the 1st four witnesses cited in the memo. of charges Subba Rau alleges enmity.

Mr. Purniah, the Deputy Superintendent in charge, deposed that Subba Rau had irregular conversation in the Club room and that he had to speak to him on the subject.

Subba Rau says that this remonstrance was addressed not to him alone but to all the members of the Club. He pleads in reply to this charge that Mr. Purniah should have reported him and that the fact that he did not do so disposes of the charge.

I do not agree. Subba Rau himself states that Deputy Superintendent, Mr. Purniah, was one of those who held the meeting for collecting subscriptions to the Tilak Swaraj Fund and against Mr. Purniah himself there is ample evidence to show that he was either himself a sympathiser with non-co-operation movement or not of sufficient force of character to check undesirable activities among his staff.

The evidence on this count satisfies me that Subba Rau has been sympathising actively with the non-co-operation movement.

Count 3.—This charge is to the effect that Subba Rau agitated for the discontinuance of the paper 'Justice' in favour of the 'Bombay Chronicle', 'Hindu', and 'Andhrapatrika'.

There is ample evidence to support this charge. Subba Rau explains the discontinuance of 'Justice' as being due to a general desire of the members to have a Calcutta paper. Subba Rau calls the 'Hindu' and 'Andhrapatrika', 'loyal papers'. But both these papers actively preach the doctrine of non-co-operation.

I am satisfied that Subba Rau was largely instrumental in discontinuing loyalist papers in the club and taking in only n. c. o. papers.

Count 4.—Mr. O. Ramaswami Sastri, Clerk, Office of the District Superintendent of Police, Godavari District, and Mr. Md. Abdur Rub, Inspector of Post Offices, Bezwada Sub-Division, have stated that while travelling from Bezwada to Masulipatam on the 26th December, 1921, an altercation arose between Mr. Sastri and Subba Rau, the latter angrily standing up for non-co-operation. Subba Rau was at that time wearing khaddar and a Gandhi cap. Subba Rau has produced statement of two witnesses that he remained silent throughout this altercation and that the man actually disputing with Mr. Sastri was some one else not identified.

Mr. Sastri was at the time a total stranger to Subba Rau but subsequently identified him. No enmity on the part of Mr. Abdur Rub has been suggested by Subba Rau and there is no reason whatever for rejecting the statements of these two witnesses.

I find this part of the charge proved.

Count 5.—Subba Rau does not deny that he wears khaddar and a Gandhi cap. He relies on the statement made by the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent in the Imperial Legislative Assembly that the wearing such clothes is not in itself objectionable.

Sir William Vincent's reply to a query about Government servants wearing Khaddar in office was as follows :—

> "Government do not object to their servants wearing clothes composed of any material, provided that the clothes worn do not definitely carry with them any political significance."

There is evidence that Subba Rau persuaded or tried to persuade all members of the office-staff to wear Khaddar clothing ; and in view of the rest of the evidence against Subba Rau his contention that the wearing by him of Khaddar and Gandhi cap had no political significance is puerile.

A careful consideration of the evidence against telegraphist Subba Rau convinces me that he has been actively sympathising with the non-co-operation movement and was largely responsible for the trouble in the Bezwada Telegraph Office. His character roll gives no reasons for lenient treatment. It shows, moreover, that he has been heavily in debt, and has been declared an insolvent. I consider that he is not a fit person to be retained in Government service and direct that he be dismissed with effect from the date of his suspension.

Realisations from the Sale of Post Office Cash Certificates.

1742. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : With reference to my starred question No. 1146 asked in the last Simla session of the Assembly, will the Government be pleased to state if there is any special reason why the realisation from the sale of Post Office Cash Certificates in 1921-22 was only Rs. 47,98,000 and in 1923-24 Rs. 6,88,65,000 ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to paragraph 25 of my Budget speech of the 29th February last, in which I explained how an improvement in the attractions of the investment and action taken to advertise and popularise these Cash Certificates had resulted in a striking increase in sales. I am glad to be able to say that they continue to be popular.

Advisory Committee of the East Indian Railway.

1743. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether the Calcutta Advisory Committee of the East Indian Railway has branches located at different places ?

(b) If so at what stations or places have those branches been located ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). There are two Advisory Committees on the East Indian Railway, a main Committee at Calcutta and a Branch Committee at Cawnpore.

ADVISORY COMMITTEES FOR RAILWAYS.

1744. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will Government please state whether Advisory Committees have been established for all railways in British India, and if not for how many railways have such Committees been established ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Local Advisory Committees have been formed on all the principal railways except the Bengal-Nagpur Railway. The formation of a Committee on that Railway is under consideration.

1745. (This question was answered† on the 8th September).

CONFIDENTIAL CIRCULAR ISSUED TO THEIR EMPLOYEES BY THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1746. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that a confidential circular has been issued by the East Indian Railway authorities, asking their employees to take long furlough, if they so desire, in view of the decision of the Government to take over that Railway ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government are not aware that any such circular has been issued.

PENSION OF ONE BEDAR BAKHT.

1747. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : With reference to the Government reply to my starred question 1184 asked in the last Simla session of the Assembly will the Government please state if inquiries have been completed now ; and if so, will they please communicate the result to the House ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I am going to answer this question later, Sir. I do not know which Department is concerned in this.

PROVISION OF INDICATION BOARDS FOR THE DIRECTION OF PASSENGERS AT NAIHATI STATION ON THE E. B. RAILWAY.

1748. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : With reference to the Government reply stating " With regard to Naihati station, indication boards for the direction of passengers who should change at this station have not up to the present been provided, but Government understand that their preparation is now in hand and they will shortly be erected " to my starred question No. 1185 asked in the last session of the Assembly, will the Government please state if the indication boards have been erected now ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government understand that the indication boards have been erected.

HINDU-MUSLIM TENSION IN DELHI.

1749. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the paragraphs published in the issue of the Englishman of the 7th July, 1924, page 4, under the headings " Affray averted in Delhi," " Hindu-Muslim tension " ?

(b) If so, will they please state the facts of the case for the information of the House ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : (a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) The facts of the case regarding the mosque are practically as stated in the article referred to. As regards the Hindu-Muslim Arbitration Board, Government are informed that the hopes with which the Board started were not realised—and the Board has now ceased to function.

STATION MASTER OF KASUR.

1750. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state if the station master of Kasur, Lahore District (North Western Railway), has been officiating in the special class since 1919 whereas 11 station masters in Class C are senior to him ?

(b) If so, will the Government please state if there are any special reasons why the claims of the 11 senior station masters have been overlooked ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply to a similar question put on the 4th June last by Lala Duni Chand.

HOUSE RENT ALLOWANCES OF EUROPEANS, ANGLO-INDIANS AND INDIANS ON COMPANY-MANAGED RAILWAYS.

1751. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) With reference to the reply to starred question No. 1216 asked in the last Simla session of the Assembly, will the Government be pleased to state whether similar equality is observed between European, Anglo-Indian and Indian employees in the matter of house rent, on Company-managed railways to that observed on State railways ?

(b) If not, are they prepared to draw the attention of the authorities of the Company-managed railways to the rule on State railways, and to recommend that no distinction be made in the matter between European, Anglo-Indian and Indian employees ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). Government are not aware of the exact practice observed on Company-worked railways in regard to the payment of house rent allowance to European and Anglo-Indian and Indian employees as the policy has been to leave such matters to the discretion of the Boards of Directors of Railway Companies, whose attention will, however, be drawn to the rule observed on State-worked railways.

INDIANS IN THE ARMY IN INDIA RESERVE OF OFFICERS.

1752. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Is it a fact that there are no Indians in the Indian Army Reserve of Officers ?

(b) If so, will the Government please state if there is any special reason for that ?

Mr. E. Burdon : (a) There are no Indians at present in the Army in India Reserve of Officers, the body which has taken the place of the old Indian Army Reserve of Officers.

(b) The matter has recently been under consideration and it has been decided that Indians should in future be eligible for admission, under conditions which it is hoped to announce shortly.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Will the Honourable Member state whether the announcement which it is proposed to make shortly will be made before the end of this session ?

Mr. E. Burdon : I should think it is unlikely, Sir. The whole of the Army in India Reserve of Officers has been under reconstruction since the war. It has been a matter of great difficulty to draft a scheme. The scheme so far drawn up is in a very embryo stage and I am afraid it will not be ready before the end of this session.

SALARIES AND WORKING HOURS OF POSTMEN.

1753. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government please state :

(a) whether the salaries of postmen is on the same scale and their working hours the same throughout British India, or different in the different provinces ?

(b) what is the scale of their pay and their working hours in the North West Frontier Province and the Province of Bihar and Orissa respectively ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) and (b). The salaries of postmen vary in different parts of India. The Honourable Member will find the scales of pay stated in Commerce Department Resolution No. 4737, dated the 30th July 1920, published in the Gazette of India of the 31st idem.

Theoretically the hours of work are eight throughout India, but varying local conditions preclude a rigid adherence to this principle, even within the limits of a single province.

OPIUM POLICY OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

1754. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state if they are aware that the late Mr. Gokhale had condemned and that Mahatma Gandhi condemns the opium revenue policy of the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I have seen statements on this subject in the Press.

DECREASE IN THE EXPORTS OF INDIAN YARN.

1755. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) if it is a fact that the exports of Indian yarn by sea from British India to foreign countries during the month of April 1924 were 2 million lbs., as compared with 4 million and 5 million lbs. in the corresponding period of 1923 and 1922 respectively ?

(b) if so, what is the cause of so much decrease in April 1924 ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : (1) Yes.

(2) The decrease is principally due to reduced exports to China where, as I have already informed the Honourable Member in reply to a similar question on the 9th June last, there has in recent years been a large increase in the number and output of local spinning mills.

JUDGMENT OF MR. JUSTICE MCCARDIE IN THE O'DWYER-NAIR CASE.

1756. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government please state :

(a) if they have received a copy of the judgment of Justice McCardie in the O'Dwyer-Nair case ?

(b) if they have, will they please lay a copy of it on the table ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I have already answered this question in reply to Mr. Ranga Iyer's question† No. 1682.

RESOLUTION re ANSWERING OF QUESTIONS BY OFFICIALS ON SUBJECTS OVER WHICH THE GOVERNOR GENERAL IN COUNCIL HAS CONTROL AND SUPERINTENDENCE.

1757. Haji S. A. K. Jeelani : Will the Government be pleased to state what action they have taken on the Resolution of Mr. K. Ahmed, M.L.A., passed by the Assembly at its last Delhi session regarding the answering of questions by officials on subjects over which the Governor General in Council has " control and superintendence ".

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : Government have decided to await the report of the Reforms Inquiry Committee before deciding what action they should take on the Resolution in question.

UNSATISFACTORY ARRANGEMENTS ON EMIGRANT STEAMERS.

1758. Haji S. A. K. Jeelani : (a) Are the Government aware that arrangements on board the steamers, intended for carrying emigrants from India to the Colonies or vice versa, are most unsatisfactory ?

(b) Is it a fact that the services of certified midwives are not available on board an emigrant steamer ?

(c) Is it a fact that in the course of a voyage there generally used to be from 12 to 14 births on ships ?

(d) Is it a fact that whenever occasion arises necessitating the services of midwives a man or a woman emigrant is chosen for the purpose ?

(e) Is it a fact that there are no permanently engaged cooks on board the steamers for the services of emigrants ?

(f) Is it a fact that they are chosen from among the emigrants, and made to overwork themselves for a sum of 10 shillings for the whole voyage ?

† Vide pages 3024-25 of Legislative Assembly Debates, Vol. IV.

(g) Is it a fact that no separate arrangement exists in emigrant ships for married couples and unmarried women ?

(h) Is it a fact that the berths provided in emigrant ships for sick people are insufficient ?

(i) To remedy any discomforts to emigrants on board the steamer do the Government propose to modify the laws relating to the carriage of emigrants ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : (a) to (h). Inquiries have been made in the matter from the Local Governments concerned and the Honourable Member will be informed of the result in due course.

(i) If the replies of Local Governments indicate that the position is in any way unsatisfactory, the Honourable Member may rest assured that the Government of India will do all they can to improve matters.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will the Honourable Member be pleased to give the answer to the whole House and not to the Honourable Member alone ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : I shall lay the information on the table.

STATE CONTROL OF RAILWAY COMPANIES.

1759. Haji S. A. K. Jeelani : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they propose to take steps to widen the sphere of their control over the Railway Companies ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the degree of control exercised by the Government of India and the various Boards of Directors located in England respectively in determining policy on broad questions of Railway administration ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state the Acts and Statutes by which the control of the State over the Railway companies is governed ?

(d) Are the Government aware of the fact that according to the findings of the Acworth Committee, railway rates do not generally operate to the advantage of Indian industry and that a policy of protection to indigenous industries might be nullified by manipulations of railway rates ?

(e) In view of the passing of the Steel Protection Bill, will the Government be pleased to state whether they contemplate revising or modifying or altering Railway rates policy ?

(f) With reference to the recommendations of the Industrial Commission and endorsed by the Fiscal Commission regarding the constitution of a Rates Tribunal, what action have the Government taken or propose to take ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government see no reason to take any such steps at present ; but the degree of control exercised by Government over Railway Companies in different matters is revised from time to time as circumstances and conditions require.

(b) The powers of control exercised by the Government of India over Railway Companies are stated in the Notes on the Relation of the Government to Railways in India which are printed as Appendix I of the Railway Administration Report, 1922-23, a copy of which will be found in the Library. The determination of policy on broad questions of railway administration is reserved to Government.

(c) The control of the State over railway companies is governed by the Indian Railways Act 1890 and the contracts with the companies.

(d) No. Government are not aware that the Acworth Committee came to any such finding.

(e) The policy of Government and Railways has been and is to encourage indigenous industries by the quotation of suitable rates and the grant of concessions when they are feasible and likely to assist the development of the industries concerned, and increase traffic. There is no intention on the part of Government or Railways to depart from this policy and it has not been affected by the passing of the Steel Industry (Protection) Act.

(f) Government are in correspondence with the Secretary of State regarding the constitution of a Rates Tribunal.

1760*. This question was answered† on the 8th September.

OPENING OF THE SUTLEJ VALLEY PROJECT RAILWAY FOR GOODS AND PASSENGER TRAFFIC.

1761. Lala Duni Chand : (a) Are Government aware that neither goods nor passegner traffic is allowed on the Sutlej Valley Project railway line, that has been recently constructed from Doraha to Nalagarh, and that the line is exclusively utilized for exporting stone from the Nalagarh quarries ?

(b) Are Government aware that owing to there being three unbridged hill torrent steamers (Naddis) between Kurali and Rupar, the route from Sirhind to Rupar, an important Sub-Division of Ambala District, has become very difficult for all kinds of traffic ?

(c) Is it also true that the only other route available for going to Rupar is from Doraha railway station about forty miles long via Sirhind Canal, and that it takes more than twelve hours to reach Rupar by boat ?

(d) Do the Government propose in view of the facts as stated in (b) and (c), to order the Sutlej Valley Project Railway to be thrown open to public use ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state for how long it will be necessary for them to use the said Railway for the purposes of exporting stone from the Nalagarh quarries and do the Government intend to convert the said line into a regular and permanent line for usual goods and passenger traffic, after it is no more required for its present purpose ?

(f) In case the Government may not be prepared to throw open the said line for the purposes of traffic immediately, will the Government be prepared to allow the use of the line for carrying goods and passengers by motor trollies, by private persons subject to any conditions that the Government may think fit to impose.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government are aware that public goods and passenger traffic are not being carried at present on the temporary line from Doraha to Nalagarh which has been constructed by the Punjab Irrigation Department for the purpose of carrying stone from the Nalagarh quarries for the new Sutlej Valley Irrigation Project.

† Vide page 3010 of Legislative Assembly Debates, Vol. IV.

(b) and (c). Government have no information.

(d) The question of opening this temporary line for the carriage of public goods and passengers has been the subject of correspondence with the Government of the Punjab. It is known that the line was inspected in May last by the Senior Government Inspector of Railways and that he furnished a report to the Punjab Government on the works that would be necessary to allow of the line being opened for public traffic, but they have no information what the Punjab Government are doing in the matter.

(e) It is not known for how long it will be necessary to use this line for the purposes of exporting stone from the Nalagarh quarries. There is no intention of converting the said line into a regular and permanent line for public traffic, as it will not be wanted when the projected line from Sirhind to Rupar is built.

(f) This proposal would be outside the requirements of the Railway Act and cannot, therefore, be agreed to.

CASE OF HOT LALL, A POSTAL CLERK OF GUJRAT.

1762. Lala Duni Chand : (a) Is it a fact that one Hot Lall, a postal clerk at Gujrat (Punjab) was forced to resign by the Postmaster General, Punjab, and if so, is it true that his only fault was that he had complained against another clerk, Mangal Sen, for making false receipts, and demanded an inquiry into the matter ?

(b) Is it also a fact that he had made a representation to the effect that the Postmaster and the Superintendent of Post Offices, being partial towards Mangal Sen, the inquiry should be held by some other officer and in spite of this the inquiry was held by the Superintendent of Post Offices ?

(c) Is it also true that on an appeal having been made to the Postmaster General, the said Hot Lall was assured of a fuller inquiry into his case, but the matter was kept hanging without any decision for an unusually long time, and when he pressed for the immediate disposal of his case the Postmaster General called upon him to resign, which he consequently did ?

(d) Do the Government propose to make inquiries in the case ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Government have no information and I have no doubt that if the individual referred to has any grievance, he would address the Director-General or the Government in the usual manner.

Lala Duni Chand : When a question is put in the Assembly, is it not the duty of the Government to acquire all necessary information on the subject and answer the question ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I do not think it is the duty of the Government to inquire into complaints regarding individual officers without some indication that the individual officer himself has got a grievance.

Lala Duni Chand : Then what is the use of the right of interpellation allowed to us ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : The right of interpellation, Sir, I understand, refers to matters of public interest.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Would it not be in the public interest that the pros and cons of complaints should be inquired into and the result of it should be stated by Government in the Assembly for the benefit of the public ? Does my Honourable friend realise that ?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : May I ask, Sir, if public service is not a matter of public interest ?

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, if the proper treatment of a Government officer is not a matter of public interest ?

NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY SLEEPER CONTRACT.

Mr. Chaman Lall : Sir, I beg leave to put the following question of which I have given private notice :

(a) Is it a fact that the Central Railway Advisory Council appointed a sub-committee to inquire into the contract for the supply of sleepers to the North Western Railway by Messrs. Spedding and Co., for a period of five years, if so, will Government be pleased to lay on the table the report, if any, of the said sub-committee together with any resolution that may have been adopted by the Central Railway Advisory Council thereon ?

(b) What action do Government contemplate in connection with the said report or resolution ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Central Advisory Council appointed a sub-committee to inquire into the contract for the supply of sleepers to the North Western Railway by Messrs. Spedding and Co. for a period of five years, and a copy of the reports of the members of the sub-committee was laid on the table on the 3rd of this month in response to an unstarred question by my Honourable friend Lala Duni Chand. Government are prepared to lay on the table a copy of the advice which they have just received from the Central Advisory Council and also a statement of their final decision in the matter as soon as a decision has been reached.

Mr. Chaman Lall : Will the Honourable Member inform the House as to what were the four points raised by the Honourable Member himself for the decision of the Council and what the decision of the Council thereon was ?

12 NOON.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I cannot remember the exact wording of them now. The Honourable Member will find them stated in the reports which have already been laid on the table.

PUBLICATION OF THE EVIDENCE RECORDED BY THE LEE COMMISSION.

Diwan Bahadur R. Ramachandra Rao : With your permission, Sir, I beg to ask a few questions of which I have given private notice to the Honourable the Leader of the House and to the Honourable Sir Charles Innes.

Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Government of India informed the Secretary of State of the desire of this Assembly expressed in the debate in June last, for making available to the Assembly the evidence taken by the Royal Commission on Public Services, and to state if any, the reply received from the Secretary of State on the subject ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The Government of India communicated to the Secretary of State the views expressed in the debate in June last on the question whether the evidence given before the Lee Commission could be made available and consulted him as to whether it was feasible in any way to meet the wishes of the House. The Warrant of Appointment did not require the Commission to publish the evidence, and although, as stated in paragraph 107 of the Report, they deposited a copy of the evidence with the Secretary of State, they were under no constitutional obligation to do so. In these circumstances the Secretary of State felt bound to respect the decision of the Commission that their evidence should not be published.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : Is there any precedent for authorising any Commission not to publish evidence ? Is there any specific instruction given to that effect to any Commission ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I am not acquainted with the Warrants of Royal Commissions. But in view of the Secretary of State's reply to us, I suppose it is so.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : May I know whether the Government propose to place before this House, any materials upon which the recommendations of the Royal Commission were made save and except the extracts from the representations received from certain Imperial Service Associations and so on subsequently ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I hope to place evidence before Honourable Members in my speech on the Resolution.

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : Apart from your speech, is there any other material other than the evidence recorded by the Royal Commission ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : We laid on the table replies of the Local Governments.

VIEWS OF LOCAL LEGISLATURES ON THE RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE LEE COMMISSION.

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether they desired the Local Governments to obtain the views of the local Legislatures on the recommendations of the Lee Commission,

(b) whether the Lee Commission Report was discussed in any of the Legislative Councils in the Provinces, and to place on the table the Resolutions, if any, adopted by them ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The answer to part (a) of the question is in the negative and to part (b) the Government of India have received copies of Resolutions adopted in the Assam and Madras Legislative Councils and these are placed on the table*.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : May I invite the attention of the Honourable Member to the paragraph in the Warrant of Appointment where it is said :

"And for the better effecting the purposes of this Our Commission, We do by these Presents give and grant unto you, or any three or more of you, full power, at any place in Our said United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or in India, to call before you such persons as you shall judge likely to afford you any information upon the subject of this Our Commission ; and also, whether in Our said United Kingdom, or in India, to call for information in writing ; to call for, have access to and examine all such books, documents, registers and records as may afford you the fullest information on the subject, and to inquire of and concerning the premises by all other lawful ways and means whatsoever."

* Vide Appendix "B" to these Debates.

Does not that imply that the Commission were bound to produce evidence which they recorded ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : Sir, it is a matter of opinion.

VIEWS OF LOCAL GOVERNMENTS ON THE RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE LEE COMMISSION.

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : Will the Government be pleased to place on the table the views of the Local Governments, (including those of the Ministers) on the questions discussed in the Report ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : They have been laid.

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : When were they laid ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I understand at the first meeting, in answer to an unstarred question.

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : Have the copies of the views of the Local Governments been supplied to Members ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : That, Sir, I am not aware of.

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : May I know whether the Honourable the Home Member does not consider it necessary or desirable that we should have copies of the views of the Local Governments ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : Certainly. I laid them on the table at the first possible date and it has been open to any Member to obtain copies of them.

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : Will the Honourable Member now at least take this opportunity of having those copies distributed in the House ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : Certainly, Sir, if sufficient copies are available.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : May I draw the Honourable the Leader's attention to the terms of the Islington Commission which run exactly on the same lines as the present Warrant and to the fact that they published their evidence ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I do not think it has been suggested that it was not open to the Royal Commission to publish their evidence. The question with which we are concerned was whether, when they refused to exercise their discretions in this direction, there is anything to be done.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Do the Government expect this House to deal with the recommendations without any materials ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I hope the House has considerable materials.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : Does the Honourable the Leader of the House expect to convince the House on the spot on a very detailed matter like that ?

Mr. Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether the Warrant of Appointment of the 1886-87 Committee and of the Islington Commission also contained express provisions like these ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I have said that I have not got these Warrants before me. I do not know what they contained.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : If the Honourable Member cannot place before us the materials or the evidence upon which this report was arrived at, may we know for what purpose this Report is placed before us without materials ?

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : May I know whether the Government of India had the privilege of seeing the evidence before it was deposited with the Secretary of State ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I certainly never saw it.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : I will repeat my question. My question was, whether the Government of India had an opportunity of examining or seeing this evidence before it was lodged with the Secretary of State ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : No.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Then I take it that the Government of India have come to their decision regarding the Honourable Member's Resolution that is coming on for discussion without seeing the evidence ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : Certainly, Sir.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Is there any precedent, Sir, where the Government of India have come to a decision without seeing the evidence of a Committee or a Commission ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : There are many precedents, Sir, where the Government of India have come to decisions on reports which contained no evidence.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Does that mean that the Government of India were prevented from having access to the evidence if they wanted to see it, Sir, in these precedents ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : That, Sir, I am not prepared to answer without notice.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Will the Government be pleased to mention one or two precedents ? Will the Honourable Member please mention one or two precedents he has in mind ? He said there were many.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I have been a Government officer for many years and I certainly know many cases—I cannot quote one at the moment, I might quote a wrong one—I certainly know many cases where Government have come to conclusions without considering the evidence recorded by the Commission. I take it that the Government may come to a conclusion on the report of the Indian Bar Committee without examining the evidence and also—my Honourable friend reminds me—there is the case of the Inchcape Committee.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Was it intuition on the part of the Government of India ?

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : The Honourable Member proposed to place before us certain materials on which the Government came to a conclusion on the Report of the Royal Commission. May I know whether those materials are independent of the materials on which the Commission arrived at their conclusions ? Are they quite different ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: Some of them are no doubt different.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Will the Government place before this House those materials upon which they have come to a conclusion independently of the materials placed before the Royal Commission ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I shall endeavour to convince the House in the course of my Resolution that they should adopt the Report which is in their hands, which is the basis of the Resolution.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Are Government aware that the Inchcape Committee never examined a single person outside Government officials ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I am not aware of that.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Will the Honourable the Leader of the House take it from me that they never examined a single non-official witness and that they only examined Government officials, and therefore, whatever information was given to the Inchcape Committee was available and was in possession of the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : May I ask whether the Honourable Member is aware that the Inchcape Committee examined Agents of certain Company Railways, who are not Government officials ?

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Are not Government always in a position to get information from them ?

Mr. President : These questions are becoming irrelevant.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : That part was raised by the Government Benches.

RAILWAY COLLISION AT HARAPPA ROAD, NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : (a) Will the Government be pleased to make a statement as to whether they have received any reports in regard to the Railway collision at Harappa Road, and the circumstances under which the collision took place, and the number of casualties due to the collision ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether there is any intention to pay any compensation to the persons who received injuries in the collision and to the families of the persons who were killed in the collision ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : Before I answer this question, Sir, I should like to take this opportunity of saying how deeply the Government of India and the Railway Board regret this accident which is one of the most terrible accidents that have happened on the Indian Railways in recent years. I should also like to express our great sympathy with the relatives of those who were unfortunately killed in the accident and with those who were injured.

(a) The Government have received a preliminary report regarding this accident, but the House will understand that I must be guarded in my reply, for a magisterial inquiry is now in progress, and it is reported in the press that an Assistant Station Master has already been arrested. The North Western Railway has already published very full information regarding casualties. They amounted to 97 deaths and 105 injured. Of the former, one was a railway employee, 4 were postal sorters, one was a policeman and one was a prisoner. The remaining casualties were all Indian third class passengers. The accident took place at 1-18 hours on the morning of the 29th August. A relief train arrived at the spot at 5 hours. It brought railway officers from Lahore and Montgomery, a magistrate from Montgomery and the Assistant Inspecor General, Railway Police. The Senior Government Inspector travelled by the same train, and in accordance with standing orders began his investigation on the 30th August. It was continued on the 31st August and 1st September. It is his preliminary report that has been received. The cause of the accident was as follows :

It was arranged that No. 43 up and No. 24 down passenger trains should cross on the morning of 29th August at Harappa Road Station which is the time-table station for the crossing of the trains. Harappa Road is on the Montgomery-Khanewal line, on which line train control is in force. That is to say, the working of all trains between the various stations on this length is subject to the orders issued by the Train Controller to individual Station Masters. But these orders do not in any way absolve Station Masters from their responsibility for the safe working of trains. No. 24 down had lost a little time, and it was found that if the crossing was made at Harappa Road, as originally intended, No. 43 up would be unnecessarily detained. Orders were therefore issued for the crossing to be made not at Harappa Road but at Mirdad Muafi. The Senior Government Inspector's preliminary report indicates that line clear was given for 43 up to run from Harappa Road to Mirdad Muafi without the line clear which has already been issued for 24 down to run from Mirdad Muafi to Harappa Road having been correctly cancelled and taken back in accordance with the rules for the safe working of trains on single lines of Railway. The Senior Government Inspector was of opinion that this was the cause of the accident, but the question is one which must finally be settled by the Courts.

(b) The North Western Railway are already investigating all cases for compensation.

Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : Might I inquire, Sir, if the Government contemplate devising any measures in order to prevent such appalling disasters in the future by the collision of trains ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : That, Sir, is one of the main objects of the Senior Government Inspector's inquiry. We shall require him to make recommendations how such disasters can be averted in the future. He has only sent in a preliminary report, but he will send in a further report on this question.

Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : Might I further inquire whether the Government will be prepared to pay compensation to the relatives of those whose lives have been lost in this accident ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : All these cases are already under investigation by the Railway Administration and we may depend upon the Railway Administration to be generous in a matter of this kind.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : Will the Government consider the desirability of having a double track on these congested areas ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : I do not know if this line is a congested one. It is rather a large order for me to give an undertaking to have a double track.

Lala Duni Chand : Is it a fact that good many persons out of those wounded in this accident have died ? Will the Honourable Member give the exact number of these ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : I understand that the death roll at the present moment is 97.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : In view of the appalling loss of life, will the Government be pleased to associate two non-official Members of this Assembly with the inquiry which is going on ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : The inquiry which is going on at this particular moment is a magisterial inquiry. The Government Inspector's inquiry is an inquiry on the lines of the Board of Trade inquiry at Home. Our rules are modelled on those of the Board of Trade in England. It is a technical inquiry and the primary reason for that inquiry is to have an investigation by a technical expert as to what the cause of the accident was and what measures can be taken to avert similar accidents in the future. That is the whole object of the inquiry. It is not possible—in any case it is not considered advisable—to associate the public with a technical inquiry of that kind, because that inquiry may lead to railway officers being prosecuted, and it is considered that we must not do anything in an inquiry of that kind which possibly may prejudice those railway officials in a subsequent trial.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : In view of the fact that a large number of persons have suffered either loss of life or injury, will not the Government consider the desirability of appointing a larger Committee in which the public would be represented and in which the facts relating to the disaster would be thoroughly inquired into and reported upon ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : I cannot imagine, Sir, what more can the public require than a formal magisterial inquiry into a matter of this kind.

Pandit Shamlal Nehru : May I know, Sir, if the Government are aware that an employee of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway has invented an instrument which makes such disasters impossible and that the Great Indian Peninsula Railway have already fitted up this instrument at one of their railway stations, which is on the other side of Itarsi ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : I have no doubt that all points of that kind will be reported upon by the Senior Government Inspector when he sends in his final report on the cause of the accident and the measures to be taken to avert such accidents in the future.

Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : May I inquire, Sir, whether that report will be brought to the notice of this House ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : I shall certainly publish that report when it is received.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : The question put by Pandit Shamlal Nehru was whether the Government are aware of the instrument invented by an employee of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : I am afraid I am not aware of it.

Mr. C. D. M. Hindley : May I say that I am aware of this invention. I have seen it mentioned in the press that it is being tried on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway. I have no official information about this trial, but I know that there are instruments designed to avert accidents of this nature which are in course of being tried.

Pandit Shamlal Nehru : Will the Honourable Member get that information ?

Mr. C. D. M. Hindley : What information ?

Pandit Shamlal Nehru : The information about this instrument ?

Mr. C. D. M. Hindley : I have already said that I have seen some information on this question in the press. I take it from the Honourable Member that this instrument is being tried on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway. It would be premature to express any opinion on this particular instrument.

Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : Is it a fact that these instruments are in the nature of searchlights in front of each train which give a very long warning to the other train coming from the other side and thus avoid collisions ?

Mr. C. D. M. Hindley : I think the device that was referred to in the first question is a device in connection with the stopping of the train itself and has nothing to do with the use of searchlights.

Mr. President : Further questions on this point had better await the moment when Government will be in a position to give further information.

BILLS PASSED BY THE COUNCIL OF STATE.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, in accordance with Rule 25 of the Indian Legislative Rules, I lay on the table the Bills which were passed by the Council of State at its meeting of the 8th September, 1924. They are :

RESOLUTION RE RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE LEE COMMISSION.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman (Home Member) : Sir, I rise to move the Resolution* which stands in my name, and in doing so I wish to remind the House that I am redeeming a pledge which was given by the Government on several occasions that, before orders were passed on the recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services, the Indian Legislature should be given an opportunity of expressing its opinion on those recommendations.

---

* " This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council :

(1) That the following recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India be in principle approved :

(a) that while the existing system of appointment and control of the All-India Services should, in present conditions, be maintained in reserved fields, the following services operating in transferred fields, namely, the Indian Educational Service, the Indian Agricultural Service, the Indian Veterinary Service, the Buildings and Roads Branch of the Indian Service of Engineers in those provinces in which the two branches have been separated, and the Indian Forest Service in Bombay and Burma, should, so far as future recruits are concerned, be appointed and controlled by Local Governments ;

(b) that recruitment of Indians for the Services in reserved fields should be increased as recommended ;

(c) that, having particular regard to recommendation (a), early steps be taken to constitute the Public Service Commission contemplated by section 96-C. of the Government of India Act, and to enact such legislation as may be necessary ;

(2) That pay, passage concessions and pensions be granted to the officers of the Superior Civil Services in India approximately on the scale recommended ; and

(3) That the recommendations of the Royal Commission regarding the constitution of Provincial Medical Services in Governors' Provinces be accepted in principle, subject to :

(a) the employment in the provinces of an adequate military reserve ;

(b) the provision of adequate medical attendance for British Officers in the Civil Services and their families ; and

(c) the further consideration of the conditions necessary to secure an adequate number of British medical recruits for the needs of the Army."

[Sir Alexander Muddiman.]

Before I go further, I should like for a moment to invite the attention of the House to the history of the appointment of this Committee. This House opposed its appointment very bitterly, but as I gather somewhat less bitterly when it found that the scope of the reference to the Commission was wider than it originally believed it to be. In fact, in reading the debate in connection with the appointment of the Commission—for I was not then a Member of this House,—I was struck by the fact that one speaker after another based his opposition on the fear that the Commission, both in the matter of the control of the Services, and in the matter of Indianisation, would recommend a reactionary policy and would go back on the conclusions arrived at in the Montagu-Chelmsford Report. I need hardly point out that the Commission, as a matter of fact, has made in both respects an immense advance on the position contemplated in the Montagu-Chelmsford Report. However that may be, it is perfectly true that the Report of the Commission comes, as it were, with a certain sense of prejudice before this House. But I think this House is far too fair to allow its judgment to be obscured by any feeling of pique, by any feeling of dissatisfaction at the fact that its wishes were not attended to when the Commission was appointed. You have the Report ; factum valet you have to consider it. I will invite the attention of the House to the terms of reference. What were they ? They were as follows : In the first place, the Commission was to have regard to " the necessity for maintaining a standard of administration in conformity with the responsibilities of the Crown for the Government of India." That is to say they were to make no recommendation which would in any way upset or conflict with that responsibility. In the second place, their attention is invited to " the declared policy of Parliament in respect of the increasing association of Indians in every branch of the administration." In other words, they were directed to explore the possibilities of further advances in the Indianisation of the Services. Lastly, they were directed to keep in view " the experience now gained of the operation of the system of government established by the Government of India Act in respect of the Superior Civil Services in India." That is to say, they were required to say whether the actual operation of the scheme of government established by that Act had disclosed anomalies in the organisation and general conditions of service, which ought to be removed. Sir, the Commission has been severely criticised, and I think unfairly criticised, for not doing what it was not directed to do. This, Sir, was not a body charged with the reform of the constitution ; its duty was to make proposals which would adapt the organisation of the Services to the existing constitution. It is idle to blame the Commission for not doing what it was not directed to do. However, I shall endeavour to show later, if it is necessary for me to do so, that the Commission were not oblivious of the fact that alterations in the constitution might take place in the future. There is nothing in the Report of the Commission in my judgment which justifies a charge that their recommendations impede constitutional progress. And what was the tribunal to which these great issues were referred ? Its President was an ex-Cabinet Minister, who has told us himself, that he has no Indian past and no Indian future. Of the Englishmen on the Committee, two were men who had never visited this country and had no material interest in the country ; and of the other members of the Committee there were four representative Indians, Indians whose names have been honoured highly by their own countrymen, and in this connection, Sir, with your permission I should like to digress for one moment to express my great regret that my personal friend, Mr. Bhupendra Nath Basu, has been prevented from carrying on his important duties in Bengal and has had to resign owing to ill-health.

To return to the constitution of the Commission, there was only one member of the Services on the Committee who was still serving. The other ex-Service member was Sir Reginald Craddock, who is well known to his House, a man of the most extensive experience, the last of the Lieutenant-Governors. So the Service element was not over-represented. Now when I read the personnel of the Commission—and in those days I had no personal concern in it ; I was an impartial observer—perhaps more so than I am now—I must say I never thought that the opinion of a Committee so constituted was very likely to be unanimous. Yet, Sir, the Report was unanimous and, when you get a unanimous Report from a Commission representing so many diverse races and so many diverse elements, I say that that fact must be borne in mind when this House comes to deal with it. I hope the House will not ignore that fact in considering the Committee's recommendations.

Another feature is that it is evident that many of the recommendations are the result of a compromise, and the value of a fair-minded compromise is very great. The Report itself refers to " the spirit of compromise which has inspired our agreed conclusions." Honourable Members will find that in paragraph 108 of the Report.

Now before I turn to the actual proposals of the Commission, there is a further point that I should like to bring to the attention of the House, and that is the position of the Services in any country and vis-a-vis any Government. The position of the Services, I submit, in no country is that of direct contact with the Legislature. The Executive Government is the master of the Services and at the same time their protector. It is a body interposed in all normal constitutions between the Legislature and the Services. That is a fact that I hope all those who look forward to the advance of India in the direction of responsible government will bear in mind. In the past the coincidence between the functions of the Services and the functions of the Government has done much to create feelings which are not really justifiable in regard to the Services. If a particular policy of Government creates odium, then let Government take it—do not transfer it to the Services. It is to be remembered, moreover, that in any country, however democratic, nine-tenths of the actual work of government is discharged by the Services. Listen to what Professor Ramsay Muir says ; he is writing about conditions in England, and he says :

" It is no exaggeration to say that so far as concerns the carrying on of the daily administration and the enforcement of the existing laws, which is nine-tenths of the business of Government, this country is governed by a pure bureaucracy."

That is, even in England, after centuries of democratic experience, it is not possible to dispense with a bureaucratic machine ; and I do wish to impress upon the House the importance of realising how essential is the executive machinery in whatever way it may be directed and whoever may be its head. You may have the ablest of Ministers ; you may have a Legislature like this Legislature informed with wisdom ; you may have a Government of the most admirable character ; but if you have not a body of officers to carry out the policy of that Government, you are like a man without arms. You will be helpless and it will involve the failure of your administration.

And now I want to draw your attention to the fact that you have in India a large body of public servants carrying on the administration. It is a legitimate ground for pride that they are of a very high grade of efficiency, and I do not refer to the British officers only but to the great multitude, for the most part Indians, who are industriously and ably carrying on the details of the administration of this country. I appeal to the House that, where they find the actions of Government are not to their liking, they should confine their attack to the Government whose shoulders are broad enough to bear it and not attack the instruments of that Government ; and they should treat the Services reasonably and with justice and allow them to go about their work unhampered by considerations of policy.

Now, Sir, I come to the definite proposals made by the Commission for the control of the All-India Services which are embodied in the terms of the Resolution now before the House. At present, as the House is aware, the control is vested completely in the Secretary of State who lays down the conditions of service, the proportion of Europeans and the proportion of Indians ; he fixes the pay ; he sanctions the posts, and in the last resort the Services have an appeal to him. Now the Commission leave this position unchanged in the case of certain services while in the case of others it makes very important changes. Put in a nutshell the recommendations of the Committee appear to me to amount to this—that the Services should be controlled by the authority which is ultimately responsible for the administration of the subjects with which they deal. I could not quote any passage in the Report which in so many words states the position in that form, but I think it not an unfair general statement of the case. Now this is a two-sided argument or rather, it is a two-sided application of a single principle. The policy which it embodies should be regarded as a whole. The same argument which justifies the retention of the Secretary of State's control over the Services in the reserved field can be applied to justify the transfer of control over the Services in the transferred field. Under the recommendations of the Committee the Services in the reserved field will be only four—the Indian Civil Service, the Indian Police Service, a portion of the Indian Service of Engineers, namely, the Irrigation Branch, and the Forest Service except in the Provinces of Bombay and Burma. These Services are dealing with subjects over which Parliament has reserved the ultimate responsibility to itself, and the logical conclusion is that the utimate authority responsible for the efficiency of the Services must be the one directly responsible to Parliament, namely, the Secretary of State. As the Constitution stands at present, it is difficult to put forward any other logical proposition. It has been contended no doubt that the Secretary of State should delegate his control over these Services to the Government of India. Now, Sir, the Government of India, as the House is well aware, is not a final constitutional authority. If those powers were delegated to it, as the Constitution now stands, it will not be responsible to Parliament, it will not be responsible to this Legislature.

I will now turn to the other side of the scheme put forward by the Commission that is, the control of the Services operating in the transferred field. They are the Indian Educational Service, the Veterinary Service, the Agricultural Service, the Indian Forest Service in Bombay and Burma, and the Buildings and Roads Branch of the Indian Service of Engineers. I leave on one side for the present the Indian Medical Service to which I shall refer later. I will not labour the argument I have used before, for the same argument which justifies the retention of control in the reserved field calls for the transfer of control to the Local Governments in the transferred field. I will not conceal from the House that in my opinion—and what is more important—in the opinion of the Government of India, these proposals are of a very far-reaching nature. They affect important Services and mark a new departure. Take one example. Now educational advance, as I understand, is a matter in which every Member of this House is greatly interested. The administration of educational policy will in future be left to Services not such as those the Secretary of State may approve, but such as those the Provincial Governments in the transferred half will approve. It will be for them to say if they want any more Englishmen. It will be for them to regulate these Services, and that is all that any Government, however democratic, can expect to do. Similarly, with regard to the other Services to which I have referred. Now, whatever our views about it may be, it is a very great step and one of great importance to this country. The Commission decided to recommend it and the Government of India have decided to support it. Once the Services are handed over to Provincial control, it is at the same time essential—and here I think everybody in the House is with me—that they should be safeguarded from the insidious attacks of political influence. I need not enlarge on the experience of other countries. Canada and the United States have learned their lesson and it is not for this country to fall into those mistakes from which they had great difficulty in retrieving themselves. The exact measure which may be required for safeguarding the Services will require careful consideration, and the House will not expect me to express any detailed opinions to-day, but it is clear that the safeguards required must take two general forms. In the first place, as is recommended by the Royal Commission in paragraph 16 of their Report, it will be necessary to pass certain Public Service Acts with a view to secure selection over the widest possible field on merits and qualifications and to reduce the risks of political interference, to lay down procedure for punishment and appeals and to provide definite conditions in regard to such matters as pay, pensions and leave. In the second place, it will be necessary to constitute a Public Service Commission. I do not propose in the short time available to go into the delicate question of the exact functions which this Public Service Commission should perform ; nor am I at present in a position to state whether it may or may not be necessary to constitute Public Service Commissions in the Provinces. I merely wish to indicate that some organization of the form of a Public Service Commission will undoubtedly be required as forming an essential part of the safeguards of the transferred Services. Without such safeguards we could not as a Government contemplate with equanimity the transfer of the control of the Services.

I have left to the end the question of the Indian Medical Service, for it has many complications which fortunately are peculiar to itself. I will leave it to my Honourable Colleague to develop in greater detail the recommendations of the Commission in regard to this Service. I will only say that the question is one of extraordinary complexity and difficulty and no hasty decision should be taken on it. There is the military problem, there is the difficult question of the military medical reserve to be available in time of war. But subject to these considerations we are provisionally in favour of the suggestion of the Royal Commission that so far as the non-military personnel of the civil medical administration is concerned Provinces should be allowed to develop their own Provincial Medical Services. The exact method of reconciling these two elements—the Provincial Medical and the military medical reserve—will require most careful and detailed consideration.

I would refer and very briefly to the recommendation regarding the provision of British medical attendance for British civil officers and their families. In so far as this can be done we feel that it ought to be done, and so far as we are able to judge the recommendations of the Commission apparently would not entail an appreciably larger and possibly not so large a number of British doctors as would in any case be required to be employed as a military reserve. I have dealt with this point very lightly for as I have said my Honourable Colleague will develop it in greater detail.

I now turn to the next point, namely, the Indianization of the Services. I will say here that the Commission approached this matter from a standpoint very different from that of the Islington Commission.

They say :

"In the days of the Islington Commission the question was how many Indians should be admitted in the public services, it is now become what is the minimum number of Englishmen which must still be recruited."

Well, Sir, this is a great change and it is a change which has come over the scene in a very few years. The Islington Commission reported in 1915. And in these few years we have come to a position which surely is one that must be accepted by everyone in this House, for I will not suppose that there is any one in this House prepared to say that no Englishmen will be required for India in the future.

I will quote what the Montagu-Chelmsford Report says on the question of the retention of a British element in the Services :

"Do the changes which we propose point to the gradual, possibly the rapid, extrusion of the Englishman with all the consequences that may follow the reform? Is it conceivable that India's only surviving connection with the Empire will be found in the presence of British troops for the purpose of defending her borders? We may say at once that the last contingency cannot be contemplated. At least so long as the Empire is charged with the defence of India a substantial element of English must remain and must be secured both in her Government and in her Public Services."

I would like to analyse in a little detail the proposals of the Commission so that the House may realise what it is that they actually mean. I must confess that I myself received rather a shock when I first saw the figures. I take the All-India Services. The present sanctioned strength is 4,279 ; their actual number is just under 4,000. I estimate that on the proposals of the Commission about 1,300 posts, so far as future recruits are concerned, will be provincialised, and I will assume that this means practically complete Indianization. There will remain something under 3,000 posts on an All-India basis, but of these 3,000 it is contemplated that the greater portion will eventually be filled by Indians. In every case except the Police it is recommended that Indian recruitment to these Services should be more than half the total, while in the Police it is proposed to recruit half and half. If the proposals of the Commission are given effect to, there will, I estimate, eventually remain in the All-India

Services only some 1,300 British Officers including the doctors of the military reserve. If we confine our consideration to the two security Services—the I. C. S. and the Indian Police Service, the number of posts which will eventually be held by Europeans on the proposals of the Commission is less than 900.

I sometimes wonder if it is realised that when the Indian Civil Service consists half of Europeans and half of Indians there will only be 675 British officers employed in the whole of India in the important tasks which this Service performs, and of this number less than 400 will be filling posts of major responsibility, the remainder being under training in less responsible posts or on leave. Is it really suggested that in the condition of India some 400 British officers employed in important Secretariat or administrative posts, as heads of districts, as Sessions Judges, as Political officers and the like is an excessive number in a country with more than 300 million inhabitants ?

If we look at the problem from this point of view I think few will deny that the proposals of the Lee Commission go to the very limit of safety. I do not wish to emphasize the existence of communal and provincial feeling or to lay undue stress on the conditions which I am told every day are evanescent but to which it is impossible to shut one's eyes. I have been twenty-five years in this country and I see no signs of their disappearance—I lay no further stress on that point. I for one cannot believe that this country can afford or will wish to dispense with the services of British officers. But I may be told that what is really needed is not the disappearance of the British official in India altogether, but the more rapid substitution of Indians. That, Sir, is the policy of Government within limits. But let me remind you that a service is an organism of slow growth; a few enter it, a few leave it every year. To those who complain that Indianization makes slow progress let me cite the figures for the Indian Civil Service. There are at present 165 Indians in the Service. Of these 86, that is more than half, have entered within the last five years. And this was under a system of recruitment which gave Indians appreciably less than 40 per cent. of the vacancies. The Lee Commission propose to give them 60 per cent., and in the next five years, if recruitment is normal it is quite clear that as many Indians will enter the Service as the total number that is in it at present. It has been freely argued that European recruitment should be stopped altogether. The more cautious of those who make this demand suggest that it should be stopped only for a time in order that the process of Indianization may be speeded up to a maximum. Do they honestly think that it would ever be possible to revive British recruitment when once it had been stopped ? Others point to the number of British officers at present in the Services—some 3,000 in all the All-India Services—and argue that for the next 15 or 20 years they will provide all the British element that the country needs. But do they believe that if British recruitment were closed down everything would go on in the Services as before ? Have they no fear that such an announcement might lead to a considerable exodus of British officers ? There are some I know who would welcome this result, but I believe very many others would sincerely lament it. I return to the proposals of the Commission. (Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : " Will you explain that point " ?) What I was suggesting to the House was that it will not be without its effect on the existing members of the Service. That is my view : it may not be yours.

[Sir Alexander Muddiman.]

Now let me explain the proposals in terms of the recruits we need. We need annually about 22 British recruits for the Indian Civil Service, 15 for the Police, and perhaps 8 for the other two Services. This would give you a total recruitment of 45. We shall be losing British officers by retirement according to normal calculations at the rate of about 120 a year, that is, for every 10 British officers that retire from the All-India Services we shall recruit not more than 4.

1 P.M.

And now, Sir, there is another point. I have often discussed this question with Indian friends—and I hope I have many Indian friends—and I cannot help feeling that in the back of their minds there has always been a feeling that Englishmen in this country desire to keep up English recruitment for selfish reasons ; that they wish to keep the jobs for their children or their cousins and that they have at the back of their minds some reservation of that sort. Now, I ask you, Sir, 45 British recruits a year—is that a fact which is going to affect an Empire like ours or a race like mine ?—45 recruits ? Why, there are many big commercial undertakings which will require nearly that number of recruits. I may be wrong—but I have always thought that the feeling to which I have referred was present in the minds of many of the people with whom I have discussed this question.

Now, I have one word to say on a point which has given rise I understand to some anxiety in the Muhammadan community. They at any rate have recognised that the recommendation of the Lee Commission will involve very large increased recruitment of Indians, and they are somewhat apprehensive that they may not get a reasonable share of these appointments. It is not only particular communities which put forward claims of this nature, but many of the Provinces show a tendency to insist, that, as far as possible, strangers from other Provinces should not be placed in their Services. Now, no concession can be made to claims of this kind without departing to some extent from the principle of free competitive examination. This House has passed a Resolution affirming the principle that the Services should not be unduly overweighted with representatives of any one community or Province. It is evident that this question must be taken into careful consideration in connection with the large increased rates of recruitment for Indians arising out of the Lee Commission, and I may say that the matter is one which the Government of India have at the present moment under their close attention.

I pass to the second part of my subject, the financial relief of the Services. It is no new question. Now, the Commission, and the Government of India also, must approach this question from two points of view—that is, in the first place, the relief of the present incumbents ; and, in the second place, the encouragement of recruitment. Both are of the greatest importance but I will refer later to the question of recruitment and will review now the case for general relief. The pay of the Superior Services had been under consideration and discussion now for many years. I do not propose to take the story back before 1912, by which year it had been realised that something would have to be done. Prices had been rising steadily for many years, while salaries for the most part had remained unchanged. These conditions had by 1912 produced a considerable amount of discontent. Now, there is one important point to which I wish to draw the attention of the House, and that is, that these complaints were made before the war and long before the Reforms. I have often heard it said that the Services are asking for more pay as a bargain for the Reforms. Nothing is more untrue.

As I have said by 1912 the Services were beginning to feel the effect of the constant rise in prices. That prices have risen hardly needs demonstration, but the House will want some facts, and in this connection I will refer them to a Report which is well known to most of them. The Government of India placed an eminent Indian gentleman, Mr. K. L. Datta, on special duty to conduct an elaborate inquiry into the facts, and this Report is no doubt familiar to the House. He found that in the period 1890-1912 the general level of wholesale prices rose by 36 per cent. ; of domestic servants by some 50 per cent. and the average wage of all labourers by about 60 per cent. Roughly there was a 50 per cent. rise all round. It is, therefore, not surprising that the Services in 1912 were beginning to feel the effects of these rises. In that year the Islington Commission was appointed. They took two and a half years over that job. They took plenty of evidence and they published many volumes of it. Well, by the time the Report reached the Government of India, the great war had come on and the consideration of the Report was deferred and the Report was not actually published till January 1917. In the meantime the facts on which the Report was based had changed and were daily changing out of recognition. The war had, in India as elsewhere, produced an upheaval of prices and the recommendations of the Commission were out-of-date before they were considered, before they were even commenced to be considered, and the consideration itself was a lengthy process. It was not till the end of 1919 and the beginning of 1920 that the new scales of pay for the Services were sanctioned.

I come now to the revisions of pay of 1919-20. As I said just now, the actual proposals of the Islington Commission were out-of-date before they came up for consideration. The primary new factor was the crushing increase in prices since the Islington Commission had made their recommendations. It is probably a reasonable estimate to say that the rise in the cost of living for Europeans in India in this period had been not less than 60 per cent. But it is perfectly true that at that time there were influences of a compensatory character, and the main influence was the remarkable rise in the exchange value of the rupee. To some considerable extent the rise in the cost of living was made up by this, and it is quite clear that the revisions of pay of 1919 and 1920 were made on the assumption that the rupee would remain at or about 2 shillings. The Under Secretary of State for India made the following statement in the House of Commons on the 20th July 1922 :

" The present scale of salaries was fixed with effect from the 1st December 1919. The official exchange value of the rupee was then 2 shillings. At that time it was expected that the exchange value would continue about that figure, though it could not be definitely guaranteed."

(Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : ' Is there any other authority for that ' ?) I will endeavour to find out. It may assist the House to realise what an important factor this anticipation of a high exchange must have been in determining the new rates of pay for the Services, if I refer to the case of the Indian Civil Service for purposes of illustration. The Montagu-Chelmsford Report had urged that something should be done towards restoring the real pay of the Service to the level which had proved attractive 20 years ago, and in the consideration of the revision of pay of the Indian

[Sir Alexander Muddiman.]

Civil Service, considerable stress was laid on this recommendation. To restore the pay of the Indian Civil Service to the level which had proved attractive 20 years ago would have involved perhaps an increase of 50 or 60 per cent. The actual increase sanctioned was some 8 or 10 per cent. It is, I think, very evident that these proposals would not have been considered to meet the situation adequately had it not been for the anticipation of a high rate of exchange. As the Lee Commission say in their Report, if exchange had remained at or about 2 shillings, it is probable that no complaint would have been made regarding the scales of 1919-20. But within a year of the introduction of the new scales the basis on which the new rates of pay had been fixed was shattered. The Services had been tried high. For seven years they had waited for relief which seemed to them at any rate overdue. No sooner was the relief given than an unforeseen accident deprived them of a large part of the long expected relief which they had hoped to receive. By the end of 1920 the Government were overwhelmed with a large number of memorials protesting against the new rates of pay. But at that time there was great financial stress in India. The finances were seriously involved, partly from the general after-effects of the war, partly from the failure of the currency policy, and partly owing to the fact that enormous sums amounting to 9½ or 10 crores had been incurred in recurring expenditure for the purpose of raising the pay of the Provincial and subordinate Services throughout India—charges that I myself regard as absolutely essential but still they were a heavy burden on the Exchequer of the day. Sir, the Government postponed any further action for three years—from 1920 to 1923. The decision to appoint a Royal Commission, whose Report we are discussing to-day, was made in January, 123, but the Commission did not start its work until the cold weather of 1923-24. Sir, I have gone into this at some length because I have heard it said that the claims of the Services are really in the nature of—to put it quite frankly—black-mail. They do not like the reforms and therefore, in order to keep them quiet, you have got to pay them more. I contend that the history of this matter shows clearly that these claims arose before the reforms were thought of. It has a long history, and as they think, it has taken a very long time for them to get much needed relief.

Now, what is the relief proposed by the Commission? I know the House feels that they have not been given the full evidence on this point given before the Commission. How could the Commission, which gave a pledge that they would not reveal a great many things which were communicated to them under the pledge of secrecy, publish that evidence? Much of the most valuable evidence was given by banks which doubtless were bound to exact the pledge of secrecy; for I understand that to reveal the condition of its clients' accounts is a thing which no bank will do. Other evidence was given by commercial firms. They had very good reasons—quite obvious reasons—for not wishing their recommendations to be known.

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the United Provinces: Non-Muhammadan Urban): May I ask if there is anything to show that banks and commercial concerns asked that their evidence should not be published?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: I think so. I have not got the exact reference now, but I will give my Honourable friend the reference. There is a reference to this in the Report.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah (Bombay City : Muhammadan Urban) : That must be a privilege claimed by the banks if the privilege was not raised by the constituents.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I do not quite follow the Honourable Member. As I say, great point has been made that the detailed evidence has not been laid before the House.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Is it suggested that the banks gave individual accounts to the Commission ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The Commission say on page 26 of their Report :

"We have obtained independent confirmation of this view from banks or financial houses in close and constant relation with members of the Services. We were informed that a great many officers, particularly in the early years of married life, are at present in debt to an extent which was unknown 20 years ago ; and that this is in no sense due to extravagance. Insurance policies are pledged as security for advances to a much greater extent than formerly and in many cases their surrender value taken."

I understand that an insurance policy is the last thing that a man pledges.

Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar (Madras ceded districts and Chittoor : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Will the Honourable Member look at page 61 where he will see that a different ground is given by the Committee for not publishing the evidence ?

Mr. President : I must ask Honourable Members to allow the Honourable the Home Member to proceed with his argument. Government have allotted three days for this debate and Members will have full opportunity of developing their own case.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : On a point like this, what you want is not for everybody individually to examine the evidence. You have had this Commission. I suggest that it would be right that their recommendations should be treated somewhat on the lines of the verdict of a jury. When you get a unanimous recommendation, you must attach some weight to it. It is not suggested that the Commission was unfair or prejudiced. They were engaged for the purpose of giving their impartial view of the matter. They presumably came with a perfectly fair mind to the matter.

Now, what are their proposals ? I will explain them in broad outline. In the first place, they propose an addition in the matter of pay. The form in which they cast their proposal was somewhat complicated. They suggested that an addition of Rs. 50 a month should be made to the overseas pay and that the whole of the overseas pay should then be converted into sterling at the favourable rate of exchange of 2 shillings. The essence of the proposal, when it is analysed, will be seen to be the payment of the whole of overseas pay in sterling. Unless the whole of the overseas pay is remitted to England, the full benefit proposed by the Commission does not accrue. We accept the fundamental principle of this proposal, but we see no advantage in stating the overseas pay first in rupees and then converting it into sterling at a favourable rate of exchange. We prefer to state the overseas pay straightaway in sterling. The effect of the proposal is, in the first place, an addition to overseas pay, in the second place, the payment of that overseas pay in sterling in such a way that the officer is protected against the loss, if the exchange falls below 1*s.* 4*d.*; and the Government will take the profit when the exchange rises above 1*s.* 4*d.* This is the essence of the proposal of the Royal Commission and we are prepared to accept it, speaking generally, merely simplifying the form. With regard to the amount, this appears to us to be fair and equitable. The Commission propose that it should start at Rs. 75 a month on a 1*s.* 4*d.* basis and rise in the 12th year of service to Rs. 200 a month on the same basis.

There was one point on which the Commission were greatly divided. It was on the question how far this relief should be carried out with regard to officers holding administrative posts. The Indian members recommended no relief except for certain lower administrative posts on a pay of Rs. 1,750—100—2,150. The English members, on the other hand, proposed—and the House will find the arguments stated very clearly in the appendices—that the relief given at the top of the time-scales should be carried on for all officers above the time-scales whose pay does not exceed Rs. 4,000 a month. The Government of India are not prepared to accept either of these divergent views. They propose to take a middle course. They are impressed by the fact that the financial circumstances of many officers holding administrative posts are straitened. At the same time we think that the proposals of the English Commissioners go somewhat too far and that it is unnecessary to consider the grant of any relief to any officers at present drawing more than Rs. 3,000 a month.

The second element in the scheme of relief proposed by the Commission is the grant of free passages. This I must explain is part, and an essential part, of the general scheme of relief of the Commission. They could have done it in any other way. They could have proposed a further increase in pay, but they thought it preferable to grant the relief in the form of free passages. The officer himself is relieved of considerable mental anxiety if he knows that his passage will be paid by Government. Further, the system has the advantage of providing automatically for the actual needs of the wife and family, and lastly the system is likely to be on the whole economical to Government, because it is certain that no more money will be paid by Government than is actually required for expenditure on passages. Nothing perhaps in recent years has proved a more serious burden to the Services than the crushing increase in passage rates.

From 1903 for a good many years the cost of a P. and O. 1st class return passage from Bombay to London was £78; it now ranges from £122 to 157; the intermediate scale of accommodation, namely, 1st Class B being £140. The concession, as the House will observe, is a moderate one.

Relief is provided only on the scale of 4 first class passages in the course of a service which may be taken as averaging from 28 to 30 years, that is, one passage in seven years.

The third main head of the recommendations of the Commission is in regard to pensions. I would here call attention to the fact that the Commission have rejected the claims for increase in the pension of the Indian Civil Service and have declined to reopen the question of the refund of the 4 per cent. contribution which all officers of the I. C. S. used to make towards their pension before 1919. The Government of India accept the conclusions of the Commission on both these points, but I think the House will recognise that the Commission's conclusions were framed in a spirit of due moderation and economy. For it must be remembered that while the I.C.S. pension is always represented as one of £1,000 a year, no officer who joined the Service before 1919 receives the full £1,000 a year from Government. On the contrary it is generally estimated that under the old system an officer of the I.C.S. contributed £250 a year to his own pension, and the Government gave a pension of only £750 a year. The cessation of the contribution of officers to their own pension from 1919 changes the situation, but the change is only a gradual one. It will be 25 years from 1919 before the first officer of the I.C.S. draws his full £1,000 pension from Government, and in the meantime those senior officers who are now retiring are receiving from Government a pension very much less than £1,000. The Commission however proposed to grant certain enhanced pensions to Members of the Indian Civil Service who attained the high rank of Member of Council or Governor. This proposal has been carefully considered by us, but we regret we find ourselves unable to support it. We think that it is difficult to reconcile with the main idea which we take to underlie the recommendations of the Commission, namely, that essential relief should be given to those who need it most. Moreover, the pension of the Indian Civil Service has been based on the principle of uniformity. This principle has many advantages, but it is inherent in it that the man below the average receives more than he deserves and the man above the average receives less. We fully recognise that a pension of a thousand pounds a year may seem meagre for an officer who has filled a great and responsible post such as that of the Governor of one of our major Indian Provinces, but we feel that such a considerable departure from the principle of uniformity as is proposed by the Royal Commission would involve a reconsideration of the principle itself, and we do not think it would be expedient to upset a system which has in the past proved one of the chief attractions to the Service.

I have explained what the Commission and the Government of India do not propose to do in the matter of enhancing pensions. What they do propose is a moderate increase in the pension of the Uncovenanted Services amounting to Rs. 1,000 a year or £87-10*s.* in the ordinary pension from 25 years' service onwards.

The inadequacy of the rates of the Uncovenanted Services pension has been a ground of complaint for many years. The pension was fixed originally as long ago as 1855 or 1860 at Rs. 5,000 a year which was then £500. On the proposals of the Commission the 30-year pension will now be £612-10*s.* I do not think any one can suggest that an increase of £112 a year to cover the changed conditions of the last 65 years is excessive.

These are the main recommendations of the Commission to which we invite attention. I will leave it to my Honourable Colleague in charge of Finance to explain any possible indirect repercussions of the proposals of the Commission on the finances of India. I will confine myself to the direct cost as estimated by the Commission, and I have my Honourable Colleague's authority for stating that the estimates given in Appendix VII of the Report may be taken as approximately correct. That is to say the cost in the first year is 96 to 98 lakhs plus about 7 lakhs for administrative posts, or just over one crore. This is of course on a 1*s.* 4*d.* basis ; if exchange rises it will be less.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : How much of it will be Central and how much Provincial ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: My Honourable Colleague will be able to tell you accurately. There is one statement however in Appendix VII which is somewhat misleading. It is said that the annual cost will probably rise until it reaches about 1½ crores, and will subsequently fall, as Indianization makes itself felt. I think it can be shown that this is too pessimistic a view, and underestimates the immediate economies of Indianization. The rise is due to the increase in the pensions of the Uncovenanted Services. This is estimated to involve a progressive addition of just over a lakh a year for 15 or 16 years. But the economies on Indianization will certainly exceed a lakh a year, and therefore the cost will not gradually rise, but on the contrary will gradually fall. I tried to bring home to the House in the earlier part of my speech the exceedingly far-reaching nature of the Indianization proposals of the Commission and the rapidity with which Indians will be replacing Englishmen in the Superior Services. If we take into account both the overseas pay and the passage concession, the Indian officer of the future will be costing from the 12th year of service onwards some Rs. 500 a month or Rs. 6,000 a year less than the British officer, and even in the first year of service he will cost Rs. 2,400 less. For every 10 British officers that retire at least 6 Indians will be recruited involving an economy of over Rs. 14,000 annually. Now we may anticipate that about 150 British officers will retire each year from the All-India and Central Services. This would suggest a progressive saving of more than 2 lakhs each year which is appreciably in excess of the progressive increase on account of pensions, and will moreover steadily rise in subsequent years. The House will realise therefore what a very important economy may be anticipated through the process of Indianization. The Commission did not, it is true, propose to reduce the existing basic pay of Indians which would produce a further economy, and, in this very difficult question, I am not prepared to say that the Commission was wrong. The matter, however, is one which may, if necessary, be further considered.

Finally, I will deal with the very important question of recruitment. Now one of the most important aspects of the Commission's recommendations is the extent to which they will solve our present difficulties on this score. I have noticed that two conflicting lines of argument are used. There are those who say that recruits can be had for the Services without making any appreciable improvement in terms. On the other hand, there are those who say that the financial proposals of the Commission will be quite ineffective to attract recruits. I believe that both these arguments are wrong. It is quite clear that at the present time, whatever the cause, recruits cannot be had for the premier Indian Service. The Indian Civil Service is already 75 under strength. By next year it will probably be at least 100 under strength. In the examination held a month ago for the Indian Civil Service 21 British candidates presented themselves. Before the war nearly 200 used to come forward for what was generally acknowledged to be the severest competitive test in the country. The experience of this year does not stand alone. In 1923 there were 38 British candidates, in 1922, 19, in 1921, 20. The significance of these figures lies in the fact that, even on the reduced proposals for recruitment of British officers made by the Lee Commission, we require each year 22 for the I. C. S. We actually need more officers than there are candidates forthcoming. It is often said that for the Police at any rate there is no dearth of candidates. This idea has grown up owing to the experience in the first year or two succeeding the war. At that time there were a large number of officers just demobilised, and it is true that the number of applications for admission to the Indian Police Service was large. But we have now settled down to normal conditions, and I will give the House the facts relating to the examination for the Indian Police Service held a month or two ago in London. There were 18 vacancies to be filled ; for these only 41 candidates appeared. A qualifying standard is laid down for this examination, and out of the 41 candidates 13 failed to reach the qualifying standard. Therefore there were only 28 qualified candidates competing for 18 vacancies. The position is certainly not as bad as that for the Indian Civil Service, but there is little margin of safety. I do not assert that financial considerations are the only ones which deter candidates from entering these Services, but I do say that financial considerations do play a very important part and that without a removal of the present economic difficulties of the Services there is no likelihood of our being able to obtain the services of the Englishmen we want. If you want any Englishmen at all, they ought to be of the good class. If you want them, you must take care they are good ones. The improved terms recommended by the Commission will certainly not enable the services to live in affluence nor will it restore the comparatively easy circumstances of the old days. Still they ought to be sufficient and the Commission thinks so and I am prepared to trust their judgment. In that respect their proposals would give the Services at least that minimum subsistence which a public servant can rightly expect. It will enable the members of the Services living with due economy to avoid falling into debt. That is not the case with many of our officers now. I see that Lord Lee, the Chairman of the Royal Commission, stated publicly that, if the recommendations of his Commission were brought into effect, he was ready to take part in a recruiting campaign in order to secure candidates for the Indian Services. That shows, at any rate, that in his judgment the recommendations made are adequate to attract recruits and, in the second place, that he is prepared to throw his influence into the scale in favour of recruitment. I have had letters from Oxford which give me some more hopeful account of affairs there. There is no doubt that people there and people in England generally are watching very closely the action that would be taken on the Report of the Royal Commission. They will also, I have no doubt, watch very carefully and read the debates of this House when it deals with the recommendations I am making. The general impression I have derived is that, if effect is given substantially to the recommendations of the Commission, there are some hopes of a decided revival of recruitment. Now, Sir, I thank the House and you, Sir, for the indulgence in the matter of time. The ground over which I have had to travel is very extensive and I have had to restrict myself to the main issues and pass lightly over many points of great importance. The debate that will ensue will give opportunities for those points to be raised and dealt with by the House as a whole. I feel that the occasion is a great one ; that the House has a great opportunity, a great responsibility. Sir, one more word and I have done. I have throughout my speech avoided any reference to the work that has been and is being done for India by the Services as they are at present constituted. I do not desire to base my case on any appeal of this kind. But the other day I came across a phrase that attracted my attention. It was a reference to " hordes of mercenary officials ". Well, Sir, that was a phrase that stung me for a moment and I asked myself—Is that really the light in which the Services are looked on ? Of one Service it ill becomes me to speak. Its record is known and I am content to leave its merits and demerits to the verdict of history. But what of the others, the engineers, the doctors, the policemen, the professors, the forest officers and the rest who have spent their lives and often died in the service of India ? Were these mere mercenaries ? Is this all the recognition that is due to them from a developed India ? And then I was comforted and felt that there was no sting in the word mercenary for they were mercenaries in the same way as that great army of whom it is written :

" These, in the day when heaven was falling,
The hour when earth's foundations fled,
Followed their mercenary calling
And took their wages and are dead."

Mr. President : Resolution moved :

" This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council :

(1) That the following recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India be in principle approved :

(a) that while the existing system of appointment and control of the All-India Services should, in present conditions, be maintained in reserved fields, the following Services operating in transferred fields, namely, the Indian Educational Service, the Indian Agricultural Service, the Indian Veterinary Service, the Buildings and Roads Branch of the Indian Service of Engineers in those provinces in which the two branches have been separated, and the Indian Forest Service in Bombay and Burma, should so far as future recruits are concerned be appointed and controlled by Local Governments ;

(b) that recruitment of Indians for the Services in reserved fields should be increased as recommended ;

(c) that having particular regard to recommendation (a), early steps be taken to constitute the Public Service Commission contemplated by section 96-C of the Government of India Act, and to enact such legislation as may be necessary ;

(2) That pay, passage concessions and pensions be granted to the officers of the Superior Civil Services in India approximately on the scale recommended ; and

(3) That the recommendation of the Royal Commission regarding the constitution of Provincial Medical Services in Governor's Provinces be accepted in principle, subject to :

(a) the employment in the provinces of an adequate military reserve ;

(b) the provision of adequate medical attendance for British Officers in the Civil Services and their families ; and

(c) the further consideration of the conditions necessary to secure an adequate number of British medical recruits for the needs of the Army."

We now adjourn to Twenty-five Minutes to Three. Thereafter, I shall call upon Pandit Motilal Nehru to move his amendment.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Twenty-five Minutes to Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Twenty-five Minutes to Three of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. President : Before I call upon Pandit Motilal Nehru to move his amendment, I wish to point out to the House that the correct Amendment Paper is the one which was found lying on the desks this morning, and not that circulated two days ago.

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the United Provinces : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I rise to move the Nationalist amendment* to the Government Resolution which has just been so very ably moved by the Honourable the Home Member. The amendment stands in my name, and I wish to make it perfectly clear at the very outset that it is a Nationalist amendment. It is rather long and I would follow the example of the Honourable the Home Member in dealing with it. I shall not inflict it upon the House by reading it from beginning to end.

* ' That for the original Resolution the following be substituted :

' PART I.

That having regard to the following among other facts, namely :

(a) That the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India was appointed, and allowed to enter upon its functions in utter disregard of the Resolutions passed by the first Assembly ;

(b) That all questions affecting the Civil Services are inseparably connected with, and entirely dependent upon, the larger question of the grant of responsible government to India and cannot be entertained and satisfactorily dealt with unless and until the Resolution of this House on Responsible Government adopted on 18th February, 1924, is substantially complied with ;

(c) That the terms of reference to the said Royal Commission and the recommendations made by it involve the perpetuation of an antiquated and anachronic system of public services without any attempt to reconstruct the administrative machinery to suit the present day conditions of India which are widely different from those prevailing when it was inaugurated ;

(d) That the said terms of reference to the said Royal Commission and the recommendations made by it are based on the unwarranted assumption that the existing system of government, both Central and Provincial, and the present position, powers and functions of the Secretary of State, the Governor General and the Governors of Provinces, would continue indefinitely ;

(e) That some of the recommendations of the Royal Commission are intended to deprive the Legislatures even of their existing powers by suggesting devices to transfer items of expenditure hitherto subject to the vote of the Assembly and the Provincial Councils to the head of non-votable items ;

(f) That the said recommendations have introduced racial discriminations in the treatment of the All-India Services ;

(g) That the said recommendations make the extraordinary provision that officers appointed to the All-India Services after 1919 as also those to be appointed hereafter shall have guarantees against and compensation for being transferred from the reserved to the transferred field of Service—a contingency which they must be taken to be well aware of when they were appointed ;

(h) That the recommendations of the Commission regarding the Medical Services are entirely unsatisfactory in that (1) they seek to perpetuate the complicated system of interdependence of the Provincial Medical Services upon the irresponsible Military Department ; (2) they introduce the objectionable principle and a costly scheme of provision for medical assistance to Europeans on a racial basis ; (3) they do not recognise the necessity of the Indian units of the Army being officered by Indian Medical officers ; and (4) they propose to absorb the present Indian Medical Service into the Royal Army Medical Corps (India)—a step which will practically close the door to Indian medical men in the said corps and thereby also in civil employment ;

(i) That the inquiry held by the Royal Commission has been unsatisfactory in that the bulk of the evidence on which the bald recommendations of the Commission are based was allowed to be tendered and accepted in camera and no material evidence is either indicated or made available to this Assembly

[Pandit Motilal Nehru.]

Sir, before I go into my amendment I think it is but due to the Honourable the Home Member that I should congratulate him on the great ability and perspicuity with which he has dealt with the subject. He has dealt with it very fairly and has not overdone any part which related to the benefit of the Services. But remembering the undertaking that he gave at question time about the materials that he was going to place before this House, I must confess to a feeling of great nervousness all the time that I was listening to his very elaborate speech. I was listening to it almost with bated breath and at every moment I expected that some new material, something which we could not guess at from the report, would be forthcoming. I saw something protruding from the files in front of him and took it to be the fuse of the bomb under his table. I expected every moment the bomb to be thrown and sooner or later to burst upon us. I waited and waited and it was only when the Honourable the Home Member resumed his seat that I heaved a sigh of relief. The bomb did not after all explode ; it was not even thrown, and we remain, so far as the materials go, where we were before the Honourable the Home Member began his speech.

this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that the recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services of India be not accepted, and this Assembly further recommends that instead of the recommendations referred to in clause (1), sub-clauses (a), (b) and (c) and clause (2) of Sir Alexander Muddiman's Resolution, so far as the latter relates to future entrants into the Civil Services being approved, the following steps be taken in respect of future recruitment and control of the Services, namely :

(i) That all further recruitment in England for the Civil Services in India including the Medical Service under the existing rules be stopped.

(ii) That a Public Services Commission be established in India and the constitution and functions of that Commission be determined on the recommendations of a Committee elected by this Assembly.

(iii) That His Majesty's Government be requested to take the necessary steps for the purpose of transferring the powers of appointment and control of the Services, now vested in the Secretary of State, to the Government of India and the Local Governments, such powers to be exercised under laws to be passed by the Indian and Local Legislatures regulating the Public Services, including the classification of the Civil Services in India, the methods of their recruitment, their conditions of service, pay, and allowances and discipline and conduct.

PART II.

This Assembly is unable in view of the present financial condition of India and on the materials before it to satisfy itself as to the propriety and reasonableness of the recommendations of the Royal Commission in respect of the alleged grievances of those at present holding office in the Civil Services, and cannot with due regard to the interests of the tax-payer assent to the imposing of fresh burdens on the already overburdened finances of the country.

But, in view of the financial relief that will result from the stoppage of all recruitment outside India under the existing rules as recommended above in Part I, this Assembly is prepared to consider the alleged grievances of the present incumbents as regards pay, passages, concessions and pensions and recommends such measures of redress as may be found necessary, and for that purpose it recommends to the Governor General in Council to take steps for the election of a Committee by this House to enable them to go into the entire question on all the materials available to the Royal Commission including the evidence taken in camera or such other material as may be available and to make its recommendations to this House as early as possible.' "

Now, Sir, he made certain preliminary remarks about the value to be attached to this Report, and I wish to deal with them point by point. What he said was that this Report was made by a Royal Commission which was constituted by gentlemen of the highest position and attainments. Nobody has ever doubted or disputed that. The next point he made was that the recommendations were the result of a compromise. It is here, Sir, that I would beg to enter my dissent. Compromise between whom? Who were the parties to that compromise? The Honourable the Home Member said that the Indian gentlemen on the Commission were representative Indians. Here again, Sir, I beg to join issue. Who elected them; whose representatives were they, and what position did they occupy in the public life of the country apart from their relations with the Government or their membership of one of the two Houses of Legislature, at one time or another? Then the Honourable the Home Member said that we must take it as a verdict of the jury, and that we must attach to it the same weight as we would attach to a unanimous verdict of a jury. Now, Sir, I have had something to do with juries, and I know under what circumstances weight is attached to the verdict of a jury, and under what circumstances no weight at all is attached to it. When the evidence is taken in open Court and the public are in possession of the facts from day to day as the trial proceeds, when the learned Judge has charged the jury in public and has reviewed the whole facts and given the law of the case, it is then that the unanimous verdict of a jury is entitled to all the weight that can be claimed for it. But without any of these things the very basis which gives the jury its weight is wanting and the verdict is of no value.

Then my Honourable friend justified the Report of the Royal Commission by the rule of factum valet. Here again I regret I am unable to follow my learned friend. The doctrine of factum valet is very well known to lawyers. It means that irregularities which had no effect on the essentials or contravene any principle must be condoned when the thing itself is done. Such irregularities must not be allowed to disturb what has already been accomplished. We have heard of an adoption or a marriage not being allowed to be questioned on the doctrine of factum valet, if all the objections urged against it are mere irregularities which do not go to the very root. I ask the House in the present instance whether it can possibly be said that the objections we take to the Report are mere objections of form and irregularity which do not touch the merits. The objections we take are objections which vitiate the whole proceedings, which go to the very root of every recommendation that the Royal Commission has made, as I shall proceed to show when I deal with the various paragraphs of my amendment. That being so, there is no justification whatever for invoking the doctrine of factum valet in support of the Report.

Now, Sir, I shall follow the course which the Honourable the Home Member has followed, and only deal with my amendment in a general way as the Honourable the Home Member has dealt with his Resolution. I shall, with your permission, lay it bit by bit before the House, and as I do so, make a sort of running comment to explain any points which I may think are necessary to be explained.

Now the whole scheme of the amendment is quite clear. It is divided into two parts. The first part gives the grounds upon which we say that no effect should be given to the recommendations of the Royal Commission. It also gives the constructive proposals we have to make in the light of the facts stated. The second part deals with the grievances, or rather refers to the grievances of the present incumbents in the various grades of Services.

In Part I we contend that the recommendations of the Lee Commission should be wholly rejected. In order to establish why this should be so, my task is facilitated by the Resolution which has been moved on behalf of the Government. I think, Sir, I can show to the satisfaction of this House from the terms of that Resolution itself that the Government is in full agreement with us in thinking that the recommendations of the Royal Commission should be wholly laid aside, and that our conclusions, if we have to form any, should be based upon facts quite independent of those recommendations. Now let me for a moment turn to the language of the Resolution. What is said here is that :

"The following recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India be in principle approved."

What is the meaning of being approved in principle ? What is the principle that this Royal Commission has laid down ? We may as well look for a needle in a hay stack as try and find out a principle in the Report of the Royal Commission. It is a string of ipse dixits, a series of bald statements, of inferences and conclusions, supposed to have been arrived at upon evidence which is not before this House. But I will assume that there is a principle in these findings, in these recommendations. If that be so, where is the acceptance of the recommendations themselves ? When a recommendation is made and you only accept it in principle, do you accept it in the form in substance or to the full extent it goes ? You certainly do not, and that being so, I say, and say with confidence, that there is not a single recommendation of the Royal Commission which has been accepted by the Government as it stands without qualifications and modifications which have not been disclosed and which for aught we know may change the whole face of the Report. The approval in principle applies to sub-clauses (a), (b) and (c) of clause (1) as well as clause (2) ; but when we come to clause (2), we find another word, a tell-tale word. What this House is asked to do is to approve the principle that "pay, passage, concessions and pensions be granted to the officers of the Superior Civil Services in India approximately on the scale recommended " ; not exactly, but approximately. Again in clause (3) we find the same important words in principle. The clause runs :

"That the recommendation of the Royal Commission regarding the constitution of Provincial Medical Services in Governors' Provinces be accepted in principle."

And this adoption in principle is further diluted by the sub-clauses being subjected to certain conditions.

Now, Sir, if any principle can be deduced from this Report and the recommendations of the Royal Commission, the principle is that the existing Services should be paid more money and that fresh recruits should be better treated than they are at present. Does that fact deserve to be dignified by the name of principle ? Was it not known, was it not common knowledge in this country and in England before this galaxy of gentlemen of great intelligence and high position met together and spent five lakhs of the money of the tax-payer to lay it down as a principle ? The real fact is that the Government themselves are not desirous to take the recommendations as they stand without qualification, and the whole idea of the Resolution, as I read it—and Sir, I read the lines as well as between the lines, and put upon it the meaning which any man of affairs will put is simply this, in the name of the recommendations of the Royal Commission give us a free hand to do what we please, because anything and everything can be justified as coming under the principle of that Report. Now, Sir, what is the position ? As I have said, the people do not want it, and I have shown, the Government cannot accept it in its entirety. The press has pronounced against it, not merely the Swarajist press, Sir, but also the press which we all know represents the interests of the Services themselves. In this connection may I be allowed to refer to a short note which appeared only two days ago in the " Pioneer," that great champion of the officials all over India, and also in England ? What does the writer say about this third clause, which was subsequently added to the Resolution of my Honourable friend ? He says :

" The Government Resolution to be moved in the Legislative Assembly on Wednesday has been extended by the inclusion of a third clause dealing with the Lee Commission's proposals for the reorganisation of the Medical Services. As we expected, the Government cannot recommend the acceptance of the principle of these proposals without considerable reservation."

So here we have it, that the Government are not prepared to accept even the principle without certain reservations. Then he says :

" For reasons which have been given at some length in the columns of the Pioneer, these reservations are most important and will probably require practically a complete review of the whole question involved."

Then the writer proceeds :

" It has long been recognised that the scheme in the light of the present state of recruitment would be quite impracticable. We doubt indeed whether the Government can contemplate the adoption of even a part of the proposals made without further investigation of the whole subject of the Medical Services in India."

Now that may be taken as a fair sample of the views of the press and of the Government as regards the whole of the recommendations of the Royal Commission. So that we are, Sir, exactly where we were before the Royal Commission came, and that I submit on the showing of the Government themselves.

I will now, with your permission, take the various parts of my amendment, and in dealing with them I shall refer to such points as the Honourable the Home Member has tried to make about some of the clauses. I say in my amendment, " that the recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services of India be not accepted," and the first reason I give is :

" (a) That the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India was appointed and allowed to enter upon its functions in utter disregard of the Resolutions passed by the first Assembly."

Now, Sir, a few facts, of which the House is probably well aware, are to be borne in mind. I will only give three dates.

On the 26th January, 1923, a motion for adjournment of the House was passed. That motion was made on the decision of His Majesty to appoint this Royal Commission. The motion was carried without a division. Then, on the 17th March of the same year, when the Budget came up for discussion, a motion was made to omit the provision for the expenditure to be incurred on account of this Royal Commission, and that motion also was carried. Lastly, on the 28th March, 10 days later, His Excellency the Governor General in Council restored the grant—not His Excellency the Governor General but the Governor General in Council. Thus the Royal Commission was forced upon the country in spite of the protest of the first Assembly—a protest which was backed by the general feeling and the general opinion in the country and in the press. It is believed that the Government of India themselves were at one time against it. In the report of the debates on this motion I find that my Honourable friend the indomitable Dr. Gour threw out an open challenge to the then Home Member, Sir Malcolm Hailey, to deny that that was the fact, namely, that the Government had at one time expressed their opinion against the appointment of this Commission. Sir Malcolm Hailey, with his usual ability as a skilful fencer in debate, avoided a direct answer to that challenge, but treated the House to a dissertation on the ethics of office and on the etiquette and conventions of men in high office, saying that he would not be tempted, whatever Dr. Gour might say, to give a direct answer. Now, Sir, I was not then a Member of this House, but the report of the proceedings leaves no doubt in my mind on the point. It may be that the Government were not at the time when Dr. Gour put the question and threw out the challenge, against the appointment of the Royal Commission ; but there is no doubt that at some time or other they were against it. There was an " ultra-Conservative " Government in England in those days and there was a " reactionary " Secretary of State—the adjectives are not mine, Sir, but were used by Sir Malcolm Hailey himself. There is no doubt that the Government of India had to bend before the will of the Government at Home ; and having done so it was but natural for the Governor General in Council to certify the grant which had been refused by the House. Now, Sir, we are asked to swallow all this, to put our seal of approval on these proceedings, and to consider this Report as if it was a Report made by a Commission under the sanction of this House, and the money spent was the money which this House had allotted for it. I make free to say that if the Government in England, which rode roughshod over the will of the people of India, had now been in power I should certainly have refused even to look at this Report (Hear, hear) ; but we know that the present Government and the present Secretary of State are not, either in fact or by any fiction of law or convention, responsible for the action taken by their predecessors. We know also what was stated in the House of Lords in the recent debate and what we are in all sincerity of purpose expected to do by the present Government. It is the present Labour Government and not their predecessors who have invited us to express ourselves upon the merits of this Report, and in common courtesy we are bound to accept their invitation and go into the merits. But I wish to make it perfectly clear that we do not abandon this plea—if I may use the language of law,—this plea is in bar. I rely upon it as a strong reason why the recommendations of the Royal Commission should not be accepted at all.

Now, Sir, in this connection there is another important fact which deserves to be noticed. It is this—that the two great divisions of political thought in India, namely, the Congress, including the Swarajists, and the Liberals including the Moderates, both pronounced against this procedure and were from the beginning opposed to the constitution of this Royal Commission. The Swarajists and the Congressmen were of course by their very creed unable to take part in the proceedings, but the most remarkable fact is that all the Liberal Associations in the country officially resolved to boycott this Commission, and if a stray Liberal here and there gave his evidence—as I know some did—it was in his own personal capacity—he represented neither his association nor his party nor his country. That being so, I ask what is the value of such a Report, of recommendations which have been arrived at on practically one-sided evidence, of proceedings in which the public, the real masters, had no say at all and the holding of which in itself constituted an insult upon the public ? So that, Sir, although we do not reject the Report on that one ground, we do ask His Majesty's Government to give the facts that I have just stated their proper weight, and giving them their proper weight, to do as they would have done if they were in our position. I ask the Labour Government to put themselves in our position and to treat this Report in the manner in which they would have treated it if they had been ignored as we were (Hear, hear.)

Now, Sir, I will come to the next clause, clause (b) of my amendment, which gives the second reason why the recommendations should not be accepted :

" That all questions affecting the Civil Services are inseparably connected with, and entirely dependent upon, the larger question of the grant of responsible government to India and cannot be entertained and satisfactorily dealt with unless and until the Resolution of this House on responsible government adopted on 18th February 1924, is substantially complied with."

It is impossible to conceive how any Service can be properly organised until we know exactly who will be the master that public servants will have to serve. Who can tell, before the final settlement of the question of the grant of responsible government to India, what will be the nature of the services required, who will be the persons qualified to enter those Services and what should be the terms upon which those Services are to be recruited ? Now, my Honourable friend referred us to certain extracts regarding the position of Services vis-a-vis any form of government and he quoted from Professor Ramsay Muir that as regards the carrying on of the daily administration and the enforcement of the existing laws which is nine-tenths of the business of government, this country, i.e., England, was governed by a pure bureaucracy. Now, my Honourable friend will pardon me if I say that he need not have quoted those passages. There is not the least doubt about the principle. No one has ever said in this House or outside it that the carrying on of the daily administration and the enforcement of the existing laws is any part of the duty of this House or will be any part of the duty of the responsible government which may be set up hereafter. But these quotations refer to a different state of things. They refer to a state of things which assumes the employment of a permanent service to instruct the changing Governments which come in and go out from time to time ; and in those circumstances you may call the permanent service, it may be, in a sort of vague manner, a bureaucracy. The kind of interference this House claims to be entitled to make, and the responsible government when it is established will be entitled to make, is shown in a book of greater authority than Professor Ramsay Muir's book which was referred to by the Honourable the Home Member, I mean Sidgwick's " Elements of Politics." At page 460 the author says :

" As regards the organisation and management of the whole executive organ it clearly belongs to the Legislature to define the powers of officials and to determine what special privileges or liabilities it may be for the public advantage to allot to or impose on any class of servants of the Government, and generally lay down the conditions of appointment and tenure of executive offices."

This, Sir, is what we want. We are not asking to be allowed to interfere from day to day with the actual carrying out of the laws or the policy of Government. We claim the right to lay down that policy and to enforce it, and if public servants would not enforce it, to have the right to exercise our disciplinary jurisdiction over them and to dictate to them from time to time what is their duty. Then Sidgwick goes on to say :

"We have seen that experience alone can determine the degree of minuteness to which the financial control exercised by the Legislature over the executive should be carried so as to secure the maximum of economy without impairing the general efficiency of the organ or its power of promptly meeting sudden calls for special activity. On the other hand for reasons before given the Legislature should be prevented, by law or custom, from interfering in the selection of individuals to fill vacant posts, or in the particular allotment of tasks to them, within the range of business assigned to the department to which they belong."

That, I take it, Sir, is a correct statement of the law upon the subject and it is for that that we contend. These are more or less matters of elementary learning.

Then, as to the bureaucracy in England, we have got some very descriptive names in English and Colonial law for the permanent service; for instance we have the very expressive word "Mr. Mother country"; a gentleman who is specially versed in the laws of England and the routine work and procedure and whose business is to instruct the Government for the time being, which is generally composed of laymen. I have no objection at all to not only one but a dozen Messrs. "Mother-country" coming over here and instructing us. Now what is the theoretical relation between the political chief which we aspire to be and the permanent subordinates which the Civil Service must become sooner or later. Here it is :

"The political chief furnishes the lay element in the concern ; his function is to bring the administration into harmony with the general sense of the community and especially of Parliament. He must keep it in accord with the views of the majority in the House of Commons and conversely defend it when criticised and protect it against injury by any ill-considered action of the House,".

and so on.

This is from Mr. Lowell's book on the Government of England. I therefore ask whether the policy you are pursuing is a policy which has any relation whatever to the grant of responsible government to the country. It may come to-day, it may come to-morrow, it may come ten years hence ; it may come a hundred years hence. This policy is certainly not a policy to lead us to responsible government at any time. Mere substitution of Indian for English public servants has nothing whatever to do with the changes which must necessarily come the moment real power is invested in this Legislature and in the representatives of the people. We do not want simply a brown bureaucracy to be substituted for a white bureaucracy. We want substantial powers in the representatives of the people and, if our white friends would care to stay and take part in our affairs after we have got those powers, we will be very glad to see them as representatives of their community in this House.

3 P.M.

I now come to clause (c) :

" That the terms of reference to the said Royal Commission and the recommendations made by it involve the perpetuation of an antiquated and anachronic system of public services without any attempt to reconstruct the administrative machinery to suit the present day conditions of India which are widely different from those prevailing when it was inaugurated."

Now, I would like to make it clear to the House that I have nothing to say against the gentlemen who are in the Service at present or who have been in the Service in the past, or even against those who might come into the Service in future. It is the system that I attack and I attack it with all the strength at my command. This system I say is the survival—I will not say of barbarism, but of the conditions of 110 years ago when we were taken as a primitive people and the English Government began to bring us up in the knowledge of citizenship and civic duties. It was in 1813 that the Indian appointments for British youths were reserved for those trained in the Company's College at Hailebury. Since then the system that guarantees the conditions of service remained practically the same, with this exception that the pays, pensions and allowances were from time to time increased. It is the old má-báp system inaugurated in 1813 which we find in force in the year of grace 1923. (A Voice : " 1924.") Yes, 1924, one year makes no difference in the life of a nation. What I submit is that we are no longer in the má-báp period and that the má-báp principle will not now help you to govern the country. If you want to be here, if you want to take part in our affairs, it has to be under a bhain-bhai system and not a má-báp system. We are willing to treat you as brothers and sisters if you will treat us as brothers and sisters ; but no more of your má-bápism.

Well, Sir, as I have already said with reference to the previous clause, it is one thing to improve your services, it is one thing to make them fit for the growing requirements of the times, but it is quite a different thing to reconstruct your Services and your administrative machinery in accordance with the change in the Government which is bound to come sooner or later. In support of this, I shall, with your leave, Sir, read a few passages from an excellent article which appeared the other day in the Times of India. I read it, Sir, because the point I am now making is so well put that I could not have put it better. I adopt it as a part of my argument. Sir, I am again quoting from an Anglo-Indian paper, Anglo-Indian in colour, in spirit and in mind. (Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Better than the Pioneer.) Yes, better than the Pioneer. Well, Sir, this is an article which appeared on the 29th of August 1924 and here is the passage that I wish to read. Treating of the administrative foundations of political progress, the writer says :

" The root of the whole difficulty would seem to be that Indian opinion does not believe that the Services, as at present recruited and organised, can fit harmoniously into the scheme of a self-governing India. This appears to raise a question not easily dismissed by the enunciation of common-place truisms. For reflection shows that the problem has never received adequate examination. There is no gainsaying the fact that while much attention has been devoted during the last few years to the question of political reform and constitutional progress, the reform of the administrative machinery of the country has been very largely neglected. Has any responsible person, either in India or in England, seriously sat down to think out the kind of Public Services which India really needs, and in consequence to arrive at some estimate as to the extent to which the present staffing and recruitment of the administrative machine really correspond with this desideratum ? And yet, on the face of it, there would seem to be very good grounds for such a step. The political and constitutional progress of India is of a kind which is likely at length to assimilate her to those countries in which responsible government obtains. Yet the Public Services of India remain entirely different in type from the Public Services in other countries. Their position is more dignified; their emoluments are incomparably greater."

And then he goes on :

"But are we justified in assuming that these concessions (of pay and allowances) are the due of future entrants, until we have convinced ourselves that the system by which the Public Services are staffed and recruited is what the country really requires? We are not here concerned to raise the question of Indianisation, which has, it will be obvious, an important bearing upon the subject. We desire to take the broadest view. India is rapidly advancing along the lines of political reform; but the system of her Public Services still retains the characteristics of a paternal regime which is now every day vanishing further and further into obsolescence."

One more passage, Sir, before I finish with this :

"There can, of course, be no question of tampering with the rights of the present generation of public servants. But in considering the question of recruitment, the problem we have indicated arises in an acute form. Are we justified, without the most careful and the most meticulous investigation, in perpetuating a regime which took its rise in conditions now long passed away?"

Now, Sir, this is really the case I make in clause (c). It has been put clearly in this article by the writer.

I now go on to clause (d), and shall very briefly deal with it and the remaining clauses as I am afraid I am going beyond my time-limit.

Clause (d) runs :

"That the said terms of reference to the said Royal Commission and the recommendations made by it are based on the unwarranted assumption that the existing system of Government both Central and Provincial and the present position, powers and functions of the Secretary of State, the Governor General and the Governors of Provinces would continue indefinitely."

Now, Sir, there is no doubt that the Royal Commission, while they certainly have in contemplation—as they say at the beginning of their recommendation—the progressive realisation of responsible government in this country, have consciously or unconsciously made recommendations which have the opposite effect, as I shall show presently. But, taking the recommendations as they stand, they come to this that it will take 15 years to bring us to a proportion of 50 per cent. of Indians in the Superior Executive Services.

That is to say, in the year 1939, we shall have that proportion, and those who shall have entered in that lucky year will have another 25 years at least of official life to run. The complete Indianisation will thus be delayed for 40 years even if there is no further recruitment in England. But the ratio of 50 per cent. is to be kept up even after 15 years by fresh recruitment where it will remain—for how long we do not know ; may be the Greek Kalends.

I was very much pained, Sir, at the reference that was made by the Honourable the Home Member to the phrase "mercenary hordes" which he said had been used to describe the British Services. I do not know if he heard it in this House or elsewhere, but so far as my information goes no Honourable Member in this House has ever permitted himself to use that expression.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : No, I did not hear it stated in this House. I read it in some paper.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : I am very glad to hear that. I cannot think of any Honourable Member of this House referring to the Services, and especially the British Services, as hordes of mercenaries. The whole point is this, that the Services generally are an anachronism at the present day ; and I take the liberty to say of my Honourable friend the Home Member that he himself is an anachronism, a very costly anachronism. But no Member of this House has ever said anything whatever against the actual discharge of the duties by the British element of the Services as a whole. They are not wanted because their continuance in the present condition of things is not consistent with the progress that has already been made or will be made in future.

Now, Sir, I come to clause (e) which runs as follows :

" That some of the recommendations of the Royal Commission are intended to deprive the Legislatures even of their existing powers by suggesting devices to transfer items of expenditure hitherto subject to the vote of the Assembly and the Provincial Councils to the head of non-votable items."

That is a matter which has not been dealt with by my Honourable friend. I refer in this clause to the recommendations made in respect of passages in paragraphs 36, 37, 64 and 65 and also to the Provident Fund contributions dealt with in paragraph 87 and to the re-appointment by the Secretary of State of officers already appointed by the Government of India so as to have the benefit of non-votable salaries.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : Would the Honourable Member mind giving the references again ?

Pandit Motilal Nehru : Paragraphs 36 and 37, and 64 and 65. Provident Fund Contributions—paragraph 86. Re-appointment of officers, paragraph 89. Now, Sir, it is often necessary for the best of objects and from the best of motives to resort to devices. But when a device is intended to curtail the liberty of the people—such scant liberty as has been allowed to them—you cannot expect them to applause either the object or the motive. What have the Royal Commission done ? In respect of passages their recommendations come to this :

" We recommend that officers are entitled to passages. But we know that passages are subject to the vote of the Assembly. We do not want this new-fangled Assembly or the Provincial Legislatures to have at their mercy these officers for whom passages are essential. We therefore say this, that although it is an allowance for passages, although it is no part of their pay, although they are not entitled to spend it as they would their own pay, yet in spite of all this call it pay, add it to their pay, and say that it is pay, and then, when it is time for the Accountant-General to pay it is not to be paid to the officer. It is to be paid into a special fund called the ' Passage Fund ' and kept apart, and when the particular officer requires a passage, it is then to be paid to him as passage money."

It comes to this that passage is an allowance ; it remains all along a passage allowance ; it is paid as passage allowance ; it is not drawn as pay, but simply to take it away from the vote of the Assembly or the Councils they say there is no harm in calling it pay although it never was intended to be any part of the pay.

This applies also to the Providential Fund (Laughter)—I mean Provident Fund.—I wish it were Providential for in that case it would be no burden on India.

Then we come to the reappointment of officers. There are certain officers appointed in England by the Secretary of State. There are certain others who are appointed by the Government of India. The officers appointed by the Secretary of State are not under our control as regards pay and allowances. With regard to those appointed here, their pay and allowances are subject to the vote of the Assembly or the Councils. There is nothing easier than to ask the Secretary of State to reappoint these men, in order that these men may get out of the clutches of the Assembly, and the Royal Commission have recommended accordingly. This is how we are expected to advance step by step to responsible government.

The next paragraph of my amendment deals with racial discriminations and runs :

"(f) That the said recommendations have introduced racial discriminations in the treatment of the All-India Services."

I shall run somewhat hurriedly through this and the remaining paragraphs and shall simply explain what I mean. In passage concessions there is racial discrimination. That is to say, the concession is to be given only to officers of non-Asiatic domicile. There is racial discrimination also in remittance privileges and the Indian Medical Service, where medical assistance is recommended to be given to Europeans on a racial basis. My friends who will follow me will deal with these subjects more in detail. I shall also for the present pass over the clause which deals with medical service. There are some of my medical friends here who understand the position better than I do and they will place their views before this House.

I now come to the last clause, that the inquiry held by the Royal Commission has been unsatisfactory in that the bulk of the evidence on which the Report is based was taken in camera and no material is referred to or made available to the Assembly. I might have added that they have not even divulged the names of the witnesses, and we do not know what class of people were examined. Now, Sir, this has been passed over very lightly by my Honourable friend. It is a matter to which I attach the greatest importance. A Royal Commission is in its very nature a public tribunal intended to hold a public inquiry. I am surprised that my Honourable friend said that the terms of reference to the Royal Commission did not include an authority or a direction to publish the evidence. I do not think that the terms of reference to any Royal Commission need contain such a direction, because it is in the very nature of things, in the very nature of its constitution, in the very nature of the inquiry it is to hold, that evidence should be recorded in public, except perhaps in cases where there are special reasons for not recording it in public ; for instance, there may be one, two or more witnesses examined in camera, to avoid State secrets from being divulged. What is most surprising is that a string of recommendations is placed before us and we are asked to accept it as it stands. As regards the passage and other allowances, there is absolutely no reason given for allowing them and there is absolutely no evidence cited to support them, yet the Government of India have by some intuition or inspiration come to know that the recommendations are quite necessary. The only reason now given is that the members of the Royal Commission were all for allowing them. Now, Sir, if that were any test, I think it will save a great deal of public money if we abolished all the Appellate Courts in the country and simply appointed honourable men as Judges of Courts of first instance and made their judgments final for all time to come. I have never heard, Sir, that any person, however high, whatever his position, however great his attainments, can take shelter under his ability or attainments when called upon to support his conclusions by the evidence that he may have taken. But here again, I have something to tell the House which will perhaps surprise Honourable Members. It has been stated that this inquiry in camera was conducted in deference to the wishes of the witnesses, and at page 61 of the Report it is stated :

" In our view it was of paramount importance that, to guide us in our investigation, we should be able to ascertain the genuine opinions of witnesses on the matters at issue, however confidential or controversial the latter might be. There were likely to be many witnesses, Indian as well as European, who would shrink from expressing, in public, opinions which they conscientiously held but which if published in the Press might involve them in political controversy. Had the Commission decided that it would hear no evidence which was not given in public,"—nobody ever expected any Commission to decide that—" witnesses of this kind—who as it proved were by no means the most vehement in their tone or the most extreme in their demands—would, to a large extent, have declined to speak freely."

Then, the Report goes on to say :

" That if a witness decided to be heard in public, representatives of the Press were admitted to record his oral evidence, and received his written statement as well."

Then again :

" The record shows that, of the 411 witnesses who gave oral evidence, only 152 elected to be heard in public."

Now, Sir, let us test these statements. I shall rely for my facts on another newspaper of equal standing in the official world in another presidency as the " Pioneer " and the " Times of India " are in the United Provinces and Bombay, respectively : I mean the Madras Mail. The writer is a gentleman who, although he has not disclosed his identity, is evidently a member of the Civil Service as the facts that he gives clearly show. He says :

" One Service Association sent in its memorial and appointed some of its members to give evidence. Before the arrival of the Commission in Madras, the Secretary of the Association received a wire from the Secretary of the Commission asking whether the Association desired to give evidence in public or in camera. In public was the reply. When the Commission arrived in Madras and on the day before the evidence of the Association was to be taken, the Secretary of the Association received a request from the Secretary of the Commission by telephone asking him to apply for the Association's evidence to be taken in camera. It was too late for the Secretary to consult the general body of members, and as a definite request had been made by the Commission, the Secretary and those members of the Association who could be consulted agreed to send an application that the evidence should be taken in camera. After the application had been sent several members protested strongly but the step had been taken and nothing could be done."

Then he says :

" One of the two service representatives had put in a memorial which dealt candidly and faithfully with the question of the retention of the European Services and the Commission were anxious not to examine him on his memorial in public. The outcome of the matter was that the evidence of the service representative was taken in camera so far as it related to the joint memorial, but "—and now comes the important part—" the representative who had submitted independent views as a reply to the first interrogative, declined to be examined on the independent memorial in camera and after some deliberation, the Commission decided not to examine him at all."

It is clear that the writer speaks with knowledge that no one outside that particular association could possibly possess. The communication to the press was made with quite a different object, and not the object for which I am utilising it. What the writer says is : " It is true that the Royal Commission failed to take evidence in the proper way. But it is not our fault. It is not the fault of the Services, and there is no reason why those Services should suffer." And he points out that they took every precaution to see that their evidence was taken as publicly as possible. But is there now, Sir, after knowing these facts, any justification for saying that the witnesses—some of them bank men and some commercial men—were so very nervous of giving their evidence in public that the Royal Commission was obliged to hear them in camera. How far is the claim of my Honourable friend that we have been treated very well sustainable after this ? Now, Sir, these are the reasons ; they are not exhaustive but they are the reasons on which we ask the House not to identify itself with any part of the recommendations of the Commission and not to accept any one of those recommendations. Then we go on to make constructive proposals, proposals which suggest the measures that were indicated in the article of the Times of India on which I relied for the reconstruction of the administrative machinery to suit it for the present day needs of the country. My Honourable friend has referred to the question which the Commissioners put to themselves. He referred to page 18 of the Report where it is stated " In the days of the Islington Commission the question was how many Indians should be admitted into the public services ? " It has now become " what is the minimum number of Englishmen which must still be recruited ? " My Honourable friend further said that that showed the march of events and the progress that the country had made. If I may be permitted to formulate a question of my own, it will run something like this. " Is there any reason whatever why any Europeans at all should be retained in this country unless their services were required as experts or because they possessed special technical knowledge ? " That is the standard which should be applied. I do not say that that means that the European Service should be abolished. No. I say that the standard of qualification for service in India should be not because a certain proportion has to be retained, but because a certain kind of work has to be done for which the Europeans are especially qualified. Then I will be the last person in the world to share the suspicions of those to whom my Honourable friend was referring when he said that the services were supposed to come out here for their own selfish ends. The Honourable the Home Member then refuted this imaginary charge by referring to the small number of recruits that come out to India every year and said : " Can that state of recruitment mean that these people have selfish ends of their own ? " Now, I must say that everybody who takes up a service for remuneration has a selfish motive and selfish end to serve quite apart from his public duties. But I do not wish to say that these hard-worked gentlemen who come here, so far away from their native country, and who work honestly do so only for selfish reasons. Of course, there is a selfish element in the most unselfish work of which you can conceive. Nobody will deny that. But it is quite a different thing to say that a public servant comes out to this country with selfish motives. The selfish motives with which we charge the British Government lie elsewhere—not in the motives of the Services but in the motives which lie behind the maintenance of the Services. The selfish reason, however, is the maintenance of the grip over India for all time to come. That is the selfish reason. It is not that ten, twenty or a hundred young men from England should come out here every year and be provided for. No, certainly not. What we mean by selfish motives is that you are entering into our daily life day by day to such an extent that it will take—I do not know how long it will be—hundreds of years for us to shake ourselves free of you. What we want is that you should give us the right to walk erect in our streets and then you can come in any numbers you like. Come as our friends, come as our neighbours, not as our rulers.

[Pandit Motilal Nehru.]

Then I come to Part II of my amendment, which speaks for itself. We have made our position fairly clear. We have said that we will not accept anything until we are satisfied that the recommendations of the Royal Commission upon that point are correct ; and, in order to satisfy us, we must have the materials that the Royal Commission had or any other materials which are likely to satisfy us. We are not sticking to the nature of the materials or the evidence. How can you expect anyone whom you ask to give money for a certain purpose to be prepared to give that money unless and until he has satisfied himself that the money is required and that he can afford it ? We cannot accept the obiter dictum of the Royal Commission that a certain amount is fair. We must have the materials before us. One argument used in favour of this huge expenditure is the rise in prices. Where in the world have the prices not risen ? Where in the world have permanent increases of salaries been given on account of the rise in prices ? We know that war bonuses have been allowed in England and in other countries. One of the reasons why the Royal Commission is prepared to recommend this permanent enhancement of salaries is that in India the Services were not given war bonuses. By all means give them something which is temporary. The Royal Commission were satisfied that a case had been made out for a permanent increase in the salaries. But how can you ask us to commit ourselves to an expenditure without satisfying ourselves that that is a proper expenditure and therefore must be incurred from the tax-payer's point of view ?

Now, Sir, there is one paragraph in the preamble which I should have noticed. One can understand the grievances of those who have become grey in the Service—men who entered the Service and built high hopes, which hopes were frustrated for some reason or other beyond their control and beyond the control of the Government. But what about the fresh recruits ? What about those who entered after 1919 with their eyes wide open as to what they may expect, what they may not expect ; who knew that the Government of India Act had been passed and that the country was bound to have a transitional period short or long. Even taking the Government of India Act as it stands, the very least that these gentlemen who entered the Services in 1919 should have known and must have known was that they would be subject to all the vicissitudes which are mentioned here as reasons for giving them increases. It will be insulting their intelligence to say that they did not take that factor into consideration. Are young Englishmen educated in English Universities unable to understand the simple fact that after the passing of the Government of India Act, it may any day happen that from the reserved field of service they may be transferred to the transferred field of service and after being so transferred will be subject to the vote of the Council or the Assembly, as the case may be. If they knew that—and I submit that there can be no reason whatever to think that they did not—then what reason is there to provide for allowances and advancements of salaries on that ground ?

Now, Sir, I shall not detain the House at any greater length. But I may be allowed frankly and candidly to say what is the general feeling about this Royal Commission Report. The recommendations of the Royal Commission purport to be a part of the great scheme inaugurated by the Government of India Act in 1919 to enable the country eventually to govern itself by gradually eliminating the European element from the administration. The Act itself was ushered in with a flourish of trumpets, as a remarkable piece of legislation. It was claimed for it that it was a new departure in the art of governing subject races whereby the Governors were giving to the governed, voluntarily, and in the interests of mankind in general, the right to govern themselves. Now, Sir, in the course of giving that right this Royal Commission was thought of as a necessary step. It was said that as India was progressively being entitled to responsible government something must be done to bring the Services into line with the conditions now prevailing and those which will prevail shortly in the country. What happened ? It was a great gift, if it was all that was claimed for it, but as the House is aware, there were some cynical people in the population of India who for the very reason that it was a most remarkable thing which had ever been done in the history of the world, looked askance at the Reforms, at the Act itself. They did the very ungrateful thing to examine a gift horse in the mouth, but no sooner did they do it they found it was a wooden horse ! The most venturesome of the cynical people I have referred to above refused to ride that wooden horse, and made up their minds to set out in right earnest to win the real horse, or lose the saddle. The less venturesome tried to ride it ; they rode it ; they shook themselves violently on it but it was so fixed to a steel frame underneath that it refused to rock. They had in their disappointment to ask that the steel frame may be a little loosened, so as to give some little play to this wooden horse. That request of theirs was listened to ; a Royal Commission was appointed ; Indianisation was promised ; but what was it that was done ? To carry the metaphor a little further, some screws and nails were taken from the front and fixed behind this machinery. The result was that it remained as immoveable as ever. The result is that they have not even a rocking horse to give them an opportunity to acquire the necessary grip for riding a real horse. Now, Sir, I know my friends opposite think that all this suspicion, all this distrust, is without foundation ; but look at the things that are being done from day to day, and what do they come to ? They come to this that the British Government are trying to stave off the evil day as long as they can ; the evil day when full responsible government will be granted to this country ; and meanwhile, for fear lest the day may come sooner than they imagine, what are they doing ? They are sinking their foundations deeper and deeper, so that when the day really comes they may have practically nothing to hand over to the next Government, and all that matters may remain in the possession of vested interests. That really is the feeling in this country, and as I have said there is justification for it. I will not go further than this that the history of the past few years since 1919 fully justifies an apprehension of that character. I appeal, therefore, to this House not to encourage that feeling by accepting the recommendations of this Commission, but to throw them out in their entirety. I think I have, by the indulgence of the Honourable the President and this House, given fully my reasons for asking the House to do so.

Mr. President : Amendment moved :

" That for the original Resolution the following be substituted :

' PART I.

That having regard to the following among other facts, namely :-

(a) That the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India was appointed and allowed to enter upon its functions in utter disregard of the Resolutions passed by the first Assembly ;

(b) That all questions affecting the Civil Services are inseparably connected with, and entirely dependent upon, the larger question of the grant of responsible government to India and cannot be entertained and satisfactorily dealt with unless and until the Resolution of this House on Responsible Government adopted on 18th February 1924, is substantially complied with ;

(c) That the terms of reference to the said Royal Commission and the recommendations made by it involve the perpetuation of an antiquated and anachronic system of public services without any attempt to reconstruct the administrative machinery to suit the present day conditions of India which are widely different from those prevailing when it was inaugurated ;

(d) That the said terms of reference to the said Royal Commission and the recommendations made by it are based on the unwarranted assumption that the existing system of government both Central and Provincial and the present position, powers and functions of the Secretary of State, the Governor General and the Governors of Provinces, would continue indefinitely ;

(e) That some of the recommendations of the Royal Commission are intended to deprive the Legislatures even of their existing powers by suggesting devices to transfer items of expenditure hitherto subject to the vote of the Assembly and the Provincial Councils to the head of non-votable items ;

(f) That the said recommendations have introduced racial discriminations in the treatment of the All-India Services ;

(g) That the said recommendations make the extraordinary provision that officers appointed to the All-India Services after 1919 as also those to be appointed hereafter shall have guarantees against and compensation for being transferred from the reserved to the transferred field of Service—a contingency which they must be taken to be well aware of when they were appointed ;

(h) That the recommendations of the Commission regarding the Medical Services are entirely unsatisfactory in that (1) they seek to perpetuate the complicated system of interdependence of the Provincial Medical Services upon the irresponsible Military Department ; (2) they introduce the objectionable principle and a costly scheme of provision for medical assistance to Europeans on a racial basis ; (3) they do not recognise the necessity of the Indian units of the Army being officered by Indian Medical officers ; and (4) they propose to absorb the present Indian Medical Service into the Royal Army Medical Corps (India)—a step which will practically close the door to Indian medical men in the said corps and thereby also in civil employment ;

(i) That the inquiry held by the Royal Commission has been unsatisfactory in that the bulk of the evidence on which the bald recommendations of the Commission are based was allowed to be tendered and accepted in camera and no material evidence is either indicated or made available to this Assembly ;

this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that the recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services of India be not accepted and this Assembly further recommends that instead of the recommendations referred to in clause (1), sub-clauses (a), (b) and (c) and clause (2) of Sir Alexander Muddiman's Resolution so far as the latter relates to future entrants into the Civil Services being approved the following steps be taken in respect of future recruitment and control of the Services, namely :

(i) That all further recruitment in England for the Civil Services in India including the Medical Service under the existing rules be stopped.

(ii) That a Public Services Commission be established in India and the constitution and functions of that Commission be determined on the recommendations of a Committee elected by this Assembly.

(iii) That His Majesty's Government be requested to take the necessary steps for the purpose of transferring the powers of appointment and control of the Services now vested in the Secretary of State to the Government of India and the Local Governments, such powers to be exercised under laws to be passed by the Indian and Local Legislatures regulating the Public Services, including the classification of the Civil Services in India, the methods of their recruitment, their conditions of service, pay, and allowances and discipline and conduct.

[Mr. President.]

PART II.

This Assembly is unable in view of the present financial condition of India and on the materials before it to satisfy itself as to the propriety and reasonableness of the recommendations of the Royal Commission in respect of the alleged grievances of those at present holding office in the Civil Services, and cannot with due regard to the interests of the tax-payer assent to the imposing of fresh burdens on the already overburdened finances of the country.

But, in view of the financial relief that will result from the stoppage of all recruitment outside India under the existing rules as recommended above in Part I, this Assembly is prepared to consider the alleged grievances of the present incumbents as regards pay, passages, concessions and pensions and recommends such measures of redress as may be found necessary, and for that purpose it recommends to the Governor General in Council to take steps for the election of a Committee by this House to enable them to go into the entire question on all the materials available to the Royal Commission including the evidence taken in camera or such other material as may be available and to make its recommendations to this House as early as possible '."

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes (Commerce Member) : Sir, I should like first to express our acknowledgments on this side of the House of the very moderate tone which the Honourable Pandit has adopted, and I hope, Sir, that all of us in this debate will try to observe the same restraint. I should also like to say, Sir, that we on this side of the House do recognise that in the last part of his Resolution the Honourable Pandit has held us out an olive branch. I am afraid I must make it perfectly clear that we cannot accept the proferred branch, but at the same time we do recognise that the Pandit has made the offer, and we thank him for it. I will not attempt, Sir, in the time at my disposal to take up all the points which the Honourable Pandit has covered in his very lengthy Resolution. In particular, Sir, I do not propose to follow the Pandit in his dialectics about the form of the Government Resolution. He criticised the wording of that Resolution, particularly the words " in principle " and " approximately ", and played very prettily with the point. He exercised himself very skilfully in dialectics. But, Sir, I am not a lawyer, and I am not a dialectician, and I take no interest in points of that kind. I am a plain, matter-of-fact person and I can only inform the Pandit that our intention was this. In the first place, we wanted to open the whole of this subject to discussion by the House. In the second place, we were unable to draft a Resolution of any reasonable length which would cover every point raised by the Commission. We desired therefore to make it plain that we accepted in the main the proposals of the Commission, while we reserve the right in minor points of detail possibly to vary those recommendations. My Honourable Colleague on my left will make plain our position in regard to the Indian Medical Service and the reason of the form that part of the Resolution has taken. It was not intended, as the Honourable Pandit tried to make out, to give us a free hand to do what we please under the protection of the words " in principle ".

4 P.M.

Now, Sir, the first clause of the Honourable Pandit's Resolution makes a complaint that the Royal Commission was appointed and allowed to enter upon its functions in utter disregard of the Resolutions passed by the first Assembly. I have much pleasure, Sir, in congratulating the Honourable Pandit on his conversion. Hitherto it has been the attitude of the Swaraj party in this House that they alone represent the people of India, and that the first Assembly did not represent the Indian people at all.....

Pandit Motilal Nehru : If I may make a personal explanation, I made it quite clear that in that particular matter the first Assembly was backed by the people.

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : I am glad to see that the Honourable Pandit does the first Assembly at least that justice. What, Sir, was said in this debate about the appointment of this Royal Commission ? The Honourable Pandit to-day referred to the indomitable Dr. Gour. Let me read to the House what the indomitable Dr. Gour said when this question was debated :

" I beg to ask, Sir, how is this reconcilable with the statement made in the Montagu-Chelmsford Report, which lays down the programme of progressive Indianisation of the Superior Services for the next ten years ? Are we to go back on that Report ? Are we to scrap it ? "

Again, Sir, another prominent Member of the House, said :

" A set-back may be given to the cause of Indianisation. My Honourable friend, Colonel Gidney, suggests ' who knows—the Commission may make a recommendation which might accelerate the pace of Indianisation.' Is it likely, Sir, I ask, that a Commission appointed by the reactionary Government of Great Britain at the present moment could ever help the acceleration of the pace of Indianisation ? "

The House will see that when the last Assembly got so excited over the appointment of this Royal Commission, they were entirely under a misapprehension as to the scope of the Royal Commission's inquiry. Again, Sir, I must point out to the House that under section 96 of the Government of India Act the services are reserved to the protection and control of the Secretary of State. It seems to me, Sir, that this House has no right to take up the position that His Majesty the King, on the advice of his Ministers, is not at liberty to appoint a Royal Commission of this kind, even though the House may not approve of the appointment of that Commission ; and following that, Sir, I say that, when that Commission has been appointed by the authority of His Majesty the King-Emperor himself, then it is only fitting and right that this Assembly should show some respect to the Report of that Commission.

I pass on to the second clause of the Pandit's Resolution. This second clause deals with the inseparability of service questions from Swaraj. Sir, the Honourable the Pandit, if I may use the same expression again, played very prettily with the metaphor of the wooden horse and he suggested that a wooden horse could not go very fast (Honourable Members: " Could not go at all.") When the Pandit used that metaphor I do not think he could really have studied this Report and I do not think he could have made any attempt to realise how far the proposals of this Commission go. The term " All-India services " dates from the first Report of the Government of India on Reforms. In that despatch they said the All-India services :

" should be maintained as a model to all the rest and with the object of impressing the seal of the existing system both on the Indian as well as the European elements in them, we consider that recruitment, whether in India or in England, should be according to the methods laid down by the Secretary of State and that all persons recruited should be appointed by that authority."

And they went on to say :

" The basic idea is that the structure of the public services, its duties and the general conditions of its employment should remain as far as possible untouched by political changes, at all events till the advent of the first statutory Commission."

Well, Sir, contrast that statement with the recommendations in this Report ; compare that statement with what Sir Alexander Muddiman told you about the future composition of the Services, and then ask yourselves whether this wooden horse has not rocked to some purpose ! But, Sir, that does not meet the Honourable Pandit's point. The Honourable Pandit makes great play of the fact that the proposals of the Royal Commission retain control of at any rate two vital services, the Police and the Indian Civil Service, in the hands of the Secretary of State. As I understand the argument, that proposal of the Royal Commission is considered to be a negation in advance of the popular demand for a further constitutional advance, particularly in the direction of political autonomy and the abolition of dyarchy. I do not think it is fair to attack the Commission on that ground. Sir Alexander Muddiman read to you this morning the terms of reference to that Commission. They were not appointed in anticipation of, or in substitution of, the statutory Commission, they were appointed to consider the Services only, and what is more, the Services in connection with the existing state of affairs. They were not appointed to make any proposals for further constitutional advance.

The only connection which they had with further constitutional advance was in so far as that further constitutional advance might have effect upon one of the main subjects which they were considering—that is, the recruitment of the Services. That is, they had to take the contingency, the possibility of further constitutional advance into account merely with reference to that one consideration. And that is all they did. They pronounced no opinion on the question whether dyarchy is or is not a good thing. They pronounced no opinion upon the desirability or otherwise of constitutional advance. They confined themselves strictly to their job. That being so, it seems to me most unreasonable that when their proposals are put before this House, this House should say :

"We will not accept them because they do not fit in with what we consider to be a necessary measure of constitutional advance."

If, of course, the position of the House is that they are not prepared to consider any proposals regarding the Services which do not accord with what your ideas may be of further constitutional advance, then I say it is no use continuing this debate. We are not in a position—we have not come here to-day to discuss constitutional advance. We are not here to discuss the question whether dyarchy is or is not a good thing. We are not here to-day to discuss the question of provincial autonomy. We are here to-day to discuss the question of the Services only ; and if you are not prepared to discuss the question of the Services, then why continue the debate ?

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : How can we discontinue it ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar will have his chance later.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : What will be the effect of accepting the principle of these recommendations upon the future of constitutional advance ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : The Honourable Mr. Jinnah asks me what will be the effect of accepting these recommendations upon future constitutional advance. I say, Sir, that the effect will be nothing at all. With reference to the question of recruitment the Commission had to take into account the possible effects of future constitutional advance upon the functions which these two Services,—the Indian Civil Service and the Police—are called upon to perform, and had to consider the possibility of these functions being transferred. And in paragraph 74 of their Report they provide for that contingency. At the same time, in spite of what the Honourable Pandit said, I must again re-inforce the point made by the Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman this morning that there is a clear and vital distinction between the form of government and the business of administration.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : I never denied it.

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : What the politician in India is concerned with is the form of government. I will be generous, Sir, and I will grant to the House that out of the 245 millions who live in British India possibly five millions are interested in the form of government. On the other hand, there are 240 millions—again I take a conservative figure—who are not at all interested in the form of government. In every country in the world the mass of the people do not care two straws what the form of government is. All they want is to be governed. All they are vitally concerned with—their peace, their happiness and their security depend upon the manner in which the administration is carried on by the Services. It is exactly here that the Indian Civil Service and the Police come in. The Honourable Pandit said we were now digging our foundations deep in order that when we came to hand over India to self-government we might hand over as little as possible. I say, Sir, there is one thing that the British Government can, will and should hand over to India when India gets Swaraj and that is, strong, pure, efficient and incorruptible public Services and that, Sir, is one of the main aims and objects of this Report (Hear, hear).

Then, Sir, the Honourable the Pandit said that the Services were an anachronism. He said, I understand, that I was an anachronism. Well, Sir, if I am an anachronism, I am, to quote Mr. Rudyard Kipling, a very pachydermatous anachronism, because I do not admit that I am an anachronism at all. The Honourable Pandit said that the Services are merely a survival. It was suggested very properly by some gentleman on his left that they were a survival of the fittest, but I pass by that point. He went on to say that the Services were a survival from a time which ended very many years ago, that the Services have gone lingering on, and that the only change was in their pay and in their conditions—their pay had been improved and their pensions had been improved. I would like to join issue with the Honourable Pandit at once. I have here some rather interesting statistics of what the pay of some officers was in 1826. The Collector of Customs of Agra drew as pay Rs. 4,000 a month. The Judges of Circuit in the North-West Provinces received as pay Rs. 3,750, Rs. 3,333 and Rs. 2,916 a month. At that time, Sir, the rupee was worth anything between two shillings and six pence and three shillings, and it makes us in these later days—it makes our mouths water to think of the pay our predecessors got. I am prepared to admit that in some respects a change has come over the duties particularly of a District Officer. The Collector, for instance, is no longer connected officially with the District Board or the municipality, but all my information is that though he is no longer President of the District Board and he is no longer the official advisor of the municipalities, at any rate in Madras he does discharge the function of being unofficially the advisor of the President of the District Board and of the Chairmen of the Municipalities and also the advisor of the Ministers. I am told, Sir, by all whom I know both in Madras and in other

[Sir Charles Innes.]

Provinces who occupy the position which I used to occupy as a Collector of a District,—and I may say, Sir, that I never wish to have a better time than when I was Collector and District Magistrate of Malabar—I am told that remarkably little change has come over their actual work. And I should like to say more. In the circumstances of India, I do not care what form of government you have, you will always have to have something corresponding to the Indian Civil Service ; you will always have to maintain the unit of the district. If you consider the size of the country, the distances from headquarters, and the number of the population, you will always have to have large districts and you will always have to have some officer in that district who will be the chief representative of Government. You, gentlemen, may change the form of government up here, but you are not going to change the nature of the people of India. The people of India—specially the people with whom we Civilians have to deal —like personal rule. The Honourable Pandit calls that a ma bap system. It may be a ma bap system, but it is what the ryots and what the ordinary people of this country like. They like some one person to whom they can go with their grievances, and I do not care what form of government you have in India, you must always have someone in that position in your districts.

Then, Sir, I say another thing. I say that it was never more vital than it is at the present time that you should have strong and efficient Services for the maintenance of law and order in this country. Here I am coming on to dangerous ground and I do not wish to say one word which will be provocative to any one. But I do feel that in the last few years—I will not put it higher than that—efforts have been made in this country to sap the foundations of law and order. I put it to this House that no country can be great unless it has that respect for law and order which is the foundation of the social order. In the last few years efforts have been made to sap that respect. Nobody can deny that there is much inflammable material lying about in India. You have your communal dissensions ; you have your caste dissensions ; you have your racial dissensions and you have your religious dissensions. At any time there may be a great conflagration. Now, Sir, I have touched on that matter as lightly as possible, because I just want to make one point. This is the very time which the Honourable Pandit selects for suggesting to the British Government at home that recruitment to the Indian Civil Service and the Indian Police Service, as it now goes on, should be stopped and that means, as Sir Alexander Muddiman pointed out clearly, that you are stopping your recruitment at home altogether. Now, Sir, the British public, the British Parliament are very greatly exercised by that aspect of the situation in India on which I have just touched and is it likely that you can persuade them to stop recruitment of Englishmen and Scotchmen for the Services of India just at this time ? It seems to me, Sir, that if you want to make that request you have selected a peculiarly inappropriate moment for doing so.

I am afraid I have already taken more than my time ; and I shall just say one word more. I come to what is after all the main question which this Report set itself to consider, namely, the question whether relief should be given to the Services concerned. Sir Alexander Muddiman gave you some figures in his speech this morning. He told us that from the beginning of the century to 1912 there had been an increase in prices, in the cost of living, which might roughly be put at between 40 and 50 per cent. He told us that between 1914 and 1923 there had been a further increase of 60 per cent. ; that is to say, since the beginning of this century the cost of living has gone up in India for the European by more than 100 per cent. (Pandit Motilal Nehru : " Only for the European ? ") I am dealing with the Services only. Sir Alexander Muddiman also told us, taking my own service only, that the actual increase of pay given to the Services, to the Indian Civil Service, was between 10 and 11 per cent. Now, Sir, I ask you to consider what that means to the Services. Nobody suggests—I would not for a moment suggest—that we should put the Services in precisely the same position as they were twenty years ago. Something to that effect was said in the Montagu-Chelmsford Report, but after all we have got to remember that there has been a war and we cannot expect to go back to the glorious days of the nineties ; but, Sir, I do put it to the House that the figures I have given show that the relief given to these Services in no way corresponds to the rise in the cost of living. In addition I think that you will all admit that the position of the Services has become more and more difficult. It may be natural perhaps ; but at any rate we who have to do the work of Collectors and the other district officials, we know that we are being made the target of attacks on all sides. It does not make our life any more pleasant and at the same time our means of living have got steadily more and more strained. Now, as Sir Alexander Muddiman said this morning, this is not the first time that these facts have been brought before the Government of India. In fact I am in a position to say that we received after 1920 memorial after memorial from all the Services on this very subject. We recognised their difficulties ; at the same time we felt that the financial condition of India was such that we could do nothing for them, and I am afraid that as a result we in the Government of India made ourselves very unpopular with the Services. What has been the result? The result is that these grievances of the Services have been placed before an impartial tribunal. I regret very much that the Honourable Pandit cast aspersions upon the Indian members of that tribunal. They are men who to my knowledge have rendered very real and distinguished services to India ; and when they are selected for a difficult job of this kind, it is no discredit for this House to recognise their public spirit in taking up their task ; and I think also, Sir, that it ill-becomes this House, when the Indian members of this Commission have made certain recommendations, to say that those recommendations should be rejected because you say you did not elect those Indian members.

At any rate the position of the Government of India is this ; for several years past we have been resisting these demands on the ground that we could not afford the money. Now, these demands have been put before this impartial tribunal ; the tribunal has laid these recommendations before us and we think that in justice to these Services we ought to accept those recommendations.

Our main principle in dealing with this Report—and here again I am afraid that I am fundamentally at variance with my Honourable friend, the Pandit—is that at any rate for these vital services, we should continue to attract the best class of Englishmen to this country. I reject the Honourable Pandit's statement that we should not recruit Englishmen unless they have technical qualifications. My belief, Sir, is that in the circumstances of this country India will for many years to come require Englishmen of the best class to assist her in her district administration ; and, if the Honourable Pandit wishes for further information on that particular point, let me remind him of the evidence which was given not only in Madras but in every province by the depressed classes. Every deputation from these classes pressed not for less but for more European representation.

Sir, I have not been able to answer all the points raised by the Honourable Pandit ; I have not attempted to do so ; I have tried to confine myself to the main points he raised and I hope, Sir, that in justice, in fairness to the Services, this House will accept the recommendations of the Lee Commission.

Mr. K. G. Lohokare (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : To supplement the observations by our leader, Pandit Motilal Nehru, I will speak with reference to the Medical Services. As an humble member of the profession, allow me to submit that the views I express now are the result of considered opinions of about twenty Medical Associations having a membership of almost all eminent Indian medical men in important towns in India as well as of the provincial service and Indian sections of the I. M. S. Associations, and all of them have submitted their representations to Government on the subject before this day. All of them unequivocably endorse the recommendations of the Commission as entirely unsatisfactory.

I examine them one by one. The first is that the Civil Medical Service is to be constituted on the basis of a competitive examination to be held in England and India, and part of it is to be recruited from the military.

In view of making this country capable of meeting the needs of its administration, is it right that an examination for recruitment to a service should be held somewhere else ? The medical and sanitary administrations are the last in respect of political power. Even if officers for such innocent administration are yet to be recruited from outside, I do not know when and where we begin to take up full administrative control. If British statesmen yet demur for extraneous considerations to hand over the entire control of the departments already promised to be transferred, I do not know how long India will have to wait for attaining the responsible status for other branches of the administration. That the Military Department, one which is not responsible to the Legislature, should be the source of recruiting officers for civil administration is an anomaly yet being maintained. The Lee Commission Report not only does not make any progress in control by people of India in this case but definitely takes a retrograde step and no words can describe the feelings of deep disappointment of the Indian Medical profession in this respect.

Sufficiently trained material for taking full charge of the medical administration is available since long in this country. Indian Universities have all been conforming to the standard of the General Medical Council of the United Kingdom from their very beginning, and have been bringing out hundreds of medical graduates equally qualified with the medical men of the United Kingdom, not to say of the medical schools which turn out double the number every year. Thousands of Indians with actual training in the United Kingdom medical colleges are in private practice to-day. The number of Indians holding the highest British qualifications is many times more than the number of the European medical men in India with such qualifications. In research and scientific work too Indians are not behind. At least a score of eminent Indian men have been doing such research work in medical science as would add to the knowledge of the world. Some of them in Bombay and Calcutta are engaged in research work on their own account—not with the pay and study leave at Government expense ! Why, highly qualified Indian medical men do not think of taking up Government service because of the lack of opportunities and the differential treatment meted out to them. With the material available, as satisfactory as even the United Kingdom can lay down, for administration of a Department in India, do you like, my Hon'ble Colleagues, an examination for recruitment for the medical administration somewhere else and power to recruit at least some of them in the hands of a Department irresponsible to the Legislature.

Representations from Medical Unions in important towns in India have definitely condemned the idea and I hope these are in the hands of the Government by this time.

The other recommendations of the Commission are :

(1) Clinical chairs for the civil services only ;

(2) Adequate medical attendance for British officers in civil employ ;

(3) A minimum of British medical officers in the Civil Medical Service ;

(4) Military reserve in India, R. A. M. C. (India) to be seconded ;

(5) Adoption of R. A. M. C. (India) as per the Burtchaell Scheme ; and the Resolution by the Honourable the Home Member includes one more important factor, a factor which was not included in the Lee Commission Report :

(6) " Consideration of the conditions necessary to secure an adequate number of British medical recruits for the Army "—the bugbear of the whole question, and the result of the machinations of the British Medical Association against the legitimate aspirations of Indians—an attempt to push in the British medical men in the civil under the term—maintenance of attractiveness of Service, so often mentioned in the reports of the various Committees on Medical Services.

The reserving of clinical chairs for the members of Superior Medical Services only is, I submit, an obstacle to the advance of medical education in India. Such reservation excludes recruitment of the best teachers in the profession. The step is no advance. The number of highly qualified recruits is not sufficient for the administration nowadays. The Indian Medical Gazette Magazine conducted by the Indian Service Officers complains of this in service notes in the number of January 1924. To keep this scanty number for the clinical chairs is first to deprive the administration of good material, and secondly to shut the door against persons specially adapted to take to teaching work. Special recruitment open to all on reasonable emoluments should have been the recommendation. I am as well afraid—it is a known fact—it is no teaching work that attracts service men to these posts but opportunities for private practice with all well-equipped facilities at command in Government hospitals and dispensaries. Stoppage of private practice even with a compensatory allowance should have been the first condition for advancement of medical education in India. The Commission has not given consideration to the needs of medical education in this country and the recommendation in this respect is far from satisfactory.

Adequate medical attendance for British officers in the Civil Service and their families is a recommendation, I submit, vicious in principle, unnecessarily expensive to this country and an excuse or a device to put Europeans in important places, wherewith they may ascend to higher administrative appointments on the strength of having held important places formerly.

I illustrate the point. Because Agra contains a fairly large number of European officers and because they want medical aid at the hands of a European doctor, therefore the Civil Surgeon of Agra must be a European. Next comes the argument because Doctor X. Y. Z., of the Indian Medical Service, has held charge of an important place like Agra he has better experience than others—he must therefore naturally supersede an Indian above him and get the higher appointment. This is the device at the back of this recommendation. Had the recommendation been for purely medical aid to British officers—the Commission would have recommended separate posts for them having nothing to do with the other administration. Moreover, this soft corner argument stands not the least chance of being reasonable. We Indians wonder if it is from those who have come here to give us lessons in everything—Moral and Material. Science knows no colour, it is world property—that the scientific benefit must be doled out by persons of a particular colour is an inheritance of a part of the property of Indians—the property of the caste system—which the Indians are happily slowly parting with, and it pains us to see it thus sticking to those who for good or evil have been with us.

Besides the experience of eminent Indian medical men is otherwise. The representation from the Bombay Medical Union, that is already in the hands of the Government, says it distinctly. That the Commission, especially the European members, should have yielded to such an argument of colour and caste to say the least of it speaks against them. The unnecessary burden of expenses of travelling to and fro with an excuse of illness would be nothing more than a holiday trip expense of an officer with his family and children, saddled on to the shoulders of the poor Indian tax-payer. I am afraid it is not worth more than trash.

The recommendation of a minimum of British officers in the Civil either for administrative or for caste privileges of officer's purposes is already dealt with. But a peculiarity in it lies in the recommendation of the Commission in leaving control and determination of this number to the Secretary of State. It thus excludes the Indian members of the R. A. M. C. (India) cadre to be seconded to Civil. This is a step retrograde in effect to the existing arrangement and is a device that the recommendations of the bureaucracy should be worked up in the dark, while the Indian tax-payer should pay for it. If the needs of administration of the transferred departments are to be looked after by the Indian Member in charge, why should he be deprived of this part of the administration too ? Firstly, this theory of a British minimum in such an innocent department as the Medical cannot stand, and secondly, if it at all stands, why should the tax-payers not decide how much and in what manner the burden is to be shouldered. The Commission has been taking a retrograde step—taking away the power out of the hands of the transferred department. Moreover, this minimum element theory entails a permanent loss to India. The officer, with all facilities for experience at the cost of Indian tax-payer, leaves this country with his bag and baggage, depriving her of the treasure of his knowledge and experience which he has gained at the expense of India.

Another recommendation of the Commission has to do with the vexed question of the " Economic employment of the Military reserve in Civil ".

That the Army in India requires a ready prepared war reserve always on the standing cadre is an assumption on which the Army department has been saddling the Civil administration in this country. Let me once for all mention that it is peculiar to India and I do not know why Indians and British statesman too should yield to the theory when they find no such reserve ever employed in any other country. The purpose can best be served by the Civil Medical service officers being put on the reserve list, with a training to begin with and a tour of service with the Army or the Territorial Forces at short periods. A large reserve can thus be maintained, and the " economy " so loudly talked of at least by the Military Department in India, when it can manage to be burdensomely heavy in other respects, can be effectively carried out to the best interests of both the civil administration and the military requirements too. I am sorry the Services Commission have dealt with the question so inequitably.

One more recommendation of the Commission is " adoption of R. A. M. C. (India) ". They have not said whether this Corps admits Indians at all. The R. A. M. C. is not open to Indians. The Services Commission probably acquiesces that Indians may not enter the Army Medical Corps. Unless the contrary is actually notified by the Government of His Majesty, I am afraid India stands to lose everything by this recommendation of the Commission at this stage at least. Secondly, this Corps is recruited in England only. It is unfair that an Indian because of his sin in being born and bred in India, is to spend money on foreign travel and education and thus pay a heavy indemnity to take his chance of being recruited for the service of the Army of his mother-land. In spite of the professional educational facilities, Indians have to pay this penalty. Granting that half of the number going to England for being recruited succeeds, it means for one recruit India has to spend for two—an amount of not less than Rs. 30,000 per head. The Commission undertook the responsibility of this penalty to Indian parents, but would not advise training facilities and examination here.

The last point, but of first importance, is the last part of the Resolution moved by the Honourable the Home Member which did not form part of the recommendations of the Services Commission. We are told here to admit another principle by which the civil administration will be perpetually enslaved to the military department, irresponsible as it is to the Indian Legislatures. The point is " conditions necessary to secure an adequate number of British recruits for the Army."

[Mr. K. G. Lohokare.]

I have already said it is referred to as the necessity of maintaining the attractiveness of the Military Medical Service in the reports of various Army and Medical Committees, and this attractiveness lies in the Military Service officers occupying posts in the Civil for ever. The number is nearly half. Instead of the Military Reserve being far below that, a good many officers, far more than the Military Reserve requires, are being drafted to civil employment. The Medical Services Committee has accepted that the Civil Departments are saddled with a far larger numbers of these officers than the Military reserve. So far this attractiveness lies in private practice in civil, and the result is inefficient Army Medical Service. I will here quote the words of the Esher Committee's Report :

"It was maintained that the officers of the latter services (I. M. S.) lack the necessary training for work in the field though quite as efficient professionally as the Royal Army Medical Corps and also specialised. This defect is attributed to their inferior military training."

These are the words of the Esher Committee Report. This factor creating inefficiency in the cadre ought to have been immediately dispensed with, and the Army cadre been restricted to the Army only, and made to serve the purpose best for which the cadre is meant. It is no use spoiling both the civil administration and the military efficiency by putting forth this attraction. The R. A. M. C. British has no such attraction. Why should the cadre in India only have it to the detriment of the purpose for which it is meant ? If recruits can be had for R. A. M .C. they can be had for the Indian cadre too. Besides the admission of Indians to the cadre in sufficient numbers would make up the deficiency of any of the British recruits if at all they fall short. If the aim of transferring the Army Services to Indians is really to be achieved, the Medical Services—the least offensive of the Army cadres, if I may say so—is the best thing for a good beginning for the Indianisation of the Army Services and I hope Government would not lose this opportunity of showing proofs of their good intentions in accepting Indians in large numbers for this Army Service, as so many professionally trained Indians willing to take a military career would be readily available. The last war has been a sufficient proof of the willingness and the efficiency of the Indian medical profession and it will serve no purpose of the Government of His Majesty to refuse the officering of Indian Units by Indian medical officers. If capability of self-defence is the test for obtaining self-government, and if the intention of Government are really honest, as expressed by the Honourable the Home Member in his speech at the Delhi session on the self-government Resolution, it stands to reason that this material of Indian medical men should be utilised in serving the Army. The Commission has as well failed to do justice to this cause.

I have said at the beginning that I will refer to some representations which support my statement. The first is the Bombay Medical Union's report. I may say that the Bombay Medical Union consists of a large number of highly British qualified people. They say :

"We notice with grave concern that officers from the Military Service are still to be seconded for civil employment and what is worse, that only European officers are to be thus treated—Indians being ineligible for seconding."

The second point they urge is that :

"The Services operating in the transferred field should be recruited and controlled only by the Local Government,"

The third point is this. They say :

" We are afraid that under these conditions, Indian recruitment for the R. A. M. C. (India) will fall practically to zero, and Indians instead of gaining anything by the change stand to lose what they have already got."

These are extracts from the Bombay Medical Union's report.

The second representation is from the memorandum presented to the Royal Commission by the Indian members of the Indian Medical Service in Madras. The points that they have dealt with are these :

" The civil and the military side of the I. M. S. should be separated, the military side to remain under the control of the Government of India as an All-India Service and to be recruited by competitive examination to be held in India, the civil side on the other hand, should be entirely provincialised and be under the control of the Local Government."

The second point they urge is :

" British and Colonial recruitment to the Indian Medical Service should be stopped at once. India's ideal is to entirely Indianise the services."

They further say :

" As regards the question of reserves for the Army the experience of the great war has proved that (1) private practitioners could be depended upon in time of emergency, (2) the R. A. M. C. has no war reserve, (3) I. M. S. men who have been in civil employ for some time are no better than private practitioners in that respect, (4) military training could be imparted to private practitioners through the Territorial and Auxiliary Forces as well as to all civil medical servants."

The last point is :

" Europeans coming to India should be prepared to submit to treatment by Indian doctors. No Indian doctor has been appointed in England to look after Indian officers and other Indian residents in England of whom there are several thousands, and there are several Indian doctors settled in England who have extensive practice exclusively among English people."

This is from the Madras Association of the I. M. S. men. The third is from Ahmedabad. It says :

" Resolved that the recommendations of the Lee Commission on Medical Services in India are very unfavourable in the interests of the Indian medical profession, augmenting still more invidious race distinctions, perpetuating the existing disabilities and unnecessarily increasing the heavy burden of expenditure on poor Indian tax-payers," and so on.

I will only read one more and finish. This is from the United Provinces Liberal Association. The meeting was presided over by Dr. Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru. The resolution passed was this :

" This Committee is also of opinion that the scheme of provincialisation of the Services, associated with the administration of transferred subjects, while seemingly satisfactory so far as it goes, cannot be approved inasmuch as the Indian demand is for the transfer of all subjects in the provinces to the control of the Legislature, as the Commission's recommendation will create a new motive of opposition to this demand on the part of the Services, now reserved, and as the recommendation itself is far too limited and qualified to result in an effective increase of the control of Ministers and Legislatures over those Services."

The last is :

" While the Committee approves of the establishment of a Civil Medical Service it is of opinion that the proposals with regard to the constitution of a Military Medical Service by the R. A. M. C. (India) and to the large proportion of civil medical posts to be filled from the latter, will amount to a continuation of the present Indian Medical Service in another and, from the Indian point of view, a more objectionable form,

[Mr. K. G. Lohokare.]

In the opinion of this Committee there should be two distinct medical services—an Indian Military and a provincial civil—the former entirely independent of the British War Office and recruited both in England and in India, and the latter wholly in this country."

Sir, I will not tire out the House by reading out other things. In one word, I say the recommendations of the Commission are ill-advised, retrograde, and stand no test of reason and offer nothing to Indian aspirations. They neglect to take the forecast of India's progress to self-government. The medical profession, therefore, cannot accept such recommendations and I have, therefore, to support Pandit Motilal Nehru's amendment in this respect.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 11th September, 1924.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Thursday, 11th September, 1924.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

AUDITING OF THE ACCOUNTS OF THE GOVERNMENT AGRICULTURAL FARM AT TARNAB.

†1763. Lala Duni Chand : (a) Is it a fact that the accounts of the Government Agricultural Farm at Tarnab, Peshawar District, in the North-West Frontier Province were audited for the first time since its establishment in 1910, from 1st September 1923 to 6th October 1923, by M. Fateh Mohammad, senior auditor ?

(b) Has the Audit Department furnished an audit and inspection note for the period April 1922 to August 1923 ?

(c) If the answer to parts (a) and (b) be in the affirmative, will Government please lay on the table a copy of the said audit and inspection note ?

(d) Is it a fact that the said audit note discloses serious defalcations in accounts and misappropriation of Government money ? If so, do Government propose to take criminal proceedings against the officials concerned ? If not, why not ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state whether M. Sharbat Ali Khan, Head Clerk of the Tarnab Agricultural Farm, has been made to retire on pension after twenty years' service, simply because he had assisted the auditors in finding out misuse and misappropriations of Government money by an important European officer ?

SUPPLY OF FREE FRUIT TO EUROPEAN OFFICERS FROM THE GOVERNMENT AGRICULTURAL FARM AT TARNAB.

1764. Lala Duni Chand : (a) Is it a fact that in spite of orders to the contrary by the head of the Agricultural Department in the North-West Frontier Province, the European officer at Tarnab has been making free distribution of the farm fruit to various European officers in the Province, and the said Farm Officer did not bill anyone even when asked to do so ? Do Government propose to realise dues on account of the farm fruit from the European officers and others to whom it has been supplied free of charge ? If not, why not ?

(b) What has been the total expenditure of and the total income from the said Agricultural Farm during the last fourteen years of its existence, and if the expenditure has exceeded the income, are the Government prepared to take early steps to abolish the Farm and thereby prevent the waste of public money ?

† For answer to this question—see below Question No. 1764.

Mr. J. W. Bhore : With your permission I shall reply to questions Nos. 1763 and 1764 together.

The Government of India have requested the Chief Commissioner to see that a thorough inquiry is made in regard to the working of the Agricultural Farm at Tarnab with reference to the facts disclosed by the report of the Auditor. They would accordingly prefer to postpone answering the Honourable Member on the points he has raised till they have obtained all the facts of the case.

Lala Duni Chand : Why is it that invariably questions relating to the North-West Frontier Province are not fully answered in the open House ? I may draw the attention of the Honourable Member to my questions Nos. 286 and 287 which were similarly treated. I understand it is to avoid inconvenience of exposure that this procedure is adopted.

TENDERS FOR STORES FOR THE ARMY REMOUNT DEPÔTS AT SARGODHA AND FARM AT TARNAB.

1765. Lala Duni Chand : Is it a fact that the salary of Mr. Robertson Brown, Officer in Charge of the Tarnab Farm, has recently been increased from Rs. 700 to Rs. 1,350 ? and if so, will the Government be pleased to mention the reasons for such increase ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : Mr Robertson Brown's new scale of pay is Rs. 1,050—50—1,350 per mensem. The reasons which led Government to increase it were that he had drawn the maximum of his old scale of pay, namely, Rs. 750, for five years and that his pay had not been revised to meet post-war conditions as had been done in the case of other officers, that having to live in a remote locality, the cost of living was high, and that his Circle had developed with a consequent increase of responsibility and was equal to that of an ordinary Deputy Director of Agriculture in the Indian Agricultural Service. The Government had also received good reports of his work.

TENDERS FOR STORES FOR THE ARMY REMOUNT DEPOTS AT SARGODHA AND MONA.

1766. Lala Duni Chand : 1. (a) Is it a fact that tenders are invited for the contracts of petty stores and other things required by the Army Remount Depôts at Sargodha and Mona ? If so, are the contracts given to those whose tenders are lowest ?

(b) If the contracts are not given to those whose tenders are lowest, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons for this ?

2. (a) Is it a fact that in very many cases at the said two depôts the contracts are not given to those whose tenders are lowest, but are given to those whose tenders are higher and thus loss is caused to the Government ?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state the names of those persons whose lower tenders were rejected and the names of those persons whose higher tenders were accepted, and also the rates of the tenders rejected and accepted at the said two places during the last year ?

Mr. E. Burdon : 1. (a) and (b). Tenders are almost invariably invited by public advertisement for the supply of petty stores required by the Army Remount Depôts, including those at Mona and Sargodha. The contracts for such supplies and services are not necessarily given to those whose tenders are the lowest. The practice is to accept the most favourable tender received from a tenderer who is considered reliable and suitable in all respects. A factor always taken into account is whether the tenderer possesses a knowledge and experience of the work of supplies required, and is punctual and efficient in the performance of contracts.

2. (a) As already explained in reply to part 1 of the question, contracts are not necessarily given to those whose tenders are the lowest. Government are satisfied that the system at present in force is the best calculated to obviate loss to the State.

(b) Government are not prepared to furnish the details asked for by the Honourable Member.

AMENDMENT OF SECTION 101 OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT.

1767. Lala Duni Chand : Will the Government be pleased to inform the House how far the consideration of the matter in connection with the amendment of section 101 of the Government of India Act, as promised by the Honourable Sir Malcolm Hailey, the then Home Member, in reply to the Resolution re constitution of High Courts, moved by Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar on 19th February 1924, has progressed so far, and how long it will take to give effect wholly or partially to the said Resolution ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : My predecessor stated that the Government of India cannot frame any definite policy which they can place before the Secretary of State until they have considered the recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Services and of the Bar Committee. The Bar Committee's Report has been referred to Local Governments for opinion and the matter will be taken up as soon as their replies are received.

Lala Duni Chand : Is it a fact that the number of Indians competent to be Judges of His Majesty's High Courts in India is far greater than the number of Europeans equally fit and competent ? And if it is a fact, will the Government be pleased to take steps to make larger use of the available material.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : Government in making appointments to the High Court endeavour to make the best use of all the available material.

INDIAN FOREST SERVICE OFFICERS.

1768. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : With reference to the reply of Government, stating " There are 303 officers of the Indian Forest Service who have been trained in Europe and appointed by the Secretary of State. Of these 33 are Indians " to starred question No. 1258 asked in the last Simla session of the Assembly, will the Government please state what was the number before Indianisation began ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : There were four Indians.

PROPOSED NEW CENTRAL INDIA COALFIELDS RAILWAY.

1769. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) if the construction of the New Central India Coalfields Railway is under the consideration of Government ?

(b) if so, will they please state how far the scheme has progressed ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). The Central Indian Coalfields Railway project consists of two lines, one running from Daltonganj viâ Hutar to Barka Khana, and the other from Hutar to Anuppur. The construction of the former line has recently been sanctioned and the question of constructing the latter is under consideration.

Devaki Prasad Sinha : By what time do the Government hope that the construction of the Daltonganj-Barka Khana line will be completed ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am afraid I cannot answer directly—I do not remember ; I think in about two years but I am not quite certain.

GRIEVANCES OF PASSENGERS TRAVELLING BY THE BANDEL-BARHARWA LOOP SECTION OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1770. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the letter published in the issue of the Forward of the 11th July, 1924, page 11, under the heading " Inconveniences of Bandel-Barharwa loop section passengers " ?

(b) If so, will they please state if the statements made therein are correct ?

(c) If correct, do they propose to issue necessary instructions to the railway authorities concerned to have the grievances complained of redressed ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have seen the letter referred to.

(b) Owing to shortage of stock Nos. 19 Up and 20 L. trains occasionally do not have their full complement of intermediate and III Class carriages. Government understand that the loads of these trains will be increased when stock is available.

Government are also informed that the passenger traffic on this section does not warrant more trains, and that the other matters complained of are receiving the attention of the railway authorities.

(c) In the circumstances Government do not propose to issue any instructions.

EUROPEAN AND INDIAN STATION MASTERS ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1771. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state the number of railway stations on the East Indian Railway at which there are European station masters, and the number on which there are Indian station masters ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : There are 35 stations with European Station masters and 466 with Indian Station masters on the East Indian Railway.

Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Why is the number of Indian station masters so small—can you say ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The number of Indian station masters is 466 and of European station masters 35 !

COST OF MAINTENANCE OF THIRD CAVALRY REGIMENT, REDUCTION OF WHICH WAS REFUSED BY THE WAR OFFICE.

1772. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Is it a fact that the Retrenchment Committee recommended the reduction of the military establishment of India by three cavalry regiments and that in consequence of the War Office objecting to that recommendation only two regiments have been removed ?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state the cost of the maintenance of the one regiment which has not been reduced ?

Mr. E. Burdon : (a) I invite the attention of the Honourable Member to the reply given on the 1st February last to part (a) (5) of starred question No. 40, and to the supplementary questions thereto.

(b) The cost of a British cavalry regiment is estimated at approximately Rs. 19,05,350 per annum.

Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : What did you say about the regiment—was permanent or temporary ?

Mr. E. Burdon : If the Honourable Member will refer to the previous replies which I have mentioned, he will find that his question is fully answered.

CONDITIONS OF RECRUITMENT OF INDENTURED LABOUR IN THE ASSAM TEA PLANTATIONS.

1773. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state what are the conditions of recruitment of indentured labourers employed in the Assam tea plantations ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : No indentured labourers are employed in the Assam Tea Plantations.

ALLEGED HIGH-HANDEDNESS OF TRAVELLING TICKET CHECKERS ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

1774. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the letter published in the issue of the Forward of the 13th July 1924 page 11 under the heading " A. B. Railway Travelling Ticket Checkers' Alleged High-Handedness " ?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state if the statements made therein are correct ?

(c) If correct, do they propose to issue instructions to the railway authorities concerned to check the evil complained of ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have seen the letter referred to.

(b) and (c). On receipt of a report of the incident inquiries were at once instituted by the Railway Administration and necessary action taken. The system of paying bonuses to Travelling Ticket Examiners out of the amounts recovered by them is no longer in force.

INDIAN REPRESENTATIVES TO THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR CONFERENCES.

1775. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Is it or is it not a fact that Government consult the Unions or organisations and the associations of labourers and agriculturists before they send their representatives to the International Labour Conferences ?

(b) If not, do Government propose to consult them in future ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given by me on the 18th February 1924 to Mr. K. G. Lohokare's unstarred question No. 140.

LEGISLATION FOR REGULATION OF THE SYSTEM OF PAYMENT OF WAGES.

1776. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state whether they intend to undertake legislation for regulating the system of the payment of wages within a fixed period after they become due ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : No, but the Department of Industries and Labour is at present engaged in examining the systems of payment of wages in vogue in different industries and in different parts of the country.

AMENDMENT OF THE WORKMENS' COMPENSATION ACT.

1777. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the paragraph published in the issue of the Forward of 16th July, 1924, page 9 under the heading " Workmen's Compensation Act " ?

(b) If so, do the defects pointed out, exist ?

(c) If so, do Government propose to consider the desirability of making necessary amendments in the Act ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) Yes.

(b) No. The criticisms appear to be based on ignorance of the provisions of the Act and on misunderstanding of the principles underlying legislation of this type.

(c) Does not arise.

CONSULTATION WITH THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY REGARDING INDIAN REPRESENTATIVES DEPUTED TO ATTEND MEETINGS OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

1778. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state if they would consider the desirability of consulting the Legislative Assembly before representatives are appointed to represent India at the meetings of the League of Nations ?

Sir Henry Moncrieff Smith : In reply to a similar question asked by Mr. Lansbury in the House of Commons on the 14th of July 1924, the Under Secretary of State for India gave the following reply :

" It is not usual for Executive Governments to consult their legislatures in making such appointments."

The Government of India have nothing to add to that statement. I lay on the table a copy of the complete question and answer.

Dr. H. S. Gour : Is the Honourable Member aware that he was referring to Executive Governments responsible to the Legislatures and was not referring to an Executive independent of the Legislature ?

Sir Henry Moncrieff Smith : I think the Under Secretary's reply had particular reference to India.

Dr. H. S. Gour : Is the Honourable Member prepared to give a single instance where an Executive independently of the Legislature made nominations for which the Legislature is held financially responsible ?

Sir Henry Moncrieff Smith : Is the Honourable Member aware of a single instance when they did not ?

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : Does the representative represent the Government of India or the people of India ?

Non-oral Question No. 2, dated 14th July, 1924.

Mr. Lansbury.—To ask the Under Secretary of State for India, whether the Legislative Assembly in India was consulted before the appointment of Lord Hardinge to represent India at the meeting of the League of Nations in September next ; will he inform this House by whom Lord Hardinge and the other members of the delegation were appointed ; was any effort made, either in this country or in India, to discover whether the members of this delegation represent, directly or indirectly, the views and opinions of representative Indians on either national or international questions ; and will he give the names of the members of the delegation Lord Hardinge is to lead ?

Answer.

The answer to the first part is in the negative. It is not usual for Executive Governments to consult their legislatures in making such appointments. The answers to the second and fourth parts have been given in my reply to question No. 1. The answer to the third part is in the affirmative.

GROSS EARNINGS OF THE DELHI-UMBALA-KALKA RAILWAY.

1779. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the paragraph published in the issue of the Statesman of the 18th July, 1924, page 18 under the heading " Delhi-Umbala-Kalka Railway " ?

(b) If so, will they please state if the statement made therein is correct ?

(c) If so, is there any special reason for a decrease in the gross earnings for the year to such a large amount as £26,000 ?

(d) Does the East Indian Railway's contract include the Delhi-Umbala-Kalka Railway ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes, except that it would have been more correct to say that the Delhi-Umbala-Kalka Railway would be worked by State agency.

(c) In 1922-23 the earnings were increased by special pilgrimage traffic to Kurukshetra on account of the Sun Eclipse Mela held in that year ; those in 1923-24 were not similarly assisted.

(d) No.

GRIEVANCES OF PASSENGERS TRAVELLING BY THE DIAMOND HARBOUR LINE OF THE E. B. RAILWAY.

1780. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the letter published in the issue of the Forward of the 18th July, 1924, page 9 under the heading " Grievances of Diamond Harbour line passengers" ?

(b) If so, are the statements made therein correct ?

(c) If correct, do the Government propose to issue necessary instructions to the railway authorities concerned to redress the grievances referred to ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have seen the letter referred to.

(b) and (c). Government understand that there is no room for additional carriages on No. 137 Up train. The III class accommodation could be increased only by curtailing the intermediate class accommodation, and the latter was recently increased as the result of representations. The question, however, is being reconsidered.

The possibility of starting No. 148 Down train 10 minutes later is also being examined.

In the circumstances Government do not propose to take any action.

RECENT RIOTS AT DELHI.

1781. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government please furnish the House with complete information regarding the recent riots at Delhi ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The information asked for is laid on the table.

Report on Delhi Bakr Id Riots.

When Mr. Barron made over charge to me he remarked that he was handing over the quietest spot in India. This seemed clearly to be the case. As the Government of India is aware however the "shuddi" movement had been actively conducted in this part of India for some time previous and the efforts of certain enthusiastic spirits to convert various classes of Muhammadans to the Arya tenets were bitterly resented by equally ardent Musalmans. Attempts to get hold of orphans and derelict women of either community by agents of the other were certainly made. The local newspapers on either side published accounts of such attempts with bitter comments. It seemed undesirable to try and prevent the publication of accounts which were not palpably untrue and it was a matter of opinion whether the comment was justified or no.

There seemed however every prospect that the local Congress Committee would be able to induce the proselytising agencies to desist from their efforts and thus allay the feelings that had been aroused in the newspaper reading public. There was in fact some cessation of cases by the beginning of July. The meetings of the Congress Committee however were by no means harmonious and relations were strained within the two communities themselves over political disagreements in which Delhi had no monopoly. This want of unanimity among prominent men had probably little direct effect on subsequent events but it no doubt had a serious indirect effect in removing a possible restraining influence over the more turbulent members of the population.

Among the latter a more disturbing influence was the long standing dispute over some land in Bara Hindu Rao in the west of the City. Litigation had been going on for some years between two Hindus over a plot of land upon which meanwhile a Muhammadan praying place known as the Jamadarwali mosque had gradually been established. A decision on title had recently been arrived at by the Courts and the successful litigant was prepared to take possession. An enthusiastic Maulvi thereupon proceeded to address an audience of Musalmans at this mosque in very violent language inviting them to resist any attempt of the Hindus to take possession of the property. A large Hindu crowd collected and the police had the greatest difficulty in preventing a very serious riot which however they were actually able to avert. This took place on the 4th July. Minor disputes over this mosque took place on subsequent dates. The leading participants in this disturbance were sent up for security and the maulvi was prevailed upon to desist from provocative language. I think however that this dispute was a very considerable cause of the bitterness displayed in the Bara Hindu Rao on July 15th.

It was considered advisable as a precautionary measure to ask for the presence in Delhi of some troops to support the police in the event of disturbances occurring during the Bakr Id. These precautions were intended to be complete by the evening of July 13th. Meanwhile the usual proclamation had been issued by the District Magistrate prohibiting the sale in public of any cattle intended for slaughter ; the slaughter of cattle in any place other than the municipal slaughter house ; prescribing routes by which cattle and meat might be taken to and from the slaughter house ; and making other minor provisions.

An order was also issued prohibiting the carrying of lathis during the period covering the Bakr Id ; which was subsequently extended up to the end of August.

There was certainly tension in Delhi and the usual protests by the Hindus against cow killing appeared with counter claims by the Musalmans. There appeared however to be no reason why anything untoward should happen before the festival itself.

On the morning of the 11th July, a dispute arose between a Muhammadan boy and some Kahars at a well in Bagh Diwar, in the course of which the boy was seriously injured. A report was made to the police and inquiries started at once. Shortly afterwards a rumour was spread that the boy had been murdered and his assailants were concealed in Katra Nil. A number of Muhammadans gathered and made a somewhat half-hearted attack on Hindus in Katra Nil and the Chandni Chauk. All shops in the Chandni Chauk immediately shut but the police had no difficulty in quelling the disturbance. About 4 P.M., however, more serious rioting began in the same place and spread down to the clock tower and up to Fatehpuri. Muhammadans were mostly appearing with lathis and endeavouring to attack the closed shops, while the Hindus pelted them with bricks from the house tops. The police arrived on the scene and cleared the Chauk driving the Muhammadans up Egerton Road, Ballimaran, and Katra Barian, and holding them there by means of pickets. About this time a solitary Hindu coming from the other end of Balli Maran in search of his cow was surrounded by Muhammadans and murdered. The rioting spread thence to Khari Baoli, Naya Bans, and Lahore Gate, and it was only stopped after repeated lathi charges on the part of the police. Rioting broke out again in Naya Bans and simultaneously a crowd of Muhammadans attempted to cross the Sadar bridge into the city. The Naya Bans rioting was again quelled, and the crowd at Sadar Bridge was forced back by the police into Sadar Bazar whence the disturbance spread as far as Idgah Kohna through the back streets, and it ended there with the burning of some thatched huts and the murder of one Hindu occupier and wounding of several others. The District Magistrate had meanwhile asked for the assistance of the armoured cars, which arrived at this moment and had an excellent moral effect. The Officer Commanding, 10th A. C. C., a little later telephoned for the troops previously arranged for. The troops already available provided three pickets to stand during the night, and the armoured cars continued to patrol the city for several hours. Everything was quiet and the pickets and the armoured cars were withdrawn after midnight ; meanwhile police pickets were posted at all important places and two striking forces of about 50 men each with lorries were posted at the Kotwali and Sadar Bazar posts respectively. They carried out patrols and proceeded at once to any place where disturbance was apprehended.

During the next 3 days isolated attacks on members of both communities and a certain amount of stone throwing occurred ; but more serious disturbance was averted.

On the 13th July, a Muhammadan from Moradabad, who was apparently unacquainted with the orders in force, was caught by some Hindus in Pahari Dhiraj attempting to sell a cow for sacrifice. He was removed by the police and no disturbance occurred but the incident aroused hot resentment among the Hindus and focussed attention upon the Hindu quarter in Pahari Dhiraj. It was therefore considered inadvisable to allow cows for sacrifice to be taken along Pahari Dhiraj, although it was not at the time one of the routes prohibited by the proclamation. The prohibition of this route by a further proclamation was to be avoided if possible, as such a course would doubtless have been construed as an undue favour to the Hindus. The owners of two cows at Bara Hindu Rao who were desirous of using this route were accordingly approached by the Sub-Inspector and on his representation agreed to take their cows by another and equally short route.

On the morning of the 15th, however, it was reported that these two cows were actually brought to the slaughter house as agreed, but at the instigation of certain evilly disposed persons were again returned to Bara Hindu Rao with a view to being taken along Pahari Dhiraj. A considerable and excited crowd collected at Bara Hindu Rao and it became necessary to decide whether to force the cow through in the teeth of the Hindu opposition or to prohibit the route to the Musalmans. A row was in any case inevitable. The Senior Superintendent of Police advised the Deputy Commissioner to prohibit the route and this was done. The proclamation was duly read out by the District Magistrate and Muhammadans concerned expressed their acquiescence in the matter. Unfortunately evil influences again prevailed, and before long an organised attempt was made by a large and excited mob to force the cow through Pahari Dhiraj. The police picket at Bara Hindu Rao was unable to hold the crowd and was gradually pressed back. On arrival at the Hindu quarter at Pahari Dhiraj the mob was greeted by a fusillade of brick-bats directed from the house tops. Severe fighting followed and the police were eventually compelled to fire. The street was then cleared but both Muhammadans and Hindus were constantly collecting in the neighbouring galis and the police had hard work in dispersing and disarming them. In this they were assisted by the cavalry.

While the fighting was going on at Pahari Dhiraj a gang of murderers attacked several Hindu houses and a temple, killing several Hindus, setting fire to two houses, and desecrating a temple. The Fire Brigade arrived without loss of time and extinguished the fires. The wounded were removed to the Civil Hospital in tramcars and the sight of their arrival there was the cause of a minor disturbance which was suppressed without much difficulty.

I have come to the conclusion that Mr. Orde's advice in this matter was undoubtedly correct. The position was a difficult one but in past years no sacrificial animal had been brought this way and there were several alternative routes. Although there was no legal prohibition of this route the attitude of the Musalmans was purely provocative. I think that there is no doubt that this route was rightly proclaimed.

The next occurrence of importance was an attack on the night of 16th-17th by Hindus on a mosque in Egerton Road in which two Muhammadans received serious injuries but the arrival of the police prevented the affair from further developing. Later on however another gang of Hindus was reported to have collected in a side street of Egerton Road ; the police arrived and ordered them to disperse, and on their refusal to do so dispersed them by force.

During the next few days further isolated cases of assault and of stone throwing continued to be reported, in one of which a Hindu was fatally stabbed ; but no further attempt at organised rioting having taken place, the troops from the New Cantonment were gradually withdrawn from duty, and on the morning of the 19th returned to Cantonments.

Feelings ran very high and though in many Mohallas the members of the minority community were protected by the majority there is no doubt that for days after the riots there were parts of the City where it was dangerous for a Hindu or a Muhammadan to go. In the acts of violence which occurred after the rioting neither community is free from blame.

It is in my opinion clear that no disturbance was organised before this festival. The early rioting on the 11th shows that feeling was only gradually aroused. It is doubtful if any preparations for defence were made before the 11th but it is perfectly certain that before the 15th village jats were called in by the Hindus as lathials probably only for defensive purposes as chaukidars. Some of these men certainly engaged in rioting and many were injured but got away home. There is certainly no doubt that stores of stones were collected on the roofs to pelt at passers-by, particularly by Hindus.

One of the chief difficulties in restoring confidence was the dissemination of wild and exaggerated rumours and recriminations by the local press. Daily bulletins were issued giving a correct version of the various incidents which had occurred during the previous 24 hours, and an appeal to reason was addressed to the leading men of both communities, and a warning to the press. The shops however remained closed in the affected areas till the 20th of July, when the Jats and butchers of Sadar

Bazar were persuaded to effect a mutual reconciliation. Two days later the shop-keepers were prevailed upon to reopen their shops, but the Hindus in Chandni Chauk are still closing their shops at sunset. Investigations are proceeding but the efforts of the magistrates and the police conducting them are largely frustrated by the production of a large amount of false evidence implicating some of the most respected men of both communities.

Elaborate arrangements were made for the maintenance of peace during Muharram which passed off quietly. This situation is now much improved and the police pickets are being gradually withdrawn.

The officially known casualties, i.e., those admitted to hospital, are as follows :

	Hindus.	Musalmans.
July 11th	45	25
July 15th	55	25

Of these 16 Hindus and 1 Musalman died before or after reaching hospital. Many more were injured, but these preferred either to forego treatment or to get themselves treated privately.

I think that it is extraordinary that the damage done in the Bakr Id rioting was so trifling. For this I give the greatest credit to Mr. Orde whose original dispositions were excellent and whose coolness in emergency was beyond all praise. He was ably supported by Deputy Superintendent Hamid-ud-din, Inspector Nazir-ul-Hak, C.I.D., Sub-Inspectors Hari Pal and Qazi Zamiruddin and by Inspector Milchem and Sergeants Liddell and Macgill : but the whole force well maintained its traditions.

Mr. Dodd did himself credit in handling a situation new to his experience and of the Magistrates Mr. Sohan Lal and Mr. Lincoln were of the greatest assistance. The Honorary Magistrates did not embarrass the official authorities.

Called upon unexpectedly the military responded with great promptitude and I am particularly indebted to Major Forestier Walker in Command of the striking force. Colonel Budgen Commanding the Brigade placed his resources unreservedly at our disposal.

What would have happened had the situation got out of control it is difficult to say but the chief feature of the rioting was that it was man to man Hindu to Musalman. There was no looting and very little material damage. The mob idea was to attack a male member of the opposite community. Women and children have been hurt in some cases seriously but attacks on women and children were the exception rather than the rule.

SHOOTING OF INDIANS IN BRITISH GUIANA.

1782. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan :(a) With reference to the reply given to the starred question No. 1364 asked in the Assembly during the last Simla session, will the Government be pleased to state if the inquiry made by the British Guiana Government has been completed and the result of it known to Government ?

(b) If so, will they please communicate the result to the House ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : (a) and (b). The Government of India have not yet been apprised of the results of the inquiry referred to by the Honourable Member but they have not lost sight of the matter and will make a statement on it as soon as the necessary information becomes available.

INDIA AND BURMA MILITARY AND MARINE RELIEF FUND.

1783. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) the year in which the India and Burma Military and Marine Relief Fund was started ?

(b) the annual amount of interest derived from the capitalised amount of the Fund ?

(c) (i) the total number of persons who have received assistance since the fund was started ?

(ii) the number of Indians and Europeans respectively, who received such assistance ?

Mr. E. Burdon : (a) The India and Burma Military and Marine Relief Fund was created by the Government of India Resolution No. 771, dated the 10th September 1923.

(b) The amount of annual interest derived from the capital constituting the fund is Rs. 34,586-8-0.

(c) (i) The total number of persons who have received assistance since the fund was started is 39.

EMPLOYMENT OF MEDICAL OFFICERS ON PILGRIM SHIPS.

1784. Mr. K. G. Lohokare : Will Government please say :

(a) Whether they have received any complaints from any steamship company or other authority or passengers regarding the efficiency or otherwise of medical officers on board the ships who hold qualifications registrable in India only ?

(b) Whether such complaints were (i) against Licentiates of Indian medical schools only and not against Military Assistant Surgeons or (ii) against persons holding Indian registrable qualifications in general ?

(c) Have any of the authorities concerned or individuals specially asked the Government to continue the Military Assistant Surgeons to be medical officers of the ships ?

(d) What are the reasons that have led Government to notify a change in the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, Rule 80, so as to prohibit licentiates of Indian medical schools being employed by shipping companies ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : With your permission, Sir, I shall answer the question as a whole. No complaints were received from Indian shipping companies but even prior to 1909 such complaints were made frequently by the medical staff of the Kamaran Lazaretto regarding the inefficiency and low qualifications of Hospital Assistants or Sub-Assistant Surgeons employed as medical officers on pilgrim ships from British India. Accordingly in 1909 the Government of Bombay proposed that every medical officer employed on pilgrim ships should possess either a degree or at least the license of a recognised University or the qualification of a Military Assistant Surgeon, and the proposal, which was accepted by the Government of India and the Secretary of State, was incorporated in rule 80 (3) of the rules issued in 1910 under the Pilgrim Ships Act. The Honourable Member will thus observe that the exclusion of the licentiates of Indian medical schools from the appointments of medical officers on pilgrim ships under the notification referred to by him is not a new departure. As regards Military Assistant Surgeons, the position prior to 1922 was that while initially they acquired the same qualifications as sub-assistant surgeons, later on they had to pass a special examination of a much higher standard which was held by the Director General, Indian Medical Service. Military Assistant Surgeons who may qualify after 1922 have to do a five years' course and are also on a different footing. Officers of both these classes, therefore, remain eligible in virtue of their superior qualifications. I may add that the reasons for insisting on a comparatively high standard in the case of medical officers of pilgrim ships are the desirability of making such ships medically self-sufficient and the increased importance attached by international opinion and by public opinion in this country to the provision of competent medical aid for pilgrims during the voyage.

Mr. K. G. Lohokare : Do Government not think the licentiate qualification sufficient for taking general charge of a pilgrim ship ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : No, Sir, they do not.

Mr. K. G. Lohokare : Do Government propose to move the Provincial Governments to make the medical schools work up to the desired standard ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : No, Sir ; that is a matter for the Local Governments to initiate themselves.

PROVISION OF INTERMEDIATE CLASS ACCOMMODATION ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

1785. *Mr. K. G. Lohokare : (a) Is it a fact that on the G. I. P. Ry. intermediate class accommodation is provided only in the express and mail trains and not in any other through passenger trains ?

(b) Is it a fact that the intermediate class accommodation on such trains on the G. I. P. Ry. as have it, is in many cases limited to only one compartment without any sleeping accommodation therein ?

(c) Is it a fact that on many branch lines on the G. I. P. such as the Dhond Manmad, Dhulia-Chalisgaon and many others no intermediate class compartment is ever put on ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to say if they have taken notice of this absence and scanty accommodation of the intermediate class on through trains on the G. I. P. even when such trains are running first class invariably unoccupied, second class partially so, third class overcrowded ; if they yet intend to allow the G. I. P. Railway to do without intermediate class accommodation on through passenger trains ; if the Railway management and Government have considered the convenience to the public and return to the Railway from intermediate class instead of first class carriages where they are scarcely occupied ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) On some trains two compartments are provided and on others one compartment with 46 seats. Sleeping accommodation is not provided for intermediate class.

(c) No intermediate class accommodation is provided on branch lines.

(d) Government understand that sufficient intermediate class accommodation is provided on the two express trains between Bombay and Poona and the express trains between Bombay and Delhi and that therefore similar accommodation on the Poona and Punjab mail trains is not necessary. They also understand that the provision of further intermediate class accommodation is receiving the attention of the Railway Administration.

CONSTRUCTION OF A STATION AT BHAMBURDA ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

1786. *Mr. K. G. Lohokare : Will Government please say if the arrangements to hand over the land for Bhamburda station on the G. I. P. Railway are completed as per reply to my starred question No. 978 asked on the 24th March 1924, and if it is possible to undertake the construction of the station by the next financial year ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The question of the amount of land required for a station at Bhamburda is still under investigation.

CLOSURE TO THE PERMANENT CADRE OF THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE TO INDIANS.

1787. Mr. K. G. Lohokare : Will Government be pleased to say :

(a) What are the reasons for closing the competitive I. M. S. examination and introducing method of selection only ?

(b) Why the I. M. S. permanent cadre is now closed to Indians, from what year was it closed and when the door will be reopened ?

(c) What is the total number of admissions to the I. M. S. permanent cadre and appointments on short term contract, since the closure till now ?

(d) Out of these appointments how many officers hold—

(i) the F. R. C. S. or M. D. (ii) Hygiene and Tropical Medicine qualification (iii) additional University degree other than the professional ?

(e) How many Indians holding the above degrees are serving for the present on the temporary list and how many such persons have relinquished their appointments during the period of closure ?

(f) If they had taken notice of a pamphlet " Medical Services in India " published by the Servant of India Society, if so, what action has been taken on the views expressed therein ?

(g) If the D. G., I. M. S. or the D. M. S. or the C.-in-C., or the Government of India had represented against this closure against Indians to the Secretary of State and the War Office ? If not, do any of them intend doing so ?

(h) Which of these above authorities recommended the closure of I. M. S. to Indians and which do yet wish it to be continued ?

Mr. E. Burdon : (a) The competitive examination for admission to the Indian Medical Service ceased in 1915 because it was impossible to hold an examination during the war. It has not been considered feasible to revive the examination because conditions have been generally disturbed and also because there have not been sufficient European candidates available in the United Kingdom to make it worth while holding a competitive examination. The method of selection was also introduced to enable officers who had served in a temporary capacity during the war to be considered for the grant of permanent commissions.

(b) The grant of permanent commissions to Indians has been held in abeyance since March 1922 for the reason that in the years preceding that date the number of Europeans recruited had been disproportionately small. As was stated on the 27th May last, in reply to the Honourable Member's question No. 1047, it is impossible to say at present when the recruitment of Indians to permanent commissions in the Indian Medical Service will be reopened.

(c) Since March 1922, 44 officers have been admitted to the permanent cadre of the Indian Medical Service, but 4 subsequently died or resigned, 32 of them have the option of resigning the service after 5 years.

(d) The records of these officers are not complete, but so far as information is available, the particulars are as follows :—

F. R. C. S.....1 ; M. D.....3 ; Hygiene and Tropical Medicine qualifications.....2; Additional University degrees other than professional .....4.

(e) In order to furnish the information desired in this part of the question, it would be necessary to examine the personal files of all the officers concerned. This would involve a considerable amount of labour which, in the opinion of the Government of India, would not be justified by the result.

(f) The Government of India have not seen a copy of the pamphlet referred to by the Honourable Member.

(g) and (h). On these points, the Government of India are not prepared to furnish any information. I may explain, however, that neither the Director General, Indian Medical Service, the Director of Medical Services or His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief is competent to make any representation of the kind suggested.

Mr. K. G. Lohokare : I want to know if they made any representations.

Mr. E. Burdon : I said that the Government of India were not prepared to furnish information on that point.

Mr. K. G. Lohokare : As regards (b), what is the proportion of Europeans that the Indian candidates have been debarred ? Was it so high ? In reply to (b) the Honourable Member said that the percentage of Europeans was disproportionately small, therefore the examination was closed. I beg to inquire what was that percentage of Europeans in the competitive examinations held before.

Mr. E. Burdon : There were no competitive examinations at the time.

Mr. K. G. Lohokare : When there was competitive examination, the European percentage was higher. This was the reply given. I beg to inquire what was the percentage.

Mr. E. Burdon : You mean to say, prior to 1915 ?

Mr. K. G. Lohokare : Yes.

Mr. E. Burdon : Then I must ask for notice of that question.

Sardar V. N. Mutalik : With regard to (c), what do the Government of India intend to do with regard to those persons who are holding temporary appointments in the department ?

Mr. E. Burdon : A certain number of them will, I hope, in due course be considered for the grant of permanent commissions.

Mr. K. G. Lohokare : What is the percentage of Indians for the permanent service ?

Mr. E. Burdon : I should like to have notice of that question.

Mr. K. G. Lohokare : As regards (f), will Government be pleased to take notice of the pamphlet referred to ?

Mr. E. Burdon : If the Honourable Member will give me a copy, I will read it.

POLL-TAX IN KENYA.

1788. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the total number of Indians punished either with fine or imprisonment or both for refusing to pay the poll-tax in Kenya ?

(b) Will Government lay on the table a complete list containing the names and occupations of the Indians referred to in (a) ?

(c) Does the poll-tax apply to women and children ; does it apply to minors also ?

(d) What steps if any have Government taken to get this tax removed ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : (a) and (b). The Government of India are not in possession of the information.

(c) No : it is paid by every male adult, other than a native.

(d) The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given by me to Mr. Ramachandra Rao's question No. 1229 on the 4th June 1924.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : As regards (a) and (b), will Government be pleased to inquire and furnish the information ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : I do not think, Sir, any useful purpose will be served by obtaining that information.

INTERCEPTION OF TELEGRAPHIC MESSAGES.

1789. Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the names of the officers who have been specially authorised under section 5 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1885, to order the interception of messages under section 5 (1) (b) of the said Act ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the names of the persons or the classes of persons whose messages had been stopped in the official years 1921, 1922, 1923 and the classes of subjects in regard to which the transmission of messages had been stopped during the same period ?

(c) If there is any periodical return submitted to the Governor General in Council by the Local Governments or by any specially authorised officers in regard to action taken under section 5 (1) (b) of the said Act, will the Government be pleased to lay the same on the table for the official years 1921, 1922, and 1923 ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : (a) Action is taken under this section only on the occurrence of any public emergency, or in the interests of the public safety, and Government do not consider it to be in the public interests to divulge the names of any officers especially authorised under the section.

(b) The Government of India have no information, as no lists are maintained.

(c) No such returns are submitted to the Governor General in Council.

INTERCEPTION OF POSTAL ARTICLES.

1790. *Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : (a) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement of goods intercepted in the official year 1923, by the Post Offices under section 25 of the Indian Post Office Act, 1898 ? If there is any periodical return of such goods, will the Government be pleased to lay such return for the official year 1923 on the table ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state in how many cases orders were passed in the official year 1923, by the Governor General in Council, the Local Governments and specially authorised officers under section 26 of the Indian Post Office Act, 1898 ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state whether any intimation has been given in each case to the senders of the postal articles where such articles had been intercepted under section 26 of the said Act ?

(d) Are the Government prepared to direct that in future the orders should be published in the official gazette of the province when action is taken under section 26.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : (a) The information is not available. No return of such goods is maintained.

(b) Action is taken only on the occurrence of any public emergency, or in the interests of public safety or tranquillity, and Government do not consider it to be in the public interests to state the number of cases in which action was taken in 1923.

(c) The Act does not require intimation to be given to the senders of intercepted articles and presumably no such intimation is given.

(d) The answer is in the negative.

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : Will the Honourable Member take steps to ensure that such intimation is given to the senders of the intercepted articles ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : That is, with reference to action taken under section 26 ? Certainly not, Sir.

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : Then how is he to know whether the articles have been detained ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I do not think he should know, Sir.

EVIDENCE OF PROVINCIAL MINISTERS AND EX-MINISTERS BEFORE THE REFORMS INQUIRY COMMITTEE.

1791. *Mr. T. C. Goswami : Have Government invited all Ministers and ex-Ministers (of the Provinces) to appear as witnesses before or send in written statements to the Reforms Inquiry Committee ?

If not, (1) do Government propose to do so ?

(2) Which of the Ministers and ex-Ministers have been so invited ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The question as to which Ministers and ex-Ministers should be invited to appear as witnesses before the Reforms Inquiry Committee is a matter for the Committee to decide and not for Government. In the Resolution of the Government of India dated the 20th June, 1924, constituting the Committee, however, all persons who desired to supply written evidence for the consideration of the Committee were invited to do so and to say at the same time whether they were prepared to give oral evidence or not.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Do Government propose for the benefit of the country first of all to examine persons specially and particularly from the community that forms the majority of the people of Bengal and listen to their statements which they will make on the subject as stated in question No. 1791, in view of the fact that the Honourable the Leader of the House is the President of the Reforms Inquiry Committee ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I am the President of the Committee but here I am representing the Government, not the Committee.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Sir, is it a fact that an invitation was sent and notified in the Gazette to the public at large that any person who had any standing, position or experience of the working of the Reforms should send in his memorandum ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : As I have stated before, all persons who are interested were invited to send in a memorandum.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : And was the time which was originally fixed at the 1st of August extended to the 15th of August ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I believe the Honourable Member is correct.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Was any responsible person refused an opportunity to give evidence ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The Committee will be able to answer that question.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : Sir, do I understand that the Ministers and ex-Ministers, who have been invited to give evidence or to submit written memoranda, have done so on their own initiative and not at the invitation of the Government ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The Committee would be in a better position to answer that question. I am standing here for the Government and I cannot reveal what is going on in the Committee.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that the President of the Reforms Inquiry Committee or his Secretary has already received some written memoranda from the particular community that is in the majority in Bengal, do Government propose for the benefit of the country and the purposes for which this inquiry is being held to examine them first ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I have said to the Honourable Member before that the question of the examination witnesses is one for the Committee and not for the Government.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : But, Sir, may I ask, so far as the Government are aware, has the Committee refused to give an opportunity to any responsible person to give evidence ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : Certainly not, Sir.

1792. * Mr. T. C. Goswami : Will the Government be pleased to publish or lay on the table of the Assembly, now or at a later date, the written and oral evidence of Ministers and ex-Ministers before the Reforms Inquiry Committee ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The written and oral evidence in question is evidence supplied not to Government but to a Committee appointed by Government, and Government will not be able to decide the action which should be taken as regards the evidence until they receive the report of the Committee.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : Will the decision rest with the Committee as to what is going to be published ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : Certainly not. It will rest with the Government, to whom the Report will be submitted.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Do Government propose to gather the true version of the real state of things in Bengal as far as the present political situation is concerned ?

Mr. President : I think the Honourable Member had better ask to be allowed to appear before the Committee himself.

(ii) If so, will Government kindly lay these opinions on the table of the House ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I have answered this question several times. A report was laid on the table at the first meeting of the Assembly.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : Sir, have the Government noticed that in the memorandum which has been circulated this morning all the present Ministers have opposed the recommendations of the Lee Commission ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I do not think, Sir, that arises out of my answer. The answer relates to the laying of the Report.

(b) If so, will they please state (i) if they agree to the remarks made therein and (ii) whether they propose to ask other provinces to co-operate under the directions of the Central Government as suggested in the last portion of the paragraph ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : (a) The reply is in the affirmative.

(b) (i) and (ii). As the Honourable Member is aware, medical administration is a transferred subject and it is not possible for the Government of India to take any initiative in the matter without the consent of Local Governments. They have, however, drawn the attention of these Governments to the passage in question and asked for an expression of their views on the suggestion made therein.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : Sir, is it not a fact that the management of this Institute rests with the Government ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : No, Sir.

1795. * Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Is it a fact that the officers of the Indian Forest Service Education Staff seldom serve as Instructors for more than three years ?

1797. * Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government please state whether the work of decoration in New Delhi will be given to Indian artists ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to the Resolution passed in the Council of State on this subject on the 11th February 1924. The Government of India propose to act in accordance with that Resolution.

THIRD CLASS ACCOMMODATION ON MAIL TRAINS.

1798. * Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the letter published in the issue of the Forward of the 23rd July 1924, page 11, under the heading "Bombay Mail, and Inter Class Passengers" ?

(b) If so, are the statements made therein correct ?

(c) If correct, do Government propose to issue instructions to the railway authorities concerned to remove the inconvenience of the passengers referred to in the letter ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have seen the letter referred to.

Promotion of Indian Traffic Staff.

With reference to the reply given to question No. 1457 in the Legislative Assembly on the 11th June 1924, I am directed to state that no Indian Station Master, Asstt. Station Master or Guard of the Eastern Bengal Railway has been directly promoted to the posts of Traffic Inspector, Transportation Inspector, Claims Inspector or Assistant Traffic Superintendent, the reason being that until recently the men taking up these appointments were not generally speaking suitable for the higher posts referred to owing to insufficient education and inability to control others.

I am however to add that Indian office clerks, Shed Inspectors and Assistant Goods Supervisors of the Eastern Bengal Railway have been appointed as Traffic Inspectors, Claims Inspectors and Outstanding Inspectors and that one Indian Traffic Inspector and one Indian clerk have been appointed Assistant Traffic Superintendent in the Local Traffic Service.

(b) If so, will they place them before the House ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes and they were communicated to the Honourable Member on 5th July 1924.

(b) An inquiry into an alleged extortion from menials on the Katihar District of the Eastern Bengal Railway was held and it was not proved that such extortion took place. Certain features in the working of the Chief Clerk and the Menial Establishment Clerk, however, were found to be unsatisfactory, and on this account their future promotion has been affected. The transfer of the menials was considered necessary as it was undesirable that they should remain in the District after the occurrence.

OVERCROWDING OF NIGHT TRAINS LEAVING BOMBAY FOR NASIK AND POONA, RESPECTIVELY.

1802. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) With reference to the reply " Government have no information on the subject, but inquiry is being made ", to starred question No. 1465, asked in the last Simla session of the Assembly, will the Government please state, if the inquiry has been completed ?

(b) If so, will they please state if the statement made therein is correct ?

(c) If correct, do they propose to issue necessary instructions to the railway authorities concerned to redress the grievances complained of ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have seen the letter referred to.

(b) and (c). Government understand that, although the stock used is old, it is the best that is available for the service. A census taken during March, since when extra trains have been put on, showed that No. 42 Down was not overcrowded. The Railway Administration are not aware of passengers having had to travel on foot-boards.

Mr. A. A. L. Ample time is also allowed for through passengers to obtain what they require in the refreshment room at Purulia.

(b) On the completion of the Hesla-Chandil Chord, there will be a junction at Thulin, midway between Purulia and Ranchi, and it is intended to open a refreshment room there.

In the circumstances Government do not propose to issue any instructions.

(i) if it is a fact that B. A. Fauzdar has been dismissed summarily for having refused to be a member of the "Welfare Committee" ?

(ii) If so, whether they will please make an inquiry, and communicate the result to the House ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). Government have not seen the paragraph but have the Agent's assurance that the statements made in it have no foundation in fact.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, what are the facts ? Will Government be pleased to state what the facts are in connection with this matter ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I do not think there are any facts, Sir.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I cannot understand what the Honourable Member means by saying that there are no facts. Is there no Welfare Committee started there, and what sort of Welfare Committee is it ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The question does not ask whether there is a Welfare Committee there, but relates to the dismissal of a gentleman called Mr. B. A. Fauzdar.

EXCESS FARE EARNINGS OF TICKET COLLECTORS ON THE EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.

1808. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : With reference to the reply stating "Government have no information but will make inquiries " to starred question No. 1524 asked in the last Simla session of the Assembly, will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) if their inquiries have been completed ?

(b) if completed, will they please communicate the result to the House ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) If so, will they be pleased to state if the complaint made therein regarding the " Shortage of Wagons " is correct ?

(c) If correct, do they propose to issue instructions to the authorities concerned to make such arrangements as to remove the complaint referred to ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Government have seen the paragraph referred to.

(b) and (c). Temporary difficulties in the transport of coal are liable to occur from time to time, but the supply of wagons to the coal-fields may be said generally to have improved in the last few months. At the moment there is an ample supply of wagons, but there is some difficulty in meeting in full indents for certain destinations owing to temporary restrictions. For instance, on the East Indian Railway booking viâ Agra East Bank is closed owing to breaches beyond that point.

There is no need to issue any special instructions as the matter is constantly under the consideration of the Railway Board and Railways.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : Do the Railway authorities take any steps to meet the demand for wagons during the busy season ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Yes, Sir, every step we possibly can take.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : Will the Government be pleased to state at least one of the steps that they propose to take or that they do take ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : We buy more wagons, improve our marshalling arrangements,—I am afraid I cannot detail now all the steps we take.

CLOSING AT NIGHT OF BIRATI, HRIDAIPUR AND DAGOCHIA STATIONS ON THE EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.

1811. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the letter published in the issue of the "Forward" of the 27th July, 1924 page 9 under the heading "Grievances of Railway Passengers" in connection with the decision of the railway authorities of the E. (b) If so, will they please state if the statements made therein are correct ?

(c) If correct, do they propose to recommend to the authorities to see that the inconvenience of the public as complained of, are removed ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have seen the letter referred to.

(b) and (c). Government understand that orders have already been issued for No. 101 Up train to serve Birati and Hridaipur stations as before, but that owing to the necessity for curtailing expenditure, the stoppage of Nos. 9 Up, 10 Down and 32 Down, at the three stations mentioned cannot be arranged.

GRIEVANCES OF PASSENGERS TRAVELLING BY THE BANDEL KATWA LINE OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1812. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the letter published in the issue of the "Forward" of the 29th July 1924, page 9, under the heading "Grievances of Bandel Katwa Line Passengers" ?

(b) If so, will they please state if the statements made therein are correct ?

(c) If correct, do they propose to issue instructions to the railway authorities concerned to see that the inconvenience of the passengers be removed and the grievances referred to redressed ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is referred to the answer just given to his question regarding inconveniences of Bandel-Barharwa Loop section passengers.

As regards the timing of No. 20 L. Down train Government understand that it would be impracticable to make the alteration suggested.

CASE OF ARJAN SINGH, CLERK, RAWALPINDI POST OFFICE.

1813. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) With reference to the reply, stating "The Government of India are not aware of the facts of this case, but are causing inquiries to be made" to starred question No. 1554 asked in the last Simla session of the Assembly, will the Government be pleased to state if the inquiries have been completed ?

(b) If completed, will they please communicate the result to the House ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) Yes.

(b) The orders passed by the Director-General, Posts and Telegraphs, have been revised by Government, who have decided that Arjan Singh should receive the full pay for which he would have been entitled during the period of his suspension and that his increments should not be stopped.

Lala Duni Chand : Has the Government earnestly tried to satisfy Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan and through him the public even with regard to a single matter, while he has been putting so many questions on so many matters of public importance ?

DIFFERENTIAL TREATMENT OF THE STAFF OF THE ARMY REMOUNT DEPARTMENT AND THE CIVIL VETERINARY DEPARTMENT.

1814. Mr. Abdul Haye : (1) Will the Government please state if it is a fact that the Veterinary Assistants in the Army Remount Department get Rs. 30—50—70 as their graded pay while in the Civil Veterinary Department their compeers who possess exactly the same qualifications, get Rs. 60—75—90 ?

(2) Similarly will the Government please state if it is a fact that the Veterinary Inspectors in the Army Remount Department get Rs. 75—125 while in the Civil Veterinary Department they get Rs. 120—170 ?

(3) Is it also a fact that the graded pay of the Veterinary Deputy Superintendents in the Army Remount Veterinary Department and the Civil Veterinary Department is

250—750, respectively ?

(4) Is it also true that in the matter of travelling and daily allowances also the members of the Veterinary Branch of the Army Remount Department are worse off than their compeers in the Civil Veterinary Department ? Will the Government please lay on the table a statement showing the rates at which such allowances are allowed to the various officials in the two Departments ?

(5) If the answer to questions (1) to (4) be in the affirmative will the Government please state the reasons that have led to this disparity of conditions between the two cognate services ?

Mr. E. Burdon : (1), (2) and (3). The Government of India are not in possession of the details of the conditions of service in the subordinate grades of the Civil Veterinary Department. These vary in the different provinces. The rates of pay obtaining in the Army Remount Department have been correctly stated in parts 1, 2 and 3 of the question.

(4) For the reason which has been given, the Government are not in a position to make the comparison here suggested. Deputy Superintendents, Veterinary Inspectors and District Veterinary Assistants of the Army Remount Department draw the following fixed monthly allowances which are intended to cover actual expenses connected with their movements within the limits of their charges :

	Per mensem. Rs.
Deputy Superintendents	60
Veterinary Inspectors	45
District Veterinary Assistant	22-8-0

(5) As I have explained, Government are not in a position to verify the disparity which the Honourable Member alleges. In reply to a subsequent question I will explain what the present position is as regards the pay of the Veterinary Staff employed in the Army Remount Department.

Mr. Abdul Haye : Is it a fact that there are seven circles in the Army Remount Department out of which six are located in the Punjab ?

Mr. E. Burdon : I am afraid I cannot answer a question of that kind offhand. If the Honourable Member will give me notice I shall be very glad to answer.

STATUS OF DEPUTY SUPERINTENDENTS IN THE CIVIL VETERINARY DEPARTMENT AND THE ARMY REMOUNT DEPARTMENT.

1815. Mr. Abdul Haye : Is it a fact that the post of Deputy Superintendent in the Civil Veterinary Department is gazetted while that in the Army Remount Department is not ?

Mr. E. Burdon : Yes.

LIABILITY TO ACTIVE SERVICE OF MEMBERS OF THE VETERINARY BRANCH OF THE ARMY REMOUNT DEPARTMENT.

1816. Mr. Abdul Haye : Will the Government please state if it is a fact that the members of the Veterinary Branch of the Army Remount Department at the time of entering service are required to execute an agreement whereby they render themselves liable to enlist for war on the same pay, while no such agreement is demanded from the members of the Civil Veterinary Department ?

Mr. E. Burdon : Members of the Veterinary Branch of the Army Remount Department are not now required to execute such an agreement and all those subordinates who were enrolled and attested at the time they joined the Department have been released from such enrolment and attestation.

MEMORIAL FROM MEMBERS OF THE VETERINARY BRANCH OF THE ARMY DEPARTMENT REGARDING THEIR PAY AND ALLOWANCES.

1817. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Is it a fact that in the year 1921 the members of the Veterinary Branch of the Army Remount Department submitted memorials to the Government pointing out the disparity of conditions between the two services and praying for an increase in their pay and allowances, etc. ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, what action did the Government take in the matter ? If no action was taken during the last three years, will the Government please state the reasons for the same ?

Mr. E. Burdon : (a) Yes.

(b) The consideration of the question of revising the pay of Veterinary Assistants in the Army Remount Department has been delayed owing to the imperative necessity of first giving effect to the various measures of retrenchment recommended by the Indian Retrenchment Committee in respect of the Remount Department. It is hoped that a final decision in regard to these retrenchment measures will very soon be reached ; the question of revising the pay of these Veterinary Assistants will then be proceeded with.

PURCHASE AND BREEDING OF HORSES FOR THE INDIAN ARMY.

1818. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Will the Government please state what arrangements there existed before 1903, (when the Army Remount Department was first established) for the purchase and breeding of horses for the Indian Army ?

(b) What was the total expenditure per year incurred by the Government for purchasing and breeding horses before 1903 ?

(c) What yearly expenditure is incurred by the Government at present for the above purpose ?

(d) Whether the demand for horses for the Army has increased since 1903 ? If so, by how much ?

(e) Will the Government please state what was the total number of British Officers employed for this purpose before 1903 and what was their aggregate salary ?

Mr. E. Burdon : The production of horses for the Army is inseparable from the operations for the provision of mules and the reply to the Honourable Member's question which has, for the reason stated, been treated as applying to both horses and mules, is as follows :

(a) The answer to this question is necessarily very long and with your permission, Sir, I will furnish the Honourable Member separately with a statement which contains the information he requires.

(b) The total aggregate annual cost prior to 1903 of the Remount Department and of the Civil Veterinary Department which, at that time, controlled operations for breeding horses and mules for military purposes, amounted approximately to Rs. 50,13,450.

(c) The expenditure during 1924-25 is estimated at Rs. 79,40,760.

(d) Two statements giving the normal requirements of horses and mules for the years 1903 and 1924 are laid on the table.

(e) Twenty-one, drawing a monthly aggregate salary of Rs. 20,305.

Statements showing the normal requirements of horses, etc., for 1903 and 1924.

N.B.—Though the demands of silladar cavalry are included in the requirements of 1903, the State incurred no expenditure on their purchase, the horse being supplied by the soldier through regimental arrangements.

INDIANISATION OF THE ARMY REMOUNT DEPARTMENT.

1819. Mr. Abdul Haye: (a) Will the Government please state the total number of British officers now employed in the Army Remount Department and what is their aggregate salary ?

(b) How many out of the British officers employed in the Army Remount Department are merely attached officers and not on the permanent list and what is their aggregate pay ?

(c) Is it a fact that there is not a single Indian employed as an officer from the District Remount Officers up to the Director in the Administration Branch of the Army Remount Department ?

(d) Has the Government considered the desirability of Indianising this Department ? If not are the Government now prepared to consider this question at an early date ?

Mr. E. Burdon: (a) There are altogether 44 officers employed in the Remount service, including those officers who are employed in the Remount Directorate at Army Headquarters, and their aggregate salary amounts to Rs. 53,000 per mensem. Of this amount, however, Rs. 12,000 represents the army rank pay of rank and the regimental staff pay of 15 unseconded officers of the Indian cavalry who are attached to the Remount Department for duty.

(b) As already stated in reply to part (a) of this question, there are 15 British officers who are attached to the Remount Department for duty. Their aggregate monthly pay is Rs. 13,500, of which Rs. 12,000 is included in the cost of the units to which these officers belong as they are unseconded and therefore not replaced in their units.

(c) Although no Indian officers with the King's Commission are at present employed in the Army Remount Department, such officers, like all other officers of Indian cavalry units, are eligible for such employment provided they satisfy the conditions required, namely, that they must enter the army as combatant officers in the first instance and then have some years' experience of regimental life. The Indian officers holding the King's Commission at present in the Indian Army are young and have not yet obtained sufficient experience of regimental service.

There are 10 Indian officers with the Viceroy's Commission holding junior appointments in the Remount service.

(d) From the answer which I have just given to part (c) of the Honourable Member's question he will observe that Indian officers with the King's Commission are eligible for appointment to the Army Remount Department. No special measures for the Indianisation of this Department are contemplated.

REFUSAL OF A LICENSE TO MR. S. D. NADKARNI OF KARWAR TO POSSESS A SET OF WIRELESS TELEGRAPH APPARATUS.

1820. Mr. D. V. Belvi : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the editorials and letters published under the heading " Science and politics " in the Indian Social Reformer of Bombay in the issues of the 13th and 27th January 1923, 17th February 1923 and 7th and 21st July 1923 ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether Mr. S. D. Nadkarni of Karwar had applied on 19th March 1923 to the Director of Wireless, Simla, through the Government of Bombay, for the grant of a license to possess one set of wireless telegraph apparatus of the minimum available range and power for amateur purposes ?

(c) Are the Government of India aware that his application for license was rejected by the Director of Wireless without any reasons being assigned for so doing ?

(d) Are the Government aware that the Director failed to give the reason or reasons for his refusal, though Mr. S. D. Nadkarni requested him to do so in his letter, dated 26th June 1923 ?

(e) Will the Government of India be pleased to state whether the Director of Wireless refused to grant the license on his own initiative or under instructions from the Government of Bombay ?

(f) If the license was refused under instructions from the Government of Bombay, will Government be pleased to give the reason or reasons for not recommending the application for a grant of a license ?

(g) Will Government be pleased to state whether the withholding of the sanction was not due to the fact that the applicant was a Congressman and that he wore a Khadi-cap ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a), (b), (c) and (d). Yes.

(e) Licenses are issued only after receipt of the concurrence of the Local Government of the province in which the apparatus is to be installed. As the Local Government did not recommend the issue of a license in this case the Director of Wireless informed Mr. Nadkarni that it was regretted that his request for a license could not be complied with.

(f) The Local Government did not recommend the issue of a license, and stated that, the applicant did not possess the qualifications necessary for the grant of a license.

(g) No.

Sardar V. N. Mutalik : May I know what is the policy of Government with regard to education in wireless ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : That is a question which it would be very difficult to answer as an answer to a supplementary question just now.

Mr. M. A. Jinaah : Will the Honourable Member kindly say what are the qualifications necessary for the grant of a license ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : They are published, and I shall communicate them to the Honourable Member.

Dr. K. G. Lohokare : Is there any license given in the Bombay Presidency for educational purposes in wireless ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : That will appear from the answer to a question which my Honourable friend Mr. Belvi is going to ask me just now.

CONFISCATION OF SET OF WIRELESS TELEGRAPH APPARATUS BELONGING TO MR. KHANDUBHAI, A GRADUATE OF THE BOMBAY UNIVERSITY.

1821. Mr. D. V. Belvi : Will Government be pleased to state whether a set of wireless telegraph belonging to Mr. Khandubhai, a graduate of the Bombay University and son of the Honourable Mr. Lallubhai Samaldas, C.I.E., was confiscated by them ? If so, had the apparatus come in his possession before the wireless license rules were framed or after ? If it was after, were the rules made retrospective ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Government have no information regarding the alleged confiscation of the Wireless Set in question. If the Honourable Member will supply definite details the matter will be further investigated.

APPLICATIONS FROM COLLEGES TO POSSESS WIRELESS TELEGRAPH APPARATUS.

1822. Mr. D. V. Belvi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether any applications were made by any colleges affiliated to any Indian University for the issue of licenses to possess a wireless telegraph, since the framing of the wireless license rules, for teaching and experimental purposes ? If so, how many applications were made and by what colleges ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether all the applications were granted ? If not, how many were granted and why were the rest refused ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) Applications have been received on behalf of Colleges, or from Professors of Colleges, for instructional and experimental purposes and licenses have been issued to :

The Indian Institute of Science, Bangalore.

St. Joseph's College, Darjeeling.

Lucknow University.
Forman Christian College, Lahore.
Royal Institute of Science, Bombay.
Presidency College, Calcutta.
Aligarh Muslim University, Aligarh.
Dacca University, Dacca.
St. Xavier's College, Calcutta.
University College, Lahore.
Presidency College, Madras.

(b) All applications have been granted.

REFUSAL OF A LICENSE TO THE CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF SCIENCE TO INSTAL A WIRELESS TELEGRAPH APPARATUS.

1823. Mr. D. V. Belvi: Is it a fact that the Calcutta University College of Science applied for a license to instal a wireless telegraph apparatus for bona fide teaching and experimental purposes but the application was refused ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee: I am informed that no application has been received from the Calcutta University.

Dr. S. K. Datta: May I ask whether the circular issued by the Government of India, Department of Education, in the year 1913 or 1914 to the Universities instructing them that in the curriculum for Physics wireless telegraphy and wireless demonstrations should be omitted and instructing the University Boards to ensure that questions on wireless were not asked in the University question papers is still in force or not ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee: I really could not say. The Honourable Member has referred to a circular which was issued I may say in pre-historic days.

Dr. S. K. Datta: Those were not pre-historic days. I was a member of an Educational body that received that circular.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee: As I have stated, a large number of applications from various educational institutions have already been granted.

Dr. S. K. Datta: I am glad to see that a new spirit has come over the Government of India.

Dr. K. G. Lohokare: Are Government prepared to withdraw that circular now ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee: I am not aware that any such circular is in existence or is extant at the present time.

Mr. T. C. Goswami: Will you make the necessary research ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee: That question should be addressed to my Honourable Colleague.

RESTRICTIONS IMPOSED ON A MUHAMMADAN GENTLEMAN IN HIS EFFORTS TO INVENT AN INSTRUMENT FOR THE TRANSMISSION OF WIRELESS MESSAGES THROUGH WATER.

1824. Mr. D. V. Belvi: (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the comments in the issue of the "Amrita Bazar Patrika," dated 18th January 1923, (Bi-weekly edition) regarding the restrictions imposed upon an Indian Muhammadan gentleman of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh employed in the Government Telegraph Department in his efforts at the invention of an instrument for the transmission of wireless messages through water ?

(b) If so, are the allegations made in the said newspaper true ?

(c) If not, what are the facts according to the information of Government ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) Yes.

(b) No.

(c) I have nothing to add to the answers given to question No. 456 on the 5th March 1923 by Colonel Sir Sydney Crookshank in this House and to the answers given to question No. 191 on 21st March 1923 by the Honourable Sir Narasimha Sarma in another place.

WIRELESS LICENSES GRANTED TO INDIANS.

1825. Mr. D. V. Belvi : Will the Government of India be pleased to state how many Indians, other than Anglo-Indians, are to-day in possession of wireless licenses in this country ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Eighty-two.

RESTRICTIONS IMPOSED ON ENGLISH SUBJECTS WITH REGARD TO THE POSSESSION OF WIRELESS TELEGRAPH SETS.

1826. Mr. D. V. Belvi : Will the Government of India be pleased to state whether there are any restrictions imposed either by law or rules prohibiting the subjects in England from possessing a wireless telegraph set for amateur purposes or otherwise ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : The maintenance and working of wireless telegraphs in England is governed by the Wireless Telegraph Act, 1904, and rules made by the P. M. G., under which no person may establish, install or work any wireless telegraph set whether for amateur purposes or otherwise except under license from the Postmaster-General.

JUDGMENT OF MR. JUSTICE MCCARDIE IN THE NAIR-O'DWYER CASE.

1827. Haji S. A. K. Jeelani : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether their opinion has been invited by the Secretary of State for India on the judgment of Mr. Justice McCardie in the Nair versus O'Dwyer case ?

(b) If the answer is in the affirmative will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement of the views submitted to the Secretary of State ? If the answer is in the negative do the Government propose to repudiate Mr. Justice McCardie's judgment by reaffirming their views expressed on the Hunter Committee's Report ?

The Honourable Mr. Alexander Muddiman : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply I gave to Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer's question No. 1682.

HINDU-MUSLIM RIOTS.

1828. *Haji S. A. K. Jeelani : Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing (a) the number of Hindu-Muslim riots that have taken place from January last in those Provinces which are directly under the control of the Government of India, (b) the places where they have occurred, (c) their originating causes, (d) the steps taken by the Government to quell them, and (e) the number of deaths reported and registered in each riot including those caused by the shooting of the police ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The information is being obtained and will be laid on the table in due course.

APPOINTMENTS MADE IN THE VARIOUS DEPARTMENTS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA SINCE JANUARY 1924.

1829. *Haji S. A. K. Jeelani : Will the Government be pleased to state the number of applications received from qualified men for posts from January last and the number of appointments made in the various departments of the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I assume that the question refers to application for employment in the clerical establishment of the Government of India Secretariat. 41 such applications have been received since January last from educationally qualified candidates who had not passed the Staff Selection Board's examination. 31 appointments have been made during the same period from the Board's reserve of passed candidates. The majority of these were temporary appointments.

ADDITIONAL DUTY ON BOUNTY-FED ARTICLES.

1830. *Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state in how many cases from 1st April 1920 to 31st March 1924, His Excellency, the Governor-General in Council exercised his powers of levying additional import duty on bounty-fed articles under section 8-A of the Indian Tariff Act VIII of 1894 with details as to (i) the articles imported, (ii) the amount of additional duty, (iii) the names of countries from which the articles were imported or wherein they were manufactured ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to give similar information regarding the levy of special import duty on sugar under section 8-B of the Indian Tariff Act, 1894 ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : In no cases.

ACCESS TO HOWRAH RAILWAY STATION.

1831. *Mr. T. C. Goswami : (a) Are Government aware of the serious inconvenience to passengers at the Howrah railway station caused by the railway employees in charge of the gates keeping the entrance to the platforms as narrow as possible, thereby making crowding and jostling inevitable for all classes of passengers, and that these railway employees justify this by saying that they are under orders to do so ?

(b) Who has issued the order, what exactly is the order, and are Government prepared to see that this order is immediately revoked ?

(c) Are Government aware that sometimes bona fide passengers are not admitted into the platform a quarter of an hour before a train is timed to start, at Howrah ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a), (b) and (c). The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given in this Assembly on 23rd January, 1923, to (i) and (ii) of question No. 212.

MEMORIAL OF GAZETTED POSTMASTERS FOR IMPROVED PAY.

1832. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : (a) Is it a fact that gazetted postmasters in India and Burma submitted a memorial to the Government of India in August 1920 and again in September of the same year regarding the improvement of their pay as a result of the adverse economic conditions caused by the Great War ?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state what action was taken by them on these memorials ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) Yes.

(b) The prayers of the gazetted postmasters for a revision of their pay were carefully considered by Government and the decision arrived at was that while there was no justification for revising the pay of the Presidency Postmasters at Calcutta, Bombay and Madras and of the Postmaster, Rangoon, the pay of the remaining gazetted postmasters should be revised. This was accordingly done, and instead of the rates of pay being of local application as heretofore, all gazetted postmasters, except those at Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, Rangoon and Lahore were placed on personal pay. This revised system with the revised rates of pay was brought into effect from the 28th October 1921, the date of the issue of orders by Government.

GRANT TO GAZETTED POSTMASTERS OF THE CONCESSION OF COUNTING OFFICIATING SERVICE FOR INCREMENTS.

1833. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : (a) Is it a fact that the pay of the postmen, the clerical staff and the Superintendents, was improved retrospectively with effect from 1st December 1919, and that they were allowed to count officiating service for increments in the time-scale, while gazetted postmasters were not brought on a time scale until eleven months later, namely, until the 28th October 1921 and that they were denied the concession of counting officiating service for increments ?

(b) If the answer is in the affirmative will the Government be pleased to state why gazetted postmasters were not given any relief such as was granted to all other officers of the Department from 1st December 1919 and also denied the concession of counting officiating service ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) Yes. The pay of the subordinate Postal staff was revised by Government with effect from the 1st December, 1919, on the recommendation of the Postal Committee of 1920. A time-scale of Rs. 250—25—300—20—700 was introduced from the same date for Superintendents of Post Offices as a result of the recommendations of the Public Services Commission, 1912-1913, but the concession of counting officiating service for increments was allowed only from the 28th November, 1921, the date of the issue of orders.

The pay of the three grades of Gazetted Postmasters was revised by order of 28th October, 1921. The time-scale 350—650 was not sanctioned till 1st July, 1923.

(b) As already stated, the revision of the pay of Postal Superintendents, which was given effect to from 1st December, 1919, was the result of the recommendations of the Islington Commission. No similar recommendations were made by the Commission in the case of gazetted postmasters, the revision of whose pay was however considered on the receipt of petitions from them in August and September, 1920, and was sanctioned with effect from the 28th October, 1921, the date of the issue of the orders.

The pay of each officer in the revised scale was regulated under the ordinary rules of the Civil Service Regulations which, under the circumstance of this case, did not permit of the concession of counting officiating service.

TIME-SCALE FOR GAZETTED POSTMASTERS.

1834. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : (a) Is it a fact that the time-scale introduced for gazetted postmasters was felt by all postmasters as a retrograde step benefiting none, but adversely affecting many and that they memorialised the Government of India on the subject in December 1921 ?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state what action was taken by them on the memorials ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) The memorial of December, 1921, referred to by the Honourable Member did not refer to the time-scale, which was introduced for gazetted postmasters, except those at Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, Rangoon and Lahore, only with effect from the 1st July, 1923.

(b) Does not arise.

REVISION OF THE PAY OF PRESIDENCY POSTMASTERS AND THE POSTMASTER, RANGOON.

1835. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : (a) Is it a fact :

(i) that the pay of the three Presidency Postmasters and the Postmaster, Rangoon, was not revised as it was then advanced that the pay of corresponding officers of the Department, namely, Deputy Postmasters-General and Assistant Directors General was not going to be revised, and (ii) that the pay of the latter was improved subsequently while nothing has been done for the former ?

(b) If the reply is in the affirmative will the Government be pleased to state the reason for not improving the pay of the three Presidency Postmasters and the Postmaster, Rangoon, and do Government propose to consider the desirability of revising the pay of these officers similarly with retrospective effect ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) (i) Yes.

(a) (ii) No. The pay of Deputy Postmasters-General and Assistant Directors-General was not improved. It was merely converted from a graded scale to an equivalent time-scale in order to admit the Postal service to the benefits of the revised rules regarding officiating pay.

(b) Does not arise.

CLASSIFICATION OF POST OFFICES.

1836. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Will the Government be pleased to state the principles followed by them in classifying post offices as first and second class offices ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : A first class head office is one which is sufficiently important to justify being in charge of a gazetted postmaster on the scale of pay Rs. 350—650. The other head offices are called ' second class '.

GRANT OF GAZETTED RANK TO POSTMASTERS ON RS. 250.

1837. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Is it a fact that postmasters in India and Burma submitted a representation to the Government of India in December 1921, urging among other things that the gazetted rank in the Postmasters' cadre should commence from Rs. 250 as in the case of the Superintendents' cadre, and if so, will the Government be pleased to state what action was taken by them thereon ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Yes. The selection grade of Rs. 250—20—350 introduced by Government on the recommendation of the Postal Committee, 1920, for the subordinate Postal staff includes not only Postmasters but also officials of the clerical class, and Government did not consider that either clerks or Postmasters in this grade should be granted gazetted status.

CLASSIFICATION OF THE OOTACAMUND AND TRICHINOPOLY POST OFFICES AS SECOND CLASS OFFICES.

1838. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : (a) Is it a fact that post offices like Ootacamund and Trichinopoly which were treated as first class offices when the pay of the postmaster was only Rs. 150—200 are now treated as second class offices though the pay of the appointments has been raised to Rs. 250—350.

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons for this step ?

(c) Are the Government prepared to consider the desirability of placing all postmasters on Rs. 250 and above in the first class ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) and (b). A few head post offices were specially treated as first class although the pay of the postmasters was Rs. 150—200. In accordance, however, with the departmental rule adopted in 1907, head postmasters in or below the grade of Rs. 200—300, corresponding to the present grade of Rs. 250—350, are ranked second class.

(c) In the interests of economy and efficient administration it is necessary that the number of first class head offices, which are independent of the control of the Divisional Superintendent of post offices, should be strictly limited. It makes no difference whatever to the convenience of the public whether a head post office is first or second class. The Government of India, therefore, do not consider the arrangement suggested by the Honourable Member to be desirable.

PROMOTION OF GAZETTED POSTMASTERS TO SUPERIOR APPOINTMENTS.

1839. *Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar: (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether there is any order expressed or implied precluding the appointment of competent gazetted postmasters as Personal Assistants in the Circle Offices and also as Deputy Postmasters-General and Assistant Directors-General, who are at present recruited exclusively from the officials in the Superintendents' cadre ?

(b) If there is no such order, will the Government say how many of these appointments are at present held by officials from the postmasters' cadre.

(c) If there are none, will the Government give an assurance that they would examine the question and remedy the defect ?

The Honouroble Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) There is no order express or implied precluding the appointment of gazetted postmasters as Assistant Directors-General. The appointments of Deputy Postmasters-General are reserved for Superintendents of Post Offices in the same way as Presidency Postmasterships, and the Postmastership of Rangoon, are reserved for gazetted Postmasters. The appointments of Personal Assistants are included in the cadre of Superintendents.

(b) None, but there have been recent cases of men who had risen from Postmasters holding the position of Deputy Director General.

(c) This question was very carefully examined by me on a recent occasion. I found that fifty per cent. of Superintendents were selected from the subordinate staff many of whom were or would in time be postmasters. Men entering these grades have therefore a clear avenue to rise either to the posts of Deputy Postmasters-General through the posts of Superintendent or to the posts of Presidency Postmasters through the higher grades of Postmasters. Any other arrangement will lead to serious complications. It was therefore decided not to interfere with the present arrangements.

GRANT OF RENT-FREE QUARTERS TO POSTMASTER.

1840. *Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Will the Government be pleased 12 NOON. to state :

(1) The principles on which postmasters were granted rent and tax free quarters,

(2) Whether in fixing their pay, the fact that they have been granted free quarters was taken into account or in other words, would not a higher scale of pay have been fixed for them but for this concession ?

(3) Whether there is any intention on the part of the Government now to deviate from the accepted principles and make them pay rent or taxes, and

(4) If so, whether Government propose to consider the question of revising their pay to compensate their loss ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (1) A Postmaster who is provided with rent-free quarters on the post office premises is granted the concession in consideration of the fact that it is necessary for the proper discharge of his duties that he should reside on the premises. Such an official was exempted from payment of taxes in respect of his quarters so long as officials of other Government Departments in occupation of rent-free quarters were so exempted.

(2) No.

(3) Postmasters who are provided with quarters on the post office premises are already required to pay taxes at the rate of ½ per cent. of their pay subject to a maximum of Rs. 5 a month, but the question of calling upon them to pay rent has not been raised.

(4) Does not arise.

DISCONTENT AMONG OFFICERS IN THE POSTMASTERS' CADRE.

1841. *Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : (a) Are the Government aware that there is general discontent among officers in the postmasters' cadre on Rs. 250 and above running down to the rank and file of the clerical staff regarding pay, prospects and conditions of service of the officers in the cadre of postmasters on Rs. 250 and above ?

(b) If so, what steps do they propose to take to improve the pay, prospects and conditions of service of these officers ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) From the fact that towards the close of 1923 a memorial was submitted to His Majesty's Secretary of State for India by the All-India and Burma Postmasters' Association praying for the improvement of the pay and prospects of Postmasters in the grade of Rs. 250—350 and higher grades, Government have reason to believe that these officers are not satisfied with the existing rates of pay. No representations have, however, been received from them recently with regard to the conditions of their service.

(b) The memorial to the Secretary of State has been rejected by him. In the circumstances the Government of India do not propose to take further action.

RAILWAY DISASTER AT HARAPPA ON THE NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Sir, with your permission I should like to communicate to the House some further details which I have just received of the unfortunate accident at Harappa. I have just heard from the Agent of the North-Western Railway that owing to further deaths in hospital the total death from the accident are 105. The total casualties remain as before 202. I thought I had better place this information at the disposal of the House immediately.

REVISION OF RAILWAY COAL CONTRACTS MADE IN 1921.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Sir, I beg to put, with the consent of the Commerce Department, the following question :

(a) Will Government be pleased to state if any changes have been made either regarding quantities or rates in the contracts for coal made in 1921 by the then Mining Engineer to the Railway Board ?

(b) If the reply to the above be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the total direct saving to Government by such change ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I should like, if the House will permit me, to go rather beyond the limits of my Honourable friend's question in order to make the position clear.

At the beginning of the current year deliveries under the contracts for rail-borne coal made in 1921, by the advice of the then Mining Engineer to the Railway Board, were in arrears to the extent of rather over 2¼ million tons. Railways were well stocked with coal; they were liable under the contracts to take over four million tons this year at the rates fixed for this year in the contracts; they did not require any of the arrears; and the Railway Board were advised that under the terms of the contracts they were not obliged to take them. They, therefore, instructed the Chief Mining Engineer to cancel the arrears.

Representations were immediately received from the coal trade protesting against this action, and in consequence two Members of the Railway Board proceeded at once to Calcutta with the object of coming to an amicable solution. They and the present Chief Mining Engineer met the officials of the Indian Mining Association and Federation in conference at the beginning of July and arrival at the following arrangement:

(i) The cancellation of past arrears amounting, as I have said, to over 2¼ million tons of coal to stand;

(ii) Coal supplied under the contracts this year to be paid for at prices Rs. 2 less per ton than the contractual rates for Deshurgarh and Re. 1-4-0 less per ton than the contractual rates for coals of other descriptions.

(iii) Contractors accepting this arrangement to be given contracts for the requirements of railways in 1925-26 at rates four annas per ton less than the revised rates fixed for this year, and for quantities based on the quantities provided for in this year's contracts and determined in the following manner. Where a contractor was in no way in default, that is to say, where responsibility for the arrears of previous years could in no way be attributed to him his contract for 1925-26 is for the full contractual quantity for the current year; in other cases the contract for 1925-26 is for 75 per cent., 50 per cent., 25 per cent., or exceptionally nil, according to the measure of the contractor's responsibility for the default which has produced the arrears. The effect of this part of the arrangement is that we have contracted for rather over 3 million tons next year or about a million tons less than the contractual quantity for this year.

(iv) The contractual quantities for this and next year to be taken at the revised prices without cancellation of any arrears remaining to be delivered after the termination of each year.

The estimated direct saving to our revenues in the current year from this revision of the contracts by mutual arrangement is 65 lakhs.

All I have so far said applies only to the rail-borne contracts for coal made in 1921. At the instance of the Railway Board acting under the authority of the Government of India the contracts for sea-borne coal made in 1921 by Indian railways have been repudiated by the railways concerned, and as suits have been lodged against the repudiation and are still sub judice, I regret that I am unable to give the Honourable Member at present any further information with regard to the sea-borne contracts.

Mr. W. S. J. Willson : Have Government purchased any coal by private treaty since those negotiations referred to in July ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I think not, Sir, at any rate not for the railways who are concerned with the rail-borne contracts I have been mentioning. I understand that the Bengal-Nagpur Railway has lately called for tenders ; but it was not concerned with the contracts with which I have now been dealing.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Can the Honourable Member give a rough idea of the amount involved in the suits which are pending in Courts ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I should prefer not to, Sir.

UNREST AMONG WORKERS ON THE ASSAM TEA GARDENS.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Sir, I propose to ask a question of which I have given private notice.

(a) Will Government be pleased to state whether their attention has been drawn to the statements that have appeared in the press regarding the unrest amongst some workers on the tea gardens in Assam ?

(b) Will they also be pleased to state whether it is a fact

(i) that about 900 garden labourers in Assam are anxious for repatriation and that the Deputy Commissioner of the district affected has refused the application of some of these labourers to allow them to return home,

(ii) that a large number of labourers have already left their gardens and after eight days' march have now arrived at Jakhlabandha.

(iii) that six deaths have already taken place on account of starvation and disease amongst these labourers ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to take immediate steps to arrange at Government expense to repatriate these labourers ?

(d) Will they also be pleased immediately to make an inquiry into the causes of the discontent and take steps to remove it ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : The answer to part (a) of the question is " Yes ".

(b), (c), and (d). Government have asked for a report from the Government of Assam and will await the receipt of their reply.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether the Government will inform the House what the facts are as soon as they receive the reply ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : Yes, Sir, I shall do so.

THE LAND CUSTOMS BILL.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, I present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate, amend and extend the law relating to the levy of duties of customs on articles imported or exported by land from or to territory outside British India, with the Bill as amended.

INTERIM REPORT OF THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir I lay on the table the interim report of the Public Accounts Committee on the accounts of 1922-23.

INTERIM REPORT

OF

THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE ON THE ACCOUNTS

OF

I.—INTRODUCTORY.

1. In this report we deal with the accounts of the year 1922-23, the second year after the introduction of the Reforms and the second year for which the accounts of the voted expenditure of the Government of India have been brought to the scrutiny of a Committee of the Legislative Assembly.

2. The report of the last Committee brought to light certain defects and included various suggestions for improvement; but it could not have any effect on the accounts before us, as it was published in July 1923, three months after the close of the year under review at present. It is not surprising therefore that we have come across a number of the defects already pointed out, but except in those cases in which it was deemed clearly necessary to emphasize the remarks of the previous Committee, we have not referred specifically to them, as we trust that they will not recur in the future. Our report must, however, be considered as supplementary in many respects to last year's report.

3. In considering the Appropriation Reports this year, we had the benefit of the assistance of the Auditor-General and of the Accountants-General responsible for these reports, namely, the Accountants-General, Central Revenues, Railways and Posts and Telegraphs.

II.—EXCESS OVER VOTED GRANTS.

4. The total amount of grants voted by the Assembly for the expenditure (both capital and revenue) of the year 1922-23 stood originally at Rs. 144,41,32,000; the final grants as voted in March, amounted to Rs. 117,98,27,150; and the total expenditure for the year out of these grants was Rs. 113,27,48,503. The expenditure was thus over 31 crores less than the original grant and about 4¾ crores less than the final.*

5. We have examined carefully the causes of the large variation between the original grant and the actual expenditure, as we thought it desirable to pay particular attention to the possibility of over-budgeting under the present system, a point to which we shall revert later in our report. The variation, however, is easily explained. Almost exactly half is due to decisions taken in the course of the year which had the effect of transferring expenditure from voted to non-voted heads. The main cause was the transfer of the lump grant for 'Exchange' to the various heads of expenditure, with the result that the loss on exchange attributable to non-voted heads was treated as non-voted. This accounts for no less than 14¾ crores—the balance of ¾ crore is due to the fact that the expenditure on Bangalore, and the assignments to the Provincial Governments of Burma and Assam for the cost of Frontier Police, for which provision had originally been made by the Assembly, were treated as non-voted on account of their being political in nature. The rest is mainly accounted for by the savings in expenditure (both

*These figures refer to voted grants only. The final figures of expenditure both voted and non-voted as compared with (a) Original (b) Revised Estimates are as follows :—

	Revenue. Rs.	Capital. Rs.
Original Estimate	220,57,90,000	33,47,69,000
Revised Estimate	220,42,35,900	24,20,39,000
Actual Expenditure	218,96,10,359	20,96,08,962

capital and revenue) in Railways and Posts and Telegraphs. There was an underspending of about 2 crores in the Railway grant, which corresponded to the fall in revenue, owing to trade depression; the saving in Posts and Telegraphs was about 68 lakhs and was mainly due to a policy deliberately pursued in view of the financial position of spending as little as possible, even though it meant in many cases merely postponing of inevitable expenditure. As regards capital expenditure, the position was the same. Railways were unable to spend the 30 crores provided for owing to a variety of causes which are now fairly familiar and expenditure fell short of original anticipations by about 11¼ crores. The underspending under Posts and Telegraphs was about 80 lakhs—due partly to the drastic curtailment of construction and partly to a large receipt from the sale of property which was taken in reduction of expenditure. It is clear that such underspending as was not due merely to a change in classification can be accounted for as either inevitable, as in the case of Railways, or as due to a deliberate resolve to restrict expenditure as in the case of Posts and Telegraphs. This curtailment of expenditure may perhaps be regarded as the result of the shadow cast by the Inchcape Committee which sat at the end of the year and is observable in other departments also, as may be seen from the large saving in actual expenditure even as compared with the Revised Estimates.

6. As compared with the final grants passed in March 1923, which were based on the Revised Estimates, and were 26½ crores less than the original grants, there was a total saving in expenditure of Rs. 4,70,78,647. This is mainly explained by the lapses under Railways (capital 273 lakhs; revenue 18 lakhs) and Posts and Telegraphs (capital 45 lakhs: revenue 30 lakhs). A sum of 50 lakhs which had been kept as a reserve provision under 'Exchange' also lapsed at the end of the year. The other variations are of comparatively minor importance.

7. There have been, however, excesses under 23 individual demands aggregating in all Rs. 19,09,207, for which an excess vote of the Assembly is required. We give below a table detailing the excesses:—

Expenditure charged to Revenue—	Rs.	Remarks.

8. The explanation of most of the excesses is, as will be seen from the above, the practice that obtained in the year under review of basing the final grants for the year on the revised estimates of expenditure prepared by the Finance Department in order to arrive at an approximate idea of the total results of the year's working over all the heads of expenditure. As a whole, the revised estimates proved indeed to have over-estimated the expenditure during the year by over 4 crores; but in their distribution over different heads of expenditure voted and non-voted, there were naturally some cases in which they proved too low. We are glad to note that, as a result of the recommendations of the Public Accounts Committee in their last report, the system has been changed. Consequently, in future years, we shall not have this source of excess.

9. As to the other items where excesses have occurred, the excesses under 'Mines' and 'Census' showed that the central control of expenditure was insufficient. We were similarly struck by the absence of any proper system of control from headquarters over the grants made for local areas beginning (in the year 1922-23) with North-West Frontier Province and ending with Bangalore, so much so that it was almost a matter of surprise that the total grants were exceeded only in Delhi, Rajputana and Central India. We could not get a fully satisfactory explanation of these excesses from the representatives of the Departments of the Government of India who control the administration of these areas, chiefly because they were themselves, not unnaturally, ignorant of the details of the expenditure. We were informed that the system had since been improved; but we would suggest that Government should take steps to study thoroughly the question of devising adequate checks against such excesses in future.

10. Before leaving this part of the subject, we feel it necessary to draw attention to certain mis-classifications that have been brought to our notice in the appropriation reports—as a result of which expenditure that ought to have been accounted for as 'voted' expenditure has been shown as 'non-voted' and vice versa...As instances, we would refer to page 15 of the Appropriation Report of the Accountant General, Punjab (1922-23) in connection with the expenditure of the North-West Frontier Province where he says "The excesses under these heads (41—Civil Works) are mainly due to the erroneous adjustment of charges amounting to Rs. 3,49,127 under 'voted' instead of 'non-voted'. Again in page 47 of the Appropriation Report of the Accountant General, Posts and Telegraphs, appears the remark "The excess (Rs. 30,190) is mainly due to a mis-classification between voted and non-voted expenditure. The pay of a Director, Telegraph Engineering, which is subject to the vote of the Assembly has been classified under non-voted expenditure". To take a third instance, in page 250 of the Appropriation Report of the Accountant General, Central Revenues, is shown as non-voted an item of expenditure amounting to Rs. 309 which is stated to represent the cost of a first class passage of an officer from Bombay to Mombassa. So far as we can see, this ought to have been taken as 'voted' expenditure, and if so, would have gone to swell the excess under Grant No. 36—Miscellaneous for which an excess vote is necessary. We mention these instances to show how important, from the point of view of parliamentary control, is a proper classification of these charges in the accounts, for expenditure on any voted head in excess of grants voted by the Assembly cannot be ascertained and may sometimes escape notice altogether if some votable expenditure is by mistake classified under 'non-voted'. We recognize that it is sometimes difficult to determine whether a particular class of expenditure is voted or non-voted, but in view of the importance of this form of mis-classification we trust that the Government of India and the Auditor General will devise some method by which it may be avoided.

11. We also desire to emphasise the importance of correct classification generally. We understand that the Auditor General has put forward a suggestion that the drawing officer should record on the bills presented by him at the treasury the classification of the expenditure to meet which he is drawing the money. We recommend that this suggestion be adopted.

12. In addition to the excesses over grants above-mentioned in the actual expenditure (capital and revenue) of the year, there is an excess of 74½ lakhs under the head 62, Interest-free advances, where—

	Rs.
the original grant was	12,06,37,000
the final grant was	10,31,12,000
and the actual expenditure was	11,05,61,592

The actual expenditure was a crore below the original grant and the technical excess must in the present case also be attributed to the fact that the revised estimates proved too low. The actual excess occurs under the head 'advances repayable' and is explained* as due partly, as last year, to the system of accounting in the Army Department and partly to heavier advances being made to contractors. As the grant voted by the Assembly is a gross grant and recoveries are shown as receipts, the excesses under this head are only nominal, being counterbalanced by excess receipts.

13. With these remarks we formally recommended that the Assembly assent to an excess grant for 1922-23 which the Governor General in Council will place before them for the following sums in respect of the heads referred to in the preceding paragraphs :—

	Rs.
Expenditure charged to revenue	18,83,988
Expenditure charged to capital	25,219
Disbursements of loans and advances	74,49,592

14. Under the terms of our appointment we are required to bring to the notice of the Assembly every re-appropriation from one grant to another grant. We have noticed† in the course of our examination of the Appropriation Reports that the Foreign and Political Department sanctioned in two cases such re-appropriations. One was from savings in Grant No. 46—North-West Frontier Province to Grant No. 50—Ajmer-Merwara (both voted heads), and the other from a non-voted head 29—Political to the voted Grant No. 50—Ajmer-Merwara. These appear, somewhat to our surprise, not to have been objected to by the audit officer concerned. The re-appropriations were not, however, effective, as the grants voted by the Assembly in March were necessarily taken as the final grants, and all re-appropriations were ipso facto cancelled. We desire to emphasise the fact that grants voted by the Assembly can be added to only by the Assembly, and that any transfers to a grant from another grant, or from a non-voted head are invalid unless voted by the Assembly.

III.—GENERAL.

15. In commencing this part of our report, where we deal with the general questions that have come under our consideration, we desire to express our gratification at the fact that the Government of India have given effect already to most of the recommendations made in the last report of the Public Accounts Committee. These recommendations were made as we have already pointed out long after the expenditure which we have had to examine this year had been incurred; and the resolution* of the Government of India dealing with it was issued in January 1924. The effect can therefore be seen only when the next year's appropriation reports are ready if even then. We have no doubt, however, that a considerable improvement will be visible in the appropriation accounts for 1923-24.

16. It has been brought to our notice that the Railway Board, in a memorandum on the separation of the Railway from the general Finances have interpreted one of the remarks† in the last report in a sense which we feel sure was far from the intention of the Committee responsible for the report. The remark was as follows :—" It is not quite clear why a preliminary allocation of the amount for which the Railway Department had decided to place a supplementary demand before the Assembly was not made earlier and communicated to the Railways in anticipation of the sanction of the Assembly to the grant ". The Railway Board conclude from this that ' the Public Accounts Committee have censured the Railway Department for not ignoring the budget '. We wish to make it clear that there was, and is, no intention to suggest that as a matter of practice, the Railway Board, or any other department, should be encouraged to incur expenditure in anticipation of the sanction of the Assembly. What the Committee intended was that the Railway Board should have decided on a preliminary allocation of the grant between railways beforehand, without waiting till the Assembly had voted the total grant, so that there might be no delay in making the allocation as soon as the grant had been passed. Had this been done no technical excesses due to the failure of the Railway Board to distribute the grant under different units need have occurred. As a general principle, the Committee wish to emphasise again the importance of impressing upon the actual disbursing officers the absolute necessity of obtaining funds from the Assembly before incurring expenditure on voted heads.

17. In connection with the machinery for ensuring proper control of expenditure, we are glad to know that Government are taking steps to make a particular officer responsible for the total expenditure on a particular grant. As we have indicated in previous paragraphs, we have come across cases which suggested that such control had hitherto been far from effective.

18. There were three points referred to in paragraphs 20, 21 and 22 of the last report about which the Committee did not come to any definite conclusion. We have considered them with reference to the views of the Government as expressed in paragraphs 9—11 of their Resolution* No. 37-A. of 15th January 1924 and, in connection with the splitting up of the Railway and Posts and Telegraphs votes, have had the advantage of consulting the Financial Commissioner, Railways and Financial Adviser, Posts and Telegraphs. In regard to this question, Mr. Parsons told us that the Railway Board were at present considering the desirability of further sub-division of the railway vote into such subjects as general administration, maintenance, operating expenses, programme revenue, suspense, etc. We understand that the question has been before the Committee for the separation of Railway from general finance. We hope that some solution which will have the effect of increasing parliamentary control over this grant can be arrived at in the near future.

19. The question of splitting up the Posts and Telegraphs votes further is of comparatively minor importance, and we understood from the Financial Adviser (Mr. Ryan) that the accounts of this Department were in the process of being commercialised, and any change in the form of the demands might accentuate their difficulties. We have therefore decided to postpone consideration of the general question for the present, but we are glad to learn that the accounts will show the revenue and expenditure of the Postal, Telegraph, and Telephone Departments separately.

20. As regards the question of making the appropriation accounts more elaborate, we understand that the Auditor General has already placed an officer on special duty to go thoroughly into the question and that this officer's report may be expected to be available for consideration by the Public Accounts Committee next year. In the circumstances we make no specific recommendations at present, but we shall be glad if the Auditor General will arrange, in cases where grants for large amounts are involved (e.g., the head ' Direction ' under ' Salt ') that a sub-table showing the variations under the more important items making up these grants is given in the Appropriation Report.

*Appendix XIII.

† Para. 38 of the Interim Report.

21. We now come to the important question of the powers of executive officers of re-appropriation within a vote. We are not convinced that the decision of the Government of India in paragraph 9 of their resolution goes far enough. It is common ground that very frequent use of the powers of re-appropriation is undesirable in itself and that the details of the budget should within reasonable limits be adhered to by all subordinate authorities. We do not wish to suggest that all powers of re-appropriation except within 'primary units of appropriation' should be withdrawn, for we feel there is much force in the view expressed by Mr. McWatters that if re-appropriation is not allowed within reasonable limits, there would be a tendency for each Department to leave a margin in estimating its requirements and that the cumulative effect of these concealed reserves might be considerable. We think however that it is open to question whether stricter rules should not be framed as to the limits within which re-appropriations should be permissible without prior consultation with the Finance Department, and that any cases in which the powers of re-appropriation are in his opinion being unduly applied should be carefully brought to notice by the Auditor General.

22. The question of over-budgeting, is, as pointed out by Mr. McWatters, intimately connected with the question of re-appropriations, and, in view of the extraordinarily large variation between the total of the original grants and the actual expenditure of the year, we investigated the question thoroughly.

23. In paragraph 5 above, we have given explanations of these variations in the total; numerous lapses in minor heads that confronted us in the course of our scrutiny of the Appropriation reports can very probably be, in the majority of cases, explained by the fact that the spirit of retrenchment, so commendable in itself, had taken possession of disbursing officers in general. Mr. McWatters has also assured us that under the present system of framing the budget, the risk of over-budgeting is very slight. We feel, however, that we cannot, from the accounts of a single year which moreover was far from normal, express any confident opinion on the question. We trust that the Finance Department though considering the present system 'completely watertight' are fully alive to the risks of over-budgeting and will exercise a watchful care over the estimates as a whole in this respect.

24. In connection with another point which was raised in last year's report* by the Public Accounts Committee, viz., the necessity for separate grants for expenditure in England, we have gone carefully into the question of the preparation of the Demands as a whole with Mr. McWatters, whose assistance and counsel we gratefully acknowledge. We entirely agree with him that in considering the form in which the Demands should be presented, it is desirable to start with the general principle that there should ordinarily be one controlling officer for a grant. Applying this principle to the demands for territorial areas, like Baluchistan, it is easy to see what heads should be excluded from the grant in respect of each area. All expenditure incurred in these areas under the control of outside authorities, e.g., the Central Board of Revenue (Customs, Taxes on Income, Salt, Opium, Stamps), the Controller of the Currency (Currency), the Controller of Printing (Stationery and Printing) should be shown under the respective grants for those heads. Similarly such heads as interest, where also the head of the administration cannot exercise any control should be left out, and the demand for each territorial area should include only items of strictly local interest corresponding, in some measure, to provincial items of expenditure in the case of Governors' Provinces. Such would be General Administration, Forest, Education, Police, Medical and the like.

25. The above arrangement has this drawback that it will not enable the total cost of the Administration to be included in one demand. We consider however that all that is necessary is that it should be possible to find out the total expenditure on any territorial account from the Book of Demands for grants at a glance. This object can be easily achieved by adopting the expedient suggested by Mr. McWatters of showing as a footnote to the demand the expenditure incurred in that area on each of the several heads which are shown elsewhere together with a comparison of the previous year's figures.

26. Similar arrangements can be made in the grants for 'Expenditure in England.' We agree that it would not be practicable to abolish these grants altogether, and incorporate the various items included in them under the corresponding Indian grants. Moreover, we consider it desirable at present to retain a system which effectually prevents transfer of funds from Expenditure in India to Expenditure in England and vice versa. Again, we recognise that it is essential for administrative purposes that the funds placed at the High Commissioner's disposal for sundry purposes, should not be, as it were, kept in watertight compartments as would be the effect if they were in separate grants. In a very real sense, the expenditure is under his control and he should have like other authorities powers of reappropriation within reasonable limits. It is desirable however that large items like the expenditure on Currency Stores should not be retained in this demand which should so far as we can see include only expenditure on minor stores, leave salaries, and such items of purely English origin as expenditure incurred on Establishments in England.

27. Another point connected with the demands is that of ensuring that in the case of grants like Stamps and Stationery and Printing where recoveries of large amounts are involved, both the gross and net expenditure come under the control of the Assembly. At present the grant is a net grant, and if the recoveries are more than are anticipated, the gross amount which the Assembly intended to grant for the total expenditure can be exceeded without any technical breach of the rules. To prevent the possibility of expenditure of this sort without the sanction of the Assembly, we consider that it would be desirable to obtain a grant for the gross expenditure in all cases as well as for the net expenditure. If any fall in recoveries occurs which has the effect of increasing the net expenditure, a supplementary grant should be obtained from the Assembly.

28. This brings us to the general question of whether these recoveries should be shown on the receipts side of the accounts, or as at present as deductions of expenditure on the disbursements side. This may be taken as part of the general question whether revenue and expenditure should be shown as gross or net in the accounts for a similar difficulty occurs in the case of the Commercial Departments like Railways where at present the accounts show the net revenue, after deducting the working expenses of the undertaking.

29. We print as appendix X to this report a memorandum on the above subject which was presented to us by the Finance Department. We have not had time to discuss this question, but propose to deal with it in a later report.

30. Another very important question that came to our notice in considering the Railway Appropriation report was in connection with the purchase of stores in England. The Assembly votes in March the amount expected to fall due for payment for stores in the course of the next financial year; but, in many cases, orders for these stores have to be placed long in advance, and without the sanction of the Assembly. This practice in effect commits the Assembly to provide a certain sum in future years to pay for these stores. At present we understand the Railway Department obtains from the Finance Department what is technically called 'an advance grant'. This is not really a grant in the sense of an appropriation; it is only an assurance from the Finance Department that it will place before the Assembly when the time comes a demand for the sum in question and it only ensures that the Railway Board does not send indents without the knowledge of the Finance Department. In other words, there is treasury control, but no parliamentary control.

31. We considered various methods of bringing this under the control of the Assembly but could not find any suitable alternative. We think that from the fact that the Assembly votes grants from year to year for Railways, the executive is entitled to assume that they intend that Railways should be carried on, and, after reviewing the position and taking stock of the stores in hand and the uses to be made of them, to take the necessary steps for the purpose in the belief that their action would be ratified by the provision of funds at least to the extent to which orders had been placed already. This ought to be accepted, we think, as a working convention, but, if a regular Railway Finance Committee is appointed it would in our opinion be desirable for the Railway Board to get the concurrence of that Committee before approaching the Finance Department. The Assembly cannot of course delegate its powers of appropriation to any Committee, but it can reasonably be expected that it would not ordinarily hesitate to ratify the decision of a Committee selected by itself.

32. We now turn to some of the comparatively minor points of general interest that were brought to notice in the course of our scrutiny of these reports. One of the most important is the part that accounts adjustments play in causing excesses over grants. When the adjustments are made in the course of the year, no excesses need take place, except by reason of absence of touch between the audit and administrative authorities. We trust that this defect, traces of which we noticed in the accounts for 1922-23, no longer exists. But, in India, the accounts of a year are kept open for adjustments till a long time after the close of the year, and it is difficult to hold administrative authorities definitely responsible for excesses due to such adjustments. We think however that excesses of this sort can be prevented to a great extent if the following principles are observed :—

(a) When the budget is being framed, suitable provision should always be made for anticipated liabilities. In illustration of this we would draw attention to the excess under the head 'Police' in grant* No. 52 Rajputana which was due to the adjustment of about Rs. 57,000 on account of arrears of rent payable to the Rajputana-Malwa Railway for Railway quarters since 1919-20.

(b) Items should not ordinarily be charged in the first instance to a suspense head merely for want of information as to whether the charge is to be borne by the Central Government or a Provincial Government. We understand that it is the rule that expenditure incurred in any year is brought to account and charged to a service head. We think the rule should always be followed, so that, even if there is any doubt as to the ultimate incidence of the charge, it should be debited to the Government incurring the expenditure pending a final decision, the amount being if necessary recovered in a later year from the Government which was actually liable.

(c) As far as possible, it should be settled, before any expenditure is incurred, which Government should bear the cost. In the accounts for 1922-23 we came across a curious instance of expenditure amounting to Rs. 7,060, on a Committee appointed early in 1922 by the Government of Bombay in connection with country craft registration and measurement rules. This was treated in the accounts as Central expenditure as it related to a Central subject ; but no provision could be made for the expenditure as the Government of India first learnt of it in December 1923.

33. A case† has been brought to our notice where a clerk was granted leave on average pay for 14 months. This seems to have been in excess of that allowed under the rules, which we gather are not too easy of comprehension. We understand that leave on average pay for 9 months and 2 days was admissible in this particular case, and that ordinarily, on medical certificate, leave on average pay for 8 months would be admissible. This shows, it seems to us, the necessity of again drawing attention to the recommendations of the Incheape Committee with reference to the desirability of amending the leave rules which seem to be unnecessarily complicated. We understand that the Government have the question of revision of these rules under their consideration and we trust that the decision will be expedited.

34. The Auditor General has brought to our notice the fact that in the year under review, there was an increase in the number of defalcations and irregularities in the civil and military departments. We draw attention to this, in order to give expression to our opinion that the value of proper local inspections by the administrative and audit authorities should not be under-estimated and that economies resulting in the reduction of such inspection tend to defeat their own object.

35. A suggestion has been put before us that it is desirable that there should be an inventory of all Government property—buildings, furniture and the like—so that the total value of Dead Stock in the possession of Government can be arrived at at least approximately. We hope the suggestion will be carefully considered by the Government, as also the question of the adequacy of the existing system of checking Dead Stock Registers.

IV.—PARTICULAR ACCOUNTS.

Irrigation.

36. We find‡ that owing to the system of distribution of charges on account of establishment and tools and plant between Civil Works and Irrigation, an excess may occur under one of the grants, by the portion of these charges debitable to this grant being in excess of anticipations, though the total charge for establishment and tools and plant over the combined grants may be well within the sanctioned amount.

---

* Page 181, A. G. C. R.'s Appropriation Report.

† Audit Report of the A. G. C. R.

‡ Page 38, Accountant General, Central Revenues' Appropriation Report.

We understand that the Auditor General is submitting proposals to Government in order to secure a better control of expenditure and is suggesting separate grants for establishment and tools and plant. We have not been able to discuss his detailed proposals and cannot therefore give a definite opinion on them at present.

Education.

37. The excesses under this head are due largely to the fact that anticipations in regard to recoveries from the Rajkumar College, Rajkot, and the Aitchison College, Lahore, were not realized. We understand that, though the only liability that has been undertaken by Government is the definite subvention promised, the practice is that the total expenditure is met initially by Government and all but the fixed grant recovered from the Colleges later. We do not consider it proper that, when the Assembly sanctions a definite amount for the purpose, the Government should spend a much larger amount in the hope (not always realised) of recovering the amount spent in excess of the grant; and if the practice is to be continued, we think that the Assembly should be invited to sanction the gross expenditure. But we do not recommend this course in these cases. We are of opinion that either the practice of meeting the expenditure initially should be abandoned, or steps should be taken to ensure recoveries being made in advance.

Census.

38. The expenditure against this grant seems to indicate some insufficiency of proper control at headquarters and absence of touch between the audit and administrative authorities.

39. We suggest that in cases where non-recurrent expenditure for a particular object continues over more than a year, the appropriation accounts should contain a statement comparing the total expenditure from the beginning of the period with the total sanctioned grants. Examples where a comparison would be useful, apart from this vote, are such items of expenditure as the visit of the Prince of Wales, Commissions of Enquiry, etc.

Central India.

40. We notice that the excesses are mainly due to revision of pay with retrospective effect and to the insufficient provision made for it. We hope that the first cause will not be operative in future as Government have already issued instructions* that retrospective effect to revisions of pay should not be given except in special circumstances. As to the second, we trust that all disbursing officers are by now aware† of the paramount necessity of obtaining grants sufficient to cover the voted expenditure which may be incurred within the year.

Railways.

41. We were interested in the statistics given in para. 18 of the Appropriation Report of the Accountant General, Railways, showing the percentage ratio of working expenses to gross earnings in individual Railways in the years 1921-22 and 1922-23. We think it would be useful if we could have similar statistics with regard to the more important minor heads under the head 'Working Expenses,' so as to enable a comparison to be made between particular Railways in particular respects. The Auditor General has promised, if possible, to include further statistics on the above lines in future reports.

42. The other point to which we wish to draw special attention in this part of our report is the alarming increase‡ in payment of compensation claims by the East Indian Railway for goods lost or damaged. The amount increased from 27 lakhs the previous year to 53 lakhs in 1922-23.§ This increase though partly due to payment of arrears is undoubtedly a serious matter, specially as there is little doubt that even these large amounts paid as compensation are far below the actual loss to the public by pilfering, etc. We understand that a special staff is being employed to deal with this, but it is too early to say what will be the results of the change.

Posts and Telegraphs.

43. The Auditor General has brought to our notice that a sum of about 17 lakhs representing the claim of the Government of India against the Iraq Administration for 1920-21 has been outstanding since 1921. We were informed later by the Accountant General, Posts and Telegraphs, that payment has provisionally been made

* Para. 12 of Finance Department Resolution No. 37-A., dated the 15th January 1924.

† Para. 8, ibid.

‡ Para. 19, Audit Report of Accountant General, Railways.

recently. We agree with the Auditor General in suggesting that the question of claiming interest for the period for which it was outstanding should be considered by Government.

44. In page 25 of the Appropriation Report of the Accountant General, Posts and Telegraphs, we came across a curious saving of a lakh which is explained as follows :

> "At the time of the annual verification of stores by actual count there is always the probability of a small discrepancy between the actual count and the book balance. The difference is written off to 'Stores' as stock adjustment. The estimated debit on this account was Rs. 20,000, whereas the actual turned out to be a credit to the extent of Rs. 82,000."

This matter is being further investigated, but it is a reasonable inference from the statements made to us that the previous stock-takings had been very faulty. We have been assured by the Director General that he is taking steps to improve the system of verifications.

45. We discussed at length with the Director General the causes of the fall in postal revenue in 1922-23. It is difficult to determine whether the fall was due mainly to the increased rates of postage or the general depression in trade and we have been unable to come to a conclusion in the matter. We suggest that Government should investigate the question departmentally, for we feel sure that it will be extremely useful if any reliable data could be collected to throw light on the effect on revenue resulting from these causes separately.

46. Another question that we discussed with the Director General was the possibility of reducing the superior staff in his department, for some of us feel that retrenchment has left them practically untouched and has spent its force on the rank and file. There is force in what he has said about the impossibility of reduction of officers proportionately to the reduction in staff, but we are of opinion, specially in view of the recommendations of the Retrenchment Committee, that the matter requires further investigation.

Military.

47. It has been brought to our notice by the Auditor General that under arrangements in force prior to 1st April 1923 no charge was made by the Army to other departments in respect of stores issued by the former and similarly no debit was raised by other departments against the Army for supply of stores, but, as a result of the recommendation made by the Retrenchment Committee, it has now been ruled that when stores were issued by the Army to other departments, a debit should be raised against the department concerned. It appears that there is at present no corresponding liability on the Army and that when it receives stores, e.g., stationery, etc., it receives them free of charge. We consider that this system is prima facie incorrect and suggest that the question of having the arrangements between the Army and other departments put on a reciprocal basis should be considered by the Government of India.

Conclusion.

48. In conclusion, we desire to add that we have dealt in the preceding paragraphs only with the more important points that have come to our notice in the course of our examination of the appropriation accounts of the year 1922-23. There are certain other points of minor importance which have come under our consideration, but which we have not dealt with specifically in the report. Our opinions thereon will be found in the minutes of our meetings which are appended to this report and should be considered as part of it.

PRESEN[illegible]TION OF THE REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

Mr. J. W. Bhore (Secretary, Department of Education, Health and Lands) : Sir, I beg to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1923, for certain purposes.

THE EXTERNAL CAPITAL COMMITTEE.

ELECTION OF MEMBERS.

Mr. President : I have to announce that, as a result of the ballot held yesterday, the following Members have been elected to serve on the External Capital Committee :

Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer,
Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, and
Mr. V. J. Patel.

RESOLUTION RE RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE LEE COMMISSION—contd.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney (Nominated : Anglo-Indians) : Sir, with your permission and with the indulgence of the House, I desire to seize this opportunity of presenting and discussing the amendment I have presented as also to remark on one other part of the Lee Commission's Report. If you will allow me, Sir, to combine both my remarks, I shall be very happy and grateful. The first matter to which I wish to refer is the Chapter in the Report of the Royal Commission on Indianisation, and I crave the indulgence of both my Indian brethren and my European Colleagues as also of the Government if in what I am about to say I may appear to stray from the main issues at stake in the deliberations of this House. Believe me, Sir, I have no desire to do so, but the issues at stake in Indianisation of the Services are of such vital importance to the community I represent, that I feel I would be failing in my duty if I did not voice their opinion and obtain a definite answer from Government. In the recommendations by the Lee Commission on Indianisation of the Services there is a studied absence of any mention of the words " Domiciled Community ". If may be this Commission did not include this matter in the terms of its reference though I tried to Show its importance and correlation when I gave evidence before it. But the reference made yesterday in this House by the Honourable the Home Member so far as the Muhammadan community and Indianisation was concerned emboldens me to refer to this matter, and as a representative of the community, which has played a not unimportant part in India, I do so and wish to ask what position does it occupy in either of the two cadres, " European " or " Indian ". The Government will tell me, as they always have, that, as a Statutory Native of India I am included with Indians. I expect this reply from the Government, but I regret to say I place very little value on it. As a Statutory Native of India, I have been told ad libitum, I am entitled in all matters to the same claims and privileges as my Indian brethren. I wish I were, because then I would be getting my legitimate share in Indianisation to-day. But I find, Sir, that although I am called and officially classed as a Statutory Native of India, I am not treated in the same cadre as are Indians (A Voice : " Treated by whom ? ") If you will kindly let me have a little time, I will tell you. I shall place before this House specific cases showing that I have not been treated in the same cadre as ' Indians '. Even though Government tell me I am a Statutory Native of India, I cannot understand the omission of the Status of the Domiciled Community in the Lee Commission's Report on Indianisation, and it is with a desire to bring it before this Honourable House for its sympathetic consideration, that I have gone, if I may say, in a way astray from the main points at issue in to-day's debate. To prove that what I say is undeniably true, and that I am not treated in either of the categories " Europeans or Indians " in Indianisation of the Services indeed—to prove that Indianisation of the Services means to me " ex-Anglo-Indianisation of the Services ". I have with me a series of cases, but I shall confine myself to only four of the most important cases. The first case refers to an Anglo-Indian lady, a Deputy Nursing Superintendent in the Sambhu Nath Pandit Hospital, Calcutta, who after many years of excellent and faithful service received a letter from the Government of Bengal discharging her from the service and telling her that, with a view to further Indianisation of the Service, her place was to be given up to an Indian nurse. Lord Lytton, I am thankful to say, cancelled this order or this lady would to-day have swelled our army of unemployed, which owing to Indianisation of the Services is daily increasing. The next case refers to a batch of 28 Anglo-Indian railway employees at Ramrajatolla on the Bengal-Nagpur Railway who were en masse discharged from the Railway to give place to 28 ex-Indian sepoys, and the Agent of this Railway in his official letter admitted that this was an effort at Indianisation on his Railway. The third case I desire to place before this House is that of an Anglo-Indian named Mr. Syms, a Farrier Major in the 28th Light Cavalry, who took his discharge voluntarily from the Indian Army and was denied being placed on the Reserve, with the following words written on his discharge certificate. " On account of being an Anglo-Indian ". The fourth and last case I wish to put before you to prove my complaint to the hilt and to clarify the issue, as also to show you and the Government that I am not imagining but that I have every reason to apprehend the exclusion of the Domiciled Community from the term " Indianisation " as it appears in the Lee Commission's Report and other Government orders on it. This case refers to the three Anglo-Indian sons of a present Member of the Council of State, all of whom gave their lives during the past war. These three sons had applied at varying times for admission into the Indian Army Reserve of Officers. The General Officer Commanding, Burma, flatly refused to consider the claims of these three splendid types of Anglo-Indians who had had an English education and whose father occupied a very important position in Burma. The General Officer Commanding, Burma, General Johnstone, officially wrote about their application :—" I am not knowingly recommending any Eurasian candidates for the I. A. R. of officers, so I regret it is no use young—coming to see me " I have the original letter here in my possession. Sir, these four cases out of many explain the position of the Domiciled Community to-day in Indianisation of the Services. For us it spells ex-Anglo-Indianisation and a complete occupational ostracism.

Have I not adequate grounds to be apprehensive of being excluded from the term "Indianisation" as presented in that Chapter by the Lee Commission ? I submit most emphatically I have, and I wish here and now to ask Government very respectfully, yet very emphatically, to let me know, to let this Honourable House know once for all, so that I may be able to make my own arrangements for the safeguarding of my future and, if necessary, to enter into my own pacts with the rest of India, in which category am I included as "European" or "Indian" ? If I am to be considered an Indian, give me the same rights, privileges and opportunities ; otherwise tell me so frankly. Do not call me one thing and treat me as nothing. This complaint of mine is not an imaginary one, but an absolute statement of fact, and I hope it will be the very last time I shall have to present this matter to the House. I demand from the Government a clear and definite statement on this point.

I shall now deal with my amendment concerning Chapter III of the Lee Commission's Report which refers to the Indian Medical Service. Sir, before this Honourable House can realize the enormity and the significance of this recommendation of the Lee Commission, it seems to me desirable that I should very briefly tell you a little about the composition of the two Services concerned in this recommendation. I refer to the R. A. M. C. and I. M. S. These terms are familiar to everyone in this House, though I have heard these letters R. A. M. C. interpreted, as "Rather-A-Mixed-Corps" and "Rather-A-Mediocre Corps". I have also heard the letters I. M. S. interpreted as "Infinitely-More-So" and "Infinitely-More-Superior". Anyhow these are two distinct and separate Services. A little inside information about these two Services of the Administration has a direct bearing on the recommendations made by the Royal Commission.

The Honourable Sir Narasimha Sarma (Member for the Deptt. of Education, Health and Lands) : On a point of order, Sir, the Government Resolution does not deal with the question as to the future army organization of the Medical Services. Whether the R. A. M. C. and the I. M. S. should be incorporated in one Service or should continue to be two Services, that question the Government have not dealt with nor considered yet, and no Resolution on that point has been tabled. Government therefore do not ask this House to accept any suggestions or recommendations of the Lee Commission with regard to the future of the I. M. S. or the R. A. M. C. in so far as the army organization is concerned, and I therefore respectfully submit that any discussion here with regard to the future composition of that Service would be not only irrelevant, but would also lead to no fruitful results.

Mr. President : So far as I can judge, the Honourable Member who is addressing the House is perfectly in order in laying his views before the Assembly and the Government on the points raised by the Lee Commission and raised by implication in section (3) of the Resolution.

The Honourable Sir Narasimha Sarma : I take it, Sir, that the Honourable Member's amendment is being discussed ?

Mr. President : No, the amendment under discussion was moved by Pandit Motilal Nehru, as the Honourable Member is very well aware. Colonel Gidney.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney: Thank you, Sir; I shall be very brief. The R. A. M. C., as we know, supplies the medical needs of the British Army under a system called the Station Hospital system to which is attached certain corps recruited in India, e.g., the I. M. Dept., the Indian Hospital corps, etc., etc. The I. M. S., as the House no doubt knows, supplies the medical needs of the Indian Army and the civil medical needs of India.—40 per cent. of it is engaged in military hospitals and 60 per cent. of it in civil medical appointments. The 40 per cent. of the cadre of the I.M.S. doing duty with the Indian Station Hospitals has attached to it the Indian Branch of the I.M.D. consisting of Indian Sub-Assistant Surgeons. They occupy in Indian Station Hospitals the same position as the I.M.D. men do in the British Station Hospitals, with this great and glaring difference that, whereas in the Indian Station Hospitals these Indian Sub-Assistant Surgeons are treated as doctors in the British Station Hospitals, the Anglo-Indian I.M.D. members are treated as glorified compounders and clerks. That is an undeniable fact and there is no gainsaying that it exists in the British Station Hospitals of to-day.

Such are the two divisions of the Medical Services in India, the R.A.M.C. and I.M.S. I shall not enter into further details except to say that both these Services treat their sick by pooling them into British and Indian Station Hospitals, a system which was introduced into India years ago by the R.A.M.C. and has since 1918 been slavishly imitated by the I.M.S. The expenditure involved and paid by the Indian tax-payer on the maintenance of these two Services, excluding the Civil Medical Service, is the enormous sum of 2¼ crores. I would inform this Honourable House that with a British Army in India of about 70,000 the strength of the R.A.M.C. was about 333, and though the British Army has been reduced by about 8,000 troops the R.A.M.C. strength is practically the same. This means one R.A.M.C. officer to 250 able-bodied soldiers. The I.M.S., on the other hand, though the Indian Army has been reduced from 140,000 in 1913 to 130,000 in 1923, has increased from 290 in the year 1913 to 445 in the year 1923.

Now this is the position and strength of these two Services. In my opinion the Royal Commission in making its recommendations on the I.M.S. did so with much hesitancy, great diffidence and with an admitted inability to deal with the complexities of this difficult problem. It has put forward a recommendation which, when shorn of all its finesse, means the complete extermination of the Indian Medical Service—a Service whose glorious traditions and scientific work it would be hard to equal, a Service which has certainly very materially helped in the development of India, a Service to which I am sure every Member in this Honourable House will pay a deserving tribute. This is what the Lee Commission recommendations amount to, and it is very doubtful whether this Royal Commission, which consisted of five eminent Englishmen and four well known and able Indians, did not really exceed its terms of reference. I hesitate to make such a charge, but in its terms of reference there is certainly no such authority empowering it to recommend the complete extermination of a Service. It has done so nevertheless, and strange to relate it has done so without the inclusion in its ranks of one single medical man as adviser. I would draw the attention of Honourable Members to the hesitancy this Commission displayed in the preamble to what it calls its " consequential recommendations." On page 11 you read the words :

" We approach this matter with some diffidence, since, though we have heard many witnesses on the subject we have not been able to devote ourselves entirely, as did the Verney-Lovett Committee, to this one question."

And yet this Commission was pleased to discard the proposals of the Verney-Lovett Committee in favour of the recommendations of a single individual by the name of Sir Charles Burtchaell. Further on on the same page, we read :

" This being mainly a military question, it would not be fitting that we should attempt to expound or argue the merits of the Burtchaell scheme."

On page 12, paragraph 23, you will read what it calls " our consequential recommendations ". Consequential on what I ask ? On this feeling of hesitancy, this feeling of diffidence, this feeling of inability to go into the labyrinthine aspects of this complex question, this inability to expound or argue the military parts of it. Without any desire to be disrespectful I would remark that such weakness and hesitation does not add weight to the recommendations which we are seriously asked to consider here, the " Summum bonum " of which is the extermination of the Indian Medical Service. This hesitancy and indecision certainly lend support to my amendment in which I recommend that we should as a House unanimously recommend the complete omission of Chapter III from this Commission's Report. Indeed I am fortified in this my belief by the remarks made by the Honourable the Home Member, not the remarks, I mean the omission by the Home Member in his Resolution of any reference whatever to Sir Charles Burtchaell's scheme and on which this Commission has based its recommendations. It seems to me therefore that this recommendation by the Lee Commission in Chapter III of its Report is on its own admission devoid of any strength or force.

After what I have said Honourable Members might say it would be much better if, having condemned it or rather it having condemned itself, I were to say no more but resume my seat. I should be glad to do so if it were not made clear to me, from various discussions I have had with Members of this House that they believe, rightly or wrongly, that no matter what this House says, willy-nilly this Report will be submitted to the House of Commons and accepted by the British Parliament. I am however not one of those who thinks that the Government of India would give us an opportunity of expressing our opinions upon this Report and then refuse to recognise them. I also do not think that the present Labour Party in England would treat the views of this House with such supreme indifference as to say " Willy nilly we shall accept the recommendations of the Lee Commission." Having indulged in a little necessary destructive criticism to establish my amendment, I now wish to say something constructive. In the event of the Honourable the Home Member's amendment being accepted, let us analyse what it means to us, what it means to India, for I am of India and I speak as an Indian citizen. It means the gift to us of a Civil Medical Service which is to be recruited by open competition both in India and in England, the basic principle being an open competition coupled with the control of the Provincial Government, subject to certain control by the Public Services Commission, the Secretary of State in certain matters having the ultimate voice of control. Now this is supposed to be provincialising a Service which has hitherto gone by the proud name of an All-India Service. If that were so, I mean if this were a Provincialised Service, I am sure it would be acceptable to this House possibly with just a little weak opposition so far as the control of the Secretary of State was concerned. But that is really not so. For, if you read sub-clauses (d), (e) and (f) of clause 23 of this Report, you will find what I think constitutes the cause for much of the mistrust and doubt which permeates the minds of many Indian Members, but which I am happy to say does not permeate my mind. I believe certain Indian Members feel that, if this is to be a Provincial Medical Service, it must be so in every sense and not partly under the Secretary of State's control. I agree with them. But what does that connote ? It connotes that recruitment for this Service must be in India and in India alone. In any case and at the same time you must be willing to satisfy the desires of the English community. I submit that if Indians wish their sentiments to be respected by Englishmen, they, on their side, must respect the wishes of Englishmen, be they officials or otherwise, regarding the treatment of their wives and children by English doctors. How is it to be done ? This is the crux of the whole situation. I feel sure if the Government of India presented to the country and this House a Civil Medical Service entirely recruited from Indians, it must be acceptable to this House. But I am not one of those who, like my learned colleague Dr. K. G. Lohokare, think that India is fit to-day to supply all her own medical needs. I wish she could but she certainly cannot do so to-day. And therefore till she can and we raise the standard of our medical schools, we must depend on the European element or what has come to be called the " steel frame ", or as my friend the Honourable Pandit said yesterday the " wooden horse ". I say that you must have this little leavening, who would also supply the medical needs of the European Members of the Services and their families. But if that were all that you were asked to do, I am sure you would even then accept this recommendation. The larger mistrust which enters your mind, I feel sure, is not due to this but to the introduction into this Civil Medical Service of the military element. We are told in sub-clauses (d), (e) and (f) of clause 23 of the Lee Commission's Report that one-half of the British element in these Services must be supplied from the Indian Military Medical Service in India and be a war reserve or, as Sir Charles Burtchaell would be pleased to call it, the R. A. M. C. (India). I do not advocate this. I consider that the civil and military medical departments should be entirely and wholly divorced one from the other. I know the Army and Government will say : " How is this possible ? How could we get our reserve for the army in case of mobilisation ? " This is a difficulty but can be done. It is done at present and it could be done for many years to come by utilising those of the I. M. S. officers—about 50 per cent. of its present cadre—who are to-day in civil employ. They would form the military medical reserve until such time as India is in a position to supply her own medical needs.

Mr. President : I would remind the Honourable Member that he has reached his time-limit.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : So, I say that if we are to accept any recommendation in this Report we should accept (c) of clause 23 and we should refuse to accept (d), (e) and (f), that is, we should insist on separating the military from the civil side. But the Army Member may say that this cannot be done, that the I. M. S. military is hard up for men and that there is a scarcity of European medical men. I disbelieve the Honourable Member on that matter. I have here the figures that were supplied to me relating to the state of British military hospitals in the Indian Army, and I refer to them only to show that this cry of shortage of British medical officers which has been raised is a false cry. It is an inflated complaint ; it is not really a genuine complaint, and it emanates from a man named Sir Charles Burtchaell who reigned here as Director, Medical Services, from the year 1918 till 1922 and looked at everything medical through a pair of glasses marked R. A. M. C., and who considered everything emanating from India as an inferior article, so much so that he objected to the term " Indian Medical Corps " as suggested by the Verney-Lovett Report. It is not surprising that this man should want to decry the Verney-Lovett Report and press his own view which was nothing else but taking up the whole of the medical needs of India within the grasp of the R. A. M. C., and so ultimately within the grasp of the War Office, and also of a good slice of the civil medical administration of India, giving India a subordinate position and depriving the Provinces of complete control of their civil medical service.

I have here these figures and I will conclude my remarks with them. These figures show that in 1913 there were 333 R. A. M. C. officers, the number of beds in the same year was 6,769 or 7 per cent. of the total strength ; in 1923 there were 8,653 beds with the same number of officers. In 1913 I ask you to note that out of a total bed accommodation of 6,769 beds, only 2,000 beds were occupied and 4,700 were lying fallow and vacant. In 1923 out of 8,651 beds 1,793 were occupied leaving 6,857 beds unoccupied ; and these unoccupied beds in the Station Hospitals had their required personnel, menial staff and all sorts of stores and paraphernalia which go with such military medical institutions. This means that one-fourth of the accommodation was utilised and three-fourths unutilised. Coming to the Indian Army, with a strength in 1913 of 131,000 men, there were 273 I. M. S. officers or 2.1 per million; whilst in 1923 the strength was 143,000 with 495 I. M. S. officers or 3.5 per million. The total bed accommodation in 1913 was 8,815 out of which 2,702 were used ; in 1923 the total number of beds of the Indian Army was 12,047 out of which only 2,704 beds were occupied....

Mr. President : Order, order. The question of bed accommodation in hospitals is not in order. Will the Honourable Member bring his remarks to a close ?

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney: I lay these facts before you to show that this scarcity of European medical officers for the I. M. S. is inflated. We have these two medical services spending Rs. 2¾ crores of the tax-payer's money, making use only of one-fourth of the hospital bed accommodation provided, and we are asked to spend money maintaining the remaining vacant three-fourths. I know the Member in charge of the Army Department, Government of India, will say: " the health of the army is not indicated by the number of beds occupied in the hospitals, but those unoccupied ". If that is so, I think the army would do well to adopt the Chinese system and pay their doctors when they are well and not when they are ill. I submit that the civil medical service must be a distinct one from the military medical service ; and to accomplish this, in the second part of my Resolution, I have suggested to this House the formation of a Select Committee to go thoroughly into this matter—the same as the Honourable the Home Member said in (c) of his Resolution in which he suggests further consideration of the question. I therefore submit that we should as a House refuse to accept in toto Chapter

[Lieut.-Colonel H. A. Gidney.]

III of the Lee Commission's Report, and that we should also accept that part of my amendment in which I suggest the formation of a Select Committee. It is almost the same as the Honourable the Home Member's amendment on the medical services and not very dissimilar to the Honourable Pandit's amendment, and as such I feel sure that the points I have placed before you, will commend themselves to this Assembly. The details I would leave to the Select Committee in which both Houses should be represented with civil and military medical men as expert advisers.

The Honourable Sir Narasimha Sarma : Sir, the Honourable the Leader of the House asked me yesterday to explain to the House the proposals of the Government with regard to the Indian Medical Service ; but the course of discussion yesterday and the amendment moved by Pandit Motilal Nehru induce me to deal with some of the recommendations of the Lee Commission with which the Department over which I preside is intimately and immediately concerned. The amendment asks that the recommendations of the Lee Commission with regard to the Educational, Agricultural, Civil Veterinary, Forest and other Departments with which I am now immediately concerned should be rejected, subject to one qualification with which I shall deal later, namely, that all further recruitment in England in respect of these Services should be stopped ; and inasmuch as I believe that the recommendations of the Commission in this respect, which have been provisionally accepted by the Government, lead on the whole to an improved situation, a situation which the people of India, I believe, would welcome, I cannot help regretting that the amendment should have assumed that wide scope without due limitations, in dealing with the Departments with which I am concerned. I can understand and appreciate the reasons which are moving many of the Members of this House and the outside public as well in condemning wholesale the recommendations of the Lee Commission. Among other contributory factors are two important considerations, namely, first, there is a feeling of fear and mistrust lest the Lee Commission recommendations should somehow and in some manner interfere with the progress of the Reforms which the country has at heart ; and the second consideration is the expenditure which would be involved by the acceptance of these recommendations. I shall not deal with the latter part of the subject in respect of which the Honourable the Leader of the House and the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett are more competent to deal than myself, but I may say this that many of the British officers serving in the Departments under me did complain before this Royal Commission was appointed that they were suffering pecuniarily and that some relief was needed. I must say that in fairness to the Services under my control. It is hardly necessary to go back to the genesis of this Commission. There were retirements on proportionate pension. There was agitation in India ; there was pressure brought to bear on the Government of India and the Secretary of State by the Services and, what is more, there was the difficulty felt by the Government both here and in England with regard to the recruitment of British youths for the Services in this country. (Pandit Shamlal Nehru : " May I know the number of premature retirements ? ") I have not got the figures here but there was an appreciable number in the Police, a few in the Civil and many to my regret of good officers in the Agricultural Department, hardly any in the Forest ; and that is all that I can say at present. (Pandit Shamlal Nehru : " Shall I say 20 at the utmost ? ") Well, I will not care to reply to that question. I would put it to the House that the people might have been confronted with a decision, taken after due consultation no doubt, with regard to expenditure without the corresponding advantages which are the immediate result of the appointment of this Commission. I am not here to try and justify the appointment of the Commission, there is no need for it. I am not here to say that the needs of the hour might not have been met in a different way, but, taking the Commission as an accomplished fact, I would ask the House to remember that the position might have been easily worse from their standpoint, and that we should dispassionately view the recommendations of the Lee Commission both from the standpoint of the advantages which have been gained as well as from the standpoint of the expenditure involved, which to some minds may appear to be large. It is fair play that the Government ask from the House in dealing with the recommendations of the Royal Commission. It has been said : Is there any principle which has been laid down by the Lee Commission ? Can we discover it even with the aid of a microscope and, if any can be discovered, is it not subject to so many limitations that it is hardly worth while calling it a principle ? We know as practical men that there are no principles to which exceptions and limitations cannot and should not be made. But, broadly-speaking, I think what the Lee Commission has laid down is a position new to the country, namely, that, in respect of subjects which have been provincialised and transferred, the Services, subject to vested rights, should be under the entire supreme control of the Local Governments. Up to the date of the recommendations of the Lee Commission, the accepted principle has been that, although a subject may be provincialised and transferred, still the Superior Services controlling or at any rate administering those subjects should be in the main All-India Services. A breach has been made in this principle and a new principle has been enunciated that, in respect of transferred fields hereafter, at any rate in regard to recruitment, the control, subject to vested interests, should be entirely in the hands of the Provincial Governments. I would suggest, Sir, that this is a principle which, whatever doubts may be felt from the large point of the consolidation of India, has its merits and deserves recognition, and it is by acceptance of that principle that the House can secure the complete provincialisation of the future recruitment of the Services with which I am intimately connected. I recollect the controversies which raged in 1914 when the Islington Commission was sitting and reported. I recollect as a Member of the Government of India the attitude which had to be assumed in dealing with further Indianisation, and I must frankly state to the House that it is a large step which the Government have taken, a step of far-reaching importance in accepting the complete provincialising of these Services and in leaving to the Local Governments future recruitment under these heads.

And, mark you, gentlemen, hereafter it cannot be said that the nation-building Departments would not be entirely in the hands of the Ministers who control them. (Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : " Not entirely ".) They would be for a time subject to the vested interests of the officers already in the Services which would have to be protected. In all transitional stages—and the stage may be a long period—(A Voice : " Very long indeed.") It is so. But that is a period we will have to face, and I do not think anybody in this House or outside this House would ever enunciate the principle that the vested interests of anybody should, at any rate without adequate compensation, be sacrificed. We have to take things as they are, and I go further and say that India would require the help, the guidance, and the friendly co-operation of the men who would be left in these Services for the purpose of building up her national agriculture and industries. And I hope—now that the friction with the Local Governments that the people who ought to guide the Local Governments are not allowed to choose the servants whom they have to employ—now that that friction, that sort of irritation, is removed, I earnestly hope that the Ministers backed by the people would realise the need for seeking the aid of the best men outside India for some time to come, and that this would not mean the extinction of recruitment of Englishmen or of outsiders whenever their services may be required for the benefit of the country. In passing, I cannot help paying—it is my duty to pay—a tribute to the Services which will shortly be placed on a provincial basis, which have contributed to the growth, advancement and development of this country. The achievements of the officers of the All-India Services in the Educational, Agricultural and other fields are too well known to require any recapitulation at my hands, and I am sure that this House will readily recognise, especially at a time when the Government are prepared to leave entirely in the hands of the people the future recruitment for these Services, the merits of these officers and the help which they have rendered in the past and which we hope they will willingly render in the future. Let me say one word with regard to the feeling of mistrust which is largely influencing the people of this country, namely, that the recommendations of the Lee Commission, if accepted, might in some way retard the granting of reforms on a large scale or in the manner in which the country expects in the immediate future. The Honourable the Leader of the House and Sir Charles Innes have on behalf of Government stated to the House freely and frankly that there is nothing in this Report which should in any manner be taken as embarrassing the Government in any manner whatsoever in dealing with the question of future reforms. That was a question with which, as has already been stated, the Commission had not to deal. They were asked merely to organise the Services on the assumption that the status quo will, in the main, be preserved. You may quarrel with particular details of the proposals which they have made, but they have envisaged the position when the reserved fields of activity would be converted into transferred fields. You may quarrel with the details of the proposals as to what should be done if such a change is brought about. But I would submit that there is nothing in the Lee Commission's Report itself which can expressly or impliedly be taken as precluding the progress of the reforms in the manner in which the people and the Government may find it desirable to proceed. I suggest to the House that it would pay better to take the Government at their word when they have stated that there is nothing in the Lee Commission's recommendations which could even impliedly stand in the way, rather than import doubts and difficulties, which after all, I would suggest, from the larger point of view, would never pay.

I shall now deal, Sir, with the question of the Medical Services and the proposals of the Government. I should explain at the outset that the Government have tabled these proposals for the consideration of this House in order to show it that they treat the recommendations of the Lee Commission as a whole, as integral parts hanging together, and that the Government have no idea of going back upon any of the recommendations which may be considered to be in favour of the proposals which the people have been pressing upon the attention of the House and of the Government. They have asked the Local Governments to state their views on this difficult and perplexing problem. They have not yet received the replies, except from one or two of the Local Governments. The question is further complicated by the fact that the suggestions of the Lee Commission touch upon the future organisation of the Army, and that is a subject which was entirley outside the purview of the Commission. That has no strict bearing upon the constitution of the Civil Services. That is a matter which has to be dealt with on its merits in respect of considerations which ought to prevail in Army matters. The War Office has to be consulted and Honourable Members will readily recognise that it would be impossible for the Government to arrive at any reasoned conclusions with reference to the future composition of the Army Medical Services. So I will ask you to dismiss from your minds any suggestions with regard to the future composition of the R. A. M. C., as to whether the Government are in the least inclined to abolish the I. M. S., and to have a unified single Service. I would ask you to confine your attention to the proposals as formulated by the Government, which ask you to accept in principle one point subject to three limitations. The recommendation which I am asking you to accept, and which I believe will find ready acceptance in this House, is that Provincial Civil Medical Services should be constituted in the Provinces. I will deal with the limitations later on. On that subject, public opinion has been pressing very hard upon the Government in the past that the civil needs of the population deserve greater attention in the constitution of their Civil Medical Services than the needs of the Army, and that there should be accepted in principle the necessity and the desirability of constituting an All-India Civil Medical Service. This is a recommendation which has been made by the Islington Commission subject to certain limitations. What the Islington Commission contemplated and what was pressed upon the attention of the Government by a Resolution moved by the Right Honourable Srinivasa Sastri was the constitution of an All-India Civil Medical Service with Provincial Medical Services attached. The departure made by the Lee Commission is in the direction of constituting it entirely on a provincial basis. Much can be said, for the sake of the future consolidation of the interests of India, in favour of continuing on an All-India basis the future composition and constitution of the Civil Services of the country even when those Services are composed entirely, or almost entirely, of Indians. The centrifugal forces operating powerfully in this country, the divisions, and the provincial jealousies, need to be checked as far as possible and the All-India Services have been a very useful factor in the past in that direction. And I for one have had some difficulty in reconciling myself to this recommendation in favour of Provincial Medical Services, but I accepted it because I felt from my practical experience during the four years and odd of my service as Member of Government, as well as on other considerations, that there was no alternative but to accept the Lee Commission's recommendations notwithstanding the consideration that I have placed before this House. Provincial jealousies, the desire of each Local Government to recruit from amongst men of their own province, communal differences, and various other factors have rendered the position of the Government of India an extremely unenviable one in the past, and when the Lee Commission, on which there were four members from different Provinces, had come to the conclusion that in future the Services especially in these branches, should be on a provincial basis, the Government of India felt that they would be wise in accepting the recommendation which they hoped would be backed up by the people. I hope therefore that whatever may be your difficulties, whatever may be your inconveniences, whatever may be your misgivings, regarding the future composition of the Medical Services, the main recommendation will be accepted in principle by this House.

1 P.M.

[Sir Narasimha Sarma.]

Then I have subjected the proposal to three limitations, one of which is extremely important and I may say, may be far-reaching in character, and the other two are not of such great importance. The first limitation is that the Civil Medical Services should absorb the military reserve. My Honourable friend, Colonel Gidney, has quoted to you certain figures in order to show that the Army has too large a number of medical officers and that the needs of the country could be met by a smaller number, and I could not follow him in one place when he said that India can furnish all the medical men she requires.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney: I rise to a personal explanation. I said that I did not agree that India could furnish all its medical needs. It certainly cannot. I was emphatic on that point.

The Honourable Sir Narasimha Sarma: I am glad to see the position clearly now. I may say that those figures are somewhat inaccurate. The Army Department, to do it justice, has been trying its level best to keep down the number of medical officers, especially after the Incheape Committee has made its recommendations, and in the R. A. M. C., in the Budget for 1924-25 I note this, there were not 331 but only 265, and in the I. M. S., not 495 but only 388 medical officers provided and so there has been.....

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney: May I rise to a personal explanation. I am very sorry to interrupt the Honourable Member. He has made a mistake in thinking that my figures are incorrect. I have these figures signed and furnished by the Office of the D. M. S., India, and they are dated about ten days ago. So I believe they are accurate and I accept them as accurate.

Mr. Chaman Lall (West Punjab : Non-Muhammadan): May I inform the Honourable Member that those figures are for 1923-24. The Honourable Member for Education has referred to the figures for 1924-25.

The Honourable Sir Narasimha Sarma: I am taking the figures that I am quoting from the Budget for 1924-25,—265 and 388.

Dr. H. S. Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions: Non-Muhammadan): My Honourable friend, Colonel Gidney's figures are for 1923.

The Honourable Sir Narasimha Sarma: And I have no reason to suppose that there have been additions since to these figures. There might have been small additions, but not at any rate the figures which would reach the dimensions quoted by my Honourable friend. In any event, the question as to what the number of medical officers for the Army should be is entirely outside the purview of our discussion this morning. The question is, is it necessary to make provision for the absorption of the Indian Army Reserve, or is it not necessary to do so? In asking you to accept my recommendation I will have to give you figures necessarily and I have been informed that approximately the war reserve that would have to be absorbed would be about 195 officers, of whom there would be provision for not less than 65, or, including the leave reserve, 83, in the departments directly under the Government of India. Therefore, it is not a very large number that has to be absorbed by the Provincial Governments with a reformed constitution under the proposals that I am tabling before you. Then, again, Honourable Members will find that from more than one standpoint the absorption of this medical reserve in the civil with due safeguards would be a source of immense strength, immense benefit, to the Civil Medical Services themselves. We have practically accepted, I think,—because I have not seen in the past or in the present any dissent from the view that the civil medical officer should, as far as possible, be ready to undertake the duties of going into the field in case of necessity, and I would ask you, would it not be helpful to have a small leaven of officers who have gone through the drill, through the course of discipline in the Army—a small number—who in the past have justified their existence, who in the past have brought about incalculable benefits to this land—is it not wise to keep them ? Even from a narrow standpoint there must be a number to stiffen, to help, to stimulate the activities of the civil officers who would have in case of the painful necessity of the occurrence of a war to go to the field. Apart from that,—I was just now alluding to the centrifugal tendencies—is it not desirable that there should be a small leaven of officers trained in the best European institutions who have gone through the mill as it were, through a course of discipline, serving in the Army for about 4 or 5 years—is it not useful to have such a small stiffening element even from the larger standpoint of the interests of the consolidation and solidarity of India ?

Dr. K. G. Lohokare : (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Small means 50 per cent.

The Honourable Sir Narasimha Sarma : It cannot be 50 per cent. The number of officers who would in future have to be absorbed may not exceed—I will not make a positive statement because the question has not been thoroughly examined—122 or 123 at the utmost out of 570, the full strength of the civil medical service at present.

Dr. K. G. Lohokare : Percentage to civil ?

The Honourable Sir Narasimha Sarma : The whole strength at present is 570 approximately. There are at present 420 I. M. S. officers provided for in civil employ, and I may state to the Assembly that with the consent of the Local Governments, including the Ministers, there has been provisional reservation made under the orders of the Secretary of State under Devolution Rule 12 of 333 appointments for the I. M. S. 333 posts have with the consent, omitting one or two Provinces, of the Ministers and the Local Governments, been reserved provisionally, but the decision has not been made final. Taking it that this would continue it will have to continue for an appreciable period. Therefore, you will see immediately what an immense improvement from the point of view that is being urged on the Government it will be if the recommendations of the Lee Commission are accepted in their entirety in this respect. I was on the point that the military reserve under this condition that I have stated is not a very large one, and there is another greater reason why the House should readily consent to absorb this military reserve because in the past, although there has been no contract, the position of the Medical Services, their constitution and the staffing of the hospitals has been such as to secure suitable and adequate provision for British officers and their families. I know there is a good deal of feeling in the country that somehow racial considerations are being imported into this question.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : Is it not true ?

The Honourable Sir Narasimha Sarma : I may assure the House that there is absolutely no foundaton for that belief if the facts are really understood. I will not say that there is no ground for misunderstanding. During the last one century the Civil Medical Service has been composed entirely or almost entirely of the I. M. S. officers, at any rate the higher branches. There were only 73 out of 566 and odd, 73, mind you, non-I. M. S. officers in 1914 when the Islington Commission made their report. Now the figure is nearly four times as large, and it will be still larger if the recommendations of the Lee Commission are accepted, and the proportion which is being reserved for the war reserve would be infinitesimally small if the civil needs of the population have to be met and are met on an adequate scale. I do not see any limitation to the numbers which will have to be recruited in future if the civil needs of the population have to be adequately and properly attended to, and therefore with an increasing civil cadre what would this small war reserve be especially when that war reserve would be useful also for the purpose of administering to the medical wants of Europeans and their families ? If we entered into a contract for a breach of which there would be compensation, if entered into a covenant for the breach of which an officer could leave our service, then Honourable Members may say that racial discrimination has been introduced ; but we merely wish to provide the facilities which at present are open to the civil officers, especially having regard to their susceptibilities and having regard to the interests of future recruitment. Here I wish you for a moment to put yourself into the position of people having sentiments on these subjects.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Do the Government repudiate the obligation suggested by the Lee Commission ?

The Honourable Sir Narasimha Sarma : The Government intend to provide adequate facilities.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : Without undertaking any obligation ?

The Honourable Sir Narasimha Sarma : Civil obligation if you wish to put it like that. I would not let anything escape from my lips which might lead the Services to believe that the Government do not intend to fulfil the promise that they give them. They do mean to provide adequate facilities. There exists at present adequate facilities. It is because the power is being passed on to a transferred field completely that the Government have had to subject this Resolution to that reservation. Otherwise there would not have been any necessity for it.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah (Bombay City : Muhammadan Urban) : Is that the reason for fixing the numbers of the British Medical Service ?

The Honourable Sir Narasimha Sarma : The Local Governments have been asked as to how they intend to meet the needs of the Europeans in the civil employ and their families. We have had no replies from them. Therefore there has been no opportunity to consider as a Government any proposition as to the method by which the future needs of these officers will have to be met. But I may give you this information that at the present moment in the reformed Provinces, excluding Burma, there are about 93 British officers working as Civil Surgeons, and I have told you that about 130 at least, excluding leave reserve and so on, would be available from the war reserve. Therefore, the Government have found themselves in this convenient position. They can absorb with great utility and great economy a small war reserve. From that war reserve, they can meet, they hope to meet, at any rate the needs of the European Services and their families, and you are asked therefore to accept two propositions which in themselves, analysed in the light of the figures I have given, do not mean much and do not imply at all any racial discrimination.

Dr. H. S. Gour : Who will control the war reserve officers, the War Office ?

The Honourable Sir Narasimha Sarma : There is a limitation, there is a formula under which the Army war reserve is fixed. If you reduce the total cadre of the Army medical officers it follows automatically that the cadre would be reduced in respect of the war reserve also. We look not merely to these army officers but to the civil officers also in the case of a great war. But I think the army reserve numbers that I have mentioned would adequately fulfil the needs of the situation, in the case of a small war and I hope wars, small or large, though they may be eliminated in the distant future cannot be eliminated altogether just at present.

Dr. H. S. Gour : Why do not you call them supermedicœs ?

The Honourable Sir Narasimha Sarma : I come now to the third part, namely, further scrutiny or examination of the needs of the recruitment of the Army. Here you may smell danger. I have already told you the existing position under the present constitution and the rules as they stand, namely, that 333 posts have been reserved and including leave reserve 420 I.M.S. officers are being employed in the civil branch of the administration. This examination will, I may assure you, relieve that situation to a considerable extent. As to how far and what may be the exact proposals which would have to be taken up is a point on which I will not dogmatise or give any assurance. But, supposing you had an Indian Government, pure and simple, and you found it difficult to find recruits for the Indian Army Medical Corps except by throwing open certain avenues of civil employ, would you as a Government dissociate yourself from your duty towards the Army and say we do not care whether the Army is administered by proper army doctors or not ; this is a civil matter and therefore we shall entirely dissociate the two spheres and make our recruitment proposals on that basis ? I am sure that a Swaraj Government composed entirely of Indians, if the situation necessitated, would take the needs of the Army into consideration. And a situation somewhat similar has arisen, Sir, because I may tell you that the figures give a most gloomy aspect with regard to the recruitment of British medical officers. Since 1915 there has been no open competitive examination. During the last two years we have not been able to secure a single British medical recruit for the I.M.S. except on special terms. The number recruited previously was small and inadequate, and the R. A. M. C. wanted 30 men for their commissioned ranks this year and they could not get more than four candidates. There are causes which are operating against recruitment—war weariness, adequate employment in England and so on—and we do not expect this state of things to continue very long. But still the position is as I have stated, and because the Army requires a certain number of British recruits, the Government of India, you may easily realize, will have to do something, or at any rate will have to do nothing which will further dissuade recruits from entering the Army Medical Service. That is a problem which we have to investigate, which we hope to investigate, with the aid of Local Governments and with the aid of the War Office and the Army in India. That is the reason why I have been obliged to move the acceptance in principle of the constitution of the Civil Medical Service subject to further examination as to what may have to be done in the interest of recruitment of British medical officers for the Army. That is my justification. No one wants a large number of British medical recruits imported unnecessarily into the civil services of the country against the wishes of the Local Governments. I have already told you that the number required for the Army Reserve is very small; that the number required to meet the needs of the European officers in civil employ and their families would be very small. I have already told you that there is a large number of places at present reserved for I.M.S. officers in civil employ. The position will be brighter, better and in no way worse from the Indian point of view under the proposals I have discussed, and I hope therefore that the Council will see the utility and wisdom of not rejecting the recommendations of the Lee Commission, which rejection will lead them nowhere, which might easily lead to a continuance of the status quo—and I may assure you that there are many who would not in the slightest degree object to the maintenance of the status quo who would indeed be only too glad because they believe that these changes are leading us on the wrong track. Therefore, I think the House will be well advised not to reject the recommendations of the Lee Commission in so far as they have been accepted by the Government and formulated in this Resolution.

Well, Sir, I am extremely thankful to you for your indulgence. It is a very difficult subject, and any remarks which Honourable Members may make with regard to the essential principles governing this problem would be very carefully borne in mind by the Government. And I may assure the House that the Government are only too anxious to meet the wishes of the House and the people in this matter subject to the limitations that I have mentioned.

BILLS PASSED BY THE COUNCIL OF STATE.

Secretary of Assembly: Sir, in accordance with Rule 25 of the Indian Legislative Rules, I lay on the table the Bills which were passed by the Council of State at its meeting of the 10th September 1924. They are :

(1) A Bill to amend and consolidate the law relating to Government and other Provident Funds ; and

(2) A Bill to give effect to certain articles of the International Convention for the Suppression of the Circulation of, and Traffic in, Obscene Publications.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Sir P. S. Sivaswamy Aiyer (Madras : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, at the very outset of this debate the Honourable the Home Member referred to the atmosphere of prejudice in which the Royal Commission came into existence. He invited us to consider the recommendations without any appeal to passion, in a spirit of judicial impartiality. It is in that spirit that I have approached the consideration of this problem. I have approached the question from an independent point of view, and the amendment which I sent in embodies the results of my independent examination. Sir, I belong to a different school of thought from that which is represented by the Honourable and learned Pandit, my friend, Pandit Motilal Nehru. I am not a politician nor a practising lawyer, and I am not going to set up the prison bar or dilatory pleas or pleas of jurisdiction. I am going to deal with the question from the point of view of a plain, practical man having to deal with a Report which has been presented by a Commission appointed by the Government and which is going to be considered by the Government, whatever may be your objections by way of direct attack. Nor am I going to question the composition of the Commission, the qualifications of the Members of the Commission or the character of the Indian Members of the Commission. I have no doubt that the qualifications of the Members of the Commission were quite as good as those of any Members of this Assembly, and I am free to acknowledge that they approached the problem in a spirit of fairness and with a desire to solve the questions in the best manner possible and according to their best lights. Now it has been asked what were their qualifications, what was their character ? I very much doubt whether a stormy political life is a guarantee of sound judgment or even of character. Sir, I will indicate my conclusions in a brief way. I am not for the wholesale rejection of the recommendations of the Commission, and I do not desire the disappearance of the British element from the Services. I am prepared to give a sympathetic ear to their grievances and afford such means as the circumstances of the case and of the country may require and permit. Now, Sir, there is an intimate connection undoubtedly between the question of the organization of the Services and the question of the constitutional reforms. Undoubtedly there is a connection. But I for one do not wish to raise that question of constitutional reforms at this stage or by way of a condition precedent to the consideration of the various questions which arise upon this Report. We all know that this question of constitutional reforms must come up in the near future and that will be the time when we shall have to consider those questions. I desire as far as possible to deal with the questions raised by this Report free of any other question with which they may be intermingled but not oblivious of the probability of constitutional changes in the near future. Sir, the only point which I think it is necessary for this House to insist upon is that any conclusion that we may arrive at with regard to the questions arising out of this Report should in no way prejudice the consideration or the decision of those constitutional changes ; and I am quite sure that the Members of the Treasury Bench opposite will agree with me in that expression of view.

Sir, the main questions which arise out of this Report are those relating to the recruitment of the Services and the financial relief to be afforded to the Services. I do not propose to deal at length with the various topics arising out of this Report ; and I shall endeavour to condense my remarks as much as possible upon these two problems. Now, Sir, with regard to the question of recruitment, my conclusion happens to be the same as that of the school represented by my friend, the learned Pandit. But I have arrived at my conclusion by a different route altogether, from another point of view. I will first of all take the reserved Services which are most important for this purpose. The number of reserved Services is four : the Civil Service, the Police, the Forest and the Engineers. Now, before I go into this question of recruitment, I should like to keep clear of the two non-security Services, the Forest Service and the Engineer Service which may encumber the consideration of the Report. I see no reason whatever why these two Services should not be transferred like the other Services which have been transferred. It may be said that these two subjects have not been transferred and that the two Services should not therefore be transferred. But there is no insuperable obstacle to the transfer of these two subjects as well. In the province of Burma we know that Forests has been reserved, and I am not aware that there is any province in India which has more valuable forests than Burma ; and if the provincialization or transfer of the Forest Service in Burma can be contemplated with equanimity, if it can be contemplated with equanimity in Burma, I do not see any reason why it should not be treated in the same way in the other provinces like Madras, Bengal and the United Provinces.

It seems to me puerile to suggest that, if the Forest Services were transferred, the importance of the preservation of forests would be overlooked or not properly appreciated, and that the vital interests of the country at large would suffer. Take again, Sir, the question of the Indian Engineers. In several provinces the Roads and Works Branch has been transferred. There is no reason why the Irrigation Branch also should not be transferred. What is the plea in answer to this ? That if for instance owing to mismanagement the canals were not properly looked after and water not laid on in time, there might be terrible disaster and calamity in the country. But can any sane person believe that the agency which will look after this Service, if it is transferred, is not competent enough to look after the maintenance or construction of canals or that it will not have sufficient regard to the importance of this work ? I consider, Sir, that there is no valid reason for the retention of these two Services as reserved fields.

Now, Sir, passing from these two Services, I come to the Indian Civil Service and the Police—the two security Services. My own opinion is that they should remain All-India Services. I am not in favour of the provincialisation of these two Services ; but it does not follow from that that the recruitment which is now going on should be continued. Let me come at once to this question. What are the considerations which should govern the determination of this problem of recruitment ? In the first place, let me revert to the test which was referred to by the Honourable the Home Member. What is the essential minimum of the British element necessary for the purposes of the Indian Civil Service in the interests of law and order ? Now I refuse to believe that anyone could suggest that a minimum of more than 50 per cent. is necessary. Whether 50 per cent. is necessary in my opinion is another matter ; but what I do submit is that you cannot very well say that a minimum of more than 50 per cent. is necessary. Taking my own province of Madras

I believe the Madras Government have expressed their view that they would be quite content to go on with 50 out of 148 posts given assigned to the British element. No doubt Madras is in this respect an advanced province. There may be other provinces which cannot be equally advanced and perhaps the percentage may have to be raised a bit in those provinces but making all these allowances, leaving out for the present the backward province of Burma, a remark which perhaps will be resented by my friend, Maung Kun, leaving aside Burma and perhaps the North-West Frontier Province, can you say that a minimum of more than 50 per cent. is necessary for the purpose of the Indian Civil Service ?

Now, Sir, the purposes which we have necessarily to bear in mind in considering this question of recruitment are the maintenance of the present standard of efficiency and integrity—an object to which every sane Indian must attach the highest importance and to which I give full recognition. The second object which we must have in view in considering the question of the organisation of the Service is how far does it tend to foster and develop the administrative faculties of the people. The second is a consideration which to some extent must act as a counterpoise to the first consideration. Now, having regard to these two considerations, can we really say that more than 50 per cent. of the British element is necessary ? And granting that a minimum of 50 per cent. is necessary, when are we likely to attain it ? Now the Lee Commission contemplates that it may take 15 years with a recruitment at the rate of 60 per cent. Indian and 40 per cent. English ; and the Honourable the Home Member was somewhat astonished at the progress we had made recently in the Indianisation of the Services. He asked us to look back on past history. Now according to the figures supplied by him yesterday, out of 1,000 Civil Service officers, 38 were Indians. In 1913, 66 were Indians. In 1924, out of 1,220 officers 164 were Indians, that is, about one-eighth. Well that is not to my mind so astonishing a rate of progress. Now this minimum of 50 per cent. to which I have referred as a hypothetical minimum, as probably the hypothetical limit or the minimum which may be desirable—that I say is desirable for other reasons as well. The Lee Commission themselves admit that in the interests of the spirit of camaraderie, in the interests of the development of an equal sense of responsibility, it is desirable to attain this equality in the cadre of the Civil Service as early as possible—a proposition on which I have not yet heard a note of dissent from the treasury Bench. Now if that is desirable, the question is how soon should it be attained ? Is there any reason why it should not be attained as early as possible ? It is perhaps merely a breach of an open secret if I say that in the famous O'Donnell Circular it was stated, as I have heard it said, that, even if English recruitment were stopped this moment, it would take 10 or 12 years before complete equality was attained. And I say if it will take 10 years to attain complete equality even on the basis of a complete stoppage of recruitment, then it is not necessary for us to go further and provide for any further recruitment—at any rate during the next 10 years. Now in matters of this kind I claim somewhat of the British characteristic of being a practical politician in refusing to look long ahead. It is quite sufficient for us if we look to the progress of events during the next 10 years. Constitutional changes are impending and must come. Let us not waste our time in considering whether they will come as soon as the learned Pandit on this side wants, or whether they will come in 1929 as provided by the Statute. Certainly within a period of 10 or 15 years it may be, constitutional changes are inevitable ; and if they are inevitable, I ask, is it fair to English recruits themselves to ask them to enter the Service with this cloud of uncertainty hanging over them and come out on trial to this country ; or to ask us that, in order to dispel the apprehensions caused by this cloud of uncertainty, they should be offered special attractions in the way of premature retirement on proportionate pensions and various other means ? I am not now dealing with the claims of the present members of the Service to relief. Now I say under these circumstances it is neither fair to your English recruits nor fair to the interests of this country to go on recruiting further before we are yet in sight of the attainment of equality between the two cadres. These are my reasons for not advocating the continuance of recruitment.

I just want to refer—I have my eye on the clock, Sir—I only want to refer to one or two arguments against the stoppage of recruitment which have been used by its opponents. One is that once you stop recruitment it cannot be revived. I am not disposed to say there is no force in that argument. I am always ready to admit whatever force there is in the arguments of my opponents and to make allowance for them. There is some difficulty undoubtedly; but the British element will be at greater strength than 50 per cent. for the next 10 years, and those who enter the Service and become senior officers will continue for a period of 25 years or at any rate 22 years, let us say—at any rate to enable them to earn a decent pension. Now there seems to me to be no likelihood of any catastrophe happening if the recruitment is stopped, say for the next 10 years. If, however, the country were going to be plunged into those conditions of chaos and disorder which the imagination of some has conjured up as the only too probable result in the future if there is a stoppage of recruitment, I think the country will probably in that state of things invite the outsider to come and help it, as it has oftener than once done in the past. I do not believe that there is such an insuperable difficulty and I do not believe that the necessity will arise for considering the question.

Then, Sir, another argument is brought forward. Even supposing that it is possible to revive recruitment, there will be a gap in the British official hierarchy—at one stage there will be a number of seniors without a number of junior officers and by the time these junior officers grow up to be seniors there will be no senior officers left and they will all be Indians. If the British and Indian officers are there, imbued with the traditions of the Service and if they can co-operate as they are likely to do, there is no great harm done by the Indian officer having his turn of seniority after the long spell of seniority which has been enjoyed by the English officers. It does not seem to me to portend any great administrative catastrophe. Sir, these are my reasons for advocating a stoppage of recruitment for the present, because I consider it essential that there should be equality between the two elements attained as soon as possible in the cadre of the Service and the continuance of recruitment will merely put off the time to a long period.

Then, Sir, I shall pass on to another Service, namely, the Medical Service. My Honourable friend, the Member in charge of Education, dealt at considerable length with this question. There are these points to be considered in connection with the Medical Service and the proposals of the Lee Commission. The first proposition which they put forward is that the needs of the Army—the needs of the British and Indian units—should be served by the same organisation. That is a proposition to which with all my effort I cannot reconcile myself. The less room allowed for the interference of the War Office and for the interference of the British authorities, the better for this country. The R. A. M. C. has never been appreciative of the claims of Indians to enter its ranks. I make no complaint; it says it is for a British unit; I have no legal right, though perhaps some people might be disposed to base a claim on the ground of our payment for those Services. I do not wish to enter any such claim; but the R. A. M. C. which was run by the British authorities has never hitherto opened its portals to Indians; and is there the least chance that if the R. A. M. C. in India, as proposed by the Lee Commission, subserves the needs of both the British Army and the Indian Army the claims of Indians will be generously recognised ? I refuse to believe it, and the ground for my refusal is my experience of the past management of these matters by the War Office. That is one of the considerations; and another consideration I may mention in this connection is that the presence of the R.A.M.C. in India is in my opinion a factor which should steadily diminish. I look forward to the day when the presence of British units will be less and less necessary and I look forward to the day when the presence of the R. A. M. C. will consequentially be less and less necessary. I do not wish our medical organisation to be tied up in any way with the organisation of the British medical units and our progress in Indianisation or in the matter of any reforms to be hampered by this unfortunate, and as I should call it deplorable, alliance between the two branches. To the first recommendation therefore I am entirely opposed, heart and soul. The next recommendation is that the Civil Medical Service should be provincialised—that there should be a separate Civil Medical Service. The need for a separate Civil Medical Service has been frequently urged and is recognised in General Burtchaell's note; and however much I may disagree with it in other respects, I agree with it in this respect; it has been adopted by the Commission and I shall not therefore waste my breath on that point. The only question is this: if there is to be a Civil Medical Service, the question whether it is to be a provincial or All-India Service does not to my mind seem to be of very great importance. The great apprehension in the minds of many of my friends with regard to these All-India Services is this exercise of the power of control by the Secretary of State. If they can be assured that the power of control will be vested in the hands of the Government of India, I believe that the objections of many of my friends will disappear. However that is a question that I do not propose to discuss now. I accept the recommendation of the Commission in this respect.

The next question is, in this provincial medical organisation what are the conditions with which the Lee Commission has coupled its recommendation. The conditions are reproduced in the Resolution of my Honourable friend, Sir Alexander Muddiman, that they must serve two or three purposes; there must be provision for a military reserve and there must be provision for facilities for the attendance on British officers by medical men of their own race. Those are the two conditions. My Honourable friend, Sir Narasimha Sarma, dwelt upon this first aspect of the question in great detail. Now, I recognise at once the need for a military reserve—I grant it; but then the question is, shou'd the military reserve be formed only out of the I. M. S.? Is it not possible to build it up otherwise? The I. M. S., if you look at its past, has not been found to be so very well-fitted for administrative duties in the field as the R. A. M. C. That was the deliberate opinion of the Esher Committee in their Report. The thing is they get out of touch with military duties; they are not kept in the same state of efficiency as the R. A. M. C., and they get so fond of civil work that most of them are unwilling to go back. Now my proposal as contained in my amendment is that all the members of the Civil Medical Service should be compelled to undergo a period of training—not in the Territorial Force, not in the Auxiliary Force, but in the regular army. Send them there for a couple of years—two or three years—whatever the period may be—I am not particular; I will leave that to my expert friends to arrange. Let them be compelled to serve a certain period of training in the Army. I have no doubt that they will prove quite capable of undertaking the duties which are now discharged by military reserve officers in the I. M. S.

3 P.M.

Then, Sir, the next question is this—with regard to medical attendance on officers. I for one recognise the naturalness of this desire on the part of British officers. Whether they have a legal claim or not is another matter. If they have not the legal claim, they have the fact of actual attendance by British officers. But, since the war, conditions have greatly changed and there have been many situations where the Civil Surgeon's post has been held by an Indian. We have known cases where Indian officers have discharged their duties to the satisfaction of their patients. As I have said, I do not forget the naturalness of the desire but the question which I would put is this. Is it reasonable—put yourselves in a detached position—is it reasonable that the whole basis of organisation of any particular Service in the country should be adapted to the needs not of the population at large but of a few scattered individuals here and there, perhaps half a dozen individuals in a district and so on. Is it right, is it reasonable, that the whole organisation should be adapted to their requirements, however natural, however much they may be entitled to our sympathy—to the requirements of a few scattered officers living here and there? It seems to me that, without in any way flouting this desire or making light of it, there is a great deal to be said against basing the whole framework of your Service upon the recognition of this. On the other hand, I have made a suggestion in the amendment which is on the table to the effect that a certain proportion of the civil posts might be reserved for officers of the I. M. S. and that recruitment might take place accordingly for the whole number of I. M. S. posts required for the Army and Civil. I know that many of my friends here have accused me of having a soft corner in my heart for my English friends. I do not mind that imputation, speaking for myself, and I do not mind some provision being made. But the question, of course, is to what extent it is necessary. The more reasonable, the smaller the limits, the better.

Then there is.....

Mr. President: I must ask the Honourable Member to bring his remarks to a close.

Sir P. S. Sivaswamy Aiyer: The next matter that I would suggest is this: that with regard to the various education and professorial and scientific chairs and so on, they should be thrown open to the best talent wherever it may be found. Instead of appointments being regarded as the preserves of any particular Service, these appointments in particular ought to be regarded as available to the best talent in the world wherever you can get it. And while I am ready to acknowledge the distinguished attainments of I. M. S. officers in the past, while I am ready to acknowledge the services they have rendered to the country not only in the obvious and private capacity of administering to the country, but also in developing a proper standard of teaching, I do not think that one result of the present organisation has been to train the Indian for research and for higher medical work. These are the reasons which underlie my propositions in regard to the Indian Medical Service. I have only one word, Sir, with regard to the financial question.

Mr. President : I have allowed the Honourable Member a great deal of latitude already. He promised me that he would keep his eye on the clock.

Sir P. S. Sivaswamy Aiyer : I have only to say this with regard to the question of financial relief which I do consider important. I do not think it fair to put off the Services by reference to some other person or body. While I say that the findings of this Committee will not absolve the House from the responsibility of coming to its own conclusions and while they are not absolutely binding upon this House, I do think that greater moral weight attaches to the results of the examination of the question by that body. As regards rise in prices, which of us can honestly say that prices have not risen so that we have not suffered by it or that we had not found it difficult to make both ends meet. I believe that many of the members of the Services are in great straits and that they are hard put to it to make both ends meet. Many of them are in embarrassed circumstances, as pointed out by the Lee Commission Report. It has been said that they have a higher standard of living. Granted for the sake of argument that it is exceedingly difficult for a man who has adopted a certain standard to reduce that standard of living, everybody has been accustomed to a particular standard so much so that that standard has been adopted by the Indian as well and it has become equally necessary to him. Under these circumstances, I think that the question of financial relief ought not to be put off and the only relief I would suggest is that contained in certain paragraphs of my amendment. If you will allow me, Sir, I will read them.

Mr. President: Honourable Members will observe that I have allowed a considerable degree of latitude, on account of the magnitude and difficulty of the subject, to those speakers who opened the debate. I must warn Honourable Members in future that, if I allow any latitude and they abuse it, I shall have to use the powers of the Chair to the full.

Mr. E. Burdon (Army Secretary) : Sir, I had not intended to attempt to gain a hearing in this debate. When the debate commenced, it seemed to me—and I am still of the same opinion—that the discussion of individual questions of military medical organisation would only serve to divert attention from the central issues which the House is engaged in considering. But certain statements have been made and certain opinions have been advanced by previous speakers which makes it necessary that I should say a very few words, for the purpose of removing any possibility of misunderstanding and of clearing out of the way what I consider to be certain extraneous matters.

In the first place, Sir, I have heard severe condemnation expressed of the proposal to constitute a Royal Army Medical Corps (India) under a scheme which was referred to by the Royal Commission. Now, Sir, the question of the structure of the military medical organisation was plainly outside the terms of reference to the Royal Commission, and the Government of India have kept the same question apart from their consideration of the Royal Commission's Report. They have (I wish to emphasize this) arrived at no conclusion whatsoever in regard to the matter. They have not yet considered it. While, therefore, I do not propose on the present occasion to contest or examine any proposition that has been advanced, I can assure the House that the observations which have been made in regard to this particular matter will receive very careful attention from Government.

Now, Sir, the same considerations apply very much to the details of the structure of the military medical reserve that may be required. No detailed conclusion has been arrived at as to how this should be constituted in the event of the Civil Medical Services being provincialised.

I had intended to make certain observations regarding the necessity of having a military reserve and the necessity in particular of having a trained reserve. But after what my Honourable friend Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer has said on this subject I do not think I need trouble the House except with a very few remarks indeed. Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer has acknowledged that there must be a military reserve of medical officers. The necessity of course flows from the fact that India has a land frontier of five thousand miles and from the conditions which obtain along that land frontier. These are the circumstances which have led to the Army in India being maintained practically at all times on an active service basis, a fact with which every Honourable Member in this House is perfectly well acquainted. The necessity of a military medical reserve is purely consequential. The necessity of a trained reserve need not be further elucidated after what Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer has said. It is plain that it would not be an efficient arrangement to transfer a civil medical practitioner, who has had no practical experience of military organisation or of military medical organisation to be in charge, let us say, of a field ambulance in frontier warfare.

There is another feature of our existing military medical organisation which has been severely condemned. I am referring here to the Station Hospital system and to the observations made on the subject by Colonel Gidney. Well, Sir, I should like very much to know what substitute Colonel Gidney would propose for the Station Hospital system. I should like to hear his views but on some other occasion and not on this. What system could be substituted which would provide an equally efficient medical organisation, not merely for peace time but also for war ? What the Station Hospital system is, what purpose it serves, what its merits are, are very clearly stated in a book called " The Army in India and its Evolution " which my Department produced only a few months ago and which I sincerely hope every Honourable Member of this House, who proposes to discuss military matters, either has read or will read. Now, Sir, I do not propose to follow my Honourable friend, Colonel Gidney, into the precise figures which he quoted, but in answer to the general tenor of the charges which he brought against the Army Medical administration I think it is desirable that I should inform the House that in pursuance of the recommendations of the Incheape Committee reduction has been constantly going on, ever since that Committee reported, not only in the number of medical officers employed in the Military administration but also in the number of hospital beds. Reduction is going on below standards which the medical authorities, if left to themselves, would consider to be desirable.

Pandit Shamlal Nehru (Meerut Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Would the Honourable Member give us an idea of the reduction of numbers ?

Mr. E. Burdon : In 1924 a reduction of 4,117 hospital beds, British and Indian, was effected, and further reductions are contemplated. Again, in 1914, there were 334 R. A. M. C. officers employed in this country. At the present moment there are 333, a number which will be reduced to 302 by the end of the next month. A further reduction to 282 is intended to be carried out during the next financial year. The number of Indian Medical Service officers in military employment has increased. It has increased from 281 in 1914 to 477 at the present day. But in this case also, reductions are contemplated in pursuance of the Inchcape Committee's recommendations. The cadre has been fixed at 402, and reduction will be effected by wastage in the course of this and the next financial years. Any further details regarding the expenditure on the military medical services might, I suggest, be more conveniently placed before this House on a more appropriate occasion, say when we are discussing the Budget.

There is only one other matter to which I desire to refer, and that is, the observation which my Honourable friend, Colonel Gidney, permitted himself to make regarding Lieutenant-General Sir Charles Burtchaell, formerly Director of Medical Services in India. If I understood my Honourable friend correctly, the purport of his observations was to disparage both General Burtchaell's efficiency and his bona fides as a servant of the Government of India. Sir, it appeared to me to be contrary to all tradition, and to be regrettable, that a charge of this kind should be brought against a distinguished officer of the Royal Army Medical Corps by a senior officer of the sister service. Sir Charles Burtchaell is no longer in India to defend himself against attacks from which, I venture to say, his exceptionally distinguished services in the great war should have availed to protect him. If General Burtchaell were here, he would need no assistance from me. He could defend himself very adequately. But when I come to analyse it, the gravamen of the charge brought against General Burtchaell amounts to this, that in his departmental capacity, throughout his service in India, he endeavoured to secure for Indian troops the same degree of medical care and attention which for many years had been given to British troops.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : Sir, I fully recognise the importance of the occasion and also the great self-restraint one has to exercise in dealing with the questions before this Assembly. I am also a plain, practical man and it will be untrue to say that I am not a politician, it will be true to say I am not a tactician or diplomat. I am not accustomed to sugar-coat my pills and I am always accustomed to speak out what is in my mind. I have no less a soft corner for my English friends than my friend to my right, but I have a softer corner for my country and my countrymen. Sir, one main point which has to be kept in mind is the nature of the recommendations. They are interdependent. The main recommendations of the Commission are claimed by the authors of the Report to be interdependent, and no one part can be given effect to without the other part being also given effect to. That was the difficult position in which I found myself when like my friend, Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer, I tried to separate what can be passed and what cannot be passed by this Assembly. I was faced with that difficulty and I therefore came to the logical conclusion which my Honourable friend, Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer, would not accept, that you have either to accept the whole or reject the whole. There is no question of acceptance in part on their own showing, and it is therefore idle on our part to attempt to separate the milk from the water.

Sir P. S. Sivaswamy Aiyer : The Government of India have not accepted the whole.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : Sir, it is said that the Government of India have not accepted the whole. Here again I am in this unfortunate position. What useful purpose we are serving by this debate, I have been trying to cogitate and consider. The Government of India have taken upon themselves to follow the example of that noble Lord who presided over this Commission to claim for its verdict, to elevate its verdict to that of a juryman. And in the House of Lords he took the undue position—I should say a position which he should not have taken, namely, " We have delivered our verdict," and he asked the Judge, the Judge being His Majesty's Government at home, to pass a decree in accordance with that verdict. And I am surprised to see that my Honourable friend, the Leader of the House, has also accorded that position to this Commission. If that is the position accorded to this Commission, what is the object of this debate ? Are you merely redeeming the pledge of giving us an opportunity to discuss like children, " Play with your doll as you like. We are not going to attach any importance to what you say. The verdict has been given. It only remains for us to pass a decree in accordance with that verdict." Then why go through this farce of discussion in this Assembly ? Sir, I do not believe that the British Cabinet, as it is now constituted, is at all of that opinion. I am willing to believe that when they gave us this opportunity to discuss the merits of this Report they intend and genuinely intend to be informed and instructed and influenced in their dealing with this Report by the discussion which may take place here. Sir, unfortunately, I am sorry to say, the Government of India here are not in that fortunate position. They have committed themselves to accepting the recommendations of the Commission elevating its report to the position of a verdict of a jury, which they had no business to do. (A Voice : " Who said so ? ")

What is the financial effect of these recommendations ? It is adding a recurring burden of 1¼ crores to the already overburdened finances of this country. Now, how can any Government justify its position and say, " We will not examine the materials on which the Royal Commission came to its conclusions. We are willing to be insulted by the Royal Commission. They will take the materials home and deal and deliver them to the Secretary of State. The Government of India are not anxious to look at the materials on which the Royal Commission came to its conclusions. We are prepared to elevate it to the verdict of a jury." If that is the responsibility, if that is the sense of responsibility of the Government of India in adding an additional burden of 1¼ crores (A Voice : " 2 crores.")—I beg your pardon, 1¼ crores—to the financial burdens of this country, I cannot but express my pity for such a Government. Sir, we on our part owe a responsibility to our constituencies. We on our part have to recognise what is the financial position of this country, and therefore it is our duty to exercise the utmost care in examining, in scrutinising every item, every pie of expenditure which may be added to the financial burdens of this country. Otherwise, we will be failing in our duty. Therefore, I feel it is idle to ask this Assembly to pass a verdict on the proposals without placing the materials before us. We cannot blindly accept the verdict of these gentlemen, however eminent they may be, for God has blessed us with some intelligence, and we ought to exercise that intelligence to the best of our lights for the benefit of our country. We deny that intelligence, fairness, justice and capacity are only confined to these gentlemen who formed the Royal Commission. It is in that view that I approach the consideration of this question. Looking at it from that point of view, let me consider what was the financial position. In 1923-24, Sir, from the Central revenues alone I find that the total staff increased by 10 per cent., from what it was in 1913-14, whereas the pay and allowances increased by 101 per cent. Take the Civil Services alone. The total staff increased by 21.3 per cent. in the same period whereas the cost in pay and emoluments increased by 103.7 per cent. Take the officers alone. The increase in staff was 16.3 per cent, whereas the cost of pay and emoluments increased by 56.2 per cent.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee (Industries Member) : Are you quoting the figures for the Superior Civil Services only ?

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : I am quoting from the Report of the Indian Retrenchment Committee.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : This has nothing to do with the Superior Civil Services.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : They embrace the Superior Civil Services, and I think the officers are almost all of them in the Superior Civil Services. In 1913-14 the Civil Services from the Central revenues cost us 6.75 crores. In 1923-24 it mounted up to 13.75 crores. The total of pay and allowances from the Central revenues in 1913-14 was 20.2 crores, whereas in 1923-24 the pay and allowances alone mounted up to 40.74 crores, the total increase being 20.54 crores. I am now willing to present to my Honourable friend, the Finance Member, the cost of the Superior Services, about which he is anxious. The Superior Services in 1917 cost the country 572 lakhs, 98 thousand and odd. Now, after the revisions made between the years 1919 to 1920 they mounted up to 6.67 crores, an increase of 1.15 crores.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : What is the percentage of increase ?

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : Now, the revision, the re-revision, the re-re-revision which were made in connection with all these All-India Services in 1919-1920, when the prices reached the high water mark, were made by the Government of India in consultation with the Secretary of State who took all these factors into consideration—the difficulties of recruitment, the high rise in prices since the Public Service Commission had reported, and all the various other factors were taken into account in 1920 mostly. The Government of India and the Secretary of State considered these points and revised the pay of all these Superior Services and their allowances, and the net result of that was an addition of 1.15 crores to the expenditure. Now, this Commission is made to sit in judgment over that decision, which was come to in 1919-1920, and asks us to increase the burden by another 1.25 crores.

[Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar.]

Sir, is that not an occasion when we should examine the position carefully ? It is said that the prices have gone up since 1914. But they had gone up in 1920 when the Government of India—no doubt my Honourable friend the Leader was not then a Member of the Government—they had gone up in 1920 to the highest point. I will give you the figures. In 1920 the index of the cost of living showed 183 compared with 100 in 1914—the highest point 193 was reached in that year. Since then it is steadily falling. (The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : " What about exchange ? ") In the next year, 1921, the average was 173. In the next year, 1922, it was 164. In the next year, 1923, it was 154 and to-day, Sir, as I see from the Labour Gazette, it is 150 or 152.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Are they wholesale prices ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes (Commerce Member) : What about exchange ?

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : I will come to that.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : That does not represent the cost of living of Europeans.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : If my Honourable friend, Mr. Chatterjee, will possess his soul in patience I will deal with that point. This Labour Gazette has taken the trouble to compile such figures from 1922 or 1923, I forget which. What do I find ? Taking the cost of European articles, that is, articles of food in October 1920 when these revisions were made, it stood at 207 and to-day it stands at 180. Fuel and lighting stood in October 1920 at 159. To-day they stand at 120. Take articles of clothing. They stood at 249 and my Honourable friend, Mr. Chatterjee, may be enlightened to hear that they stand at 180 to-day. Now as regards household articles consumed by Europeans, they stood in October 1920 at 168. To-day they stand at 125. Taking other articles, they stood at 220 and to-day they stand at 213. Now, what is it that has gone up ? Rents have gone up in Bombay. Conveyance has gone up in Bombay. Servants have gone up in Bombay. Passages have gone up. School fees have gone up. These are the five items alone which have gone up. Now, Sir, can any one pretend that the Services working in the districts have to pay so much house rent as people in Bombay city have to pay ? Can any one pretend that the Services working in the districts have to employ servants at that costly figure ? Can any one pretend that people in the districts have to pay the same conveyance charges ? I know how district officers are served by the public. I know it from my own experience. Let me not be dragged into a discussion on that. They are served amply. Even witnesses appearing in their courts are made to pull punkhas. Now, Sir, it is unnecessary for me to dilate further. Prices have gone up. What did His Majesty the King Emperor do ? He cut down his expenditure on his household. His civil budget was not enhanced by one penny on account of the rise in prices. It continues the same as it was in 1913-14. Of course all of us have to be visited by these visitations, rise in prices, floods, famine, illiteracy, sickness, disease, infant condition of industries and exchange fluctuations. One matter about exchange. Now I have been searching in vain for the authors for the statement at page 24 of the Report that there was a belief that exchange would remain high. I have got here a whole file of Government orders dealing with this revision of pay in 1919 and 1920. I do not find any reference, any single allusion, to the fact that the revision was based on that assumption, though it would be a very foolish assumption to make, knowing how exchange varies in this country, that 2*s.* to the rupee was ever promised either remotely or otherwise. Perhaps some Honourable Member will enlighten me The only authority for this is this. One Secretary of State is responsible for this revision in 1920. That Secretary of State disappeared in March 1922 and another Under Secretary of State in July 1922 states that these revisions were based on the expectation that 2*s.* will continue, though it was not a definite promise. If that is the only authority, I am not inclined to attach as much respect to it as I should to a contemporaneous statement either published to the officers or even mentioned in the orders making the revision. Now, may I ask what happened when the exchange rose to 2*s.* 9*d.* and 2*s.* 10*d* ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : How long ago was it ?

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : A year. (A Voice : "Two months.") Exactly, that is my point. Did any sane man expect that these high rates would continue ? If he did, I will challenge him to stand up and say so.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : What about Bombay merchants who refused to pay ?

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : They were in a tight corner. Now, what I was emphasising was this, that while I am willing to give all respect to this Commission they have not condescended to follow up their conclusions with reasons. They think they are merely registering decrees. I am willing to admit, there is a prima facie case for benefiting the Services, but where have the Commission considered this steady fall in prices since 1920 ? On the other hand, they lead the reader to fall under the impression that the revision of 1919-20 did not take note of the rise in prices since 1914. They talk of the period 1914—23, but where do they draw attention to the fact that the Government of India and the Secretary of State took note of the rise in prices between 1914 and 1920 ? On the other hand, they talk of the full period of 1914—1923 and again have they given us the benefit of their examination as to what the Crown Colony in our neighbourhood has done in order to meet the awkward situation ? We have got a small Colony in our neighbourhood, Ceylon. What have they done in this connection ? What did the Malay States do ? Have they proposed to increase the salaries in the same way ? They are also affected in the same way as we are. They have never thought of these matters. There is no evidence of their having done so and I therefore think there is a case for further examination. While I am willing to give weight to the recommendations of the Commission, I am not willing to accept them as conclusive. I want a further examination. Now the Honourable Sir Charles Innes told us yesterday that he is not prepared to accept a Committee of this House. What else is he prepared to accept ? He would not examine the case himself. He would not allow others to examine it. He asked us to blindly accept the verdict of the Commission. Is that what the Secretary of State wants ? Does he want a blind acceptance or a blind rejection ?

[Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar.]

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman (Home Member) : We are asking you to discuss the recommendations.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : I am trying to show that, so far as the financial aspect is concerned, it requires a thorough re-examination. Great principles are involved in the recommendations to which this country is asked to commit itself. Now, if you are going to provide for every child born, for its education, for its passage, what about the army of Indian servants who are also blessed with a large number of children ? Is the State to undertake an obligation to repatriate them to their homes ? They have also got their homes. Men from Madras come here to serve in the Secretariat, two thousand miles away. I see many of my Madras friends here sitting there in that gallery. I am glad to see them. They too find it difficult to educate their children. They have to send them to learn Tamil, which is their mother tongue. Is the State to undertake that obligation ? What again about the susceptibilities of my Muhammadan friends who would like to be treated by Muhammadan doctors ? What about my Sikh friends, Sardar Gulab Singh and others ? Do they want Sikh doctors ? And about myself, Sir, I should prefer to be treated by a Brahman doctor, and preferably by a Tengalai Iyengar. And if the State accepts all these responsibilities, where is the limit ? Again Sir, there is a great danger in allowing facilities in the matter of this education abroad. My own experience, having been recently in England, is that the English people are what they are on account of their educational institutions, and we are what we are on account of the educational institutions which these gentlemen have provided for us. You talk of law and order. In England how is law and order maintained ? Not by force, police force or military force, but by education, education of the right type. Where have you given us a single public school like the ones you have in England ? Now I will compel you to keep your children here, educate them here, make public schools ; for that I am prepared to pay so that I may have the advantage of educating my children in them. (The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : "Public schools in England are not created by the Government in England".) I know that. But the people are made by the Government. (A Voice : "No, the people made the Government".) That is what encourages neglect of educational institutions in this country. Again, on the question of passages—I am willing to concede that there should be some facilities given, but still the undertaking of an obligation in the shape of passage money is a precedent which you are now creating for the first time. Hitherto passage money was included in the pay. You took it into consideration in giving them their pay and other overseas allowances. Now you want to create a separate liability on account of passages not only for the enhanced rate, but wholesale. That is again a dangerous precedent. As I have already said, the Indian servants would claim trainage fares when they go on leave. How can you with any face deny it to them when you are giving it to other classes ? Railway fares have gone up and the Indian servants are also grumbling because of the expense involved when they wish to go home on leave, when they have to travel a long distance with their families. Many of them on that account cannot avail themselves of the leave which is due to them. So these are questions which require careful consideration They have not been carefully considered by the Commission, and I therefore suggest that some machinery should be devised to go into all these things more thoroughly than the Royal Commission have done. I do not want to impute anything wilful to the Royal Commission. But I do say, I refuse to surrender my responsibility here and to accept that verdict without further opportunity of examination.

I have a great deal more to say, but I have taken up your time. All I say is that I see no other way than that contained in the recommendation we have made that the whole thing should be re-examined and that such arrangements as may be required now for future recruitment should be merely temporary and provisional pending the further reform of the constitution, and in the meanwhile let the question of the real grievances of my English friends be sympathetically examined, which we are ready to do.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty (Salem and Coimbatore cum North Arcot : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, in all discussions about the fitness of the people of India for self-government we very often hear that the existence of caste and communal differences in this country offer very serious obstacles for the realization of that ideal. But, Sir, since the inauguration of the Government of India Act of 1919 I have always felt that even more serious than the obstacle presented by the existence of these social differences is the existence of a powerfully enthroned vested interests which goes under the name of the Services. That is one of the most serious difficulties with which we have to contend in our struggle for responsible government. When I make this statement that this powerfully enthroned vested interest offers a very serious obstacle I do not mean to cast any aspersion upon the distinguished individuals that compose the Services. My complaint is against the system which, whatever might be the personnel, is bound to present very serious difficulties in the way of the establishment of responsible institutions in this country. As is well known, the Services in this country came to occupy the position which they are occupying at the present day not by their own choice but by force of historical circumstances. In the guise of Services they have existed as a ruling class. With all the sympathy which Mr. Montagu and Lord Chelmsford showed to Indian aspirations, they enhanced the difficulty of the situation by trying to keep aloof this class of the Services by inaugurating a system of safeguards and privileges. In short, by keeping them aloof from the proposed constitutional machinery. And if to-day I ask this House to agree to the amendment of my Honourable leader, Pandit Motilal Nehru, to reject the recommendations of the Royal Commission, it is on this ground, that the acceptance of those recommendations will further enhance and perpetuate those difficulties that have been created. (Hear, hear.) The Royal Commission in their inquiry have taken into consideration only the existing constitution as such. My Honourable friend, Sir Charles Innes, in his speech yesterday remarked that the Commission ought not to be blamed for this. I quite agree with him in what he says. I do not blame the Commission for the limited scope of the inquiry. Unfortunately, Sir, the very terms of reference are fundamentally defective in my view. The Commission were asked to take into consideration three factors in arriving at their conclusions. First, the necessity for maintaining the standard of administration in conformity with the responsibility of the Crown for the Government of India ; secondly, the declared policy of Parliament in respect of the increasing association of Indians in every branch of the administration, and thirdly, the experience now gained by the operation of the Government of India Act, 1919. It is these three considerations that the Commission were asked to take into consideration in arriving at their conclusions. But I have always thought that the most important portion of the Preamble to the Government of India Act has been unfortunately omitted in the terms of reference. If I have understood the Preamble to the Government of India Act correctly, the fundamental part of it is when it speaks of the gradual development of self-governing institutions with a view to the realization of responsible government in India. Sir, it is an eloquent testimony of the mentality of the Government of the day that inaugurated this Commission in that they have most tactfully omitted any reference to this declared intention of His Majesty's Government embodied and expressed in an Act of Parliament. If only the Commission had been asked to take into consideration the pledge of the British Parliament and of His Majesty's Government to so work the Indian constitution as to bring about the ultimate realization of responsible government in this country, then the scope of the inquiry of this Commission would have been altogether different and their conclusions might perhaps have been fundamentally different from what they are at present. It is because the terms of reference are fundamentally defective that we in this House find ourselves unable to accept the recommendations as made by this Commission. In paragraph (8) of the Report speaking about the Islington Commission, it is observed :

"It was however impossible to produce a scheme which would fit new circumstances without a complete re-examination of the problem, and the orders which were passed during the year 1919-20 on the recommendations of the Islington Commission suffered from having been passed on an investigation which subsequent events were rendering obsolete."

Sir, my contention is this, that since the terms of reference of this Commission were very restricted, if Government are going to give effect to their recommendations in the year 1924, perhaps in 1925, it might be said that the recommendations of the Lee Commission suffered inevitably from having been based on an investigation which subsequent events rendered obsolete.

My Honourable friend, Pandit Motilal Nehru, very pertinently asked yesterday in his speech what is the principle which underlies the recommendations of the Royal Commission, and he came to the conclusion that he could not find any principle at all. But, Sir, I find one fundamental principle which runs through the whole of the recommendations of the Royal Commission, and that principle is a deep distrust of the Legislatures of this country. At every turn safeguards are sought to be provided for the Services on the supposed ground that the Legislatures of this country, both Provincial and Central, will repudiate their obligations to maintain these Services (The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : "By throwing out the Budgets") ; provisions are proposed for the safeguarding of pensions ; recommendations are made that legal covenants must be entered into not merely for new recruits but for all those now in the Services, and the recommendation is made to make passage allowances, contributions to Provident Funds and remittance privileges non-votable. These go amply to show that the one fundamental idea that underlies the recommendations of the whole Commission is, as I said, a deep distrust of the Legislatures of this country.

After making their recommendations, the Commission speak of "the spirit of compromise which has inspired our agreed conclusion". One might very pertinently ask, what is the spirit of compromise ? Compromise between whom ? Who were the parties to this compromise ? Evidently the parties must be the Indian members of the Commission on the one side and the European members of the Commission on the other side. And what is the compromise ? It is this. The Indian members agree to give more pay for the European members of the Services and the European members in their turn are prepared to give to the Indians some more posts. That seems to be the compromise that is pervading this whole recommendation. Well, Sir, I can only say that if this is the bargain, it is not a bargain creditable to any of the parties. I thought that the principle of the increasing association of Indians in every branch of the administration had been already recognized by a Statute of Parliament, and that no more bargaining was necessary to put that into practice. Evidently the Act of 1919 enunciated the principle, and the Royal Commission thought it necessary to enter into a bargain to give effect to that declared intention. Apart from that, the Indian members of the Commission, I am afraid, in thinking that they secured a victory in getting more posts for Indians have thoroughly misunderstood and misconceived the demand for Indianisation of the Services by responsible Indian public opinion. Sir, while I do not in the least disparage the importance of the personnel in the Services and the necessity for maintaining a substantial Indian element, at the same time, I must emphatically say that Indianization is not an end by itself ; the demand for Indianization is only made as a means to a greater end. Even if the whole of the Services in India are to be manned by Indians under the existing circumstances and under the same administrative machinery as exists at the present day, responsible Indian public opinion will equally object to the existence of a service under these conditions. So what we ask for is not merely a change in the personnel of the Services. We want the service to be a real service and not a ruling power. The Honourable the Leader of the House very rightly remarked that the Services must be responsible to the authority whose policy it is meant to carry out. The position is no doubt realised by the Commission. But in what way have they tried to give effect to it ? No doubt, in so far as they recommend that all the Services under the departments that have been transferred in the Provinces must be provincialized, they recognize this principle. But in so far as they are perpetuating, with regard to the other administrative branches in the Provinces, the same system that is continuing at the present day, in so far as that is sought to be done, I contend that it is perpetuating the present system which, when the other subjects are transferred in the course of time, will present serious obstacles in the way of administration by Ministers. The invidious distinction that is maintained between All-India and Provincial Services is still sought to be perpetuated. Sir, this distinction came into existence for reasons which do not hold good to-day. The classification of the Services on an All-India basis with recruitment in England was devised originally as a means of keeping the big offices for the European members and the Provincial Service was designed to meet the then limited requirements of the Indian claims. That was the origin of the All-India and Provincial Services. I see that my Honourable friend, Mr. Chatterjee, is shaking his head, but I would like to hear from him what was the basis of this distinction. (A Voice: "No other.") But, as I pointed out, the sooner the distinction is done away with, the better will it be for the administrative efficiency of this country. As was observed in the able memorandum presented by the Madras Officers' Association to the Royal Commission, the All-India hall-mark exists only for the purpose of enabling these officers to claim to be appointed, confirmed and dismissed by an extra-provincial authority and to escape effective control either by the Provincial Executive or by the Provincial Legislature. An All-India service with these extraordinary privileges is an anachronism in any system of provincial responsible government and, we would add, is a violation in spirit of the Government of India Act of 1919. Therefore, Sir, in so far as no serious and deliberate attempt is made by the Commission to do away with this invidious distinction, I must say that this House cannot find its way to accept its recommendations.

I do not want to go into the question whether the increase in the emoluments of the Services suggested by the Commission is justifiable in the present state of affairs. As my Honourable friend, Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar, pointed out, a revision in the scale of pay of these Services was made only in the year 1919-20, and speaking in a general way we may say that from the year 1920 the tendency of prices has been to decline and not to rise, so that if to-day we are asked to agree to an increase in the emoluments of these Services, we certainly require much greater proofs of their necessity than the obiter dicta contained in the recommendations of the Royal Commission. Sir, unfortunately this insistent demand set up by the Services here for increase in their emoluments has engendered a wrong spirit in the minds of even the Indian members of the Services. Some years back when the late Mr. Gokhale wanted the rapid Indianization of the Services, he based the claim on the fact that to have Indians in the Services was cheaper than to have Europeans and that Indians could be satisfied with a lower pay and, as such, we must have more Indians. The Indian members of the Services have, not unjustifiably, put forward their own claims to prove that they also are entitled to get increased emoluments. If the cost of educating their children in England is a heavy burden upon the European members of the Services, are you not to take into consideration the special social structure of India and the joint family system which imposes a heavy burden upon the Indian officer ? If the education of the children of the European officer is a heavy burden, what about the marriage expenses of the daughters of an Indian officer ? The marriage of two daughters perhaps will consume more than the earnings he has put away in the course of his whole career. These arguments are sought to be put forward by Indian officers, and I say this clamour and this agitation has produced a very unhealthy and undesirable atmosphere. But I am not one of those who would refuse to look into the grievances of the Services, if there are any. In fact, my friend, Pandit Motilal Nehru, has made an offer that this House would look into the question if there are real grievances in the Services.

4 P.M.

I am one of those who believe, Sir, that the very foundation of democratic institutions at the present day is the existence of an efficient, well organised, contented and well paid Civil Service. The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman quoted Professor Ramsay Muir to show that nine-tenths of the administration in England is carried on by a bureaucracy, and he asked us to swallow that pill. I can only tell the Honourable Member, borrowing the phraseology of Dr. Johnson, that comparisons are odious. Can you imagine the Civil Service of England claiming compensation or solatium for a change in the government of the country ? Can you ever imagine the possibility of the Civil Service in England claiming to retire on proportionate pension if they venture to disagree from the political principles or views of the Government of the day ? But here you have the strange spectacle of the Indian Civil Servant claiming to retire on proportionate pension because he cannot see eye to eye with the political principles and policies of the Ministers in office for the time being. The real fact of the situation is this. In England and in other countries the Civil Service is a Service, but in India the Civil Service is a ruling class, and that makes all the difference. The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman I think needlessly took upon himself to justify the Services on the ground that mercenary motives had been imputed to them. I have a shrewd suspicion that he brought in this reference to the alleged mercenary motives of the Service merely to fit in with the beautiful quotation with which he concluded his speech. Sir, I am confident that no responsible politician in India has for a moment denied the extraordinary sense of duty, the integrity or honesty of purpose with which the Civil servants of India have discharged their duty.

Mr. President : I must ask the Honourable Member to bring his remarks to a close.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : Sir, almost like a machine they have been efficient in the discharge of their duties. But what is wanted to-day of them is not merely the qualities of a machine, in the exhibition of which they have been very successful in the past. They are asked to show more of the human qualities. Here to-day they are face to face with the aspirations of the Indian people towards responsible government—a state of things which has been said to be the consummation of all the services which the Indian Civil Service has rendered in the past ; and the question is—will they as loyally stand for this new policy and be content to serve as they have been able to rule in the past ?

Colonel J. D. Crawford (Bengal : European) : Sir, on this the first occasion as a newly elected Member of this House I desire to make perfectly clear to the Members of this House what my position in this House is. The fact that I was recently an officer under the Government of India and that to-day I stand prepared to support the Government Resolution, with qualifications, may lead some Members of this House to believe that I may be taken therefore practically as a Government Member. I desire to disabuse the minds of the House on that point, because since I retired I have been constantly a critic of the Government policy. As regards my position towards Indian aspirations, as an officer of the Indian Army who has served in the closest contact with Indians in the trenches and in the face of death, I would never under any circumstances be in opposition to the legitimate aspirations of Indians and their country. But I do differ largely in my opinion as to the methods by which progress must be made.

Before turning to the amendment moved by the Honourable the Pandit, I would like to think him for his support to the amendment which stands in my name. If I remember aright, he did say that he objected to the words " in principle " and to the words " approximately ". That is support from an unexpected quarter ; but possibly my point of view is somewhat different from that of the Pandit. Having served in the Government of India, I have seen on several occasions very just and very reasonable demands accepted by the Government of India only to be turned down by the Finance Department whose only principle appears to be to refuse all demands. But I will not deny that, so far as Government servants are concerned, their suspicions are aroused by the indefinite nature of such proposals ; and I was glad to see the Honourable Sir Charles Innes definitely state that the Government did not intend to attach any particular point to the words " in principle ". My object in wanting to move the amendment was to get a definite reply from the Government that they intend not only to accept the general recommendation of the Lee Commission's Report " in principle " but to move the Secretary of State to put them into practice.

I would like now to turn definitely to the amendment of the Honourable Mover. I find myself faced with the remark—" Having regard to the following among other facts " ; but on going through those " facts " I say to myself " Surely these are controversial questions and not facts." And that is my feeling in regard to many of my Indian friends—that they are not prepared to give that true consideration that they should to the recognition of realities. I take the first " fact " in the Honourable Pandit's amendment and this I find to be to my mind a half fact :

" That the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India was appointed and allowed to enter upon its functions in utter disregard of the Resolutions passed by the first Assembly."

Gentlemen, my point of view and the point of view of very many non-official Europeans is that the terms of reference of the Lee Commission went much further than there was any justification for them to go. We understood that the maintenance of a European element in the Services was one of the safeguards under which the Government of India Act was introduced. It was one of the safeguards which we believe is of paramount importance to every minority community in this country. I believe that, in stating that, I will have the support of my Muhammadan friends. The Honourable the Home Member stated that there was a feeling of apprehension amongst Muhammadans. I can say from my own personal knowledge that it is true. They realise that they are backward in education, that their own political organisation is backward and that if the safeguard of the British element in the Service was to be withdrawn to-day, they will have precious little chance of getting their rightful share in the government of the country. I therefore differ from the Honourable Mover of the amendment on the point mentioned in part (a) of it ; I do believe very great concessions have been made to this House, the Legislature framed under the Government of India Act, in permitting it to discuss the recommendations of the Lee Report and the safeguard afforded by the European element and I feel that if this House is possessed of the political acumen on which it prides itself, it would to-day accept without reservation all the recommendations of that Commission and that this would form the most telling in fact an irresistible argument for the grant of further powers to this House. (Laughter.) It would mean that we are capable as a civilised body of looking after the welfare and interests of those who may be our servants, that we are prepared to listen to their legitimate grievances and to adjust them and that there is no fear from us that they will not receive in the future every reasonable consideration. I fear, however, that if the House accepts the recommendation of the Honourable Pandit, they will be showing themselves not a civilised body. (Laughter).....

Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao (Godavari cum Kistna : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : On a point of order, is it open to an Honourable Member to characterise this body in the way in which the Honourable Member who has just spoken has done, namely, that if it accepted the amendment it would not be a civilised body ?

Mr. President : It depends entirely on the definition of civilisation.

Colonel J. D. Crawford : I should like to tell the Honourable Member who asked that question that I am using the remarks of an Indian Member of this House. This House would I believe like to declare that it represents the voice of the peoples of India. On that point I have my doubts ; they undoubtedly do represent to a certain extent the intelligentsia ; but if you want to find—and I believe it is difficult to find—the real voice of the people of India, I think it is to be found in those moments when communal feeling runs high and this fictitious campaign of race hatred is forgotten for the moment and you hear both the Hindu and Muhammadan cry for British troops and British magistrates ; it is to be heard from the depressed classes when they made their representation before the Lee Commission and when they cheered the Prince of Wales ; it should be heard from His Majesty's Commissioned Indian officers of the Indian Army when they refused to serve in an Indianised regiment. (Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha : "And from yourself.") I believe that the real peoples of India do desire to retain a European element in the services. (Cries of "No.") I am glad to hear you say that you do not desire it ; but I would point out that some of us differ from that point of view and we are entitled to hold our opinion.

I will now come to part (i) of the Honourable Pandit's amendment in which he objects to the fact of the evidence being given in camera before the Commission. I do believe the Honourable Pandit would not himself desire to place the whole of his domestic affairs in front of this House or of the public and I do feel that those officers who were placing their grievances and who were placing their budget in front of the members of the Commission had every right to ask that that Commission should consider in privacy the nature of their evidence. But with the very greatest reluctance I myself will inform the House of the exact position which was mine when I was in the service. I entered the service twenty years ago on, if I remember aright, the magnificent pay of Rs. 212, some odd annas and pies. On the first day I went to draw my pay I discovered a minus quantity. The whole amount had been swallowed up by certain mess bills and regimental subscriptions. From that day onwards I was never able to manage to make my budget meet ; and had it not been for a small windfall about the fifth year of my service, I would have had to seek work elsewhere. Again but for the period of enforced retirement in the trenches in the great war I doubt if I should have lasted ; and when I returned I found the very high rise in prices did not admit of my pay inspite of an increase in the least covering my expenses. Finally I decided, when I got my pension, that there was no purpose to be served in further remaining in Government service. That is my own position ; and I believe that is the position of every other Government servant. During the whole of my service I was enabled, mainly owing to the generosity of my bank, to proceed Home on one occasion in twenty years. I believe that if you prevented an Indian sepoy from visiting his country once every three years you will have a mutiny. I do not believe that the Members of this Assembly are prepared to deny to the European Services the same privileges which they already grant to Indians.

Sir, I would like the Government to understand that the support of the non-official European, as far as I represent him, is given to their

[Colonel J. D. Crawford.]

Resolution on the understanding that they are prepared to put those general recommendations in force in their entirety. We view with very grave misgivings as to the future of India the amount of Indianisation that has been granted by the Lee Commission. But the question has been referred to a Commission in the nature of an umpire and we are not prepared to go back on the decisions of that umpire and like true sportsmen we are prepared to stand by them.

I would add one word as to why I believe India wants Europeans. It is because they are honest, they are efficient and they are impartial. I would remind you that Indians will follow their British officers into the jaws of death without any hesitation—and why ? Because they know those officers are honest and impartial, and I believe that nearly every Indian in his heart believes that the British officers who have served India so well either in the Army or in the Government service are honest and impartial. But if you are to remove once and for all your European Members can you replace them to-day ? I would invite the House to listen to some experiences I went through in Russia where I was detailed for duty as Assistant Food Controller to the Russian Food Controller who was a Communist. Owing to their attack on the Bourgeosie (the middle class) they had removed every man who knew any thing about his job and they put Tom, Dick and Harry into their places to do the job, and, when I became Food Controller, I found that, as a result of the fact that they had not any man who knew how to bring the food, where to find it, how to make it fit for consumption or how to distribute it, the price of bread had risen to Rs. 30 per pound. That is the position which I believe would be reproduced in India to-day were we to withdraw all the men who are qualified at a moment's notice and before we had men prepared to replace them. I value the remark of my Honourable friend, Mr. Rangachariar, because I believe he aims right at the heart of the whole thing. It does not matter what has happened in the past. We have to face the position as it is. He said that we have provided no public schools in India. It is for the Indians to provide those public schools. Train these men to fill these posts and not one European will ever refuse to give a post to the Indian who is qualified first and foremost.

I would like to make a few remarks on the question of the Medical recommendations. I understand the Honourable Sir Narasimha Sarma stated that he was prepared to receive considerations from this House. I do believe that it is reasonable to grant to any man medical attention for his women folk at the hands of his own countrymen. I would not desire to force on Indian ladies medical attendance to which they objected. I do not think that Indians desire to force on Europeans or to deprive Europeans of the right to European medical attendance for their women. I personally have no prejudice and I know there are a large number of Europeans who are prepared to receive medical attendance at the hands of qualified Indians. It is a matter very largely of high qualifications. I have been attended myself by an Indian doctor and I believe there are many Europeans prepared to accept that position. But for those who have a prejudice, I do say that it is a reasonable prejudice and that this House should concede it. I would ask the Government to remember that in making provision for their European officers they should not forget to make provision for specialists, particularly maternity specialists. I would ask them also to remember the Presidency General Hospitals for Europeans and the possibility of allowing them to remain under European control.

I would like to add one word in support of what Colonel Gidney has said regarding the position of the Anglo-Indian, and I would like to read to the House the remarks of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce on this point :

"With reference to the question of recruitment, it would appear to be necessary to define the position of the Anglo-Indian, or Eurasian, community. Nothing seems to be said in the Report as to this, except that in paragraph 42 (b) it is mentioned, in respect of the Imperial Customs Services, that 'recruitment should remain on the present basis, i.e., not less than half the vacancies are to be filled by the appointment in India of statutory natives of India.' Nothing is said as to how statutory natives of India are to obtain admission to the other Services or even as to whether they are eligible at all. But obviously they ought to be included within the term 'Indian,' and the Committee presume that this is the intention of the Commissioners."

I wish to point out that the position of the Anglo-Indian in India, to-day is anomalous. For the purposes of the Auxiliary Force he is to be called a European British subject, but in the ordinary course of law he is denied the rights of a European or an Indian. I do believe that his position should be accurately defined.

Finally, I would ask the House to give this Report its very earnest consideration, because I do believe it is in the best interests of India that we should secure for ourselves a future European element. I would impress upon Government the fact that I do not believe and the non-official European does not believe that the recommendations of the Lee Commission's Report will produce further European recruitment. This House to-day is in fact and in fancy faced with the possibility that European recruitment is dead. I do feel that Government ought to assure those in the country who are of the opinion that the European element is required that, if a position does arise that these recommendations do not bring forth the necessary European recruits to fill the quota, that they will take further steps.

And, lastly, I thank the House for the kind way in which it has listened to me on this my first occasion of addressing it and I do trust that its political acumen will rise to the highest pitch and that this House will definitely state that we are prepared to treat our Services well so that it may justify the demand of this House for a further grant of power later.

Dr. H. S. Gour : Sir, at the risk of being characterised as uncivilised I wish to join issue with my esteemed friend, Colonel Crawford, who has so ably and eloquently pleaded the cause of the non-official Europeans in India. The Honourable the Home Member in his opening remarks wanted this House to accept the Report of the Lee Commission mainly in principle, but Colonel Crawford is prepared even to better the Home Member and wants us to accept the Report in all its details.

Well, Sir, I am not here concerned either with the Honourable the Home Member or with the accredited representative of the European community in Calcutta. I am here concerned with the Report of the Royal Commission which the Government asked us to accept in principle and for that purpose I would ask the Honourable Members of this House to hark back to the genesis of the appointment of this Commission contained in the communiqué of the Government of India. Those of us who were Members of the first Assembly will remember that one of us moved for a further advance in the constitutional progress of this country, and at the same time a cry was raised by the All-India Services for increased pay.

Lord Peel in his despatch of the 2nd of November, 1912, dealing with the question of further reforms made the following statement :

"The new constitutional machinery has to be tested in its working as a whole. Changes have been made as a result of the Act of 1919 in the composition, powers and responsibilities, not only of the Legislature but also of the Executive Government. No estimate of the success of the new system would pretend to completeness which was not based upon proof of the capacity of these bodies as now constituted to administer the duties entrusted to them, duties which from the point of view of the public welfare are at least as important as those of the Legislatures, and trustworthy proof of such capacity can only be established by experience of the extent to which the increased association of Indians in the sphere of executive responsibility has justified itself in practice."

Now, Sir, shorn of its verbiage, what does this despatch mean ? It means simply this. The Government of India Act has not been sufficiently long in existence nor has the country tried it for a sufficiently long period to justify a further step in advance.

(At this stage, Mr. President vacated the Chair, which was taken by the Deputy President, Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar.)

His Lordship further went on to point out that the question is not merely a question of the Transferred Departments of the Government in the provinces but also a question relating to the Executive Governments of the Provinces and the Central Government. Indians had been associated in the Reserved as well as the Transferred Departments and a long experience was necessary before the Secretary of State would advise Parliament to give further reforms. That was the position of the Secretary of State. Not a month passed before the self-same Secretary of State appointed a Royal Commission and in appointing which he said :

"In view of the experience now gained of the operation of the system of Government established by the Government of India Act in respect of the Superior Services, the Royal Commission is appointed."

In the one case the system had not been sufficiently long tested, but a month later it was said that experience of the system had been so far gained as to justify the appointment of a Royal Commission. Now, Sir, it is in view of these facts that this Assembly objected to the appointment of a Royal Commission, and later on, when the question of its cost came up, the grant was rejected by this Assembly. The Royal Commission was nevertheless appointed, and its Report is before this House. Honourable Members will remember that at the last meeting of this House we asked the occupants of the Treasury Benches to give us copies of the evidence of witnesses examined by the Royal Commissioners, and the Honourable Member promised to consider our suggestion. When speaking on the subject, the Honourable the Home Member has referred to a passage contained in the Report of the Royal Commission in which they refer to the subject of evidence, and the Honourable the Home Member read it in justification for refusing to give this House access to the evidence recorded by them. Colonel Crawford in his speech has also referred to this aspect of the question. I ask the Honourable the Home Member and the Members of this House that if for the sake of argument some evidence was given in camera—and you know that some evidence was given in camera—what was there to prevent the Government giving us the facts, suppressing the names of the witnesses, so that we may be in possession of the facts and the secrecy which the witnesses had enjoined upon the Royal Commission would be preserved inviolate. That has not been done. The evidence which was given by the witnesses in public has also not been given to us. The Honourable the Home Member says, "Accept this Report upon three grounds. First, look to the personnel of the Royal Commission, secondly remember that their report is unanimous, and thirdly, do not forget that it is a compromise based upon mutual arrangement," to which the Honourable Sir Charles Innes in his speech added that it is a Royal Commission and that therefore this House must treat its report with great sanctity. Now, Sir, while making every allowance for the personnel and nature of the Report this House asks itself one simple question— and I have no doubt that the Honourable the Home Member with his long legal training will be able to answer the question. Supposing a long and voluminous record consisting of oral and documentary evidence and the judgment pronounced thereupon was placed before him and it was proposed to abstract from the record everything except the judgment and ask the Honourable the Home Member to justify that judgment. What would be his answer? I have not the slightest doubt, Sir, that the Honourable the Home Member will say, "Take away this judgment. I cannot pronounce any opinion upon it because you have taken away from me all the evidence and documents upon which this judgment was based" and this would be a perfectly reasonable answer of the Honourable the Home Member to the case I have supposed. And yet he wants this House to accept the Report in principle. In fact, he goes further and asks this House to accept the detailed proposals which he has categorised. Now, Sir, one grave apprehension in the minds of the Honourable Members of this House—and I have no doubt that it is an apprehension universally felt by the people of this country—is that if we accept this Report, it would prejudice and embarrass the reforms, because, it is an axiomatic fact that the question as to what should be the pay and prospects of the Civil Service must depend upon the future political constitution of this country. It is a fact which cannot be denied that the future of the Civil Service is linked and bound up with the future of the reforms, and the question of their pay cannot be determined without determining the nature of the work which they will be called upon to do in the future. I therefore venture to submit, how can any settlement be made regarding the pay and prospects of the Civil Service unless we know what is to be the future constitution of this country?

Then, Sir, turning to the Report itself, one feeling which Members of this House must have in their minds, and a feeling which I share, is how the Indian Civil Service compares with its sister services in England and the Colonies. What nature of relief has been given, say, to the Home Civil Service and what nature of relief has been given to the members of the Colonial Civil Service? If I remember aright, I read so far as the Home Civil Service is concerned, that they have been given temporary bonus based upon index figures, and as the prices fall, that bonus is reduced. Now, Sir, I ask Honourable Members of the Government why a similar system should not have been adopted in this country. The Honourable Mr. Rangachariar has pointed out that the basic pay and the emoluments of the Civil Services which the Royal Commissioners recommend for adoption by the Government of India are not liable to revision even if there is an increasing tendency of falling prices. The recommendations of the Royal Commission are therefore inelastic and fixed, whereas the relief given by the Home Government to the English Civil Service is elastic and liable to variation according to the fall in prices.

Mr. Deputy President: May I remind the Honourable Member that his time for finishing is nearing.

Dr. H. S. Gour: I wish also to ask the Honourable the Finance Member how this country will be situated in relation to the demand that is likely to arise on the All-India Services being granted increased emoluments. We have a very large number of officers in the Army in India and we have a very large number of officers in what is known as the uncovenanted civil services. Now, Sir, if you give the higher and better paid servant of the Crown these special privileges and emoluments, would not the lesser paid officials of Government in the Army and in the uncovenanted civil services demand similar privileges? These are questions, Sir, which the Royal Commissioners did not take into consideration. I should like to know what would be the cumulative liability of the people of this country if all these demands were conceded, which I fear will have to be conceded if once the Government of India and the Secretary of State accede to the recommendations of the Lee Commission.

Then, Sir, I should like to ask one more question of the occupants of the Treasury Benches and it is this. In the communiqué, and indeed in the Report of the Royal Commission, it is postulated that the All-India servants in the reserved fields will be subject to the control of the Secretary of State, those employed in the transferred fields being subject to the control of the Local Government. That is a system based upon the present system of Government by diarchy. Now, we, the Members of this House, and the public at large have condemned diarchy and are asking for a further advance in the direction of self-government. What position would the Government take with reference to the existing and future entrants in the Indian Civil and other All-India Services if hereafter the Government and Parliament were to accede to the demand of the people of this country and grant them a larger measure of self-government doing away altogether with the Reserved Departments in the provinces?

Mr. Deputy President: Will the Honourable Member bring his remarks to a close?

Dr. H. S. Gour: On these grounds, Sir, I feel that we are not in a position to decide forthwith on the various questions raised in the Lee Commission's Report, and long before the Home Member tabled his Resolution I had sent in notice of an amendment that the whole question be examined by a Committee of this House. I am glad, Sir, that the Honourable Pandit Motilal Nehru is substantially of the same opinion, and I am therefore glad to support his amendment.

Seth Govind Das (Central Provinces: Landholders): I rise, Sir, to oppose the Resolution of the Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman and to support the amendment of my Honourable friend, Pandit Motilal Nehru. The reasons that prompt me to oppose this Resolution are twofold. Firstly the question of the Civil Service in the country is inseparably connected with the larger question of constitutional progress of India and it cannot therefore be considered separately without prejudicing the constitutional advance of the country. Secondly, the Lee Commission has been appointed not only without consulting this House, the representative of the tax-payers, but also against the considered opinion of the country.

I shall not speak here, Sir, at this time on the merits and demerits of the recommendations of the Commission itself, which have been so ably discussed by my Honourable friend, Pandit Motilal Nehru, and others on this side of the House. I shall content myself with the discussion of broad general principles that ought to regulate the relations of the Services to the Legislative Assembly. The Honourable the Home Member in his speech yesterday laid down a very dangerous doctrine in saying that the House should have nothing to do with the organisation, control and discipline of the Services and quoted Professor Ramsay Muir in support of his dictum. Now, Sir, I do not at all agree with his view, and I have the support of such eminent authorities on constitutional law as Dicey and Anson, in saying that Parliament lays down by legislation the conditions under which the Services have to work. Am I to understand, Sir, that theories of Government differ from place to place? It is a general axiom of sound constitutional government that the policy of the State is to be formulated by the Legislature, while the execution of that policy is to be left in the hands of well-chosen, well-trained permanent officials, the Civil Service. Now, Sir, in India unfortunately both the formulation and the execution of policy has been to a large extent entrusted in one and the same hands, the Members of the Civil Service. The reforms of 1919 have, no doubt, introduced some changes in this matter, but still may I be permitted to say, Sir, that the formulation of State policy is to a larger extent determined by the Civil Service in India than anywhere else in the world. This, Sir, seems to me the first great point of contrast between the Indian and the Home Civil Service. In the western countries the Services exist exclusively for the benefit of the people, while in India, rightly or wrongly, an impression prevails that the country exists for the benefit of the Services. This impression gathers weight for two reasons, firstly, the higher Civil Services have been almost entirely composed of a foreign element, and secondly, the emoluments of the Services have been quite disproportionate to the payable capacity of the country, though I do not deny that the Services have rendered good work in the past in their own way. But, Sir, no other country in the world, not even the richest like the United States of America or England pays a remuneration to the members of the Civil Services comparable to what India has been paying, and we are now asked to enhance this payment still further, so that it will cost the tax-payer an additional crore of rupees per year at a time when retrenchment is the order of the day the world over. It is curious to see the Government proposing in one and the same breath two different things, namely, retrenchment of the subordinate services and an increase of salaries for the Superior Civil Services. It is difficult to understand the mentality of a Government that wants to reduce the salaries of the subordinate services and proposes at the same time an additional expenditure of a crore of rupees per year on services that are already getting princely salaries. Lala Lajpat Rai, writing in the Modern Review, about the year 1917, compared the scale of salaries paid to the Civil Service in the United States of America, Japan, England and India and conclusively proved therein that India is paying more than any other country for its general administration and certainly far more than it can reasonably afford to pay. But, Sir, this state of affairs is inevitable so long as we have a Civil Service composed of men of non-Indian domicile and the remedy lies in the complete Indianisation of the services on an Indian scale of pay based on the standard of living in India and in stopping the further recruitment in England except for short-term contracts based upon the law of supply and demand in the open market. But then, Sir, it was urged by my Honourable friend, the Commerce Member, that India cannot get on without the help of the ma-bap members of the Indian Civil Service for a long time to come. I submit, Sir, that the present bureaucracy is neither ma, nor bap, whenever its own or the commercial interests of England are concerned. If it were not so, it would not have levied excise duties as early as 1874 at a time of severe famine in India....

Mr. Deputy President : I am afraid the Honourable Member is straying away from the point before the House.

Seth Govind Das : I shall leave this point and come to another, Sir. The Honourable the Commerce Member also declared that the people of India require personal rule, but, Sir, is not personal rule prevailing even in so-called democracies like the United States of America, France and England according to Lord Bryce ? Have not democracies existed in ancient India long before they were known in Europe, according to the high testimony of the historian, Vincent Smith, himself a distinguished member of the I. C. S., and Havell and others ?

I now come, Sir, to the Honourable Member's third point, namely, that due to communal and caste differences, India requires British members in the Civil Services. May I point out to him, Sir, the fact that under Muhammadan rule, Hindus held the highest appointments including that of the Prime Minister and Commander-in-Chief under Akbar. Now, Sir, during the 150 years of British rule in India, not one single Indian has been appointed by the ma-bap Government to any such high positions. Is it not the case even now that in Hyderabad and Kashmir communal differences are less than in British India ?

Now, coming to the financial side of the question, it is a fact, Sir, that India spends far less per capita on the nation-building departments, such as education, public health, sanitation and the development of industries, than any other civilised country in the world. The Civil servant, due to the high cost of the civil and military administration of the country of the future, according to Lord Haldane, when he enters the Service, has to take upon himself the triple vow of poverty, anonymity and obedience. I am afraid, Sir, the Indian Civil Service, whatever its other virtues may have been, has never been guilty of this ideal of Civil Service. It has been aggressive, vocal and as far as emoluments go, the best paid service in the world. A word may be said with reference to poverty. By poverty, Sir, I do not mean destitution. There is a technical distinction between the two terms. I do not mean that the Civil servant should not have enough to live on. But I do mean that he should not try to compete with the business world in profits and income. I think the Civil servant should look upon his salary as maintenance adequate to the needs of himself and to bring up his family, if he has one, according to the highest standards of education in the country and that is not always the standard of the business and profit-making world. I do not think, Sir, the Civil servant should aim at salaries which really compete with the income of the business man. Judged from this standpoint the members of the Superior Civil Services in India are already getting more than the same class of men obtain in England or elsewhere. We may roughly take it that the average income of a member of the Indian Civil Service at the age of 40 is at present £1,600 to £1,700 per year in addition to allowances, pension, etc. Surely very few men of the age of 40 in England make as much as that either in the learned professions, such as law and medicine, engineering or teaching, or in any other profession except business. £2,000 a year at the age of retirement together with a pension of £1,000 a year will hardly be called poverty, or destitution even according to the highest Western standards. Even the Cabinet Ministers in England and America are content with £2,000 a year while in Japan the Prime Minister gets only £1,000 a year.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I would point out to the Honourable Member that his figures are quite incorrect.

Seth Govind Das : I will prove them later on. I now come to the second point, anonymity. It would be obviously impossible and even disastrous for the Civil servant to pass beyond the stage of obedience (that of carrying on policy, and advising on policy if need be) and to attempt to dictate policy as was alleged to be the case in some provinces (Bihar, the United Provinces, the Punjab, etc.) as that would lead to the worst form of bureaucracy. I think perhaps it is rather important that the extent of the Civil servants' obedience should be known to the public in future, so that they may regard them as truly servants of the nation and not masters. According to the testimony of Sir Sydney Webb, a leading member of the present British Cabinet, it is not uncommon in England for the Civil servant to carry out the Minister's orders such as the drafting of a Bill, though he himself may be opposed to the principles of the Bill proposed by the Minister. In India, unfortunately such obedience is rare (as the Civilian has direct access to the highest executive authority) and here it is, Sir, that the spirit of the Civil Service has to undergo a thorough and radical change. Let us now compare the conditions of the British Colonial and Foreign Civil Services with the Indian Civil Service. The Sudanese and African Civil Services do not certainly pay as highly as the Indian Civil Service. The amenities of life in Africa and the Crown Colonies are not as attractive as in India and West Africa (Nigeria) and Sierra Leone has been described as the "White Man's grave." Though these evils are admitted by Englishmen they are attracting a large number of men from England for service in Africa and I have no doubt, Sir, that India will still continue to draw some of the best men from England, due to its better climate, better pay and better amenities of life. Dr. Gregory in his recent address at Toronto before the British Science Association declared that the white man can live and thrive in the tropics, thus exploding the old theory of the unsuitability of India to Europeans. Many of the hardships felt in India by the British Civil services are fancied and imaginary and the scale of remuneration certainly compensates for the self-imposed exile.

Sir William Beveridge, himself a distinguished ex-Civilian of the Home Civil Service, says that members of the Civil Service " must in a very real sense belong to an ' Order ' like the order of St. Francis under a vow ". It would be disastrous if Civil servants gave up the idea of working as hard as they could for their salary, if they gave up that idea for the idea of adjusting their effort to the pay which they are getting. It would be no less disastrous if they were to abandon anonymity for applause; or if they stepped beyond giving advice on policy to try and dictate policy as was alleged to be the case recently in some of the provinces. The future recruits to the Service, whether Indian or European, must have this true understanding of the nature of the Service and of its new conditions as a community of service.

Before I conclude, Sir, I wish to point out that the adoption of the recommendations of the Lee Commission would mean the very antithesis of that new spirit in Civil Services the world over and of acute dissatisfaction in India, as it would introduce racial discrimination in the terms of service between Indian and European officers, and of the adoption of a standard of remuneration which not even the richest countries have dared to adopt, and which India, one of the poorest nations in the world, cannot certainly afford, if her nation-building departments are to be properly looked after and if she is to advance on a par with the Western nations in the moral and material development of her people and civilisation.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney: Sir, I rise to make a personal explanation. The Honourable Mr. Burdon stated that in my speech I made use of certain remarks that belittled, decried and under-valued Sir Charles Burtchaell as a R. A. M. C. officer and a soldier who had performed meritorious service in the Army both in India and in England. Sir, I have not got a copy of my speech with me, but I would be very surprised and pained if I saw in my remarks one word having such an implication. If any word I said conveyed this impression I withdraw it and apologise to Sir Charles Burtchaell. If my memory serves me right, Sir, I judged Sir Charles Burtchaell by his scheme on which the Lee Commission's medical recommendation was based, and taking that I believe I said that he saw medical reforms, as judged by his scheme, through a pair of glasses marked "R. A. M. C." and that he looked upon anything medical trained in India with the brand of inferiority. How these remarks can be considered in the light taken by the Honourable Mr. Burdon I fail to understand. But I repeat, Sir, that if on reading my speech, I find any of my remarks conveyed such an impression, or even a suspicion of it, I gladly and readily now state that I apologise and withdraw them. 5 P.M.

Mr. E. Burdon: Sir, I was not alone in the interpretation which I put upon certain remarks made by the Honourable Member. But of course I am only too glad to accept his assurance that this was not intended.

STATEMENT OF BUSINESS.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman (Home Member): Sir, I should like to tell the House the course of business for the next week.

On Monday the House will be asked to take into consideration the Indian Soldiers (Litigation) Bill, as passed by the Council of State, the Report of the Select Committee on the Imperial Bank of India (Amendment) Bill, the India Motor Vehicles (Amendment) Bill, as passed by the Council of State, the Bill to amend the Indian Penal Code now known as the Morality Bill, and, if there is time, the Obscene Publications Bill, as passed by the Council of State. Tuesday has been allotted, as Honourable Members are aware, for non-official Bills, and Thursday for non-official Resolutions. Wednesday will be a Government day and we hope to be able to resume the discussion on Sir Charles Innes's Resolution relating to the separation of Railway Finance. On Friday certain supplementary demands will be laid before the Assembly, and it is hoped to find time to discuss the Reports of the Select Committees on the Indian Merchant Shipping (Amendment) Bill, the Land Customs Bill, and the Provident Funds Bill which has been passed by the Council of State.

Mr. Chaman Lall (West Punjab: Non-Muhammadan): May I ask the Honourable Member if he is prepared to give an extra half day on Saturday ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: For what purpose ?

Mr. Chaman Lall: For the discussion of the Lee Commission's recommendations.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: I must see how the debate goes to-morrow before making any promise about it.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Friday, the 12th September, 1924.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Friday, 12th September, 1924.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

EXERCISE OF THE DISCRETION OF THE CHAIR TO DISPENSE WITH QUESTIONS.

Mr. President : On a previous occasion, when there was a matter of great importance before the House, I used the discretion of the Chair to dispense with questions. This is a case in which we might reasonably follow that precedent, and I think I shall be consulting the interests of the House as a whole if I suggest that we proceed to resume debate on the Lee Commission's Report at once. Members will not thereby lose any opportunity otherwise available to them for asking questions of the Government.

RIOT AT KOHAT.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan, Urban) : May I, with your permission, ask a question of the Foreign Secretary of which I have given private notice—regarding the riot that happened at Kohat ? Is the Foreign Secretary in a position to make a statement regarding the riot at Kohat ?

Mr. Denys Bray (Foreign Secretary) : A riot broke out between the Hindus and Muhammadans of Kohat about midday on Tuesday. Fire arms were used by the rioters causing several casualties, and parts of the city were fired. The situation quickly grew beyond the power of the police to control, and no time was lost in calling on the military for assistance. A squadron of cavalry and a company of infantry were at once sent to the city. As firing continued, the infantry entered, and, at the request of the Deputy Commissioner, opened fire on men who were firing from the upper windows of the houses. In all nine single shots were fired by the troops. It is not known whether these took effect or not ; but the firing from the houses ceased. Meanwhile fires arose in different areas and gained considerable hold. Extra troops were sent into the city to fight the fire and stop looting which had started. All fires but one were under control at night fall and the city was outwardly quiet.

Magistrates and police remained within the city and troops were employed in picketing and patrolling. The night passed quietly. Troops re-entered the city on the morning of the 10th and extinguished the fire. But there was fresh firing and fresh incendiarism in the morning, due in part apparently to outsiders who had managed to elude the patrols and enter the city in the dark. Shots were fired at the fire extinguishing parties, and police and frontier constabulary swept the city. Much assistance was given by the troops to the civil authorities in the difficult task of rescuing the Hindus in the city. By the evening most of them had been extricated and desultory firing had ceased. The roll of killed and wounded is still unknown, but the reports I have received estimate the killed at about 12 and the wounded at about double.

My reports, as is often the case where the men who have to report are in the thick of anxious happenings and urgent action, are still incomplete and lacking in detail. In particular I have yet to receive an authoritative account of the causes—or rather the immediate cause—of this most deplorable tragedy.

Pandit Shamlal Nehru (Meerut Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May I know, Sir, if any steps were taken to deprive the rioters of their fire-arms ?

Mr. Denys Bray : I fear I must have given the Honourable Member a very poor account of this most deplorable business, for it to be possible for him to put to me such a question.

PROCEDURE IN REGARD TO THE AMENDMENTS TO THE GOVERNMENT RESOLUTION RELATING TO THE RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE LEE COMMISSION.

Dr. H. S. Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, may I ask your ruling on a question of procedure ? There are nineteen amendments on the agenda paper ? If the amendment of Pandit Motilal Nehru is carried, what will be its effect upon the other amendments which stand on the paper ?

Mr. President: If the amendment now under discussion standing in the name of Pandit Motilal Nehru is carried, then all the other amendments fall to the ground.

Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally (Sind Muhammadan : Rural) : May I inquire one thing, Sir ? Is the amendment of Pandit Motilal Nehru to be put forward as a whole or in parts, as it is just possible that some Members may not be in a position to agree to or oppose the whole amendment ?

Mr. President : I am prepared to put the amendment in parts when we come to the point when, after discussion, the question will be put from the Chair.

RESOLUTION RE RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE LEE COMMISSION—concld.

Mr. H. Calvert (Punjab : Nominated Official) : Sir, I feel that I am in a somewhat difficult position in addressing the House to-day for, Sir, I am a member of the Services and am personally affected by the decisions to be taken on the Report. But, Sir, I would ask the indulgence of this House to accept what I have to say, not as a special personal plea on my own part, but as representing the other members of the Services, as I have been authorised to speak as the President of the All-India Association of European Government Servants. I am not, Sir, going to ask for any generosity from this House—I appeal solely to their sense of justice and fairplay. I wish to put a few salient points of the case of the Services and shall trust to the judicial fair-mindedness of Honourable Members for a fair consideration of our case. I should like, Sir, to thank the Honourable the Leader of the House for repudiating the suggestion that the financial recommendations of the Lee Commission were in any sense whatever designed to make the Services loyal to the reforms. It may have been, Sir, an accident, or it may have been designed that that charge should have been sent round to some of us in the form of an advertisement, but it has been said outside the House, not inside. Further, Sir, there is one more matter I should like to mention. There have been strong attacks outside the House on the Indian members of the Commission. I should like, Sir, on behalf of the Services to say that if ever Indians are again placed in similar positions of difficulty and responsibility, they can rely upon the confidence of the Services in their integrity, impartiality and sense of justice. Now, Sir, I am going to assume that all Honourable Members have read that little blue-book of extracts from Service representations, and I do not intend to cover the ground dealt with in that little blue-book. This Report of the Lee Commission has been received throughout the Services of India with a feeling of keen disappointment. The Report itself admits a rise of prices, within a short period, of 60 per cent. and recommends relief to the extent of 6 to 10 per cent. We must remember, Sir, that the Services received no relief and no war bonus and no special consideration for the rise in prices. I should like just once again to refer to the statement made by Mr. Montagu in a letter to the Times in January 1923. He said :

> " It is undoubtedly true that the Services in India have not received increases of pay comparable to those received by the Services at Home ; that the increases of pay which they have received were in the main regarded, after authoritative inquiry as due before the worldwide rise in the cost of living which resulted from the war ; and that these increases were fixed when the rate of exchange was, and was expected to remain, more favourable than it is to-day or is likely to be for some time."

In the House of Lords, Sir, Lord Lee said practically the same thing when he said :

> " No account has been taken of the change in prices brought about by the war. The result was that the position of the Indian Civil Services was immeasurably worse than that of Civil Servants at Home."

The result is, Sir, that the position of the Services in India was really much worse than the Royal Commission recognised. The fact is that there has been no increase of pay worth noting in superior posts for the last 55 years. The pensions of the uncovenanted services, as stated in the little book which has been circulated, have remained without increase for nearly 70 years.

What actually happened, Sir, was this. We prepared, with the greatest care, budgets for submission to the Royal Commission. We discussed in various places, in various ways, how we should present our case. We had conferences at Simla, conferences down at Nagpur, and we finally saw that the schemes practically in the net result worked out to very much the same, and we were able to bring all the Services together to agree on one single case to be put before the Royal Commission. Now, what happened ? We prepared the case with great care and we took trouble to put forth nothing that would not stand the test of strict cross-examination on its details. We spent a lot of time and took a lot of care over it. Yet the Commission stated in paragraph 46 that they had not time to examine the case put forward, but, Sir, curiously enough, they had the time to examine the finances of the Government of India in such detail as to be able to say that they could not bear a heavier burden. The result is, Sir, that the Commission has left untouched a large number of grievances which were brought to its notice. It has left unsolved the question of the provident and family pension fund for the un-covenanted services, such as the revenue establishments of railways and specialist officers. The Women's Educational Service, a service composed of devoted, patient and honourable women, whose labour has surely earned credit from everybody, who are trying to remove the curse of illiteracy amongst women, they, Sir, were nearly recognised as worthy of consideration and no recommendation was made to relieve that position. I trust that Honourable Members who take any interest in the education of Indian women will press the Indian Government to relieve the grievances of the members of the Women's Educational Service. Now, Sir, we value this Report of the Commission not for the recommendations which are annexed to it, but for its very clear admission of the fairness and justice of the case we put before them. It admits, and fully admits, that we have very serious grievances; and we gather that although, in the interests of unanimity, the members could not put their signatures to it, they actually asked Sir Reginald Craddock to record a statement of what he thought was fair and just. Now, Sir, I am not going into a detailed consideration of the case of the Services. I wish to speak chiefly on two points, both of which are mentioned in the amendment of Pandit Motilal Nehru and they also find a place in the amendment of Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar. In both cases, the idea is that the Services are a burden on the tax-payer and that it will be necessary to increase taxation. There is also a complaint that the evidence was not placed before this House. Sir, in so far as the evidence relates to Service grievances, there is nothing confidential and nothing secret about it. The materials on which we based our case are available to everybody. I may say Sir, that I am going to refer particularly to the Civil List of 1875. The Civil List of 1875 has been in the Secretariat Library ever since 1875, and there is nothing secret, nothing confidential about it. Then, Sir, Datta's "Rise of Prices," which is a monumental work, is open to the public; it is open to anybody to read who has patience, and it is, in part, the basis of our plea. Now, Sir, let us take this charge that we are a burden on the finances of the country. That charge, Sir, is so ridiculous that it is almost a waste of time to contest it. I will begin with the Finance Department of the Government of India. Can anyone pretend that the Finance Department of the Government of India is a burden to the tax-payer? That department exists to save the tax-payers' money, and those who are in the Services can testify from experience, both varied and extensive, how much money they do save. Now, Sir, in the course of this debate, there has been some discussion as to what the position of the Service is now and what it was, as the Leader of the House referred to, in 1912, and in 1914, which was mentioned by Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar. I have taken the trouble to examine in detail the Civil Lists for 1875 and the Civil Lists for 1898. I took 1875 as that happened to be the oldest Civil List available in the Punjab Secretariat. I have worked out the pay drawn by officers in the regular line in the Provinces for 25 years. It may interest Honourable Members to know in comparing that pay drawn for 25 years' service in 1875 with the present pay, it was higher then than it is now. What really happened was this. In the early days when the cost of living in this country was fairly low, officers were able to save and the pension they got was sufficiently liberal. As the cost of living has risen the pension has become relatively smaller and officers have been unable to save. The result is that they retire at a later age and so we have a progressively increasing block in promotion. The result is, if you take an officer of 25 years' service in the regular line, he is progressively getting less and less. If to our scale of 1875 pay we add exchange compensation allowance, about 6 per cent., and if to the pay now drawn you add overseas pay, then the result is an increase by 8 per cent. as compared to what it was 50 years ago. I am not, Sir, going into the figures which Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar gave the House yesterday about the rise in the cost of living since 1914. I do not think it is necessary to discuss the rise in the cost of living since 1875. I think all Members of this House will agree that the cost of living now as compared with 1875 has risen by more than a hundred per cent. (Pandit Shamlal Nehru : "What about the increment in 1920 ?") The increment, compared to the rise in cost of living in the last 50 years is inadequate. I may also say that Indians entering the Civil Service at the present scale will continue to draw less pay than what officers drew in 1875. Now, Sir, one result is that throughout the Provinces of India in all the regular line posts, there are senior officers of 22 years' service and over drawing less pay than officers of the same seniority 50 years ago ; they are actually drawing less rupees per month. Since the 1919 scale of pay, senior officers in many Provinces have been actually drawing less than before. Commissioners, Financial Commissioners, Chief Secretaries, all had their pay reduced by the 1919 scale. Now, Sir, one of the biggest difficulties which faces the Government in trying to deal fairly with its Services is this problem of the block in promotion, and it was owing to this block in promotion that there was a very serious decline in prospects, which led to the appointment of the Islington Commission. That Commission, Sir, set itself, not to increase the pay of our Services, but to remove the effects of the blocking of promotion. There has been a great deal said about the year 1898 and I will say something more now. The year 1898 was referred to in the Montford Report. If you compare the 1919 scale with the pay drawn in 1898, it will be seen that beyond the first few years there is not a single year which received more pay than that drawn in 1898. In fact, the 1919 scale gave less than the average of 1898. This difference, Sir, was made up by the overseas pay, and thus the 1919 scale became practically the 1898 scale. Now, the 1919 scale dealt with the blocking of promotion. The result was that it gave a rise of pay of about 25 per cent. to officers from the 7th to the 16th year of service. Above 16 years it gave less and above 21 years it actually gave a scale which was less than that drawn in 1875. I am mentioning these facts because there is the impression in the House that the 1919 scale has given much to the Services. It has also been mentioned in this House that this scale led to increased expenditure. That increase of expenditure, Sir, did not represent any fresh burden. It simply represented the sum which had been saved to the State by the accumulated blocking of promotion. Even the Report of the Lee Commission will pay the members of the Indian Civil Service less than 25 yer cent. over the 1875 scale. Now, Sir, Honourable Members have not fully appreciated this important matter, because when the Secretary of State has to advertise for recruits, he actually has to advertise the best and most favourable terms.

[Mr. H. Calvert.]

[Mr. H. Calvert.]

In the Communiqué of 1919 it was mentioned that "the new time-scale represents a substantial increase on the rates at present in force. The initial emoluments have been raised by 50 per cent." Well, Sir, people might think that this 1919 time-scale represented a considerable rise in pay. I must admit that it did raise the initial emoluments by 50 per cent. for the first six months. But officers in the second year of their service drew less. In fact they would have preferred to draw the old scale because in 1919 we were feeling the effects of the stoppage of recruitment during the war. The result was that the lowest grade of Assistant Commissioners was practically empty. Any young man who entered into the Service would act in the 700 grade after the first year of his service.

Mr. President: I will ask the Honourable Member to draw his remarks to a close.

Mr. H. Calvert: I have to deal with various Services and I hope you will just give me a few minutes. The main point is that these Services are a source of profit to the State. The forests of India in 1875 were going to destruction. We got trained men about that time and they are now a source of profit to the State and are earning a large income. The Irrigation Services have added to the revenues of India something like 83 crores. The Engineering Service has also done a lot for the country. The Railways of India have latterly been giving an annual net surplus. They have not been a burden on the tax-payer. If we consider the question of proportion I may say, Sir, that the recommendations of the Lee Commission will have practically no effect on the tax-payer. In the Irrigation Department the pay of the Imperial Service officers is only 1.9 per cent. of the gross receipts from the Irrigation works. It is about less than 3 per cent. on construction. Thus the cost of the Imperial Service is practically negligible, and the small rise of 6 or 7 per cent. is nothing. I know, Sir, that some Honourable Members do not give us the credit for adding to the material prosperity of India. I may just mention, Sir, that the Irrigation Works now bring in a gross produce of about 170 crores of rupees every year. Yet Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar and Pandit Motilal Nehru say that the tax-payers cannot afford to pay the enormous amount. There is no time to go into the details, but the population which depends upon this irrigation is something like 45 millions, which is larger than the whole population of France. The area under irrigation is at present something like 28 million acres and, if works under construction are brought to completion, the area will be increased to 40 million acres.

Mr. President: The Honourable Member has exceeded his time-limit and is now becoming irrelevant.

Mr. H. Calvert: They are not a burden on the State. The European Services in this country bring large sums of revenue every year which relieves the tax-payer. They bring large sums of money from Irrigation; large sums of money from Railways and large sums of money from "Civil Justice." So far from being a burden on the tax-payer they relieve the tax-payer of these large sums of money, which would have to be raised otherwise.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas (Indian Merchants' Chamber: Indian Commerce): Sir, I rise to support the Honourable Pandit Motilal

Nehru's amendment. My electorate, the Indian Merchants' Chamber of Bombay, gave evidence before the Lee Commission and that evidence was not given under the seal of secrecy, but was available to the press at that time. My views, therefore, to-day before this House will be in conformity with that evidence and will be in disapproval of the Report submitted by the Lee Commissioners.

The Honourable the Commerce Member reminded this House at the very start of his speech that they were dealing with the Report of a Commission which was a Royal Commission, a Commission appointed by His Majesty the King Emperor. I have no doubt that the Honourable Member referred to this in order to remind the Honourable Members that their sense of loyalty to the Crown required them to consider the Report with all the respect due to the appointment by the Crown, and perhaps partly asking for the endorsement of the Report on the same ground. I wish the Honourable the Commerce Member had also reminded this House that His Majesty the King Emperor, George V, was a constitutional Monarch of a most high and ideal order and that it would be best for this Assembly ever hereafter, whenever any question comes before them, to bear in mind that the King can do no wrong.

If any wrong is done to the subjects of His Majesty the King Emperor, it is owing to the advice to His Majesty, which he, as the ideal constitutional Monarch, is bound to follow. I therefore submit, Sir, that there is nothing wanting in loyalty to the Crown if this House considers even the Royal Commission's Report, not on sentiment of deep loyalty to the Crown, which I know is embedded in the minds of every one in this House, but on merits of the Report.

I would, Sir, before I pass on, refer to the last portion of the speech of the Honourable the Leader of the House. I do not know if my Honourable friend from Madras, Mr. Shanmukham Chetty, had it from the Leader of the House that he (the latter) referred in his criticism of the Services to them as " mercenary hordes " in order to fit in his excellent quotation at the end, but I should like, Sir, to pay my tribute of admiration to the great and good work that has been done by the Services till now. I am sure, however, that the Honourable the Leader of the House will admit that, if the Services have done well by India, India also till now has treated the Services very well indeed.....

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I should like to assure my Honourable friend that I did not make remarks of that kind in order to adorn my speech ; I said that because I felt it and felt it deeply.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : I have no doubt of that because I felt the Honourable the Leader of the House spoke with genuine feeling and hence my reference. But, Sir, that admiration on our part of the work done by the Services till now should not prevent us from looking at the proposition put before us in a fair-minded way, in a spirit of justice both to the Services, and I claim in a spirit of justice and fair-mindedness, also to the tax-payer.

Grave warnings have been uttered in responsible quarters before now regarding the apprehensions of some in case the Royal Commission's recommendations are not put in force. Viscount Lee, speaking in the House of Lords, said :

[Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas.]

"The present position is, as it seems to me, deplorable and must be alleviated, unless we are prepared to say that we are going....to step out of our responsibility in India and haul down the flag."

Later on he said :

"I go further and state my belief that, unless the morale and contentment of the Services be restored, it will be the first step on the road to our losing India altogether."

Viscount Inchcape said :

"If the authority of the Viceroy and the Civil Services," (I would like the House to mark the bracketting) "should be undermined, then woe betide the country."

The Marquess Curzon after deploring that a fatal inertia had settled down on everybody, and nobody could make up their minds what they were going to do, except the Swarajists, wound up his speech by asking what the Government were going to do. He said :

"Are they going to embark once again, as it is such a temptation to Governments to do, upon a course of vacillation here and compromise there, and surrender somewhere else,—a policy of drift all round ?"

He said :

"That, as every member allows, means disaster and damnation, not only to us, but to India itself."

These are grave warnings by persons distinguished for great services to the Empire, but one cannot help observing that these Noble Lords look at the problems facing the Government of India and this Assembly at present only from one narrow point of view, namely, how to maintain the supremacy of England in India on the same basis as existed perhaps at the period when the Crown took over India. That, I submit, is a serious omission and must prejudice their conclusions. The result is that the British Parliament and people are unable to get at the real state of things here in India. Even the Government of India are not good enough at times to command the confidence of some of these gentry.

And now, Sir, what is the nature of the Report which we are told must be accepted by this House, and which, if this House does not accept, very grave and dismal things will happen ? Viscount Lee again in the House of Lords admitted that it was a "compromise, balanced and honourable" as he put it. It therefore follows that the conclusions of the Royal Commission are not logical and just conclusions of the Commissioners on the evidence recorded by them. As My Honourable friend Mr. Chetty said yesterday, there are two parties to this compromise, the first the Indian Commissioners and the other the British Commissioners. How much did each compromise is what this country wants to know ? Who sacrificed fundamental principles and who sacrificed minor details ? The Indian Commissioners have been criticised, not in their personal capacity, Sir, but as Commissioners on that Royal Commission, for the reason that India suspects that they gave way on substance and that the British Commissioners gave way on shadow and on small details. May I ask the Honourable the Commerce Member, Sir, whether a Commission, and a Royal Commission at that, was appointed for the purpose of a compromise ? Was that a part of the reference to the Royal Commission ? Should it not have been left to the Government and to this Assembly, if necessary, to compromise ?

Were they not bound to submit to His Majesty a report based on their just and fair conclusions, arrived at on the evidence and the material submitted to them ? I therefore am surprised at Honourable Members getting up one after another and saying that the Report is a document which merits our acceptance, in spite of the absence of any evidence on which they went. I am awaiting from the Honourable the Leader of the House a few of the instances, which he said yesterday at question time he knew of many, where the Government of India had accepted reports of Commissions and Committees without the relative evidence being submitted. I hope the Honourable the Leader of the House, when he gets up to reply to this debate, may be able to give me a few instances, barring the one instance which was hurled at me from the benches opposite, namely, the instance of the Incheape Committee's Report, an instance which, I submit, does not stand on all fours and is not of the same nature as the instances which the Honourable the Leader of the House promised, and which this House expects.

Sir, the Royal Commission seem to have followed a most extraordinary procedure. In paragraphs 106 and 107 they say that 411 witnesses were examined by them. 152 of these only could stand the light of public criticism and of public information of their views. This by the way amounts to only 35 per cent. of the total number of witnesses. 65 per cent. of these witnesses elected, or if there is anything, in what my Honourable friend the Pandit mentioned, were asked to give evidence in camera. I am not expressing an opinion ; I expect the Honourable the Leader of the House to give a reply later to what was said by Pandit Motilal Nehru regarding what happened to some witnesses in Madras. But, Sir, it does not stop there. We should like to know who it is that elected to give evidence only in camera. Even the names of the witnesses who appeared before the Commission are not given in the body of the Report. Certainly it is in fairness due to the Honourable Member Mr. Calvert, the President of the Services Association in India, that we should know the names of members of the Services who insisted on absolute secrecy of their views, for did not my friend say that all the members of the Services gave their evidence in public. Why then are their views not submitted to this House ?

I will wind up, Sir, by naming only eight items on which I think the Commission should have attached statements showing the facts and figures into which they must have gone or they ought to have gone before they could make up their minds. There are no statements attached to the Report regarding examination of figures by the Royal Commission of the following :

1. Increases in cost of living in India as compared with increases in the cost of living in England.

2. Comparisons with other countries such as important countries of Europe, America, Japan, and the Colonies, including the Crown Colonies, of increased cost of living and increases given in these various countries to their Services.

3. Increases given to the Provincial Services in India with grades of their pays. I mention grades of pays because I think it very necessary to know what grades of pays were being dealt with, for it is evident that a peon has to be given an increase every time the cost of living goes up even by a rupee or two because his margin of savings is so small.

[Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas.]

4. Increase and percentage of the increases to Provincial Services.

5. Increases given, if any, to the Medical Services.

6. Increases given to the Military Services.

7. Increases given by commercial firms during the war, which was a " boom " period for trade and which was apparently a prosperous time for all commercial firms.

8. Decreases and cuts made by commercial firms since 1920-21 which has been a period of depression and therefore of adversity for these commercial firms.

Sir, I feel that if these statements were attached to the Report, even without the evidence being submitted to us, it would have enabled us to make sure that the Royal Commission had examined all these various aspects which are indicated by these various tables that I have asked for and we could ourselves judge the question better than to-day.

In Chapter 6 of the Report the Commission consider the question of pay and allowances and in paragraph 47 they come to the conclusion that the present rates of pay are below the level which proved attractive 20 years ago. The question however is what about the allowances and increases introduced during the last 20 years, and have there not been other concessions given, directly or indirectly, during the last 20 years ? I see the Honourable the Finance Member says " None ". I will only mention the omission of the 4 per cent. contribution to annuity which was calculated in the year 1914 to have cost the State 9 lakhs of rupees. That is at least one instance ; but I have in my mind, Sir, the time-scale, better leave rules and—I speak subject to correction—changes in the pension rules. The Commissioners go on in paragraph 48 to state how, in their opinion, employés of commercial firms have done better since 1914 than the All-India Services. It is surprising that the Commission should have overlooked here the obvious difference between service in a commercial firm and services such as the All-India Services. In the former—that is, a commercial firm—the prospects of a recruit are absolutely dependent on the progress of the firm. It is true that in prosperous concerns the few men at the top do very well, but these are invariably men of proved ability and of acknowledged popularity with the community in the midst of which the firm's business may lie. The others not only never get anywhere near the top but get no concessions like proportionate pensions—which by the way is going to cost India a good deal—should they conceive a dislike for their selected firms or for their selected lines. Further, promotions in Government service are more or less assured and safe, whereas in commercial firms they depend on absolute merit and capacity. I have got, Sir, here a statement again of one of the largest employers of commercial labour in India, Viscount Inchcape, who, speaking in the House of Lords in response to Viscount Lee's invitation on the 31st July last, said :

" At the end of the third year the emoluments increase according to ability displayed."

Not according to a time-scale nor according to grade but according to ability. He further went on to say :

" Beyond that they rise gradually to Rs. 3,000 "—according to merit again— " and those who have shown exceptional ability are admitted as partners, though, of course, this is not possible in every case, just as it is impossible for every midshipman to become an admiral."

But in Government service it is possible, it is feasible, it is claimed as a right, that the junior entering the service on Rs. 600 or 700 must get to Rs. 3,000 or Rs. 3,500.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee (Industries Member) : Oh no ; that is not so.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : And yet we are told that service in the superior grade of the Government of India and service in commercial firms has much in common. In short, Sir, careers in the All-India Services are assured except in cases of proved fraud. One wonders if the commercial firms of whom the Commission made inquiries told them really that the average careers there were anything like as safe and as secure for promotion to the highest offices as they are known to be in the All-India Services. But the most interesting difference in this respect is narrated in paragraph 82 of the Report. The Commissioners say :

"The Services claim that whatever may be the legal interpretation of the words 'existing or accruing rights' their intention was to secure to them the prospects of promotion to all higher posts existing at the time the Act was passed or alternatively to secure for them compensation for the loss of such prospect through the abolition of these appointments."

The Commission's recommendation requires to be narrated in their own words :

"We recommend therefore that the Secretary of State should refer such claims for compensation, as they rise for consideration and report by the Public Services Commission, which being the expert authority in India on all service questions, will be well qualified to form a just opinion."

The Indian Members—for once they differ somewhere in the Report from their colleagues—the Indian Members would limit this reference to the Public Services Commission to cases other than those necessitated by retrenchment or curtailment of work. One wonders what commercial firms were known to the Commission to even consider such claims. If a firm made up their mind to restrict the scope of their business, would their staff have any claim against them, Sir ? I really wonder if things having something common were being considered by the Commission.

The question of security of pension in the All-India Services is another point in the same category. Cases have been known of pensions and provident funds of staffs of commercial firms, and I will add, in order that I may not be interrupted, even of big banking institutions, disappearing with the solvency of the concerns where the men were serving. It is therefore difficult to feel that the Commission were trying to compare two things that were at all alike. It is difficult even to conjecture, Sir, the species of commercial business to which the Commission refer in paragraph 48 of their Report. As stated above the security of posts and practical guarantee of promotion is, beyond comparison, more assured in Government service in India than in any other service, commercial or industrial. In fact, amongst us Indians, it is notorious that, despite serious handicaps to Indians in Government service, there is always a craving for a post in Government service based on what, Sir ? Based on the securities named above, namely, the security of promotion and the security of service. No reference is made to these facts which proves that the Commission either had not these points of view put before them, or if they were put before them, they were not given the consideration which they very strongly carry with them.

Mr. President : I will ask the Honourable Member to bring his remarks to a close.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : The only question that remains to be considered is, whether the pay, allowances and pensions of the All-India Services are adequate or not. In paragraph 46 the Commission say that the Services placed before them carefully compiled statements of current income and expenditure. Even these, Sir, are not attached to the Report, and one wonders whether they were handed in under the seal of secrecy. I know that subsequently some of these have been circulated to the House, but the Commission did not print those that they mention. Now, what is the basis which the Commission go upon ? They go upon the basis or rather the criterion adopted by the Islington Commission, namely, not merely to give the Services an adequate return according to the market value of such hands, but to give them the rate which proved attractive twenty years back. And, Sir, what was the rate which was attractive twenty years ago ? What was the saving then made by the Services ? What is it that we are asked to provide in order that the Services may be contented ?

I shall pass on to a further aspect of the question. Mr. Calvert said that the increase of pay to the Services since 1875 has been 8 per cent. I understood the Honourable the Leader of the House to say that it was something between 10 and 11 per cent. But I have here the reply given by Earl Winterton on 27th February 1923 to a question by Mr. Hancock, asking for the number of officers in the Indian Civil Service during the years 1913-14 to 1922-23 and their pay and allowances, taking the rupee at 16*d*. In 1913-14 the average worked out to £1,580 per head ; in 1918-19 it worked out to £1,658 per head, in 1920-21 to £1,928 per head, and in 1922-23 to £2,024 per head. By simple division I have worked out the percentage of increase to be about 20 per cent. Now, Sir, may I ask if, in view of the increase in prices of 100 per cent., the various other Services in India have been given increases commensurate with it, and if not, will the Government tolerate any demand by them if they put forward their budgets and show that even with the increases which they have been given they cannot make both ends meet.

I now pass on hurriedly to my main conclusion.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member cannot develop his main conclusion now.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : May I speak for five minutes more ?

Mr. President : No.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (Finance Member) : Sir, I rise to oppose the amendment which has been moved by the Honourable Pandit. I shall endeavour in doing so to fulfil the promise which was made on my behalf by the Honourable the Leader of the House that I would deal with more general questions in regard to the financial effect of the Lee Commission's proposals. I shall also endeavour to answer to the best of my ability some of the questions—not as numerous I confess as I expected—which have been addressed to me by Honourable Members in the course of the debate on financial details ; and although we have been reminded that comparisons are odious, I shall do my best to put a little material before the House in regard to the comparative emoluments of civil servants in other parts of the British Empire.

I will begin with the cost of the proposals. I circulated on the 3rd September an answer to an unstarred question by the Honourable Diwan Bahadur Ramachandra Rao. I am not sure that that answer has received any publicity ; so it may be useful for me to read it :

"If the recommendations of the Lee Commission are accepted in the form in which they were made, the estimated cost distributed between the Government of India and the Provinces is as follows :

	Lakhs.
Government of India	26
Madras	9.7
Bombay	9.7
Bengal	9.3
United Provinces	10.8
Punjab	9.1
Burma	10
Bihar and Orissa	4.9
Central Provinces	5.7
Assam	2.9

The calculation has been made on the basis of a 16 pence rupee, and as exchange has been higher the actual expenditure in the current year would be less. But, on the other hand, it is possible, as the Commission recognised, that the number of officers taking advantage of the passage concession in the first few years might be above normal. Secondly, the above calculation does not take into account the cost of the recommendations regarding house rent and medical attendance, which it is not possible to estimate accurately. In addition there will be a sum of approximately Rs. 1¼ lakhs for the first year, increasing by roughly the same figure every year for about 14 or 15 years, representing the cost of the pension concessions of which it is not possible to show the distribution among the different Governments. The above represents the figures of cost as calculated by the Commission itself. To this may have to be added a sum of approximately 18 lakhs per annum, if it is decided to extend the Commission's proposals to officers of the Great Indian Peninsula and East Indian Railways which will shortly become State-managed lines and to officers of Company-managed lines."

I lay stress on the point about exchange. Having regard to the present rate of exchange the figures as they stand in the case of the Provinces may, I think, be taken as the maxima. I have made a rough calculation of the amount of overseas pay, present and proposed, which under our suggestions would be payable in sterling. At 16 pence to the rupee this would amount to Rs. 142½ lakhs ; at 17 pence to Rs. 134 lakhs ; at 18 pence to Rs. 127 lakhs ; at to-day's rate of exchange, say 1*s.* 5½*d.* it is approximately 130 lakhs, a saving that is to say of Rs. 12 lakhs over the figures I have read out in the answer. As against this we have to set the figure of about Rs. 7 lakhs which will be the maximum cost if we are to extend relief to all posts above the time-scale not drawing more than Rs. 3,000 a month. It would be less than 7 lakhs if the relief were extended only to selected posts. I would further lay stress on the fact that Indianisation, even if the existing basic rates of pay of Indians are left untouched, involves a progressive saving as stated by the Honourable the Leader of the House. So far as I can see, therefore, the figures which I have given in the case of the Provincial Governments may be taken as representing approximately the maximum cost of these proposals. It will be observed that only in one case does the additional cost exceed Rs. 10 lakhs. It is 10.8 lakhs in the case of the United Provinces.

In the case of the Government of India unfortunately the position is not quite so simple. In the answer that I have read out the direct cost of the Government of India is given as 26 lakhs. 18 lakhs which arise under the head of Railways belong properly to the Railways and ought to be met out of the railway earnings. If the proposals now under consideration in regard to the separation of railway finances from the general finances are given effect to in something like the form in which they now stand, this charge will fall not on the tax-payer but on the railway reserve.

Dr. Gour and Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas and others have asked me questions as to the indirect effect on the Army and on Provincial Services. Dr. Gour used the word " uncovenanted services " ; but I think that must have been a slip of the tongue. All the Services, except the Indian Civl Service, are uncovenanted services. The proposals of the Lee Commission apply to all the Superior Services. There is no doubt some little difficulty in deciding exactly which are the superior posts in some of the Central Services to which relief should be extended. But in the case of the Provincial Services about which Dr. Gour is anxious, I see no reason why there should be any additional cost. On the contrary, I should hope that the question of the reduction of basic pay might eventually lead to some economy. The Honourable Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar made great play with the additional cost of the Services generally since some years ago. I think he must have failed to realise that far the greater part of that additional cost—something approaching Rs. 10 crores— is due to the revision of the scales of pay of the Provincial Services in 1920.

They were revised at a time when the cost of living was at its highest and, if he will follow up his own argument about reduction in the cost of living since then, he will see that, so far from a proportionate increase in the cost of the Provincial Services being threatened, there are reasons for considering the reverse.

12 NOON.

So far as the civil charges of the Government of India are concerned, therefore, I am prepared to take a figure of very little over 26 lakhs as a probable maximum. The indirect effect in the case of the military budget is more difficult to deal with. It is not possible to give a direct answer in figures to the question what is the additional expenditure that will be incurred under the head of the military expenditure in consequence of the Lee Commission's Report. It is impossible to say, as we can say on the civil side, that the extra cost will be so many lakhs. The decision in regard to the Medical Services on the civil side, when taken, may possibly involve some quite minor increase in the cost on the Army side of the Medical and Veterinary Services, but there is also the more important question of the pay of the Army officer. Now, the Report of the Lee Commission does not directly affect the Army Officer, but it does affect the atmosphere in which consideration is being given to the revision of the pay of the Army officer which in any case was due in July 1924. In that month the five years for which Army pay was fixed in 1919 came to an end. Almost simultaneously with the receipt of the Lee Commission's Report by the Government of India, the Government of India had before them proposals prepared without reference to that Report for a revision of the pay of the Army officer. It has been impossible to obtain a decision as yet on those proposals, mainly because the Government at Home has not yet succeeded in arriving at a decision as to the revised rate of pay to be brought in in July 1924 for British Army officers in England, and that is the basic figure from which any calculation of the pay of the Army officer in India has to start. But the fact that this is the starting point shows that the basis for Army pay is something quite different from anything in the Lee Commission's Report. The Report, therefore, has no direct bearing on the question of the Army. In one respect it is probable there may be a direct effect. That is the question of passages. If, as is likely, something corresponding to the passage concession is given to Army officers, it is estimated that the extra cost of such a concession will be from 12 to 15 lakhs. This is the only figure I can give in regard to military expenditure. But I can add this. The extra cost of the passage concession and the other extra cost that I have mentioned, and the extra cost of the revision of pay now under consideration, whatever the final decision may be, is not likely to be so great as to prevent the established charges for the Army for 1925-6 from being brought down well below the corresponding figure for 1924-5, assuming, as one must for the purposes of such a comparison, that the rate of exchange is the same.

The House will see from these figures that the additional expenditure to be faced in the Budget for 1924-5 and succeeding years is at any rate a matter of lakhs and not a matter of crores, and it ought not to prove in any way unmanageable. No Finance Member likes additional expenditure for its own sake, and I can assure the House that, both during the time when the Lee Commission was sitting and since, the problems arising out of the necessity of meeting this additional expenditure have never been absent from my attention.

But, in considering this additional expenditure, there is another side to the picture. The Honourable Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar questioned the statement made by my Honourable Colleague, the Home Member, and by the Royal Commission, in regard to the rate of exchange which was taken as the basis for fixing the revision of the rates of pay in 1919-20. The Royal Commission stated it and my Honourable Colleague, the Home Member, has stated it as a fact, but still the Honourable Diwan Bahadur seems to be unconvinced. Let me give him further authority.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar (Madras City : Non-Mahommadan Urban) : Contemporaneous.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Lord Chelmsford was Viceroy at the time when the revision was made. He ought to know. Speaking in the House on the 31st of July of this year.....

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : I want contemporaneous authority.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Wait and you will get it. Speaking in the House of Lords on the 31st of July of this year, he said :

"Secondly, as the Secretary of State mentioned in his speech the other day, when we at headquarters were examining the problem, the rupee at that moment stood at something like 2*s.* 8*d.* to the £. The Committee which had been appointed to deal with the rupee had fixed the rupee at 2 sh. and promised us in their Report that that was what the value of the rupee was likely to stand at in the future. Your Lordships can well see that recommendations with regard to salaries with the rupee at 2*s.* 8*d.* or certainly at 2*s.* were recommendations which must be dealt with in a very different manner from when the rupee was standing at 1*s.* 4*d.* The whole problem of the cost of journeys would be almost halved for the civil servant. The cost of remission Home to England, similarly, would be greatly lessened. We frankly thought at that time that the question of the salaries really did not arise, that the Indian Civil Service, with the rupee standing at that figure, would be in a very admirable position. Then, as we all know, the rupee fell again to 1*s.* 4*d.* subsequent to our recommendations ; hence all the trouble in which we find ourselves."

Mr. Montagu, who was Secretary of State at the time, has also stated that the revision was based on a two shilling rupee.

[Sir Basil Blackett.]

As the Honourable Diwan Bahadur is still unconvinced, I should like to inform him that I have examined the files myself very carefully, and there it is definitely stated that the rise of the rupee to two shillings was sufficient to justify refusing further increase in the pay and also to justify the abolition of the Exchange Compensation Allowance without any corresponding addition to pay, contrary to the proposal of the Islington Commission. There is, further, a statement that, if the rupee should at any time fall, the whole matter would have to be reopened. If the Honourable Diwan Bahadur wishes still to question the statement, I am afraid he can only do so by saying that I tell untruths.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : No wrong impressions, that is all.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Others have urged that the present increase should be made temporary and not permanent, should be based on some index number. Had the system of a war bonus been adopted in India as it was in England towards the end of the war and had it been based on some index number, we should have been spending in addition to what we have spent not lakhs but crores on the pay of the Superior Services in the years after the war. The relief now proposed is in other words overdue, and more than overdue. It has been postponed solely owing to the financial exigencies of the Indian Budget, and I suggest that the Indian tax-payer, if he examines the important but still comparatively small increase in the expenditure which is now proposed, should remember that, out of consideration for him, a considerably larger annual expenditure has been put off from year to year, at least since 1920, at the expense of the Services. The Honourable Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar—I hope quite unintentionally—made a very misleading use of the Bombay index number. Throughout he made comparisons with 1920. But the revision of pay of the Services which was made at the end of 1919 on the basis of the recommendations put forward by the Government of India during the summer and the early autumn of 1919.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : Some of them were also made in 1920.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : They were consequential, based not on new comparisons but on a comparison of what had already been given in other parts of the services, that is to say, on comparisons of figures which were arrived at on the basis of 1919 and not 1920 figures of cost of living. The Bombay index number for the cost of living for Europeans was 147 in October, 1919 (as compared with 100 in 1914), 158 in October, 1920, 168 in July, 1923, and 165 in March, 1924, which was the date when the Lee Commission reported. It has since fallen, I think, to 162. During the same period the rupee has fallen from just about 2*s.* in October, 1919,—it rose to 2*s.* 8*d.* for a short period in 1920—to a level of something below 1*s.* 3*d.*, and it is now about 1*s.* 5½*d.* Take the figures given by the Honourable Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar himself. The cost of the pay and allowances of the Civil Service which he gave showed a rise from a figure of Rs. 572 lakhs before the war to 667 lakhs before this increase, an increase of 17 per cent. As I have shown, the increase in prices according to the Bombay index number is not 17 per cent. but 65 per cent. Can it be maintained for a moment that an increase is not long overdue ? I cannot believe that the Honourable Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar or Sir

Purshotamdas Thakurdas who spoke just now really desire to dissociate themselves from the view that has been expressed by nearly every other Honourable Member who has spoken that in principle at any rate the grant of relief on the lines proposed by the Lee Commission is just and the Services ought to be given the increases proposed if a case is made out.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas: I may add, if the Honourable Member does not mind, " if a case is made out to the satisfaction of this House ", not only of the Government of India. I certainly agree to that principle.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett: This House has been trying to do its proper work when it has asked some of these questions, and I am about to do my best to give it some further material on which it can make up its mind. I have a great deal of material available, but time will, I fear, prevent me from giving more than a small portion of it. In the United Kingdom, since 1917, there has been a system of war bonus increase in force, depending on the cost of living index. It has varied from time to time, but at the present time, taking the figure of 75 per cent, as the increase in the cost of living since 1914, bonuses are given as follows:—

If the basic salary does not exceed £200 a year ..	.. Bonus increase of 53 per cent.
If it does not exceed £400 a year ..	.. Bonus increase of 39 per cent.
If it does not exceed £500 a year ..	.. Bonus increase of 37 per cent.
If it does not exceed £700 a year ..	.. Bonus increase of 28 per cent.
If it does not exceed £900 a year ..	.. Bonus increase of 24 per cent.
If it does not exceed £1,200 a year ..	.. Bonus increase of 18 per cent.
If it does not exceed £1,500 a year ..	.. Bonus increase of 13 per cent.

No increase is given which has the effect of bringing the total salary above £2,000 a year, but I would add that since the war, a revision of the pay of the posts at the top, which was under contemplation before the war, has been put into effect, with the result that something like 25 posts of Heads of Departments have been raised from £2,000 to £3,000 a year with corresponding increases in the posts on the next scale, which are now fixed at £2,200. Corresponding war bonuses or bonus increases have been given in other countries. As I have said, I am not sure that it would not have been more logical if a war bonus system had actually been adopted in 1918-19.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar: Why not now?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett: I am coming to that. It would have been more advantageous to the Superior Services though it might have saved something in the cost of the Provincial Services. I will come later to the objections to giving it now. As regards passages, I find in Ceylon return passages are granted by the Ceylon Government after a period of 4 years' residence to all officers domiciled outside Ceylon, their wives and children including unmarried dependent daughters, but not sons over the age of 18, in each case not exceeding five passages in all. In special cases, the concession is granted to officers who have not put in the qualifying four years' residence. In the Straits Settlements and Hongkong passages are granted to officers domiciled in Europe or the Dominions, whose maximum salary is £490 per annum or over after four years of service. Similar concessions are granted to their wives and children up to a total of five persons in all,—sons under 16 and unmarried daughters.

[Sir Basil Blackett.]

In the case of Egypt and Sudan, a passage allowance is granted in one direction every year, and, if no passage allowance has been drawn in the previous year, in both directions. This allowance is extended to the wife and children.

Mr. D. V. Belvi (Bombay Southern Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): What is the scale of pay in all these countries?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett: As regards pensions, in Ceylon and Hong Kong the maximum pension is £1,300 a year. It is obtained at the age of 55. The same is true in the case of the Straits Settlements. In all the three cases temporary increase has been given with reference to the cost of living in England. As regards medical attendance, in Malaya officers are entitled to such free treatment as the Government has available but not free hospital treatment. The same is true in Hong Kong. In other cases, they are given more favourable treatment because they are given both hospital attendance and free medical attendance.

I am asked a question as regards the scales of pay. It is always difficult to make comparisons because you have to know—which you do not generally know—the exact nature of the work done by the different officers in the different countries. I have elaborate comparisons available, but they are not illuminating without going very deeply into the character of the work done in both cases. I think it is true to say that, generally speaking, the basic rates of pay in the I. C. S. are higher than in most other Services. The same is not true of any of the other Services and in the case of the I. C. S. it has to be remembered that it has been the Service which has hitherto been sought after above all others by the Europeans desiring to enter Government service abroad and that the people who have gone to the other places are those who have failed to come to India. Conditions also vary very greatly in various countries. The cost of living differs, and the whole basis of living is different in different countries.

The comparisons I have given are, I am afraid, a little haphazard, but I have given them first of all in order to show that the Lee Commission and the Government of India have examined the question of the pay of the Civil Service with reference to the statistics available as to the position in very many other countries. They have examined them thoroughly and have arrived at their conclusions in the light of such examination. Of course, in the case of the Indian Civil Service, the fact stares us in the face that the index number has gone up by something like 60 to 65 per cent. I do not want to attach too much importance to index numbers. This is the index number for Bombay only. I think, however, that it is a useful criterion on which we can found a general case. There is no doubt that the cost of living for the European as well as for the Indian varies very greatly in different parts of India, so much so that an index number for the whole of India is meaningless. At the same time, the proportionate increase in the cost of living both to the European and to the Indian is probably not very different in different parts of the country. Although the starting figure may be different, the average increase is very much the same. The average increase of the pay of the Services since 1914 in no case is anything like 65 or 60 per cent. I believe in the case of the Police, it may exceed 30 per cent.; in the other cases, it is not so much,—an average increase of about 20 per cent. I do not think that these figures suggest that the Government of India have been inconsiderate to the tax-payer in postponing for four years an overdue increase and in giving something very much less than would be claimed if the cost of living were the sole criterion, which of course it is not.

A question has been asked why we do not make the present increases temporary. As I have said, this matter was considered carefully in 1918 and the proposal was eventually not adopted, chiefly because of the enormous difficulty of getting an adequate index number. It will be remembered that even in the United Kingdom there have been furious protests against the inadequacy of the index number on such occasions as it happened to show a fall. It is extremely difficult to frame an index number for India, but I would say further that it is also less necessary now than it may have been in 1918 or 1919. We are not likely to see catastrophic changes in prices of the kind that have been taking place in the last ten years. It is possible that there may be considerable variations, but not catastrophic variations of the kind that have taken place. The other countries which have adopted the bonus system are now in most cases engaged in converting the bonus increase into a basic pay. They are leaving the bonus system because it is seen to have outlived its usefulness. I do not think that the introduction of a bonus system here would be valuable having regard to the difficulties of an index number, nor important having regard to the comparatively small fluctuations which are likely to occur in the next decade. Moreover, under the proposals of the Lee Commission as modified by the Government, there is one automatic variable, namely, the overseas pay in sterling. This will vary up and down so long as we have a fluctuating exchange value of rupee in terms of sterling. If my Honourable friend Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas's Bills were passed and the exchange fixed in terms of gold, there would still be just as much fluctuation in terms of sterling until sterling arrives at par with gold. I should like now to turn for a moment to the amendment which we have now under consideration.

Khan Bahadur W. M. Hussanally (Sind: Muhammadan Rural): May I, Sir, inquire whether these figures and statistics which are now being placed before us were supplied to the Lee Commission, and, if so, why they were not embodied in the Report so as to allow us to consider them in dealing with its recommendations ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett: The Lee Commission certainly had figures before them. They were the judges of what was necessary to be embodied in their Report, and I do not think that I can be called upon to answer a question as to why they chose not to do something. There are many other questions of that sort which we might spend our time on.

The amendment which we have before us, like some of the other amendments on the paper, is a lengthy one. The original Resolution is brevity itself in comparison with the amendment, and I think that the discussions that we have been having on this subject have not erred on the side of terseness. I shall make that my excuse to ask you, Sir, and the House to bear with me if I exceed by a little my time-limit, but I will endeavour to keep my excess within the narrowest possible bounds. Like Colonel Crawford, whom I congratulate on his maiden speech,—and if I may add it, I congratulate him in particular on having been audible to every Member of the House—like Colonel Crawford I am rather startled by the facts in the preamble to the amendment. How many of them are really facts ? Let me take them in order. Fact (a) says that the Royal Commission " was appointed and allowed to enter upon its functions in utter disregard of the Resolutions passed by the first Assembly." I demur to the adjective " utter " but I will take the rest as a statement of fact. I am even willing to concede for the purposes of argument that at one time the Government of India may have thought that it would be preferable to make the inquiry by some other method than by means of a Royal Commission. But the only point that was in question was what should be the method of inquiry. That was the only point that was in question with the House when it discussed this subject. There was no question but that the problem....

Dr. H. S. Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions: Non-Muhammadan): Not merely the method, but what should be the scope.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett: There was no question but that the problem of what should be paid to the Services must be taken up at an early date and could not be postponed much longer—there was no question at all. Obviously, it does not follow that the proposals which have been made by the Royal Commission should be turned down just because the first Assembly did not like the form which the inquiry took. I think I am right in saying that the Honourable Pandit Motilal Nehru himself did not like the form which this Assembly itself took under the Government of India Act. Nevertheless he has entered it and he is taking part in our deliberations. He spoke of the reforms as a wooden horse—I think he said, a hollow wooden horse. My thoughts flew at once to the most famous wooden horse of history. That also was a hollow wooden horse which was fashioned by the divine wisdom of Pallas Athenae for the storming of the citadel of Troy.

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the U. P.: Non-Muhammadan Urban): I only meant the common rocking horse sold in the shops.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett: I am speaking of another hollow wooden horse which was fashioned by divine wisdom. Steel-framed men climbed into its bowels. The Steel-framed army of Troy dragged the wooden horse through a breach in the walls into the inner heart of sacred Ilion. May I suggest to the Honourable Member that the wooden horse of which he speaks is also one fashioned by divine wisdom that it may carry him and Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar and Mr. Jinnah into the inner heart of the citadel, not to storm, not to sack, but that they with the help of the British officials who have dragged the horse into the citadel may realise that responsible government for India which all of us aim at ? I pass on....

Pandit Motilal Nehru : I hope the Honourable Member remembers that he is mixing up the metaphor very much.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : That I understand is the privilege of the modern politician.

Let me pass to fact (c) :

" That the terms of reference to the said Royal Commission and the recommendations made by it involve the perpetuation of an antiquated and anachronic system."

I think " anachronic " must be a mistake for " anachronistic ", though I am rather tempted to read it as " chronic." Perpetuation—what does perpetuation mean ? Maintenance in perpetuity. Is there any justification for saying that the terms of reference and the recommendations mean the maintenance in perpetuity of the existing system ? I will pass by the adjectives. I remember that some one complained about 1910 to Mr. Asquith that his brilliant lieutenant Mr. Lloyd George was intolerably inaccurate. Mr. Asquith replied that though his adjectives might be picturesque, his facts, he thought, were usually correct. In this case I think neither the facts nor the adjectives are correct. Indeed there is rather an exuberantly adjectival flavour about the whole of this preamble. Obviously the terms of reference did not involve the perpetuation, nor do the recommendations involve the perpetuation of the present system. Then fact (c) goes on to say " without any attempt to reconstruct the administrative machinery ". Is there not a very large attempt to reconstruct the administrative machinery ? Is it not proposed to provincialise many of the Services and to give an amount of Indianisation which none of the opponents of this Royal Commission at the time when it was under discussion in the House dreamed could possibly be recommended by such a body ? Let me go on to the next fact, fact (d) :

" That the terms of reference are based on the unwarranted assumption that the existing system would continue indefinitely."

I admit that the assumption is unwarranted. It is not even in the terms of the Warrant. Moreover the recommendations again and again speak of the further examination that will have to be made by the second Statutory Commission, and it is perfectly obvious that the recommendations are not intended to continue indefinitely but are intended to be, like the rest of the present constitution of India, transitional, and that revision must obviously come about at a comparatively early period. I agree with the Honourable Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer that there is a close connection between the question of constitutional and administrative reform, but I assert with him that the Lee Report proposals do not and cannot interfere with the consideration of constitutional advance. I state categorically that the Lee proposals in the opinion of the Government of India do not in any way interfere with that question. Let me go on to (e), that some of the recommendations are intended to deprive the Legislature even of existing powers by suggesting devices to make some items of expenditure non-votable items. For the sake of brevity I will admit that possibly it is a fact, though I think it would be argued that it is not. But I will only suggest that in the interests both of the Legislature and of the Services devices of this kind may be both desirable and necessary. Precisely similar devices have been adopted by the British Parliament to deal with what may be called equivalent conditions. The only conclusion then that I would draw from this fact is that we should consider whether some other method of arriving at the same desirable result might not be adopted. I pass on to fact (f). It is quite clearly not a fact that the recommendations have introduced racial discriminations. The discriminations which they have extended existed before. They have not been " introduced " and they are not racial. They are based on domicile. It is a defect rather than a merit of the previously existing system that the same pay and conditions of service were given to Indians as to Europeans, and that it is in the interests both of Government and the Indian tax-payer that such discriminations should be increased and not diminished.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Has the Honourable Member read a leaflet published by Mr. Latifi, a member of the Indian Civil Service in the Punjab ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I pass on to fact (g), that the said recommendations make the extraordinary provision that officers appointed to the All-India Services after 1919 should be given guarantees. This amounts, I think, simply to an objection to certain of the proposals made by the Commission. The very purpose of the Government in bringing forward this Resolution is to fulfil both in the letter and in the spirit their promise to give an opportunity to the Assembly to discuss the proposals of the Lee Commission before making their recommendations. If the Assembly has particular objections to these proposals, by all means let it develop them. And here, I am afraid, I must fall foul of two doughty adversaries. Both Colonel Crawford and the Honourable the Pandit object to the peccant phrases " in principle " and " approximately ". Both these phrases were introduced intentionally and purposely because the Government of India, while they hold that the Lee Commission proposals taken in the broad are such that they should be adopted, do repudiate, and the Secretary of State repudiates, the doctrine that every detail of this document is sacrosanct. We are here before the Assembly to hear the Assembly's views on particular questions as well as on the general subject, though the debate has been mainly confined to the general subject and to make our recommendations to the Secretary of State in the light of what is here said. Fact (h) is also very much like fact (g). It is an objection to a particular proposal on which the Government have already said that they have not arrived at even provisional conclusions on many of the points raised. It also uses the word " perpetuate " and therefore ceases to be a fact. Fact (i) refers to the absence of the evidence. We have already heard a good deal about that and I will only, at the risk of rousing the ire of Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, remind him that, though the Government of India may have supplied most of the evidence that was before the Inchcape Committee, none of it was published and none of it was made available to the Assembly, and in spite of that fact, although I make no complaint of it, the Assembly continues to press that we should adopt every detail of the Inchcape Report. (A Voice : " They had good reasons.") The reasons were no doubt very good ones as they may be in this case. I submit therefore that in the interests of its own reputation the House should not carry this preamble. Even this Assembly cannot make things which are not facts into facts. I hope the Assembly will be wise enough to reject the amendment as a whole, but at any rate let it not state certain adjectival arguments as if they were facts.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha (Chota Nagpur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Then leave the preamble and pass the rest.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I am asking that the House should not pass the preamble and I am glad to have the Honourable Member's support. I now come to the recommendations.

Mr. President : I have allowed the Honourable Member considerable latitude as he was replying to criticisms. He is now going beyond them, and I think I must ask him to bring his speech to a close.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I will therefore leave the recommendations in this first part alone. I will only say that they seem to amount to very little more than this that the control of the Secretary of State should remain in regard to existing members of the Services, and that recruitment should not be continued. I mention that because it is an important part of my argument in regard to Part II. I have already dealt with the burden on the tax-payer of India. I have submitted evidence to show that though no one likes paying additional charges those additional charges are not impossibly burdensome. I come now to the olive branch. This olive branch is hidden in so many thorns that one scratches one's fingers in trying to reach it. But if the Honourable Member who moved the amendment wanted to offer us an olive branch, why did he not adopt the simple three lines amendment standing in the name of Dr. Gour that the Report should be referred to a Select Committee ? The Honourable Pandit makes an offer to consider the matter in a Select Committee provided he can have the evidence before the Royal Commission which was taken in camera and had to be taken in camera to be obtained at all. (A Voice : "Or such other evidence.") Or such other—well I am glad to see he drops the demand for the evidence taken in camera. But he makes it a condition that the financial relief should not be given unless the stoppage of all recruitment outside India takes place. That is I suppose because he does not want to burden the tax-payer. Is that it ? (Pandit Motilal Nehru : I want to find the money before promising to pay it.") His difficulty therefore is that he does not want to find the money for the new European recruit. I have had figures worked out. If there were no European recruitment in the next five years there would be a saving of two-fifths of the following figures—two-fifths because three-fifths of the new men will be Indians :—two-fifths of 3½ lakhs in the first year, two-fifths of 7 lakhs in the second year, two-fifths of 10½ in the third, two-fifths of 14 lakhs in the 4th and two-fifths of 17½ lakhs in the fifth year, a total of two-fifths of 52½ lakhs or 21 lakhs in five years. If the Honourable Pandit therefore could be persuaded of the possibility of the Government of India and the Provincial Governments between them finding an additional 21 lakhs spread over the next five years he would, I understand, be willing to consider these proposals on their merits.

Sir Chimanlal Setalvad (Bombay : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I am grateful to you for giving me this opportunity of taking part in this debate. For as one who for a period of two years and a half was a member of the Government of Bombay and as such came in close contact and association with the Services, both European and Indian, as one who has for many years advocated a rapid Indianisation of the Services, and as one who gave his evidence before the Lee Commission, I may say in public and not in camera (Hear, hear), I do not desire to give a silent vote. I am afraid, Sir, that the consideration of the question before the House, difficult as it is, is rendered still more difficult by considerable mistrust and misconception on both sides. On the one hand, it is believed that there is hostility against the British element in the Services and that we want to get rid of the British element. On the other hand, the suspicion is that it is through the Services and by the perpetuation of the present system regarding the Services that England wants not only to retain but to tighten its hold on the country. Those are the misconceptions as I conceive them to be on both sides. I may be permitted to assure the Government at once that such hostility as it is believed there exists against the Services is not racial at all. It is against the system under which the Services are maintained (Hear, hear). I can assure Government that all right-thinking persons believe that the admixture and association of the European element in the public services is not only desirable but necessary. We also believe that even when India attains full self-government such admixture and association would still be welcome indeed. But what is felt I submit and rightly felt is this, that the extent of such association of the European element and the terms and conditions on which a contented and efficient service both of Europeans and Indians can be secured should be matters for determination by the people of India at every stage through the Government of India and its Legislatures, and are not matters to be determined by some authority outside the country placed thousands of miles away. I may assure Government that it is not the desire of the people to have Indianisation of the Services merely in the sense of the substitution of the European element by the Indian. What is felt is that so long as the Services, whether manned by Europeans or Indians, are recruited and maintained under the system at present obtaining, India can be no nearer to self-government in the sense of having its own agency of government. In fact, what is desired is that the Services should be in the real sense Services as they are in other countries and not the masters and arbiters of policy. Taking this to be the real problem, what I ask is, has the Royal Commission succeeded in solving that problem ? (A Voice : " No, no.") I give them every credit for the good work they have done. I do not blame them as other Members have done for arriving at a compromise. It is the one thing to do in politics, to arrive at compromises. In all human affairs you have every day to compromise and to give and take. I do not blame the Commission for what they have done. I also appreciate the difficulties in which they were placed, which account to a certain extent for the infirmities in their decision. They were hustled, they were pressed for time ; the Services were getting impatient and some decisions had to be arrived at as early as possible, and the Commision have done their best. But, taking all that into consideration, I am afraid the verdict to my mind is that they have not succeeded in solving the problem that I have enunciated. I do not propose to go into the details of the recommendations of the Commission, nor into the details that have been brought forward in this House in the debate till now. But I would indicate very shortly the main objections that I have to the conclusions of this Commission.

The first is that they still perpetuate the control of the Secretary of State with regard to the recruitment and control of the Services operating in the reserved subjects. I am quite conscious of the fact that they recommend that as soon as further Departments in the Provinces get transferred and are taken out of the reserved compartment, the Services operating in those Departments will get provincialized. But just consider, Sir, what difficulties in other directions such a proposal involves. It creates and must necessarily create, however unconscious, a bias in the Services against the transfer of reserved subjects into the hands of Ministers. It also creates various complications by reason of vested interests when the time comes from time to time for transferring more subjects to the hands of Ministers. Then, further, the Commission to my mind has failed to deal satisfactorily with one of the main grounds on which Indianisation of the Services has been advocated all these years, namely, the growing needs of public economy. They still keep the basic salaries for the Indians as well as the Europeans the same, while the demand was from every quarter of the country that the new arrangements should be such that the basic pay so far as the Indians were concerned should be less than the basic pay obtaining now. They failed therefore to solve that part of the problem. As I have said, Sir, there is no disagreement really on the main question. There is no disagreement on the question that we want a certain proportion of the British element in the Services to be maintained for the efficient administration of the country ; and I, Sir, with my experience of the Services venture to say that so far as the British element is concerned—and I am not dissociating from that the Indian members of the Services—I do say that a more loyal, a more devoted, a more hard-working, and a more honest set of public servants it would be difficult to find. We may take it, therefore, that there is no desire on the part of anyone to get rid of the British element in the Services. It may also be taken that everybody is agreed that the Services, however composed, should be efficient and contented. For that purpose every necessary step should be taken and measures adopted to give the members of the Services, both European and Indian, security of tenure and of their salaries and of their pensions. But as I have already indicated, the fear is that, inasmuch as constitutional changes are impending—they may come early or they may come late, they may come after the statutory investigation in 1929, or earlier—the position then will be very much complicated if the present recommendations of the Royal Commission are at once adopted. What I venture therefore to suggest as a solution, if it can be called a solution, is this. Stop the recruitment of the European element for the present. I say advisedly " for the present ", for the very short period of even 4 or 5 years, for the statutory investigation at the latest will come in 1929. The advantage of doing so will be that you will have the consideration of the advance of constitutional reforms considered uncomplicated by any new vested interests that might be created in the meantime or by any new complications that might be created as involved in such reforms. Nothing will be lost, to my mind, Sir, by stopping recruitment for that short period ; and when once we arrive at a stable condition as regards constitutional reforms in this country, when we all settle down to work a constitution which will appeal to the good sense of all people in this country, when we arrive at that stage in a few years, as we all hope to arrive at, then begin your recruitment again ; then there will be no difficulty. There will be some difficulty, I quite admit, in restarting recruitment—but the difficulties to my mind will not be insuperable at all. Do that on the one hand ; on the other hand, I quite admit that the grievances of the Services with regard to their salaries and other matters which the Lee Commission have dealt with have great substance in them. They have waited considerably, and no doubt relief is due to them. And here, again, Sir, I may say from my experience of the Services in Bombay and from such inquiries as I have been able to make and did make when I was in office, that I am convinced that they do require relief. Therefore, why not grant the relief that the Lee Commission has recommended to be given to them, as any further investigation by further Committees or any other bodies would mean further and unnecessary delay ? Therefore, I do appeal to all Members of this House, why cannot they find a solution in the way I have indicated ? Why should not Government agree on their part to stop European recruitment for, say, a period of 5 years, till we settle down to the new advance in constitutional reforms, so that all suspicion about the aims of Government, about the effects of the Lee Commission's conclusions, may be dissipated, so that the new reforms, the new changes, may be inaugurated uncomplicated by any new vested interests. In the meantime the Services may immediately get the relief, which, I believe, they are entitled to.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : You do not mean the classification ?

Sir Chimanlal Setalvad : What classification ?

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : All-India Services or Provincial.

Sir Chimanlal Setalvad : All that can wait to be determined after the new advance has been made except the transfer of the control of the Services in the transferred Departments to the Provinces about which there is no difference of opinion. The immediate question is the relief, the pecuniary relief, to be given to the Services. Give that to them by all means at once, but stop putting into execution the other recommendations of the Commission except those on which there is no difference of opinion till the question of constitutional reforms has been considered. I do appeal to Government and to all Members of the House with all the emphasis that I can command and ask them, is it not possible even now to arrive at some such solution as I have ventured to suggest ?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay Northern Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I think the House will agree that the sharp rebuke which Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas gave to the Honourable Sir Charles Innes was very well deserved, because to drag in the name of the Sovereign to influence the voting in this House is, if I am not mistaken, a serious misdemeanour. Then, Sir, Sir Purshotamdas was unnecessarily exercised over the opinions of those who sit in the House of Lords. I wish he had not wasted his time and that of this House over the opinion of those who do not count in their own country. He ought to know that the House of Lords is never taken seriously in England. Mr. Lloyd George once said that he would like to see the Lords as extinct as the wolves were in England, and if you exclude a few men of letters and of law and a few distinguished public servants, everybody knows that the House of Lords consists of ancient bandits and modern brewers. Therefore, the opinion of that body should not be taken seriously in a matter which concerns the people of this country. More pertinent would be the opinion of a newspaper which is very widely read and very popular and which commands great weight in England, and that is the "Manchester Guardian." What does it say about this Report ? It says in its issue of July 25th last :

"Its Report (meaning the Lee Commission Report) implies that 15 years hence half the Indian Civil Service and 25 years hence half the superior police officers will still be British. The implication is highly distasteful to educated India. India, therefore, must look with jealous eyes at the foreigners who retain the posts which other countries reserve for their own sons. We must remember too that the battle of Swaraj is a battle with a foreign bureaucracy, and that the presence of European civil servants and European police officers is the outward and visible sign of the continuance of foreign rule."

Then, again, the paper goes on to say :

"The work of all police officers and of most Indian civil servants is work for the Provincial Governments. How can there be any genuine provincial autonomy when the provincial servants are British officers who regard the Secretary of State as their chief ? It is delusive to suggest that English administrators may be required even in a self-governing province to act as advisers."

It further goes on to say :

"The Swarajists can, therefore, legitimately argue that the Lee Report postpones provincial autonomy for at least 25 years."

"That argument combined with the natural aversion to expenditure incurred for the benefit of the foreigner will be sufficient to induce all Indian parties "—and I hope this prophecy will prove true—" to unite with the Swarajists in making war upon this Report."

That is the opinion not of an Indian extremist, not of a prejudiced critic, but of a paper which commands respect and admiration even in England to-day.

1 P.M.

In giving my support to the very modest amendment of Pandit Motilalji, I can say that I do not want to deal with the composition of the Commission. All that I want to say is that in two or three respects the Commission has not carried out what it was commanded to do by the warrant of the terms of reference. The terms of reference, Sir, do not ask the Commission to differentiate between Indians and the gentlemen of non-Asiatic domicile. Yet, with gross impropriety, the Commission goes out of its way to confine the relief which it proposes to people of what it calls " non-Asiatic domicile." Further, in paragraph 50 of the Report it says that the relief is not to be given to everyone and to everybody, but only to European married officers in the middle of their career. The Indian members in their note on page 101 of the Report say that the sole object was to give relief to European married officers in the middle of their career. The beginners had no grievances and those who were in the latest stages in the service had also none. They were quite well off as they were. therefore, the relief they say ought to be confined to those who were married officers and in the middle of their careers. And yet what is the relief that this Commission proposes ? I have taken some trouble to prepare the whole list of the relief measures that this Commission recommends. All officers young and old get numerous concessions. The only unfortunate people are the Judges and the Chaplains. They do not get anything. The rest of the services have got almost everything they asked for. The number of concessions and privileges is 25. I do not want to recount the whole list. The initial pay is revised in certain cases ; overseas pay is increased twice. Some other privileges are given such as number of promotions, medical relief, increase in pensions, special pensions, commutation of pensions, passages, house rent, and so on. The list is so thorough that I am surprised that the Commission have stopped at that. The picture would have been complete if they had suggested the opening of free soup kitchens for these Services and the provision of some tailor-mades for their wives. That would have been a complete picture, and one would then have wondered what they would do with their salaries. Every conceivable want is provided for without affecting their salaries ; why not then open soup kitchens for these poor waifs who have come to this foreign land, which is a land of regrets, and why not give their wives a few tailor-mades ? Then the salary might be remitted Home at 2 shillings, if necessary. I suppose even the Commission thought that it would be going beyond the bounds of decency to suggest any such thing. Their modesty is just as great as that of Clive who wondered at his moderation although he was in possession of heaps of the Nawab of Bengal's jewels, he knew that he could dictate terms to the Nawab at the point of the bayonet ; that whatever he wanted from the Nawab he could get. Similarly, these Services know fully well that behind the Lee Commission's Report is the army which can enforce all these recommendations if the people hesitate or refuse to grant them. That is the strength behind this Report, and it is neither argument nor reasoning nor evidence that really matters. Then, Sir, the Commission has tried to draw a most lurid picture of the miseries and the privations of these Services owing to the alleged rise in the prices but, I regret to say, in a very unfair manner. The prices it compares are those of 1914 It says that the prices have risen since 1914. It also says that school fees have risen since 1914. Thus for the rise of prices it takes as starting point the year 1914 but for the salaries it takes its starting point after the last revisions were given in 1919. I think this is not a fair basis. If you want to take the year 1914 as the starting point, let the prices as well as the salaries be both counted from 1914, but let not the prices be of 1914 and the salaries of 1919 to bolster up the case of the Services. Yet that is what the Commission has done. The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett thought that the figures which Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar gave yesterday were incorrect, and that they were misleading in the sense that he counted from October 1920 and not from December 1919 which was the time of the last increase of salaries. I also felt that difficulty, but since then I have looked up three sources from which the prices can be compared ; one is the Bombay Labour Gazette, the other is the inquiry made by the Bombay Government into wages, and the third is the letter of the Government of India which they wrote to the Currency Committee in 1919 when the question of prices was before that Committee. I have compiled a small comparative statement from all these three sources, and I most respectfully invite the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett and the Government Members and those others who may yet have any doubt in the matter, to go into these three sources of information and then see whether the prices have not definitely come down and whether there is not a tendency for them to come down still further since the last revision of salaries in 1919. If prices in 1919 were Rs. 75 for cost of living, they were in 1923, Rs. 54, and for the period of 1924 which is already passed, they were Rs. 53.

Wheat.—If the price of wheat in 1914 was Rs. 100, in 1919 it was Rs. 187, and in 1924 it was Rs. 111. I know that wheat is not the main food of the Europeans, but I am sure they do eat bread, and sometimes also rice.

The price of rice is :—

					Rs.
In 1914	..	..	..	..	100
1919	..	..	..	..	141
1924	..	..	..	..	142
Salt—
1914	..	..	..	..	100
1919	..	..	..	..	300
1924	..	..	..	..	158

These are about articles of food and of daily necessity. In regard to imported articles, which include woollen, cotton and silk piecegoods, sugar and other articles which Europeans use, the figures were :—

If in 1914 the figure was Rs. 100, in 1919 it was Rs. 276, and in 1924 it was Rs. 227.

Similar figures both about fuel, clothing, food and non-food articles, if compared for 1919 and 1924 show that there is a steady tendency to fall, and that they have throughout fallen, and it cannot be pretended that there has been any rise since 1919 in the prices of the necessitities of life either as regards food or non-food articles.....

Mr. Darcy Lindsay (Bengal : European) : May I ask the Honourable Member whether he includes the wages of servants, a very considerable item ?

Mr. T. C. Goswami (Calcutta Suburbs : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : And the cost of clothing for Fancy Dress Balls ?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : I am glad my friend has raised that point. I was looking up some budgets of expenditure of Europeans ; there have been plenty such published recently. I have also read of an officer of the Bombay Government complaining in the Press that the only saving a European had at the end of his service was barely sufficient for a decent funeral. Well, I do not know whether that is correct, but if that is correct, I do not wonder either because I find in the sample budgets above referred to a provision made for seven servants for husband and wife. Not one, two, three or four servants, but the people, who want seven servants for husband and wife and one child, and when another child is borne a nurse and ayah are added—it is no wonder if they cannot save anything without inconvenience. I for one do not wonder at all. That only shows the immense extravagance of the way of life of these people when husband and wife require 7 servants (An Honourable Member : " Eleven "). Yes ; there are Budgets with eleven servants but I am as moderate as my Chief and I have taken the lowest figure.

Thus it will be seen that prices have not risen, and when you take into consideration that the exchange was at 2|8*d.* in 1919 and to-day it is barely above 1|4*d.*, you will find that the prices of 1919 must be regarded as 100 per cent. more than they have been actually quoted to be. So the prices of 5 years ago were more than twice as high as they are to-day ; and yet although revision was made in 1919 we are asked to have a further revision. Not a particle of evidence is furnished in this book. The tendency is to give as little reasoning as possible, to make statements like an oracle and not reason out things, to shut out evidence which may be relevant on the question. It is the Services who want an increase and it is the Commission who recommends it. They ought to produce evidence. They produce none. All the evidence is to the contrary. And I wonder that there should be in this House people with such large hearts who in face of the evidence, in spite of the evidence which I have to-day produced from official sources, should simply say " Relief is overdue." If at all relief is overdue, it is to the Indian tax-payer and not to the Services. I wish in revising salaries in 1919, Mr. Montagu had not raised them by 30 per cent. but reduced them by 30 per cent.

Mr. President : I must remind the Honourable Member that he has reached his time limit.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : May I go on for three minutes more, Sir. The last thing I wish to say is this. Apart from the question of prices, apart from the question of Indianisation, the one thing which we resent most is that there should be such immense suspicion of the Indian Legislature and of the Indian nation in the minds of the Services. Every proposal of the Commission is based on a suspicion of this country. If European gentlemen want to be servants of this country and of its people, then the least they can do is to show their confidence and their trust in them. If you want every guarantee against your masters, if you want every security against being disciplined by your masters, then certainly your masters will begin to feel suspicious of you. I do say this—I am prepared to waive all other considerations if the Services are ready and willing to come under the control of the Indian Legislature and the Indian people who are their masters. Without that control we are bound to be suspicious especially when it was seriously suggested to the Commission by some officers that the capitalised value of their pensions should be deposited in England before they came to serve here. Even this Commission felt ashamed to agree to that. Under these circumstances unless the control is transferred to this country, we cannot agree to anything either in the nature of relief or in the nature of future recruitment under the present system. What we want is this. After this front Government row has retired in honour, with honours and privileges, we do not want the next row to come in without our permission to the front row. That is the real meaning of the Panditji's amendment. Let me state the position more concretely. There is an old and experienced leader here to give his permission to the next row to come to the front, and the plain meaning of the amendment before the House is that, unless Pandit Motilal Nehru and his followers permit, the second row should not come over to the first. If it does it shall be with the approval and with the consent of Pandit Motilal Nehru and his friends and not otherwise. If Government are prepared to accept that position, then this Report can be considered on its merits ; we cannot agree to any further recruitment under the present system. Every such fresh recruit is a further fetter in the way of India's freedom and you cannot expect the House to agree any more to its own and the country's enchainment, without grossly betraying the people who have sent us here.

Mr. E. F. Sykes (Bombay : European) : Sir, I think it would be desirable for me on the first occasion of addressing this House to follow the example of my gallant friend (Colonel Crawford) by explaining any connection I may have with the Services. I may say quite shortly that although I have been employed under various administrations I have never belonged to any of these Services whose pay and allowances are under discussion to-day. I would like to say on behalf of my constituents that while I consider the Report of this Commission conceedes more than is desirable in the direction of Indianisation, yet in view of the fact that it is a unanimous report we consider that the proposals should be accepted as the best practical solution in existing circumstances.

Now, Sir, these remarks have referred to one point only in which they consider that the Report of the Commission is not all that it might be. There are other points too, but my constituents, being on the whole practical men, find that it is much more desirable that there should be some settlement than that any particular settlement should be arrived at and they also consider it improbable that any better settlement than the one proposed by the Commission could be envolved by further discussion.

You will find on the paper two amendments by Colonel Crawford which indicate a desire on our part to have the words of the Honourable Mover of the Resolution amplified. We have already had an assurance from the Honourable Commerce Member which removes most of our doubts on the subject ; we, like the Honourable Finance Member, naturally do not expect every word of the Commission to be held sacrosanct ; we know very well that in carrying out these recommendations the Secretary of State will be obliged to modify it in details ; but we wish it to be clearly understood that our acceptance of the recommendations of the Commission is conditional on there being only absolutely essential modifications made.

One other point that I wish to mention is that we are very glad of the assurance that we received from the Honourable the Home Member with regard to the Public Services Commission. There was a great deal of doubt as to how far this Public Services Commission was meant to deal with provincial services. I understand from what he said the other day that it will apply to all Services whether they are under the Central Government or under the Provinces.

I wish now to say a few words about the amendment which is under discussion, the amendment of the Honourable Pandit. It is very long and has been dealt with in detail by the Honourable Finance Member and I merely wish to take two general points. The first argument that is put forward is that it is no use taking any action on the Report of this Commission because in a very short time the Services will be totally changed, and that it only confuses the servants of Government if we alter the conditions of the service to-day—and then have to alter them to-morrow. I do not think on the whole that the intentions of the Honourable the Home Member and the intentions of the Honourable Mover of the amendment are different. They are both looking forward to constitutional development in this country and incidentally to the Indianisation of the Services, though I agree with my Honourable friend here that the latter is not a matter of first importance. The only difference that I can see between them is one of time. The Honourable Pandit imagines that time is going by with a whizz. I think there are very few of us that will agree with the Honourable Pandit when he assumes that the Committee which is engaged in considering the working of the Government of India Act of 1919 is going to propose constitutional revolutions and that the Government of the United Kingdom is going to accept these propositions. For my part I think that is a very exaggerated assumption. If we look back to see the stages by which we have arrived at the present state of affairs, we shall see that there has always been a very long period of consideration, and further on no previous occasions have we been confined by the provisions of an Act of Parliament. The Act of Parliament provides for a Statutory Committee to revise the present constitutional arrangements at the end of 10 years, and I think we have no grounds for assuming that Parliament is going to accept any other procedure. They may ; they may not. But at the same time from the practical point of view we would be wise in assuming that they are not going to. Now, it has been admitted on all hands that these alterations in pay and allowances proposed by the Commission are four years overdue. We have five years before the Statutory Committee can sit and at least one year before they can act. There we have ten years. Now, one of my Honourable friends remarked yesterday that ten years is as far as practical statesmen can look, and we all agree with him. If we go back by ten years at a time, although we do not see a large increase in the total emoluments of Government servants, we still find very considerable changes in their terms of service. And there is no particular reason why, I submit, these reforms should be postponed to an indefinite date which will make the period over which their action extends perhaps 15 or even 20 years. As to the exact time after which constitutional change is likely to occur, I am afraid I must differ very much from the Honourable Pandit because, if you look back over the history even of England, you will find that the constitutional changes have taken a very long time.

[Mr. E. F. Sykes.]

The other principal point in the Honourable Pandit's speech is the question of Indianisation. Now, it is a very controversial subject and it is a subject that is generally considered to be one requiring tactful handling, and I do not wish to stir up any unpleasantness in discussing this question and therefore I shall have to deal very generally with it. Now, I may say that my own views have been formed in the course of friendship and long intercourse with a very large variety of Indians. I have been up and down the country quite freely and I have met a very large number of them and the opinion I have formed,—not by way of argument and theory, but by forming a subconscious judgment based on hundreds of small occurrences that one can hardly recollect—is that it is an unwarranted assumption that Indians on the whole desire a complete and immediate Indianisation of their Services. The first thing that after all is necessary for the Indianisation of the Services is that Indians should be prepared to come forward to man them. Now I would like to mention two incidents that I remember. His Excellency the Governor of Madras at some time during the last four years—I forget which year, probably 1922—sat as President of a Committee. The Committee, a far as I remember, was to recommend candidates for admission to Sandhurst. These candidates apparently were to be admitted without appearing for the examination. Well, it may be considered that these were rather fortunate people. The next announcement on the subject was that in the absence of candidates the Committee had dissolved.

Perhaps, that is not a good example, because the selection of Indians for King's Commission is a new thing. When we come to a neighbouring province what do we find ? A notice was issued that the Bombay Government wished for applicants to join the Forest Department. The qualifications demanded, as far as I remember, were that the applicants should have a science degree and presumably be physically fit. When we consider that these candidates were to be trained at Oxford at the public expense, that they would spend their lives pleasantly in the forest service and in the end would retire with an ample pension, one would have imagined that the place would be filled with candidates. As far as I remember, there may have been two candidates, but certainly not more. It is rather difficult to see how the Services are going to be filled with Indians if they will not come forward to join them.

Since we came up to Simla, a pamphlet has been circulated by an Honourable Member of this House, which I think rather explains the views of Indians towards Indianisation. The proposals for the Indianisation of the Army were, one would think, extremely favourable. The Indian Officer was to be introduced into the regiment and, as he was fitted to take his place, he was to get his promotion in the ordinary course and his place would be filled with other Indians and so Indians would have an opportunity of showing what they can do. But the wording of this pamphlet is extremely significant. It is said here that what the Indians desire is to mix with English officers of the same status and to serve in the same regiment on equal terms. Now, a large number of Indians, I am inclined to think, hold the same view. The reasons are of course very complicated and cannot be dealt with in the time at my disposal. The proposal of my Honourable friend to suspend recruitment from Europe is surprising. This matter has been dealt with by the Commission, and I should have thought, dealt with satisfactorily. The proposal is based on the assumption that there will be early large constitutional changes and I cannot see any grounds for that assumption. Before we can have any of these changes the Parliament of the United Kingdom has got to be satisfied that they are desirable, and it is very difficult for anybody to say what the Parliament will think in regard to that subject. It seems to me that they will require very considerable proof that good use has been made of the concessions granted in 1919 before they are willing to extend them.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Thirty-Five Minutes Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Thirty-Five Minutes Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah (Bombay City : Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, in the first instance, I wish to express my appreciation of the method, manner and the tone of the Honourable the Home Member who moved this Resolution. He has tried to put his case before the House as fairly as could be expected from him representing the Government of India, although I noticed that in what he has said there underlies a very important principle which he has asserted and which gives us an indication of an iron hand under the velvet glove. Sir, there is one other matter to which I wish to refer before I come to the merits of this Resolution. I am also very glad that he thought it proper to emphasise the question which has been exercising the feelings of the Muhammadans, namely, that their position in the Indiansiation of the Services must be fairly recognised. Speaking on behalf of my Colleagues here who would agree with me, the Muhammadans do not desire anything else but their just and fair share and their proper rights, and I feel confident also that there is no Hindu Member in this House who would for a single moment grudge to the Mussulmans their just and fair rights ; and I am glad that the Home Member has also recognised that in his speech.

Having said this much, Sir, I will now deal with this Lee Commission Report. Sir, it is one of the most important and one of the most vital questions affecting India. The gravity or the importance of it cannot be exaggerated. The question that we are discussing to-day involves two very great principles, and they are so interwoven that you cannot separate them. They are first, the further constitutional advance, and secondly, the administrative reform of the Superior Services. Sir, this House and I think everybody must recognize that this therefore is a paramount question, a question of the very first importance. Now I think it was Sir Basil Blackett who aspired to be a modern politician, and although Sir Charles Innes confessed his inability to indulge in dialectics he did so indulge, and they took the preamble of the amendment of Pandit Motilal Nehru and objected to the adjectives. I am quite willing, Sir, that we should cross the ' t's ' and dot the 'i's ' but I want to ask a straight question and I want this House to understand the real meaning of that preamble. First of all I think it must be admitted in all fairness that this House has got a grievance. If it had any self-respect for itself it could not possibly allow this opportunity to pass without expressing its protest at the manner in which this Royal Commission was appointed. This House was sitting : in session in the cold weather of 1923, when the Secretary of State without consulting it, without giving it an opportunity to discuss the matter, appointed a Royal Commission. Sir Charles Innes says "Oh, but this Commission has been appointed by the King-Emperor". And therefore what? Therefore why discuss it at all? Surely an experienced officer like Sir Charles Innes ought not to have used that argument at all. Sir, this Royal Commission was appointed by the British Government and this Legislature has every right to deal with the recommendations of the Commission.

Now, I ask the next question. After the appointment of the Royal Commission was announced Sir Basil Blackett, who as usual can always find money when he likes, brought in this item and came to this Assembly with a demand for the grant for the expenses of the Royal Commission. The House perfectly rightly, as a protest, rejected the grant. Now, Sir, is that not a grievance and is this House not entitled to say that this ought not to have been done? The next point is, this Royal Commission was appointed and I know and this House knows, having read the recommendations of the Commission, that they felt embarrassed to this extent which I shall point out in a moment, that there was this question of future constitutional advancement under consideration and there was, as we all know, an insistent demand for it in the country for the last three years. But this Royal Commission was appointed to do what? To do this—sub-paragraph 3 of paragraph 1 says:

"The recruitment of Europeans and Indians respectively for which provision should be made under the constitution established by the Government of India Act and the best methods of assuring and maintaining such recruitment."

So the Royal Commission had to assume that any recommendations that they might make could only be on the assumption that the Government of India Act of 1919 could not be touched except in the manner provided therein. But it seems there was a great deal of discussion amongst the members of the Commission. There was a difference of opinion, and this is what they say at page 7:

"We are agreed that in the present conditions, the appointment and control over these Services must continue to vest in the Secretary of State. Some of our members think that the conclusion follows inevitably from the principles implicit in the Government of India Act. Others of our members are not prepared to accept this view and hold that such a transfer is contemplated by the provisions of the Act. In spite, however, of our inability to agree on the constitutional position, we are agreed that the Secretary of State should for the present retain his powers of appointment and control of the All-India Services."

Sir, the House will therefore see that the Lee Commission take it for granted that the question of control and recruitment must vest in the Secretary of State for India. In one place they say:

"It is possible that some difficulties may arise in the future development of self-government for India if some provision was not made in view of our recommendations."

And what provision do they make? The provision they make is this, that if any member of the Superior Services is transferred to service under the transferred subjects, he would be entitled to retire on a proportionate pension. Well, therefore, I think it is quite clear that the Lee Commission was tied down to make this recommendation on the assumption that the Government of India Act cannot be altered. Now I ask this House, and I ask you on the opposite side fairly to tell us if you are going to carry out this recommendation of the Lee Commission with regard to the control and the recruitment, will that or will that not be an enormous obstacle to any serious changes in the Government of India Act or in the advance of the constitution ? Can it be said that it will not be an obstacle ? Now I am right to that extent that it is essential for you to reform the Services, their organization and their composition, and that is at the root of any further constitutional advance. Only last February we passed a Resolution by a great majority in this House that we want further constitutional advance ; you yourself have thought it fit to appoint a Reforms Inquiry Committee, and the Reforms Inquiry Committee is going on with its work : and you come to us now at this moment and ask us to accept the recommendations of the Lee Commission ? What are the implications of the recommendations of the Lee Commission ? They are these : the control and recruitment of the Services are to vest in the Secretary of State for India. I am taking it roughly, and I am dealing particularly, mainly, with the two pivotal services, the Civil Service and the Police ; and in those two Services in the course of 15 years and 25 years we reach the percentage of 50 and 50. That means that at the end of 15 or 25 years we shall have 50 per cent. Indians and 50 per cent. Englishmen. Now, Sir, when we have that, supposing we have to make constitutional changes, do you expect us to give our consent to that ? But, says Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer, that is not the only ground. His ground is that if you want really to Indianise these Services, you must stop the recruitment altogether, and he says that you have already got a sufficient element of the English in these two Services, and even if you stop further recruitment, you will take a considerable time before you get that percentage of 50 and 50. I entirely agree with him. Out of the total number of roughly 1,400 members of the Civil Service, how many Indians have we got to-day ? The number is 164. Well, even if we have got to get that 50 per cent. of that 1,400, how long will it take, how many years will it take, even if you stop recruitment completely ? Now, Sir, I ask the House, if you think and if you really honestly wish to consider this question fairly and if you agree to this proposition that this system of service is out of date, that this system of service cannot continue in view of the fact that you are assimilating India more and more towards democratic and responsible government, then this system of service must be reformed without further delay ; otherwise it is going to be a formidable obstacle both in your way and in our way. If you are convinced of that, are you not convinced of this that to-day the British element in the Civil Service, as I pointed out, is something like 1,200 and odd against 164 Indians ? Are you afraid that there will be a revolution if you stop further recruitment ? Are you afraid that law and order will suffer if you stop further recruitment ? What are you afraid of ? I can only come to one conclusion, Sir, and that is that you want to delay it, you want to put off the evil day, and you want us to give our consent to the recommendations of the Lee Commission, which will make our position impossible when we come to discuss the greater and far more important question of constitutional reforms. Sir, on that ground I cannot give my consent and I do urge that further recruitment under the present system should be stopped, that the control of the Secretary of State for India must be taken away and it should be vested in the Government, and that we should have a Public Services Commission for the purpose of future recruitment. Then, I shall be told—I cannot understand why—that the Civil Service and the other Services seem to think that if the Government of India have the control, they will be in a mortal grip and that they will be in danger. But surely that is not really a very nice reflection on the Government. But I can understand my friends there will say " it is not the Government of India that we are afraid of, but it is you fellows here in this Assembly that we are afraid of." But I say, Sir,—and I can say it with implicit confidence—that there is no man on our side who would make the slightest attempt to break any promise that has already been made to the existing or the present incumbents ; and I venture to say, Sir, that whatever may be our faults, if we had to decide and if the responsibility was placed on us, I feel confident that we should decide in the fairest and justest manner towards our own Services. Sir, I entirely subscribe to the proposition that no Government can possibly be unfair or unjust to its Services. On the contrary, I maintain that it is the obligation, legal and moral, of every Government to see that the just grievances of the Services are redressed. Therefore, as far as this question of recruitment is concerned, I submit to this House—and I do not merely wish to make a statement but I want to reason with this House—what is the objection which has been urged up to the present moment by the Government to stopping this recruitment ? There is only one objection. As far as I have been able to gather from the debate, that objection came from the Honourable the Home Member and that, Sir, I call the iron hand under a velvet glove. He said—and I think I am quoting him rightly, if I am wrong he will correct me—that so long as the Empire is in charge of the defence of this country, so long must we have a definite element of British in the Civil Services. What does that mean ? May I know how long the Empire is going to be in charge of the defence of this country and when will the Empire be able to say to India—" Now you can take over the defence " ? Till then, this bureaucratic system of Government is to continue. Till then, there can be no advance towards self-government. Sir, if that is the intention of the Government on the other side, then I say that the whole thing is a camouflage. Things come to an end there and we can never agree. If your intentions are that you want an administrative reform and that you want to maintain the traditional characteristics of the service—not British, not white and dark—so that you may soon get the traditional characteristics of the service and on that footing you go on freely to recruit from amongst the people of India, then I can understand it. I ask, Sir, what have we got in Mysore ? How many British are there in the Mysore Civil Service ? How many British are there in the Mysore Police Service ? And are those districts not well managed ? I can tell the Honourable the Home Member that there is not one Englishman in the Mysore Civil Service. Perhaps there may be one in the Police. Is not the State of Mysore well-managed ? Are not the people there happy ?

The next point which I want to deal with is this. As was pointed out the other day, the position of this Assembly really is this. If the Secretary of State is really all-powerful and we are asked merely to have this debate, then I would be inclined to agree with the feeling of those Members who do not see the use of having this debate. But, Sir, I am very glad to note that the Secretary of State for India, speaking, I believe, with the authority of His Majesty's Government, in the House of Lords said this :

" The Secretary of State for India in Council, who is, as the noble Lord has pointed out, the final arbiter responsible to Parliament in regard to practically the whole field covered by the Report, must necessarily subject the Report to a thorough examination on points both of principle and detail. The mere fact that he stated that he accepts the view that the Report must be treated as a whole cannot of course in any way absolve him from the duty of examining the Report in all its bearings or commit him in advance to the acceptance of each and every recommendation just as it stands. He must also use the occasion to determine which of the recommendations and their relation to the Report as a whole will from their nature require priority of treatment."

Therefore the Secretary of State for India has reserved to himself the right to examine in principle and details the Lee Commission recommendations. That is the one bright feature which enables me to stand up here still full of hope, that there is a chance, although the Government of India have burned their boats by bringing this Resolution forward. Now, Sir, if the Secretary of State for India says, he is not going to commit himself to these recommendations in principle or details, what are we to do ? Are we to examine this in principle or details or not ? Are we to give our intelligent opinion or not ? There is the Honourable the Home Member, who says there is such a thing as factum valet ; the Commission was appointed ; it was composed of.....

3 P.M.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman (Home Member) : The Honourable Member will excuse me : I never suggested factum valet in regard to the recommendations of the Commission.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : No, the Honourable Member said this : there was a Commission composed of eminent Indians and eminent Englishmen ; they have looked into everything ; they have given every consideration, and now surely you must really depend on their judgment, and so on....

Mr. President : I must ask the Honourable Member to bring his remarks to a close.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Sir, I am not going to be very long ; I will only say this. The Honourable the Home Member really does us a very great injustice when he asks us to dispose of this Report in this way. No evidence is placed before us, no materials even on which the Government of India came to their decision in support of this Resolution are placed before us, and further, when we press the Government, what do we get ? We get Sir Basil Blackett getting up at the fag end of the debate and bombarding us with his usual figures (Laughter). Well, Sir, I do not aspire to be a modern financier and I do not think I shall ever be a financier, and for myself I should like to have a little more time before I understand them. Therefore it is impossible for this House to accept the recommendations of the Lee Commission on these grounds. What have we got ? We have got a number of recommendations as to the increase of emoluments, and I have only this much to say : we are prepared—do not treat this last paragraph of our amendment lightly,—we are prepared honestly, earnestly, sincerely to redress the just and urgent grievances of the Services ; we are prepared to do that. What do we ask you to do ? We ask you to do only this : let us have a Committee straight away, only with regard to this, namely, to determine what should be paid for relief to the Services. We are asking you to give us a Committee straight away. We are willing to sit ; place such materials as you can before us ; do not take shelter under the excuse that the evidence before the Lee Commission was given in camera and is confidential. Place such materials as you can before us ; give us a Committee of both officials and non-officials and let us sit together. We are willing to go to the Committee straight away and I assure you, and I speak not only for myself but for my Colleagues and for my party, that we have every desire to meet the just and urgent grievances of the Services. That is the olive branch,—you say it is the olive branch—that we offer you, and it was rejected ex cathedra by Sir Charles Innes, speaking on behalf of the Government, with thanks, of course I know that ! Sir, if this is how you are going to treat the opinion of this House, of this side of the House, we say stop recruitment. We say we are willing to meet the just grievances of the Services.

There is only one word I would like to say, Sir, with regard to the Medical Service. I say, Sir, that the Honourable Member in charge of that Department spoke at great length and I really am surprised how he has come to give his consent—not only given his consent but that he should have shown so much enthusiasm at the great advancement that was made in that recommendation. What is the advancement ? The Honourable Member should have been the last, having had the experience he has had—and I know when he used to sit on this side of the House it was very difficult to convince him on these subjects,—to accept it. What has he done ? He has done this. He has accepted a principle which to my mind, with the utmost respect to my English friends, is a most vicious principle, namely, that Europeans should have a European medical officer to attend to them. It is a vicious principle ; it is an intolerable principle. You yourselves tell us " Let there be no racial distinctions ;" (Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : " No caste distinctions.") " Let there be no racial hatreds " ; and you solemnly and seriously as the Government of India come here and say " Europeans must have European medical attendants ". No matter how qualified an Indian may be, you will not have him. Yesterday Colonel Crawford said he was treated by Indians and I see that he is looking quite healthy. I ask the Honourable Sir Narasimha Sarma how he came to be a party to that principle. And what is more, he said " But you see there is no real racial distinction at all ; you are mistaken ! " If this is not racial distinction, I do not know what is.

One more thing about the Civil Medical Service. The Honourable Member says there is a great advantage in this. It is perfectly true we have to absorb the Army Reserve into the Civil Medical Service ; but you must not forget that the Civil Medical Service will then be under the control of the Provincial Government. Is that correct ? Did I understand him correctly ? But does the Honourable Member know the implications of that—that you have at least one portion of your Civil Medical Service, namely, the reserves that you will absorb, not under your control but under the control of the Secretary of State for India. Does he want this hybrid system to be perpetuated ? Is that reform a desirable thing ? On the contrary, Sir, I should have thought the view of the Honourable Member when he used to sit on this side, if I remember rightly, was that there should be a Civil Medical Service liable to be called up at any time of emergency or war.

I can only say this in conclusion, you have no choice ; the Government say " Accept all the recommendations ". We say " No ; recruitment must stop at once ; and further, we are willing to meet the just grievances of the Services ; give us a proper opportunity and we will do it. If you do not, we cannot exercise our intelligent judgment, and therefore we will not accept the recommendations of the Lee Commission."

One more word. I think I understood Colonel Crawford to say that this House would earn the reputation of being an uncivilised House if it did not accept the recommendations of the Lee Commission. On the contrary I say not only will this House earn the reputation of being uncivilised if it blindly, without proper material, accepts the recommendations of the Lee Commission, but it will certainly be worse than an uncivilised House. One more thing I say to Colonel Crawford and that is this. He talked a great deal of acumen and I think the Honourable Member in charge of Education talked of the larger point. I do not know what implication the word "acumen" has or the words "the larger point" have ; but, Sir, does it mean this that we are expected to vote blindly for some favours to come hereafter ? And what are those favours ? Neither has Colonel Crawford nor has the Honourable Member in charge of Education favoured us with any indication of the favours that will follow if we vote blindly now.

Mr. W. S. J. Willson (Associated Chambers of Commerce : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I shall not attempt to follow my friend, Mr. Jinnah, into the legal arguments which he has raised ; because in the first place I have no interest in legal matters whatever and in the second place I would not be competent to deal with them, even if I had. I prefer first to press my own claims and demands on the Home Member and I will join issue sooner or later—perhaps sooner, I think—with Mr. Jinnah and those who think with him that we cannot consider the Lee Report in regard to the pay of the Services until there has been settled the questions of constitutional advance and pay of the subordinate services. To my mind—non-legal mind, I am glad to say—those matters seem entirely outside the scope of the matter we are dealing with here, which is the "Report of the Royal Commission on the Superior Services in India." I think that my learned friend Mr. Shanmukham Chetty and others are entirely wrong in dragging across the trail the question of the subordinate services. Were it not so, I should like to make some remarks upon the question of the old uncovenanted services not dealt with in this Report. But as I consider that I should be out of order in so doing, I merely record the point that we are not satisfied, that nothing has been done for them and we hope their case will be considered at another proper time upon its own merits.

Sir, no one expected that the Lee Commission Report could be swallowed wholesale like a prairie oyster. A report of this magnitude must of course provoke a good deal of discussion and a good deal of differences of opinion and I for my part—non-legal mind, again,—am devoutly thankful that we are not having the evidence of the 411 witnesses before us. Were it so, we should require thirty days for debate instead of three. For my part I am content to accept—not that I agree with it all—but to accept as a fair finding on that evidence, the Report which has been put up by the Lee Commission. I am sorry, I am very sorry, that it has been said in this House and implied as well as said outside that Indians have not trusted the Indian representatives on that Commission. Now, with that I directly join issue. One, a member of this House, Mr. Samarth, is a man for whom I personally have the very highest respect (Hear, hear) and who has influenced my own point of view and my decisions on previous occasions ; I refuse for one minute to believe that that man was ever unfairly talked out of any view that was his except upon conviction. I think Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas was wrong in attempting to make a point that the British conceded minor points and the Indians conceded the maximum. I think also it is a pity that amateur statisticians have produced a lot of figures to further cloud the issue, whereas Sir Basil Blackett, our figure authority, has capably handled those statistics in reply. I shall make no reference to figures at all. It is a pity that a great many leaders refuse to recognise that there are conditions of hardship at all, but I say that no amount of argument can override the fact outstanding in that Report, that there are conditions of real hardship and trouble. There are two reasons for this refusal, partly because Indian politicians are very averse to any increase of expenditure and partly because their political creed is against it. But, Sir, parsimony does not pay. It pays to have efficiency : efficiency is economy. The Report shows, as I have said, that debts undoubtedly exist. It shows further that insurance policies, originally, generally taken out as provisions for widows, have been pledged and that is a very sad state of affairs. The Report further brings out—juggle with figures how you like—that the increased cost of living is 60 per cent. and surely we might accept the finding of the Lee Commission on those figures. They at least had before them, I presume, all the evidence which is open to Members such as myself. I say, Sir, that the relief recommended by this Report is the minimum compatible with the increased cost of living. It is a compromise. The whole Report is a compromise, which has been well recognised in this House. The recommendations of the Report are so interdependent, that we cannot and ought not to attempt to separate them and on behalf of my constituents I say we are prepared to recommend them as a whole. I shall return to that matter a little later on. Now, Sir, I go further and I say—I am just as much entitled to criticise the Report as anybody else—I say the Report goes too far in some ways. It goes farther in the matter of Indianisation than a great many of us believe to be safe or desirable in such a hurry. On the other hand, I say that it is an injustice and a great hardship upon many members of the Services, the Police, Post Office, etc., who get no increase of pay whatever if they have reached the stage of Rs. 2,150. I am told—and I believe it— that these recommendations will not encourage recruitment. Sir, why should they ? Why should these recommendations encourage recruitment ? How do they compare with what commercial firms pay their staff ? Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas gave some figures this morning, but he might have told you that he himself or rather the Company of which he is a Director, was very glad to take out of the Indian Civil Service two distinguished members of it and pay them a very considerably increased pay to join the Tata Steel Works. Even passages have been somewhat resented by Members. Well, what are the passages ? I believe the maximum is 4. In my 25 years' service in commerce—thank goodness it was not under the Government of India—I have had no less than 8 passages. These passages were not given to me out of love or because I was a relation of the firm or because they wished to be generous to me—they gave them to me because it paid them, because my energies were refreshed by a holiday, which was much overdue usually, and it kept me in health. I jotted down the other day, just so that Members of the House may have some means of comparing what mercantile firms give as compared with Government, a few little details as regards concessions such as passages, etc., and I find my late firm pay a passage to join the service, a passage if one broke down in health, a passage at the end of one's service, or funeral expenses if you died and could not go home. During the service they pay doctors' bills, tiffin is provided in office, and on transfer costs of removal, and including sometimes loss due to the selling of furniture is paid, and subscription to the Clubs, which are necessary. I was also paid the fare of my horse. Members of commercial firms are not put to the expense of Government servants in respect of uniforms, books and subscriptions because the firms pay the latter handsomely to save their youngermen from having to contribute also. Occasional bonuses are given and advances are allowed free when people are hard up, as they usually are. What happens in Government service ? Why even before the Lee Report is put in force or debated at all the Finance Department introduce a new rule charging 5 per cent. on the advances. In fact there is a new debit before you get the benefit of the advances contemplated under the new reforms ! The firm also gives a motor allowance in many cases and in others many assistants get taken to or from office in office cars. The firm pays for all our postage stamps, our stationery, and there are no departmental restrictions on any investments you may choose to make. Up-country we frequently give house-allowances or provide houses which include as often as not electric fans, lights, fuel, etc., and we often paid for or supplied ice.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Do commercial firms give any pension ?

Mr. W. S. J. Willson : Some do, Sir. Mine did not.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Yours do not. No wonder you are liberal.

Mr. W. S. J. Willson : Now, Sir, I think I have made the point that there is no attraction towards recruitments.

Turning to the Lee Report I find this remark with which I entirely agree :

> " We are confident that India still needs the services of broad-minded Englishmen and will long continue to need them."

Now, Sir, high tributes have been paid to the Indian Civil Service but time will not permit me to do more than associate myself with them without further repetition.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : I am sorry to interrupt the Honourable Member. Before he leaves the point altogether he might tell us if his firm grants proportionate pensions in case their staff wish to leave the firm because of their not agreeing with the seniors ? He might complete the whole question.

Mr. W. S. J. Willson : If the maximum pay of appointment that a man had been able to rise to were only the Rs. 3,000 or 3,500 as contemplated by some Members of the House he might perhaps have expected either pension or....

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Proportionate pension in case of leaving.

Mr. W. S. J. Willson : He might perhaps have expected a gratuity or pension, but when he is paid a figure running into six figures per annum he could scarcely expect to be paid any pension, proportionate or otherwise.

Sir, the attitude of this Assembly over this vitally important question might, I agree with Col. Crawford, be regarded at home as some contribution, some test, of what views India takes about its servants, and as a test, some sort of test, of its capability to advance in self-government. Points which have not been made I think are, why do we want Europeans in Government service in India ? Well, I want them for at least two reasons, one of which has been dealt with by Colonel Crawford, and I have no time to repeat it. But the point I wish to make is this, that you have here now a system of Western Government. It has not arisen out of any Indian traditions, it has not been evolved out of any of your customs or anything else. It has been imported en bloc from England, from the mother of Parliaments, and it is so popular with you, so popular with this Assembly, that you desire now to grab the whole system and you are not content with the piece you have. I do not say that you should not have more, you will get a great deal more by and by, but as it is not inherent in your blood as it is in ours, I say that you require a stiffening of Europeans for that very purpose and for the development of this Assembly.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : On what terms ?

Mr. W. S. J. Willson : Sir, under these new conditions, in the Parliament of which I speak you will have to recruit more men. They will come out not under the traditions of the old Indian Civil Service,—they will come out not as bureaucrats—a word I hate, a system I dislike,—but they will come out under entirely altered conditions. In the transitional stages of this Parliament and Government their work will be increasingly difficult and different from what it was, but the difficulties of the transitional stage will disappear to a very large extent if you make them happy and contented in their work. It is important, it is necessary for India to develop. I see in this Assembly possibly Members who may some day occupy Government benches, and it is to their interests that they should themselves have a highly qualified British strengthening in their staff. (A Voice : " Why British ? ") I must also remind the House that a great deal of the success which the reforms have so far met with has been due very largely to the Indian Civil Service, and secondly, to the non-official European community a portion of which I represent. But in that development India must build up a sense of that loyalty to its permanent staff which is such a characteristic of British public life. Progress in this country is only possible by the development of commerce and industries. It is from commerce and industries that the bulk of your revenues come. It is out of larger revenues that you can further develop the country. Your trade cannot be maintained unless the foreign nations with which you deal and to whom you send your surplus goods have confidence in a stable form of government here under which the contracts that they make with India are sure to be fulfilled. Sir, on behalf of my constituents, they who pay, say collect if you prefer it, the highest proportion of the taxes in this country, we claim that we have a right to a stable and efficient Government. We are convinced that we shall not have that, nor the service that we have a right to demand, if the Government in any way deviate and attempt to concede less than is outlined in this Lee Report. We hold the British Government to its pledges under the Government of India Act. (A Voice : " What are the pledges ? ") I want to warn Government further that that Report, which though I have criticised it I say we accept as a whole, must be accepted as a whole, and as Colonel Crawford said, the least signs of weakening will cause Government the loss of some non-official European support. I wish to warn the Home Member further that we demand that the Report be accepted as a whole. I give that warning with all the weight behind me, which is that of the whole of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of India, who occupy in this House but one single seat, and whose humble representative I am. But the weight behind me is very great. I represent in my own humble person, if not all, certainly the bulk—a very great portion—of the British capital invested in India. I represent, further, crores and crores of Indian capital invested in commerce and industry. I say we have a right to that stable and efficient Government. Now, Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas also represents to a large extent commerce but the difference between him and me is this, that he is a politician which I am not and has represented the case from a political point of view, whereas I have confined myself entirely to the commercial point of view.....

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : You take something for granted which you never heard.

Mr. W. S. J. Willson : I would like to refer to what Sir Narasimha Sarma said with reference to the Medical Service. I have never been heard in this House, or outside in the Lobbies, to mention a single racial question and if this were a racial question I should not be doing it but I am going to put it to you that it is not. I am going to put myself in the same position as a very distinguished "England-returned" Member of this House who said that he would like to be treated by a Brahmin doctor....

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : I was not in earnest when I said that.

Mr. W. S. J. Willson : I do not care whether I am treated by an English Protestant, Catholic, Muhammadan or Jew, but when I am ill I do wish to be attended by a Briton. I do not wish to be attended medically by an excitable Frenchman, a cold-blooded German nor a dilettante Italian. I claim to be treated by an Englishman and that that is not a racial feeling. I put it on the same ground as Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar put it yesterday, even if it is a question of race it is certainly not of colour, for I admit myself that I have a strong predeliction for massage by a Japanese. We want to claim from Government an assurance that our European hospitals shall remain under European control and supervision. We want correlation in the I. M. S. to the Europeans in the Services. We think the Indian medical staff should be on an All-India basis, and anyhow that the control and initiative of medical training should continue to be in the hands of a European trained staff, with a strong element of British personnel. The offices of public health in the larger cities and in the more highly industrial areas ought to be held by men who have been trained in Europe and who preferably have held appointments as Health Officers in the United Kingdom. I claim, Sir, that all these are reasonable matters, non-racial but perfectly natural prejudices.

With these remarks, Sir, I have only to add that we also press for the immediate establishment of the Public Services Commission and we hope that the same Commission may deal with the Provincial Services.

I am afraid, Sir, I have rather exceeded my time.

Sardar Bahadur Captain Hira Singh (Punjab : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I have heard from Mr. Jinnah that the dignity of this House will suffer if it accepts the recommendations of the Lee Commission

[Sardar Bahadur Captain Hira Singh.]

Report. This opposition seems to me rather unreasonable and unfair. We have had a mixed Royal Commission which, while recognizing our national aspirations for rapid Indianisation and making recommendations for that, have nevertheless come to the conclusion that at this critical juncture in our national life the necessity for a sound and solid leaven of British talent is more insistent and essential than at any time in the past. I have often heard it said both inside and outside this House by my political friends that they do recognize that. (Voices : "No, no one.") All of you. It is only here you simply pride yourselves like certain other persons upon opposing anything which comes before you. And you proudly tell your friends and relatives outside that you have been opposing the Lee Commission in the Assembly. That is what is done at every place and in every street. (Cries of dissent and Laughter.) Well you can disturb me as much as you like. I am sure you cannot shoot me and you cannot kill me. Even if I gave you a revolver, and you do require one to play with, I am sure you will be killing not only yourselves but many of your Swarajist friends as well. (Laughter.) Would you like to try that one day ? I will ask His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to let you have a machine gun and let Pandit Shamlal Nehru here, who knows nothing about it, play with it.

Pandit Shamlal Nehru (Meerut Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : On a point of order, Sir, I protest.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member will kindly sit down. Has the Honourable Member a point of order ?

Pandit Shamlal Nehru : I protest against the remarks made by the Honourable Member (Captain Hira Singh) and seek the protection of the Chair.

Mr. President : That is not a point of order. Captain Hira Singh.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : May I accept Captain Hira Singh's offer ? If he will give me a gun he will see how straight I shall shoot.

Sardar Bahadur Captain Hira Singh : They are taking advantage of my being a soldier, Sir, as I belong to the soldier class, and if most of my friends had belonged to that class, they would have welcomed me. Well, Sir, that is the spirit now-a-days. They want to play with a thing about which they do not know anything ! Well, to-day it seems that the spirit which is actuating the advanced political class is wrong. I must say, Sir, that we do require a proper element of Englishmen, as Colonel Crawford told us the other day, because they are just, they are impartial and honest. Now what would be the state of affairs of any district, say Montgomery, in my country in the new colonies where Jats, Mussalmans, Pathans, North-West Frontier men, Sikhs, Dogras are all engaged in cultivating millions of acres of land and in utilizing the waters of the canal ? Well, you have got some people, some men, here who would have administered are carried on the colonies in the same way, but how many of them ? (A Voice : "Only one") What would have been the effect on our usual course, on our daily life, where the land and the water is distributed, if there were no impartial administrator ? Bloodshed and great disputes on which we would have to spend lakhs and lakhs of rupees. And look at the vast country of the Punjab where we have large cotton and wheat fields under cultivation to-day. Now if my province can boast of anything, it can boast of the good work done by the Englishman in that part of the country. The people are rich, they are prosperous, more so than in any other province in India. And what was it before, 40 years ago ? We used to eat barley and gram, and millions of acres were left waste, which have now been converted into fertile fields. The second thing is, Sir, that if the British element is withdrawn, the minority communities will surely suffer. What happened at Kohat to-day ? How many Hindus have been shot ? What happened at Delhi the other day ? What happened, and what will happen, God knows, if the British element is not in India. That sort of thing will happen everywhere. In that case, I wish the Commander-in-Chief will withdraw his British element from the Army too. And then let us see who goes there and who stops all this loot and murder and things of that kind. Has anyone of my Honourable friends got their officers to stop them ? (An Honourable Member : " Stop them by using the revolver. ") I have done it and surely I am ready to do it now if something happens here but if I am given a gun. (Laughter). You may try that now. I have heard yesterday one so-called eminent leader declare to this House with no little bitterness that he would compel the English officer to educate his children in this country by refusing him facilities for passages, etc. Here is a very good proverb which applies to this case. " Guru to rah gai Gur, aur chela ho gai Shakar. " That means one sows but another reaps. That is the meaning of it. Let those people who have done everything for this country be deprived even of their children's education, they are not only deprived of what has been recommended by the Lee Report for themselves, but their children will also be deprived of the facility and concession and I am very glad to hear that the sons of Englishmen will get advantage from our sons in the matter of education.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : I do not know if my Honourable friend followed me clearly on that. I never suggested that our children should educate the children of Englishmen.

Sardar Bahadur Captain Hira Singh : I am not so able as to answer my Honourable friend's question; he is a Member who is of a professional literary class. We have heard a great deal about the necessity for a change in the angle of vision, change in the hearts of the English people and the British official in India. But surely, Sir, that desire must be accompanied by a corresponding feeling in our own hearts. And what you hear now is the result. And if this is the spirit in which Indian politicians will approach this great and important question, have we any right to expect much generosity and sympathy from them ? (A Voice : " No.") The day will come sooner or later when you will say " Yes ". The day will not be very far ; as we are walking very fast, we must stumble down sooner or later ; then you will say ' Yes. ' There was a time, Sir, when competition amongst Englishmen for the Indian Service was very keen. In many families members used to come out to India for the Civil Service generation after generation as a matter of course. They are moved by real love and sympathy for the people and the welfare of India ; they did not come for the sake of money. And what is more ? They were received and cherished by the Indian people with equal love. That was the tradition of the old days between the two nations. And what is the position to-day ? There is no need to mention it here as one can imagine it and one can even see it. Well, Sir, the real reason is the existence of the politician in India, of the spirit of which I have spoken. The existence of this politician has killed the old spirit of the Englishman of that high class and also his love and sympathy for this country. I have often met Indians belonging to the high services, such as Civil, Police and Army, and also the young Indians of junior services. I have learnt from them that they get financial support from their parents, which amounts to two or three hundred rupees a month. It is a fact, Sir, that for several years we have got to support them. Well, if we have got to support them and if they put forward their grievances and ask us to increase their emoluments, it is but natural. We are told that the country cannot bear the expense of the recommendations of the Commission, an expense which works out, I believe, to something like half an anna per head of the population. It is an expenditure of about one crore. I would request this House not to look at this sum in its isolated form but to look at it in connection with the huge machinery of Government in India generally. Seeing the immense works that are being carried on all over India and seeing the great military expenditure which is six times as great as the Civil expenditure, can the House honestly say that this sum of one crore is too great a sum to pay for the return that we are getting ? If the House does not accept this expenditure because it thinks it is great, then we will have to sacrifice the best interests of the country and I will say that the people who are not giving their hearty support to the recommendations of the Lee Commission are doing a grave harm to their country. What is the alternative, Sir ? The alternative is to save one crore of rupees. This saving of expenditure will, I have no doubt, cause our politicians to shed tears of mortification and regret in the year of grace 1924, which will never come again.

Mr. President : I ask the Honourable Member to bring his remarks to a close.

(The Honourable Member resumed his seat).

Dr. S. K. Datta (Nominated : Indian Christians) : Sir, there have been Members who have spoken on behalf of Government during this debate and who have expressed their surprise that the proposals which have been made by the Lee Commission were not accepted with the joy with which they ought to have been received, but India has had the sad experience of the past in accepting any proposals which were made or supposed to be made for her benefit. There will be some Members in this House who will recollect the Charter Act of 1833 whereby all disqualifications on the ground of race were abolished. Immediately after the passing of that Act, that great Indian, the founder of modern India, Raja Ram Mohan Roy, visited England and he took with him his son, a son who had been brought up by his father to look upon India in a new and modern way. His British friends in the Court of Directors promised their support in the matter of obtaining for him a cadetship under the East India Company. The moment those proposals were put before the Court of Directors in spite, shall I say in spite of the enactment passed the year previously, this young man's candidature was disallowed. Yes, not infrequently the reality has been far below that which was promised, and thus we go through the years of British Indian history, and it is one record—and I am not talking in political language, but I have had the opportunity of studying the diaries and records of many Indian lives,—a record of blasted hopes throughout this 19th century. And can you wonder that we are justified in our suspicions when we look upon proposals that are brought forward here to-day ? As I said previously, I am not much interested in political considerations : my whole life has been given more or less to education. In education and its problems I have been chiefly interested. Now for the past 22 years I have been more or less familiar with the conditions of Indian students in the United Kingdom, beginning with my own career in college, and later by visits and contracts with these students of ours in the United Kingdom. You know one of the great concerns of the Government of India, especially about the year 1906, was the propaganda that was being carried on amongst Indian students in England (what is termed anarchical propaganda). Now I have examined the phenomena of what you may call Indian agitation, unrest shall I say, among Indian students in the United Kingdom. Three years ago, with my Colleague in this House, Mr. Ramachandra Rao, I was a member of the Committee presided over by the Earl of Lytton, to report on the condition of Indian students. I discovered that there was unrest. Government talked about agitation and agitators as being the cause, but that was not the reason at all. The reason was that these young men, on the promise of Government that if they went to England and qualified themselves, certain positions would be thrown open to them in India, acted on that assurance. Many Indian students in England have had the experience of racial considerations entering in when they applied for admission to the Services; some of the most brilliant of them, for instance, have sat on the same benches with others who, just because they were British, were chosen for service in India, when these young men themselves were denied that opportunity. Can we wonder that there was unrest ? It was not the agitator at all, it was simply blasted hopes, and this has continued for the last 25 or 30 years in the United Kingdom, and I have been a witness of it. Well, Sir, what are we striving for ? We are striving for control here in India itself because, unless and until that control comes, many of our young men with the tremendous promise of their lives, will never receive their opportunity. We have been told time and again that there is not enough talent in India. I have been a teacher for many years. There is talent in India, but that talent is allowed to waste for lack of opportunity,—opportunity of education and opportunity of expression. That is what is wrong with India.

Well, Sir, I have expressed myself on this matter. There is another matter to which I feel I must refer and it is the question of the education and the training of the Services.

Here are the problems of India. Who could be more familiar with those problems—we who sit in this House or the Secretary of State who is thousands of miles away ? After all we are more familiar with them and it is for us to set down the standard that will be required. Early in 1922 there was an agitation in the British Press in England with regard to the attrition—if you like to use that phrase—from which British recruitment for the Indian Civil Service is suffering. A letter appeared in the Times signed by that very remarkable man,—Warden of New College, Oxford. The whole argument (as far as I was able to interpret it) of this man who retired a short time later was that India existed for the Indian Civil Service and the Indian Civil Service existed for the University of Oxford. Yes. A First Class in Greats was a qualification for the Indian Civil Service—I do not say it was a bad qualification ; but I do say that our Services have to be treated in the light of the needs of India, and we shall never get that until we have the control of the Services and are responsible for their recruitment. Until then we can never do it.

Now let me turn to another matter with regard to the profession to which I have the honour to belong. There is another Member of this House besides myself—my friend Dr. Kishen Lal Nehru—we the two

[Dr. S. K. Datta.]

Indian Members of this House who have their names, and are honoured by having their names, on the British Medical Register. Now when our names were placed on the British Medical Register, we took the vows (whether by word or implied) as far as we were concerned, the distinctions of race, the distinctions between poor or rich did not exist—all suffering mankind was one to us. That was the idea placed before us ; and to-day in our own country we are told there are certain types of people to whom we may not minister. In spite of what has been said to-day I feel sure that my Colleague and myself—at least as far as we are concerned—will never allow ourselves to be fettered by any such considerations. May I say one word ? If, shall I say, India does not suit certain people, if our arrangements do not suit certain people, do not come to India. If I do not like a country why should I go there ? If our susceptibilities are outraged anywhere, why should we go there ? These then are some of the matters with regard to the medical profession. I do not wish to labour that particular point, but there is another and that is with regard to the question of medical education in this country, and I have had experience of it both in India and in the United Kingdom. Mr. President, there is a name not wholly unfamiliar to you—that of the great medical teacher at the University of Edinburgh—Dr. Hugh Freeland Barbour, who during all the thirty years that he has worked in that University has given his attention to the needs of Indian students. He visited India last year and his progress through the country was a triumphal progress, because of his devotion to the highest interests of Indian students at the University of Edinburgh. Probably there is no man living to-day who knows more about the medical education of Indians in the United Kingdom than Dr. Hugh Freeland Barbour. Three years ago giving evidence before the Lytton Committee he told us in words to this effect :

"When I began my work in the University we had a very large number of Canadians but as the years went on these Canadians disappeared ; they did not come any longer."

May I inquire why ? Because they had established a Medical Faculty at the University of Toronto—a Medical Faculty which to-day ranks among the first Medical Faculties in the world. He said that Canada had created her own race of medical teachers and he went on to add that as long as Indian medical education was tied up to a service so long would it be defective ; and that was the evidence that we received in the University of Edinburgh and throughout the Midland Universities and in the colleges in London; and I quite believe it. I have had experience of some medical teaching in one of our Indian Universities and I know how very inferior it can be; it is not the outcome of specialised knowledge ; it is not the result of investigation and research, and that is where the grave defect of Indian medical education lies.

4 P. M.

Well, Sir, my friend, Pandit Motilal Nehru, has moved an amendment. I am not enamoured of that amendment. I quite agree with Sir Basil Blackett that the opening paragraphs take things for granted, that there is possibly too much assumption there. As a matter of fact I never like long preambles ; I do not understand what they mean ; and therefore I find myself in this difficulty. In the first place the Government on the one hand propose a Resolution which I cannot accept. On the other hand, Pandit Motilal Nehru presents us with an amendment which, just because he accepts the fundamental principle of control in India, I feel I must accept.

Well, Sir, what about the Services ? I do feel that the cry for increased salaries, increased allowances is well-founded. I am not speaking without authority ; I have had a great deal to do with Europeans of one kind and another in India and I know from personal experience that the amount paid to some Indian Service officers who live with their families is inadequate ; I have studied their family budgets and I have looked at certain other family budgets ; and in comparing them I feel that the Services have a real grievance with regard to salary and allowances and justice ought to be done to them ; but I am not a financier and authority on the subject. I am concerned mainly with the question of control. That is fundamental to my mind, and I feel that control ought to be here. My friend, Colonel Crawford, whom I shall take the liberty of congratulating on his speech, made an honest speech ; it was a speech straight from the shoulder ; it was a soldier's speech. He exulted in the superiority of his race. He told us about the great qualities of Englishmen and I believe him absolutely ; but it seemed to me that he never got over the idea that the Indian at his best was a magnificent locomotive and that he was the driver and he was right. As a matter of fact it is a magnificent machine that he has controlled ; he puts in the oil, there is water and the furnace is well fed ; he pulls the lever and it is set going. It is a magnificent machine he has in his possession. Yes, British leadership of Indians is a very large asset and a good thing too, but I do say that he forgets that there is something else, that after all no man is purely a brute or purely a machine. There is some thing of the divine and the eternal which is greater than that machine and so often it is forgotten that in the meanest cooly in this country there is that spark of the divine.

Well, Sir, I shall bring my remarks to a close but, after I heard Colonel Crawford's speech yesterday afternoon I went and took down a book of English verse and I saw this in it and I wondered whether he had read it. Here the poet's fancy depicts—shall I say an Indian Civil Servant arriving in Florence :

> " Say who be these light-bearded, sunburnt faces
> In negligent and travel-stained array,
> That in the city of Dante come to-day
> Haughtily visiting her holy places ?
> O ! these be noble men that hide their graces,
> True England's blood, her ancient glory's stay,
> By tales diverted on their way
> Home from the rule of Oriental races.
> Life-trifling lions these, of gentle eyes
> And motion delicate, but swift to die
> For honour, passionate where duty lies,
> Most loved and loving."

Yes, Sir, I look round this House too and I wonder to whom the reference could apply—" these light-bearded, sunburnt faces ".

Sir, in the course of the history of the development of the Christian dogma, there are two words that have figured prominently ; one is " faith " and the other is " works ". My Honourable friend, Sir Basil Blackett looks interested. Yes, it is of fascinating interest, this controversy around these two conceptions of faith and works, and, as I looked round this House I wondered who had found salvation, whether those there, where immense files stand to their credit, who have worked for 150 years creating irrigation schemes, famine schemes, educational schemes—immense things done for India, but with no faith in India, even as a schoolmaster says to his pupil " I will teach you this, I will give you the other things, but after all I do not believe that when you grow up you will be any good ". On the other hand, I turn to my Honourable friend the Pandit and I ask vainly of the Swaraj Party " works ", I find they have a great faith ; and it is the faith that every Indian can accomplish great things. They have very little to show, very little actually accomplished, but immense faith. And I do ask this House whether we cannot combine the two ; whether works and faith cannot come together. We in this House I say are not prepared, because of the inadequacy of the Resolution put forward by Government, to accept it. We are compelled to vote for a Resolution which with all its defects is based on faith in India and in her future. Here is the opportunity for the Government to come forward and say : " After all when you come to judge the actual issues there is not much between us, the Government and yourselves ". Each side has seized on a great cardinal principle. Hold these principles as strongly as you like, but there is always some principle higher than either. To use the Hegelian terminology, " thesis " " antithesis " " synthesis." Surely there is an opportunity for a great synthesis among the Members of this House who honestly hold opinions that the divergent.

Mr. V. J. Patel (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Mr. President, I had no intention whatever to take part in this debate because I had already expressed my views on the Lee Commission's Report at the May meeting of this Assembly. I see nothing before me to-day to make me change my view. I then stated emphatically and clearly that the Report of the Lee Commission should be consigned to the wastepaper basket and I maintain that view to-day. If I rise to take part in the discussion it is because I hear from all sides of this House the high appreciation of the great work and the good work that the Services have done in this country all these years. That is one side of the picture. I am afraid I feel it my duty to my country to present the other side of the picture and should not allow the case to go by default. I have heard nothing but praise for the I. C. S. I ask this House to judge the Services by the result. The Services are holding the reins of this country for the last one hundred years or more and I want every Honourable Member of this House to examine and realise for himself the condition of the country at the present moment after these 150 years of British rule. The Britisher came here to trade and he managed to stay here to rule. He would not have come here if the country was poor. It is a historical fact that the country was one of the richest countries in the world and to-day what do we find ? It is the poorest country that exists on the surface of this earth. The average annual income of an individual—Sir Basil Blackett is not here I am sorry—is not more than £2—Mr. Chaman Lall would like to put it lower. (The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee :" How do you know ? ") Will you tell us exactly what the income is ? We have been repeatedly challenging you, we have been making these statements for the last so many years, and you have never cared to investigate what is really the annual income of an individual in India. You would not face that inquiry, you would not care to make that inquiry, and we know the reasons why you do not want to make that inquiry. Your conscience is guilty. Mr. President, after 150 years of the Services rule you find that millions of people of this country live on one meal a day. The average life of an individual is 23 years and what is the extent of the literacy ? 5 or 6 per cent. of the total population of India, —6 per cent. taken as a whole. After 150 years we are told that we are not yet fit to govern ourselves. Our industries are destroyed beyond redemption and the whole population is disarmed and emasculated. That is the condition to put it briefly, and I want the House to judge the Services by this result. They were in full possession of this country, they were in full charge, they were the masters and arbiters of the destinies of 300 millions committed to their charge, and let them lay their hands on their hearts and answer whether they have governed this country in the interests of the millions of this country or whether they have governed the country in the interests of their masters 600 miles away ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : Hordes of mercenaries !

Mr. V. J. Patel : (A Voice : " 6000 miles ") 6000 miles away, and yet we are told to-day that the Services are most efficient, the Services are most honest, are most sincere, they are truly devoted Services, and all sorts of appreciative epithets are used. I do not understand why all this was necessary except to prove a case in favour of the increases that are proposed by the Lee Commission. I now come to the Report itself. My position is this. I really do not care to look at this Report and to examine it on its merits even if you supply me with the evidence which has been taken in camera. I shall have nothing to do with this Report unless and until the constitutional question is settled. What I want is the power to give the increases to the Services. I do not want the power to recommend. That is nothing, because I know what recommendation means. We have been making recommendations. I have been in this Assembly for the last one year. I have been in the January session, the May session and this is the third session in which I am taking part and we have passed a number of Resolutions recommending to Government to do this thing and that thing and they have thrown all those Resolutions into the waste-paper basket. Every one of them. I can prove it. Every important Resolution has been treated as a scrap of paper by the Government.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Even the one letting you off income-tax.

Mr. V. J. Patel : Letting me off income-tax ? I do not know whether there was any Resolution on that. There was a Resolution carried by a majority regarding self-government. That was treated with contempt. I know the Resolution of my friend Mr. Neogy about the protection of the coal trade. That has been treated as a scrap of paper. There is my friend Mr. Ramachandra Rao. His Resolution that certain contracts of the Railway Companies be previously examined by this Assembly has also been treated similarly, so also has the Resolution regarding Mr. Horniman, and that regarding the appointment of a Committee to inquire into the Sikh troubles, and so on. I can quote instances after instances to show that the Government have discarded all the recommendations of this Assembly.

Pandit Shamlal Nehru : Can you cite any Resolution which they have accepted ?

Mr. V. J. Patel : I am sorry I cannot. My friend Sir Charles Innes observed that if this House were going to treat these recommendations of the Lee Commission in accordance with their ideas of what ought to be the constitution of this Government then better not waste our time and that is exactly the stand which the amendment of my friend Pandit Motilal Nehru asks the Assembly to take. By the first part of his amendment my friend Pandit Motilal Nehru clearly maintains that all the recommendations of the Lee Commission should be rejected. These are the exact words : This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that the recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services be not accepted." What is the second part ? The second part of the amendment is in my opinion the reiteration of the demand for self-government. If you really read between the lines, that is the only meaning that can be put upon it. The amendment demands the stoppage of all recruits from England, the control of all the Services by the Assembly through the Government of India and the Local Governments concerned. It demands the Public Services Commission to be instituted with functions to be determined in accordance with the recommendations of this Assembly and it further demands the control of services, their pay, their pensions and other concessions to be regulated by the Government of India and the Local Governments according to laws to be passed by this Assembly and the Local Legislatures, respectively. The Governments in so far as the Services are concerned are to be subordinate to the Legislatures. This is the main part of my friend Pandit Motilal's amendment.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Where is that ?

Mr. V. J. Patel : I will read it to you. It is on page 6 of the agenda paper :

"That His Majesty's Government be requested to take the necessary steps for the purpose of transferring the powers of appointment and control of the Services now vested in the Secretary of State to the Government of India and the Local Governments, such powers to be exercised under laws to be passed by the Indian and local Legislatures regulating the Public Services, including the classification of the Civil Services in India, the methods of their recruitment, their conditions of service, pay and allowances and discipline and conduct."

So all these matters are to be regulated by laws to be passed by the Indian Legislature and the local Legislatures respectively, and such laws are to guide the Executive. So ultimate power is vested in this Legislature and the Provincial Legislatures. You have got to regulate the Services in accordance with the laws passed by this Legislature and this is possible only if you are subordinate to us. This therefore is a clear demand for self-government and nothing less than that. If it were otherwise I should be last man to support it. I want to make it perfectly clear once again that this amendment, if it means anything at all, means that we want the Services to be controlled by the Government responsible to the Legislature. This is possible only in a self-governing country and therefore the demand in the second part of the amendment is in my opinion nothing short of a demand for full responsible Government where the Services are controlled by the Legislature through the Executive responsible to it.

And the third part of the Resolution is this. We are perfectly willing and I am willing on my part to examine the grievances of the Services. I am perfectly willing to do so. (The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : "Thank you.") If you only give us the opportunity. (A Voice : "Why should you do it ?") Why should I do it ! Well, if they do not want it to be done we have no objection. If they are willing to leave us I shall not be at all sorry. I tell you frankly and I am quite clear in my mind that India can afford to relieve these gentlemen if they desire to be relieved. I have not the slightest doubt in my mind on that point. I am not at all in agreement with those who say that we must have the assistance, the help, the guidance, of the Englishman : that we must have an admixture of Englishmen side by side with our Indian friends in the Services. I do not believe in all that. That is all camouflage. If they are prepared to stay as servants, by all means let them stay. We are perfectly prepared to treat them as such. But if they want anything more than that and they wish to go away because they can no longer dictate, I shall not be sorry on that account. I think India can do without them, and it is no use saying that for a long time to come we must have the assistance of Englishmen in India. We have had enough of their dictation. We now want to stand on our own legs. So, Sir, the third part of the Resolution makes it clear that so far as the existing incumbents are concerned we on our part are perfectly prepared to examine their grievances, if any. I do not believe there is any grievance. I think the Services are amply paid, but if there are yet any grievances let us be satisfied about them after we get power to pass final orders, not merely make recommendations. That is my position. The third part is conditional on the acceptance of the second part. It does not stand by itself. We want powers to pass orders before we examine the alleged grievances. I wish to make it clear to this House that the third part hangs on the second part. If His Majesty's Government is prepared to stop all recruits from England from to-day, and if the Secretary of State is prepared to transfer the power of control and appointment of the All-India Services to the Government of India and the Provincial Governments who in their turn are prepared to exercise such powers under laws to be passed by the Indian and local Legislatures regulating the public Services, including the classification of Civil Services in India, the methods of their recruitment, their conditions of service, pay and allowances and discipline and conduct, if that position is acceptable to His Majesty's Government, we are perfectly prepared through a Committee of this House to examine the grievances of the Services if there are any, and pass orders. I wish to make this perfectly clear. (Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : "You are speaking for your part.") That is how I understand the amendment. There can be no other meaning. I do not think the third part can be separated from the second. I do not think there is any other alternative possible for any self-respecting body of men, after the manner in which they have been treated in the matter of the self-government Resolution passed at Delhi and after the manner in which they have been treated in respect of last Budget and the Finance Bill, as also in the matter of a number of Resolutions of this assembly since it met at Delhi. We know the consequences of our action, I know what is going to happen. Sir Basil Blackett—I am sorry he is not here now—told us the other day that if you are going to take the stand which was described as 'the manly stand' that you took at the March session in regard to the Budget, then Government will take the step that they took in that connection. That is, "if you are going to be men, we are going to be brutes." I will read his very words in order that I may not be misunderstood. Speaking on the amendment of my friend Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya in regard to the Lee Commission's Report, Sir Basil Blackett stated :

"I would seriously ask the House to consider whether the result of passing the Honourable Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's amendment would be useful. It would be a direct statement to the Secretary of State, to the Government of India and to everyone concerned that this House is not prepared to consider the Lee Report on its merits. It would be a statement to that effect before the Report has even been read. It would be a direct negative, and is it not obvious that the Secretary of State, in saying that he is willing to hold over the consideration of the Lee Report until it has been discussed in September, must ask that he shall not be made to reply that in no circumstances will they consider the Report on its merits. If the House says that, obviously there is nothing for the Government of India and the Secretary of State to do but to treat this manly action in the same way as they had to treat the manly action to which Mr. Patel was referring in the last session."

So Sir Basil Blackett has given a clear notice to the mover of this amendment as well as those who are supporting him, including myself, what was going to be the outcome of this debate. We know, as well as you do, that this amendment is going to be carried, that the Government are going to be defeated, and Government know that that is the only manly stand that gentlemen on this side can take consistently with their self-respect. And we also know, we have been told in no uncertain language, that, "if you do that, if you become men, then we shall become brutes. We shall throw out your recommendations, and we shall do what we like, as we did in connection with the Budget." You restored all the Demands for Grants which this Assembly threw out ; you certified the Finance Bill which this House threw out ; and you are also saying the same thing to-day that, "if you reject the recommendations of the Lee Commission's Report, here we are with power in our hands, we shall restore all the recommendations of the Lee Commission's Report. We fully understand that all this is a mere farce. Whatever Resolution we may pass, you would do what you like. That is our quarrel with you. We want to make it impossible for you to over-rule us. We want to make you responsible to us. We have been told lots of things about the Services and their character, their efficiency, their integrity and all sorts of qualities of head and heart. Supposing my friend Pandit Motilal Nehru were to take the seat which is occupied by my friend, the Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman, and my friend, Mr. Rama Aiyangar were to take the seat occupied by my friend Sir Charles Innes, and my friend, Mr. Jamnadas Mehta were to take the place of Sir Basil Blackett, would the administration of this country suffer ? Would efficiency suffer ? How would India suffer, I fail to see. Here is my friend Sir Narasimha Sarma, who has been getting along all right. He was working with me in 1917 and 1918 on this side of this House and he was most irreconcilable, more irreconcilable than some of my friends whom I knew. (Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : What about you ?") I say I have been consistent and also conciliatory, because I have been saying frankly what I feel and I ask the Members who are sitting on the Treasury Benches what is the difference between them and us. I ask them what are we quarrelling for ? Here we are. We want self-government. You say you want to give us self-government. It is only a question of time. Let us sit down together and decide what should be done and how we should proceed. Why should we quarrel over this affair, if you are sincere, if you are honest, if you mean what you say, if you do really wish to give self-government to India. We want it ; you say you want to give it to us. We are perfectly prepared to come to terms with you. You will not have all these sleepless nights (Laughter). There will be no difficulty about it. We can come together. That was the motion of Pandit Motilal Nehru at Delhi. It was for a Round Table Conference. It was for bringing us together and talking the matter over and finding a solution. If you do that, there is an end to the whole matter. There will be no more trouble to you and no more anxiety to us. But when you come forward with arguments, such as, "what about the depressed classes; what about Hindu-Mussalman question; we are required to stand between you Hindus and the Muhammadans; we are required to stand between the depressed classes and the higher classes of Hindus" we question your sincerity and bona fides. So long as you assume that attitude, these questions will also not be solved. So long as you stand between us, it is difficult to solve them. In fact, you divide us. I want to make it perfectly clear that the dividing line is there and it is because we want to unite the Hindus and the Muhammadans, the depressed classes and the higher classes, we want to remove the obstacles from our way. (Laughter). That obstacle must go. So long as that obstacle is there, these questions cannot be satisfactorily solved. I know it is our weak point and in our weakness lies your strength. Ad nauseam, times without number, in season and out of season, I hear from the Treasury Benches these two arguments, what about the depressed classes, what about Hindu-Mussalman dissensions. Well, there they are, and I do not wish to conceal my view that to a great degree you are responsible for it. I know it is our duty to see that we are not divided, that we settle our differences; and if I have any voice in the affairs of the Indian National Congress, I am going to advise the Indian National Congress which will shortly meet at Belgaum that there should be no more of these boycott of Councils, boycott of schools and boycott of Courts, but that we should meet together and concentrate on the settlement of the differences between the two great communities of India and the uplift of the depressed classes and the removal of untouchability. The day when the Hindus and the Muhammadans of India unite, that day will see the death knell of the bureaucracy, but I also feel that these differences will continue to exist in some form or other so long as you are here and therefore the sooner you go the better for the country. (Laughter).

Maulvi Abul Kasem (Bengal: Nominated Non-Official): Sir, it is with very great diffidence that I rise to take part in this academic discussion. I cannot claim even in a very small measure the gracefulness of speech or the dignity of Pandit Motilal Nehru, the eloquence or the fervour of Mr. Jinnah, or the vehemence of Mr. Patel, but none the less I hope, Sir, that this House will give me a kind and a patient hearing. The learned Mover of the amendment under discussion, Pandit Motilal Nehru, spoke with the consciousness of addressing a House of whose support by an overwhelming majority he was assured; and, on the other hand, I speak with the nervousness of a man who is addressing, if I may say so, an unsympathetic audience, or, shall I put it, Sir, a prejudiced jury. Sir, Pandit Motilal Nehru in his amendment says that the recommendations of the Royal Commission should be rejected because the Commission was not wanted by us. I agree with him, Sir, that this Royal Commission was not wanted, at any rate, by the people of India. It was, I believe, also not wanted either by the Services or by the Government of India. I am personally not enamoured of Royal or Ministerial Commissions. They are luxuries which India can hardly afford to pay for or to indulge in. If I rise to speak on this Resolution it is not to speak about the various points raised either in the motion of the Honourable the Home Member or in the amendment of Pandit Motilal Nehru. I have been commissioned by a few men—I cannot say a very large number—who unfortunately happen to be my co-religionists, to raise a note of warning and of alarm. I have given notice of an amendment which I wanted to be tagged on to any Resolution that was adopted by this House. It was rather an elastic amendment. But you, Sir, have held that after this amendment is carried, and it is bound to be carried, other amendments will fall to the ground. Therefore, I take this opportunity of expressing my opinion with reference to that amendment alone. I want to do so because I want my opinion to be recorded. I know, Sir, that, even among my co-religionists, there are certain people who will not agree with me now, still I want my opinion to be recorded because I believe that, when the enthusiasm and zeal of new converts has subsided, they will realise that I was right and they were wrong. I want my opinion to be recorded for posterity to judge and for the verdict of history. Sir, I have been glad to note that the President of the Muslim League, Mr. Jinnah, in the admirable speech with which he entertained us, enunciated the Muhammadan demands and I was glad to find a chorus of approval from my countrymen in this House. But, Sir, I, in my long experience of public life, have listened to many professions of sympathy and of appreciation of our rights and of our legitimate claims both on the part of the Government and on the part of my countrymen. But, unfortunately, Sir, I have found it to my misfortune and to my regret that these professions and expressions of sympathy towards Muhammadan claims have been uniformly neglected both by the Government, Indian and Provincial, and have never been sincerely supported by my countrymen not belonging to my faith. Sir, I am as eager—whether you believe me or not—to have self-government for this country as our venerable leader Pandit Motilal Nehru. I believe, Sir, that, if the people of this country were imbued with that cosmopolitan feeling and that unbiased sentiment which guide Pandit Motilal Nehru, self-government will come of itself and will not have to be given to us by a foreign power. But, as politicians and as practical men, you ought to look the facts in the face and you ought not to shut your eyes. If you want to achieve your aim and if you want India to progress, you ought to face the situation and realise the facts and remove those obstacles which stand in the way. It has been said that the British element in the Services is an obstacle in the way of Indian progress. I say, Sir, that the British element in our Services as our rulers is an evil. But I must say that it is a necessary evil. We have been told, Sir, for the last 30 years that there is a brotherhood of Indian nationalism and that Hindus and Muhammadans have practically no differences. And it is only the British bureaucracy that creates the differences simply to follow the policy of divide and rule, simply to strengthen their position. I wish it was so because then the path of progress would be easy. Let us face the facts. Reference has been made here to the incident at Kohat, and the gallant Captain there (Captain Hira Singh) referred to the incidents at Delhi and elsewhere. These mob riots I can brush aside ; they have no meaning ; they are the doings of an infuriated mob with fanaticism on one side or the other. I will take you and draw your attention to a separate matter altogether.

What has been the conduct of responsible Indians, holding responsible positions ? I will place it before you, Sir. Here is the profession that you want an Indian administration administered by an Indian Government, by Indians. Do you really mean it, and is it to be tested by your conduct and your conduct alone ? I will take you to the Province of the Punjab. There you had the unedifying spectacle of all the non-Muhammadan Indian Members going in a body on a deputation to His Excellency the Governor and asking him to remove the Muhammadan Minister simply because it was alleged that he was giving appointments to Muhammadans. That is an edifying spectacle ! This was not done by a mob in Sadar Bazaar in Delhi or the Machua Bazaar of Saharanpur ; this was done by the elected representatives of the Punjab who were there as responsible statesmen. Then, Sir, they say : " It does not matter, as soon as the British element is removed, we shall manage our own affairs." I take you to the Punjab again. The Municipalities there were governed by British officials, and they were removed and Indians were asked to manage their own affairs in local bodies, and what happened ? In Ludhiana and in other places as soon as a Muhammadan was elected as the head of the Executive, as Chairman of the Municipality, the Hindu municipal commissioners of these Municipalities who are responsible men, who are educated men, who are not a mob, who are not a rabble, walked out of the municipal rooms, and in many cases filed a suit asking for the election to be set aside. That is the spirit.

Mr. Chaman Lall (West Punjab : Non-Muhammadan) : May I ask the Honourable Member whether that was the sole reason why the objection was raised to the Muhammadan Chairman in Lahore ?

Mr. Abul Kasem : I am speaking of Ludhiana.

Mr. Chaman Lall : Is that the sole reason ?

Maulvi Abul Kasem : The facts are as published in the papers. In Ludhiana the gentleman who was elected as Chairman was one of the foremost Nationalists of his day. (An Honourable Member : " Who elected him ? ") He was elected by Muhammadan votes because they were in the majority. Then, Sir, going a little further. You ask that the British element be removed. I said in the beginning that it was an evil, but I said it was a necessary evil, necessary not on my account, not on account of the Muhammadans, but on account of you. I will remind you again of the incident at Saharanpur. That unforfunate city had a Muhammadan Magistrate during the course of the riots there and there was a responsible Hindu gentleman who sent a wire to the Government to remove him and substitute a European in his place. These spectacles are not edifying, and these facts do not give us faith, hope and confidence.....

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I should like to know if the observations made by the Honourable speaker are relevant to the point at issue.

Mr. President : I understand the Honourable Member is addressing himself to the necessity of preserving the British element of the service, which is the point at issue.

Maulvi Abul Kasem : Then, Sir, I go to my own province, the province of Bengal, where we form an absolute majority of the population.

There is the apostle of Hindu-Moslem unity—a great national leader (An Honourable Member : " Who ? " Mr. T. C. Goswami : " Have the courage to name the person "). I will give you his name—Mr. C. R. Das.

[Maulvi Abul Kasem.]

He and Hemanta Kumar Sarkar went personally to the Honourable the Maharaja of Nuddea who happens to be to-day a Member of the Executive Council ; and it was on the 27th August last that they did so—I give you the very date—and asked him to get the Muhammadan Collector of Nuddea removed from that district because he had Moslem proclivities.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : On a point of order, Sir. I challenge this statement ; I challenge the Honourable Member to repeat the statement outside this House, in public, if it is not a deliberate falsehood.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May I ask one thing ? Is not the Collector of Nuddea a relation of the speaker ?

Mr. President : Order, order. I must ask the Honourable Member not to be quite so provocative in his manner.

Maulvi Abul Kasem : My statement has been challenged, Sir. I have given the name of a gentleman who happens to be not only a territorial magnate but a Member of the Executive Council of Bengal and verification can be made from him.

Mr. T. C. Goswami: This cannot be allowed to go on unless the Honourable Member is prepared to state it in public,—to repeat his statement about a very great man outside this House. I challenge him to do so again, if he has the moral courage to do so.

Mr. President : Order, Order.

Maulvi Abul Kasem : Then, Sir, I will go still further. Pandit Motilal Nehru has said and said with great force and truth that there are two parties, political parties, in this country—the Swarajists who are not enamoured of the present constitution or the reforms under the Government of India Act, and the Liberals, including the Moderates as he phrases them. They say that this party wants to give the reforms a fair trial. These are the two parties. But I may mention that in this country there was another party, a small coterie who were very much enamoured of these reforms and who wanted to give them not only a trial but who were wedded to them, who were fosterfathers of these reforms, if I may call them so. In Bengal, Sir, on the 26th August last there was this edifying spectacle, if I may call it so—the spectacle of the fosterfathers, the promoters, the supporters of the reforms, joining hands with those whose whole object was to wreck the constitution. Now why should people who were absolutely apart in politics about the question of reforms join hands ? There was one party, and they were honest and straightforward, who said they wanted to wreck dyarchy, to kill it. I can understand that. But those people who wanted to run the dyarchy and who had supported it right through—they went and joined hands with the wreckers of the constitution. My reading of the situation is that they did it because the dyarchy was being run by a Government which was Muhammadan in name if not Muhammadan in character.....

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I may tell my Honourable friend.....

Mr. President : Order, Order. The Honourable Member will get his chance later.

Maulvi Abul Kasem : When the non-Muhammadan Members or some particular Members of this House cheered and approved of that statement of Mr. Jinnah about the Muhammadan demands they thought that they had taken the wind out of our sails. (An Honourable Member : " Do you represent the Muhammadans ? ") I represent nobody. I want my own opinion recorded and I want history to judge it.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Were you not unsuccessful in two constituencies ?

Maulvi Abul Kasem : I may have been unsuccessful in two constituencies, but see around me people whom I have got elected to several places in older days. Faith, professions, principles have been laid down times without number. I for one will not be satisfied with that; I want positive action shown. Pandit Motilal Nehru in the course of his brilliant speech put a question to the Europeans and said " We want you to let us walk and help us in doing so." I will repeat the same question to him and I will tell him " If you want India to progress, if you want to attain responsible self-government, if you want freedom from the chains under which we suffer and which is as humiliating and as degrading to me as to you, I say the best course would be to raise up the Muhammadans, bring them up to the same standard and place them in the same position which they occupied so that they may walk and march in hand in hand." I have been told that these minor questions can be settled afterwards; " Let us first get rid of the bureaucracy and then we will settle our differences and everything will go on peacefully." With due respect to my distinguished friend, I beg to differ from him on that point....

Pandit Shamlal Nehru : May I ask my Honourable friend if he was not personally responsible for the Lucknow Pact in 1916 ?

Maulvi Abul Kasem : I was and I still hold to it ; but what I want is that that pact and any pact that may follow must be translated into action by you and not by a bureaucracy....

Pandit Shamlal Nehru : As soon as we get self-government.

Maulvi Abul Kasem : What I say is this : I make this a condition precedent because in all matters a combination between a strong and a weak party is always dangerous for the weaker party and therefore I say if you want us to march hand in hand with you, to walk shoulder to shoulder with you, I would ask you " Give me the position, the privilege and the strength in order that I can do so." So far, Sir, with reference to my particular amendment.

I shall not detain the House, Sir, because abler men have discussed the various elements of the question under discussion ; but I will say this much that I do not agree with Colonel Crawford when he says that British prejudices about medical attendance should be respected. I know of no person who would object to be placed under treatment by a foreigner. I do not know what Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar meant when he said that he wanted a Brahmin to be treated by a Brahmin. I for one, if I am sick, prefer to be treated by a doctor who was qualified and not by a merely Mussalman doctor....

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : If my Honourable friend will forgive me for interrupting him, I find that speaker after speaker is not capable of understanding a joke.

Maulvi Abul Kasem : After all it was a joke. There are of course many things in the recommendations of the Lee Commission which are not acceptable to me. But the difficulty lies both with regard to the Resolution brought in by Sir Alexander Muddiman and the amendment of Pandit Motilal Nehru. Dr. Datta said that he would not vote for the one and that he was obliged to vote for the other because he accepted it in principle. My unfortunate position is that I cannot accept Sir Alexander Muddiman's Resolution as it stands, nor can I accept the amendment of Pandit Motilal Nehru.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I do not desire at this hour of the day to inflict anything like a speech upon the very large questions that have been discussed ; but as my Honourable friend, the Finance Member, said that the discussion did not range over as many items that were comprised in the Lee Commission's Report as he would have wished, I thought that it might be worth while for me to point out certain aspects of those recommendations which in my opinion entirely support the conclusions that are embodied in the amendment of my leader, Pandit Motilal Nehru. Sir, our great complaint is that we have had no materials placed before us to judge whether these recommendations are good or not, whether they are sound or not, whether the particular things that the Government of India have already decided to do have been based upon proper material or not. The Government said that they have not before them the materials which the Lee Commission had, but they said they had other materials and the Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman said that he was going to adduce them in his speech. My leader, the Honourable Pandit Motilal Nehru, very pertinently pointed out that he searched in vain for any substantial material in the course of the speech of the Honourable the Home Member to lead to the conclusions which he laid down. But, Sir, on the evening of that day, we were given a big blue-book in very small type, very difficult to peruse and we were expected to deal with the materials which were placed in that book in the midst of all the troubles of the debate here. I therefore desire, Sir, so far as I can do it, to point out certain things that are found in this blue-book which go entirely to support the conclusions which we have embodied in the amendment. The main point of our amendment is that this recruitment in England should be stopped. On that matter the Honourable the Home Member said that, if recruitment is stopped, it will have a very grave reaction in this country. My Honourable friend, Mr. Jinnah, has disposed of that. But what I am unable to understand is this continuous process of arguing in a vicious circle. The Lee Commission said that recruitment in England was affected by the grievances of the Services in this country. We are now told that, in respect of the stoppage of recruitment in England, that will affect the position of the Services here. And so on in a vicious circle. Further, Sir, I am glad to find that in the materials placed before us, from the replies from Local Governments, we have very strong support for the position that if Indianisation is going to be real, is going to be honest and sincere, then recruitment must be stopped at any rate until the 50 and 50 proportion is reached. I find, Sir, that the Government of my own Province, the Government of Madras, last year in its combined form, namely Ministers and Executive Councillors put together, recommended that recruitment should be stopped; they put that proposition before the Lee Commission, although subsequent to the publication, when the new Government of Lord Goschen was set up, the Executive Councillors and Ministers recorded separate minutes in respect of this matter. I have also to point out, Sir, that one of the most trusted Councillors of the Government of India and of the United Provinces, the Honourable the Raja of Mahmudabad, has strongly pressed upon the Government that recruitment should be stopped. I find, Sir, that the Ministers in Assam have also taken the same view. Going now to the period before this Commission sat, I find that the Government of India themselves were inclined to think that this proposition of stopping recruitment at least until Indianisation is made real should be seriously considered by the Provincial Governments and the O'Donnell Circular embodied the opinions of the Government of India in this matter. Then, Sir, I find also that in the evidence which was placed before the Commission, there was a good deal of evidence which was placed from the European point of view and which pressed that recruitment should be stopped on the ground, which Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer properly put before the House, that it is not fair or proper to get British youths into the country about whose prospects there was so much uncertainty. They would very probably become disappointed subsequently and discontented. There are many other proposals which are contained in this Lee Report which it seems to me make it clear that the conclusions at which the Government of India may have tentatively or hastily arrived with regard to the continuance of recruitment in England ought to be revised. Therefore, we put this proposition of the stoppage of British recruitment as much upon the ground of the interests of the British people as upon the ground of the interests of the people of this country.

Sir, on this question of Indianisation, again, the Government have accepted, as we learn from the Honourable the Home Member, the proposals of the Lee Commission regarding the rate of recruitment. I am unable to follow the calculations on which this is based and I find that the Government of India's letter to the Provincial Governments has by no means accepted these calculations, upon which this simultaneous recruitment in England and in India has been considered feasible for this purpose. The Government of India themselves admit in their letter to Local Governments that these calculations cannot be laid down with any certainty. The Madras Government point out that for their part they are quite prepared to work on the basis of getting within 15 years as far as two-thirds Indianisation in their own Section of the All-India Indian Civil Services. In some other provinces, also, the same proposition has been put forward by some of the Ministers. I therefore do not see any necessity for accepting en bloc without further examination this proposal as regards the pace of Indianisation which involves the simultaneous recruitment of British youths to be carried on in England and of Indian youths in India.

Then, Sir, I refer to the proposals which have been accepted by the Government of India in regard to the retirement on proportionate pensions and compensation to civilians who may not agree to political changes made in the Government. I find that this proposition of compensating the Indian Civil Service men who do not agree with the political changes that have been brought about by the Government of India Act—this proposition to allow them the option of voluntarily retiring on proportionate pensions—was never mentioned in the original proposals. The Montagu-Chelmsford Report did not contain it. The Government of India's First Despatch on the Reforms did not contain it. The only proposal that was then made was that if the position of any particular officer was made unendurable, then only could he apply upon substantial grounds for retiring on proportionate pension. The proposal of everybody being allowed to voluntarily retire because there have been political changes in India to which he was opposed, was first started before the Joint Committee of Parliament, and that Committee gave the Civil Services in profusion out of the funds of this country. It was that Committee that made the necessary additions to the original Government of India Bill in this respect and Mr. Montagu submitted to these conditions in order to save his Reform Bill.

Then, Sir, there is the question of "existing and accruing rights." The difference of opinion that exists between the Law Officers of the Crown and the Civil Services is quite clear, and I feel, Sir, that although the Lee Commission has not definitely stated that they do not accept the British Law Officers' opinions, it is clear that the proposals that they have made amount to saying that compensation in the extravagant terms demanded by the Civil Services should be given, only that it should be assessed by the Public Service Commission that may be constituted hereafter.

5 P. M.

I consider, Sir, that it is a most unwarranted and a most unjustifiable demand to make upon the slender revenues of this country that these Civil Services people should claim not only the existing and accruing rights which they would get in the normal course of their service but that they should get compensation for the loss of prize posts, special posts and other advantages that they might get in this country. That also is a proposition upon which this House cannot decide without going into the materials that must be placed before us.

Then there is this question of the general increase of salaries in the name of passages, in the name of overseas allowances, and what not. The whole mischief of this situation arises, it seems to me, from having allowed the basic pay to be increased in the manner in which it was done in 1919. The pretext of adopting a time scale of salaries for the Services was convenient enough to put up the salaries of these people by as much as 50 per cent. We have had any amount of statistics put before us. We have had aggregates and averages in profusion, but in considering the question whether a particular officer is better off or worse off in consequence of the graded scheme of salaries to which he becomes subject, it is not correct merely to take total figures and arrive at the result as to whether these officers individually or collectively are better off than they were. The whole question is whether the time scale has operated for their benefit. There can be no doubt that it has operated for their benefit. If as a matter of fact when a man starts service, when the Assistant Collector or Assistant Commissioner as the case may be who used to start on Rs. 400 a month in this country, starts on Rs. 600 and gets a time scale, in which promotion is not dependent upon vacancies higher up, if that man starts with an initial advantage of 50 per cent. over his existing salary, the result is he sets up a standard of life far higher than that which his predecessor would have set up and starting on that standard you are going on building up on that golden plate more and more golden ornaments. That is the reason why we are now faced with all these family budgets, budgets which say that they want as many as 11 domestic servants each from the bottom of the Services, which say that for a nurse for one child in a married man's house, they must pay Rs. 70 a month. The figures found in these budgets really prove too much and try to demonstrate the impossible. We are told that these officers have a monthly deficit of something between 200 to 500 a month throughout their careers. I say, Sir, that this is an impossible state of things to exist and how they manage it is a question which has got to be gone into, as our Resolution has put it, by a frank, fair discussion in a committee which we are quite prepared to set up.

Then, Sir, our whole position is this. We want these Services which have been described in the letter of my Honourable friend Mr. Crerar as an organism, we want this organism not to thrive in the manner in which it throve before. We want this organism replaced by an organism of a different kind. This organism was an organism that governed this country. We want a permanent Civil Service subordinate to a responsible executive in this country. Surely this century-old organism cannot be converted into the new organism without drastic treatment. We therefore want that if this country is to have self-government, this corps d'elite, this ruling class, this great dominating authority over millions of people in this country, should be replaced by a service which is truly a service and which is truly Indian. I say, Sir, there is no question of racial animosity or racial antipathy in this matter. We are quite willing, provided these people are prepared to come into this country and compete with our own fellow-countrymen on equal terms, we are willing that they should join the Services on the same conditions as Indians. We are also quite willing that, whenever expert services may be required, we should obtain these services from British people on such terms as are reasonable and as we can afford. We do not want merely for the pleasure, or I don't know what, of having people out from England, to pay them more salaries, more overseas allowances, more passages and more other things, while we have men with equal ability and equal efficiency in our own country. That is our reason for objecting to British recruitment. We say that this recruitment from the financial point of view imposes a permanent drain upon this country. From the political point of view it increases or strengthens, as my leader put it, the grip of the British nation over this country. On financial grounds it is not right, it is not just or proper, that when you can get the same material in this country we should pay higher and get it from another country. We have no objection to Englishmen coming here and competing. We have no objection to that. But when we can get the same material here cheaper why should we go elsewhere and pay so much more for it out of the poor Indians' resources. These are matters which ought to be discussed and settled with us along with the question of self-government, because this question of self-government also involves the question of the organization of the Services that ought to be modelled on the scheme of self-government.

On the question of the grievances of existing men, there has been so much new material put before us which we should sift and upon which you should get a considered verdict from us. Without such sifting, we are unable to deal with it. On the question of the stoppage of British recruitment, we think this is a condition precedent to any proposal for either dealing with existing grievances or for dealing with the organisation of the Services in the terms of the recommendations of the Royal Commission. After all, what is this great Public Services Commission upon which my friend Sir Narasimha Sarma dwelt at length ? It is a mere shadow, just as the Reform Act is a mere shadow, and it has no substance. It is as much a wooden horse as the Reform Act. What we want is a real Public Services Commission, a Public Services Commission that is controlled by the Legislature of the country, that is in a position of independence as regards its powers of recruitment and of providing regulations for the control of the Services. Therefore I appeal to the House that they should carry the amendment of Pandit Moti Lal Nehru by an overwhelming majority.

Maung Tok Kyi (Burma : Non-European) : Sir, I thank you very much for the opportunity you give me of speaking on my amendment. Now, Sir, the first part of my amendment is based on the Resolution that has been passed recently in the Legislative Council of Burma, and that Resolution was :

"That the Burma Government should be empowered to reconstruct the Burma Services on Provincial lines."

Sir, as my Honourable friend, the learned Pandit, has said the other day, the present system of recruitment and appointment to the Services is an anachronism. The Honourable the Commerce Member feelingly denied that either the system or himself was an anachronism. I have great sympathy with him but I am inclined to believe that the system is an anachronism and people in Burma are trying their best to reconstruct it. While the question was being discussed in the local Council the Leader of the House there said that the discussion could only be an academical one. The question was intimately concerned with the Lee Commission's Report, and the Central Legislature was the only place where the question could be properly discussed. It may be that the question was an academic one in Burma, but it is not so in this House. In fact it is a matter of urgent importance, especially from the point of view of the European members of the Services. Now, Sir, my Honourable friend, the Pandit, is for the wholesale rejection of the recommendations of the Commission. But I, like my friend, the Honourable Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer, propose to consider the recommendations on their merits. The Services are now, as everybody is aware, divided into two classes,—the transferred services and the reserved services, and I think that the distinction has already done some harm. It is not conducive to the proper and efficient working of the reforms, and the sooner this distinction is removed, the better. My friend, the Honourable Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer, proposes that the Indian Forest Service and the Irrigation Branch of the Service of Engineers should be transferred. I agree with him in this. I think the two services referred to by him should not only be transferred but also provincialized. But when he suggests that the Indian Civil Service and the Indian Police Service should still be reserved, I do not quite agree with him. I think all services should not only be transferred, but also provincialized. Now, Sir, my amendment has been divided into two parts. I have dealt with the first part. With your permission, Sir, I will deal with the second part now. I propose that no increase should be made to the present pay and allowances. We, almost everyone of us, who think in the same way as my learned friend, Pandit Motilal Nehru, believe that the country is bending, nay crushed, under over-taxation, and I think that an increase of expenditure resulting from increase of pay cannot be borne by the people. It has been said, at least from the Government Benches, that the cost of living is still high, and on the other hand, Honourable Members who represent the people have clearly shown that since the year 1920 the cost of living has shown a downward tendency. Now, Sir, the average European officer in this country has got to serve here on about Rs. 1,500 a month. This salary compared with the salary of a Cabinet Minister in Japan is considerably higher. A Cabinet Minister in Japan is getting only 8,000 Yen a year, that is Rs. 12,000 per annum or Rs. 1,000 per month. So the pay of an average European district officer in this country is considerably higher than the pay of a Cabinet Minister, highest of the officials in Japan. One of the reasons why we are pressing for the Indianisation of the Services is that we will have the Services at a much lower cost. In fact the day will not be far distant when a Cabinet Minister in India will work for the good of the country at a rate of pay on which the Japanese Cabinet Minister is working at present. Sir, let me repeat that Rs. 1,500 a month is a big sum. The people of the country cannot afford to pay more. Those who have studied the economic condition of the country will not be able to deny honestly that the burden which is being borne by the people of the country is already too great. The salary of Rs. 1,500 a month is about the limit which an ordinary average European officer should get. If that officer cannot live on this pay, if he cannot try and live within his own means, then the sooner he leaves this country the better for all concerned. My Honourable friend, Professor Rushbrook-Williams, says somewhere,—not in this House, but in his book called " India in 1922-23 "—that the people of India are thriftless because they spend Rs. 214 on marriages and only Rs. 35 on funerals. And, mind you, Sir, such expenditure is not incurred once a month. It is incurred in a life-time and yet my friend has characterised the people of this country as thriftless. Sir, I think I am quite justified in saying that, if the average European officer cannot live on Rs. 1,500 a month, he is not only thriftless but reckless. Sir, as I submitted a little while ago, we cannot bear any more financial burdens. We are already crushed under taxes and the people of Burma are worse off in this respect. We in Burma pay Rs. 12 per head per year. That is to say, we are paying per head more than the people of any other province in the Indian Empire. I think the limit of taxation has been reached in Burma, though the Honourable the Finance Member has denied this in the case of India. But I say that the limit of taxation in Burma has already been reached. That is why I propose that the allowance which is called the Burma allowance and which is peculiar to Burma only should be discontinued. This allowance was sanctioned at a time when the country was not opened up as it is at present, and when the cost of living was admittedly higher in Burma than in India proper. But the condition of the country has materially improved during the last two decades or so and there is no facility or amenity which is obtainable in India which is not obtainable in Burma, and I think the cost of living in Burma is at present not higher than that in India. And in Burma we have got an Act called the Burma Village Act,—I may call it the Slavery Act,—a relic of olden days, and under that Act an officer can order any villager at any time of day or any time of night to supply him with food, fuel, boats, carts, eggs, fowls, milk, or any necessity of life, and he gets the supplies at a nominal price. He gets them at a rate much cheaper than the ordinary market price. On account of this facility also, the Burma allowance should not be continued any longer. It is a pity, Sir, that the Commission did not visit my part of the country. None of them, except Sir Reginald Craddock, knows something about Burma, and

[Maung Tok Kyi.]

Sir Reginald Craddock knows the country just as the Honourable Mr. Chatterjee knows unemployment in India, i.e., through District officers. If the Commission had visited Burma I am almost sure they would have been convinced of the fact that the conditions in Burma are not so different from the conditions in India. Sir, I have dealt with the question of Services not in an academical manner as suggested by my Honourable friend, Maulvi Abul Kasem, who, by the way, admittedly represents nobody but himself, but I have dealt with it as a question of practical politics, and I am very glad that this House is competent enough to deal with that question. When the same qustion was being discussed in the Legislative Council in Burma, another prominent Government official took part in the discussion. He dealt with the question half in witticism and half in seriousness. But, Sir, I for one take politics always seriously. I cannot afford to deal lightly with it, and whatever I say in this House is based on my convictions and nothing else. I believe, as I said a little while ago, that the people of this country cannot bear the burden of any fresh taxation or any more expenditure. One of the main reasons why dyarchy is so unpopular throughout the country is that it has caused an increase in expenditure, and I therefore earnestly appeal to the House that they will do nothing to further increase the expenditure of the country.

Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan (Patna and Chota Nagpur cum Orissa : Muhammadan) : Sir, I had no mind to speak. But for the speech just delivered by my friend, Maulvi Abul Kasem, who himself admitted that he represents nobody but himself I had to speak. Let me tell you, with the permission of the House, that I represent the largest Muhammadan electorate in my province of Bihar and Orissa, and I in my representative capacity entirely repudiate the assertions made by my friend. I do not think that the Muhammadans would ever be so undignified as not to shake hands with the Hindus and fight with them shoulder to shoulder in the struggle for self-government simply through fear or dread of the Hindus. Muhammadans cannot be so timid and so cowardly ; they are manly men. They are Indians. They know they are Muhammadans but they also know that they are Indians. Although they have sympathy with the great Muhammadan States, yet in all political matters they are with the Hindus ; and I give them, in my representative capacity the assurance that we are ready and always will be ready to shed blood with them and for them in their struggle for self-determination and self-government. But, Sir, I do not base my claim, or our claim, for self-government on the vilification of Englishmen or the Civil Service. I have the greatest respect, let me tell you, Sir, for the members of the Civil Service, and I entirely disagree from my friend, Mr. Patel, when he tried to make an attack on the Civil Service. I have been in touch with them for a very long time and I have not only respect for the members of the Civil Service but I have the greatest respect for the English people and the English nation. The English Government has been called a Satanic Government. But I do not base my claim on that fact, I base it on the fact that we Indians have as much right to self-government as any other nation ; it is our inherent right. Under the law a man attains majority after the age of twenty-one. We have been under the Court of Wards in the charge of Englishmen for one hundred and fifty years. Now we have attained the age of majority, and are fit, and now we ask the English people to be just and fair to us and give us what we want at least in a spirit of generosity. That is my claim.

As regards what Maulvi Abul Kasem said, I again say that he was wrong and had no business to stand up and say all that he has said. As no other Muhammadan Member has spoken, I thought it my duty to state that he was wrong and to emphasise that the Muhammadans and Hindus are all for the amendment moved by the Pandit.

It is getting very late and I shall not go into the details of the question. I simply want to remind the House that the amendment moved by Pandit Motilal Nehru is not an amendment of the Swarajist Party merely but of the whole Nationalist Party, nay it is an amendment of the whole Indian nation. This House has to consider whether it has to support this amendment or the Resolution moved by the Honourable the Home Member. If you read the Resolution and the recommendations of the Lee Commission, you will find that they are entirely in conflict with the basic principle which underlay the Resolution that we had adopted in the last session. Would it therefore be consistent for Members of this House, after having adopted that Resolution, now to shirk their responsibility and not whole-heartedly support the amendment moved by Pandit Motilal Nehru ? I ask the whole House, at least all the elected Members, to stick to their guns and remain firm and whole-heartedly support the amendment. With these words I support the amendment.

Mr. W. F. Hudson (Bombay : Nominated Official) : Sir, at this stage in the evening I cannot expect to interest the House, but I can at any rate promise to be brief. There appear to me to be about twenty grounds on which I should like to oppose the Honourable Pandit's amendment, but, as I hope to observe the time-limit rather more successfully than some of my Honourable friends who have spoken before me, it is obvious that I must confine myself to one or two points. My main objection to the amendment is that it is a delaying amendment. That was probably not the intention of the Honourable Pandit, but it will unquestionably have that effect if it is passed and carried into effect. The Services have already waited an intolerably long time for reliefs which were overdue four years ago, and as each month goes by the financial situation of the individual officer grows worse and worse. I do not propose now to weary the House with a long and painful history of the representations that were made to the Government of India from every Service and from every province from the year 1920. It has been well said that the mills of God grind slowly ; but in the eyes of the Services the mills of God are high velocity engines compared with the mills of the Government of India. At long last, however, when hundreds of officers had given up the unequal struggle and taken their proportionate pensions and gone Home in the hope of being able to pick up a decent living there, then the Royal Commission was appointed, and although many months elapsed before they started work, when they did get to work they grasped the fact at once that this was a matter of extreme urgency and they most commendably got out their Report in what for a Royal Commission must have been record time. I would also draw the attention of the House to the fact that in their recommendations they unanimously urge that there should be as little delay as possible in taking action on their proposals. And now, Sir, at this point, after four years of weary waiting and financial stress and just when a spark of hope has been lighted, it is proposed by the amendment to scrap this Report and to do the whole work over again. For the work would have to be done over again, since I think it must be obvious to anyone that evidence given under the seal of secrecy could not possibly be divulged to anyone for whom it was not intended. Any Secretary of State who attempted to divulge it would be hounded out of public life in England and deservedly so. (Pandit Shamlal Nehru : "Not even to the Government ?") No, Sir. Not even to the Government. It was intended for the Royal Commission. Now, it is not explained why there is any reason to suppose that this Committee would do the work any better or more equitably than the body of distinguished public men who were recently appointed by the Crown. In this kind of question there must be finality somewhere, and I submit that the unanimous finding of a Royal Commission on which India was very admirably represented and this House in particular was represented by one of its ablest and most independent Members should be accepted by all reasonable men.

Now, Sir, I propose briefly to explain one or two matters in regard to which relief is so urgently needed. The amendment says that no material evidence is indicated in the Report. I propose therefore to indicate just a few facts and figures—as few figures as possible, as I observe that the Honourable Mr. Jinnah does not like being bombarded with them. Figures are things you cannot get away from altogether in discussing a matter of this nature. The point which I wish to draw your attention to is that relief which we call free passages, one of the most important from our point of view. As regards this, I cannot but note with surprise and regret that, judging from the amendments I see before me and the speeches we have heard, many Honourable Members are opposed to any concessions of this kind. I said "with surprise" because I should have thought that a concession in this form would have obtained a special degree of sympathy in this country. Love of his home is one of the strongest sentiments of every Indian, and, though I do not want in the least to be unduly sentimental on this occasion, I should like Honourable Members just to ask themselves seriously how they would feel if they had been cut off for years and years, as scores of European Civil servants have been by the cost of passages, from a sight of their parents or their children. Now, for the figures. In 1913—I take a typical case—a return passage of an officer, his wife and one child cost about Rs. 3,000. In 1920, when the revised scale of pay was fixed, the cost was Rs. 2,000. To-day it stands at Rs. 5,000. Now, of course, I understand that to the successful professional men whom I see around me—many of whom I feel sure have doubled their fees since the War—Rs. 5,000 is a mere bagatelle. But how is a junior officer with a wife and child on Rs. 1,200 or Rs. 1,500, how is he ever going to save Rs. 5,000 when he can barely pay his bills in this country ? It simply cannot be done, and if he takes leave at all, he has to do one of two things—he either has to borrow on his insurance policy or he has to borrow from Government—which latter resort cripples his resources for many years to come, after his return from leave. So the Royal Commission realised that it is essential that an officer should have a free passage to Europe, not only in his own interest but in the interest of his efficiency as a public servant and that, owing to a rise of nearly 200 per cent. in the cost of passages since the last revision of pay, some relief is absolutely necessary. And it seems to me, Sir, that the Royal Commission have given the relief where it is most needed. In this concession there is no encouragement to any extravagant standard of living such as I understand some Honourable Members consider now prevails—though goodness knows on what grounds. This concession makes it possible for an officer to see his home and his children at long intervals and to fit himself to discharge his duties efficiently in this country. Moreover, there is nothing in the least unusual in this concession, as we heard from the Honourable the Finance Member this morning. The Government of the Malay States and I may add the Governments of the African Colonies give it, and most of the European firms give it. Had the Government of India given it in days gone by, it is highly probable that there would have been no need for a Royal Commission at all. The Civil Service never pressed for it until circumstances absolutely compelled them to do so, but the time has come when they cannot get on without it. Sir, scores of officers, I may say, hundreds of officers, are waiting eagerly for this concession to be sanctioned : men who have borne the burden and the heat of the day through long years without a break. They are longing for a sight of their homes and their children, and this is their only chance. And if it is denied to them, in my belief there will be a wave of discontent throughout the Services such as India has never before experienced.

There are many other points which I should have liked to discuss, but I must leave them as the time is already late. But before I sit down I want in all good faith to make this appeal to the Assembly. It has been said with some degree of truth that no argument and no speech has ever turned a vote in a democratic House, and perhaps we can hardly expect an exception in this, one of the youngest representative Assemblies in the world. The argument which I am going to use is one which was put yesterday in rather a different form and received in parts of the House with, what are called in the House of Commons " ironical cheers "—I venture to hope that there will be no ironical cheers to-day. I put the argument in all good faith and it is not really a humorous matter at all. One of the aspirations, as we have heard several times to-day—one of the aspirations of many Members of this Legislature is that the control of the whole of the All-India Services should be transferred to India and exercised by the Government of India or the Local Governments through a Public Service Commission. With that aspiration as such I have no quarrel whatever. On the contrary I understand and sympathise with it. But it cannot be realised, and I venture to say it never will be realised, until it has been clearly established by something more than words—we have had very kind words to-day, but we want something more than words—that the Services will be treated as fairly by the Indian Government as they are by the Secretary of State. Now, it is no use blinking the fact that the Services at present are convinced that such would not be the case, and if we may judge by the political speeches and writings of the last four years, and even by some of the speeches in this Assembly, they have sound grounds for their apprehension. And now, Sir, there is a unique opportunity,—an opportunity which I think is not likely to recur for years—to show that the apprehensions of the Services are quite ill-founded and that this country is prepared to treat its permanent Civil servants as fairly as any other. If this Assembly to-day generously and unanimously accepts the carefully considered proposals of the Royal Commission in regard to the relief of the Services, there is no question that the impression that will be made upon the British Government, the British Parliament, and the British people, will be profound, and that it will be difficult hereafter to maintain the argument that the Services need and must have for years the protection of the Secretary of State. But if this Assembly is so ill-advised—I do not wish to use any unpleasant word—if this Assembly is so unwise as to reject these proposals or postpone them to some remote and obscure future, then the British Government, the British Parliament, and the British people, who still have a robust faith in the impartiality and capacity of Royal Commissions, will realise that the apprehensions of the Services were well-founded, and that much water must flow under the bridges before a change can be made. I repeat, Sir, this is a unique opportunity for doing a highly effective thing at a comparatively small cost, and an opportunity which I make bold to say that any one with sound political sense would gladly and readily grasp.

Whether this House will display that sense can only be known when the division bell rings, but I for one am still full of hope, despite what has been said and despite the amendments on the paper, that wiser counsels may still prevail.

Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar : Will you permit me to ask the Honourable Member who has just spoken and his fellow officers to advise the Government to accept the offer made by Sir Chimanlal Setalvad ?

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : The debate has been long and has been unique in the history of this Assembly, and at this late hour I shall endeavour to put the few points that I have to as briefly as I can. There are certain points upon which I think opinion should be unanimous. After the appeal which Mr. Hudson has made, I shall ask him and other members of the Civil Services and my other European friends to try to realise the position of us, Indians. I will ask him and other members of the European Services and non-official Europeans to try to get into our skin and to realise the position we are in. I will ask them not to be led away by the impression that we have come determined to vote against the Resolution of the Honourable the Home Member and to carry the amendment of Pandit Motilal Nehru irrespective of any consideration of what is right and just. Let me assure them that we have given the matter the fullest consideration and let me assure them that we have listened with attention and respect to every argument that has been put before the Assembly. Nothing would give us greater pleasure and sincerer satisfaction than that we should agree with our European fellow subjects in the Assembly.

(At this stage Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar, Deputy President, took the Chair.)

I know there would be a thrill of satisfaction throughout the land so far as the members of the Civil Service are concerned if we should accept the proposal of the Honourable the Home Member, and my friends will concede that we are human. We should like to share that thrill of satisfaction, we should be cheered, we should be pleased to know that we had given satisfaction by our action to our European friends. But there is a higher duty that rests upon us. We are not here as masters of the purse that we are asked to vote on. We represent the people, a people admittedly very poor, and every proposition which involves expenditure which is put before us requires that we should give it our earnest and honest consideration and vote upon it with no other consideration except what is due to the people. I admit that it is due to the people that the public servants of the country should be satisfied on all reasonable grounds that their claims are properly dealt with. But I think my friends opposite will also agree that it is due to the people that the public servants of the country should also realise what the people can bear and what they cannot bear. It has been admitted in the debate that the salaries of the I. C. S. stand higher than those of the Services in other departments, and so far as I know, of the Services in all other countries except perhaps America.

Mr. D. V. Belvi (Bombay Southern Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Not even America. The Civil Service is the highest paid in the whole world.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : That was my own impression, but I was told by an English friend of the exception.

Mr. Deputy President : If the Honourable Member wants to speak on a point of order, he will have to rise from his seat and then I will ask the Pandit to sit down.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Now, Sir, my Honourable friends, my European friends, know that for decades past we Indians have been complaining that the salaries given to the Indian Civil servants and to the higher European Services in this country were extravagantly high. At the end of nearly fifty years the Commission which was appointed in 1912 proposed increases in that salary. The Commission reported in 1914 but the report was dealt with and final orders were passed on it in 1919-20. The salaries were increased, increased we were told at the time to the satisfaction of all the members or most of the members of the Services. My Honourable friend, the Deputy President, who is now presiding over our deliberations, pointed out yesterday that taking into consideration the six years that had elapsed, the Secretary of State and the Government of India made additions to the proposals of the Islington Commission in order that the salaries should be proportionately increased in view of the rise in prices which had taken place between 1914 and 1920. He told us that nearly a crore and 15 lakhs were added to the total of the increases given. Now Sir, he also told us that since 1920 there has been a decline in the prices. That point stands uncontroverted.

6 P.M.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I rise to a point of explanation, Sir. I pointed out to you, Sir—the Honourable Pandit was perhaps not listening—that the mistake was made by you of taking the year 1920. The year 1919 was the year in which the increased or revised salaries were given and there has been a considerable rise in prices since then.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : My Honourable friend has not said that there has been no decline since 1920. There may have been some increases in the prices of some articles for a short time after 1919, but taking as a whole all articles that have to be used and paid for I think the position taken up by my friend, the Honourable Mr. Rangachariar, still holds good. (The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : " No. ") Then, Sir, we must agree to differ. Having regard to the facts stated by Mr. Rangachariar and Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, I am not satisfied and I do not know that many Members of this House are satisfied, that there has not been a decline in the prices, taking all things together. And certainly the Honourable the Finance Member has not established that there has been any substantial rise in the prices since 1920. Now, Sir, I submit the position is that the salaries that were given in 1919 were regarded as adequate. In a book published by Mr. Hughes and named "Careers for our sons", which is an excellent publication setting forth the avenues of employment open to British youth, it is pointed out that the increases that were given would have been satisfactory but for certain facts, and those facts are specifically mentioned. It says :

"Before the war the commencing pay was adequate but during the war the rise in the value of the rupee and general increases in the emoluments of all officials raised it to the high figure of £9.58."

I may say that the book was published in 1923,

"Now however the rupee has dropped to the pre-war level of 1*s.* 4*d.*, and the emoluments, increased though they are, do not meet the high cost of living in India except by the exercise of strict economy."

That is a phrase which I wish the House to note—"except by the exercise of strict economy". Then the writer goes on to say :

"The advent of self-government in India whereby the administration of Government passes gradually from the European to the Indian has brought other changes in the outlook of the Indian official. He is no longer quite so sure of his future and what appointments will fall to his lot in the days to come."

These were the two grounds mentioned. It was admitted that the salaries had been raised sufficiently high, but it was said that they were such that because of the fall of the rupee one had to practice strict economy in order to get on satisfactorily. Now it is in this position that demands have been put forward by the Services for further increases to the salaries in the shape of various allowances and passages, etc. I ask, Sir, Members of this House, including my friends on the Government Bench, whether in such a state of things the only consideration to be put before the Assembly and the Government in this country and in England is the need, the greater need, of the Civil Services, or is the condition of the people also a factor to be taken into consideration ? I ask the House, Sir, to bear in mind that during the last three years, after the close of the war, additional taxation to the extent of 41 crores has been put upon the people of this country. I ask the House to bear in mind that this taxation has pressed very hard upon the people. It has affected the general prosperity of trade and industry in this country. Business has been slack ; there is a long and loud complaint throughout the country that the condition of the people has become very much worse than what it was during the days of the war. In such a state of things, Sir, when the Government have found it necessary to add 41 crores of additional taxation to what existed three years ago, is it conceivable that in any other country, in any Parliament which represents the people and is solicitous primarily of the welfare of the people, and after it and subject to it of the welfare of the Services, is it conceivable that proposals for further increasing salaries or giving allowances to the extent to which it is now proposed, would be put forward by any responsible Government ? I mean no offence and I hope no offence will be taken, but I ask my Honourable friends on the Government Benches and I ask my European friends to consider the two things together. Undoubtedly the Services may find it hard to meet their requirements without strict economy, some of the members of the Services may be labouring under real hardships ; when so many European friends and Members of the Government reiterate that members of the Services are suffering hardships, it is no pleasure to us to contradict their statement. We have got no evidence on which we can come to that conclusion. But we are not in a position at the same time to definitely contradict what they say. I assume that some members of the Services find it a real hardship to get on because the rupee has fallen. But, Sir, the fall of the rupee is not a new event in the history of British Indian administration. For the last seventy years and more members of the Civil Service as well as the people of India have had painful knowledge of the fact that a fall in the value of the rupee inflicts a great loss upon India, both upon the people, sometimes upon the Services. The Services have on the whole been remunerated for the losses inflicted upon them for a long time past by the payment of exchange compensation allowance. When its abolition was decided upon, they were given substantial additions to their salaries. Now that being the position, I ask the House to consider whether, in view of the increases given in 1919-20, in view of the general poverty of the people of this country, in view of the initial high salaries paid to the Indian Civil Service, and in view of the fact that 41 crores of additional taxation has recently been put upon the people, and that there is no prospect of reducing it for the present : in view also of the fact that the Provincial Governments are being starved in all Departments which most vitally affect the interests of the people, I ask, Sir, is it right of my European friends, my friends, my brethren of the Indian Civil Service, to press their claims for increases to salaries and allowances in the manner in which it is being done ? And if those claims are real and if it is so very necessary to press them, is it wrong of us who come here by the suffrages of the people to ask that evidence should be placed before us to support them. There is such a thing as a small voice within us human beings who are in this Assembly, and that voice has to be satisfied particularly when we are dealing with the interests of other people. That voice demands that the facts upon which the members of the Civil Service have asked for additional advantages being given them, should be placed before us and that we should be trusted to come to a fair and just conclusion upon such evidence. We are asked to take the recommendations of the Commission on trust, because the Commission was composed of honourable men. Of course they were all honourable men ; of course they were appointed by His Majesty the King Emperor, but that is not sufficient to satisfy me that they have come to right conclusions. They are human as much as we are. If we are believed by some of our fellow Members to be going wrong at this moment in spite of the deliberations which we have had among ourselves, with no other desire than to come to the right conclusion, is it very wrong to think that our friends of the Royal Commission might have gone wrong in the conclusions at which they arrived ? I hope not, and, therefore, I hope my European friends will at least give us the credit of not having come with a perverse determination to vote against the Resolution of my esteemed friend, the Honourable the Home Member, for the mere fun of it. If we are unable to support the Resolution it is because we feel that we owe it to our people that before we agree to them, we should be satisfied that the increases which are demanded, which are asked for, are justifiable. That is our position. We do not wish to be unjust to the Services. Several friends have said that there will be wide dissatisfaction among the Services if the recommendations are not accepted. My esteemed friend, Mr. Willson, deviated from the attitude of calm consideration which he generally adopts and almost threatened that the recommendations must be accepted in toto or the Chambers of Commerce backed by all the British capital that is invested in this country would rebel against Government. Another Honourable Member said that if these recommendations are not accepted, it will create a feeling among the people in England and the Services that we are an uncivilised lot. A third

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

Honourable Member has just now told us that if these recommendations are disregarded, we shall be regarded as a very unwise people and the question of what further concession in the direction of constitutional reform should be given us in the future will be prejudiced. Now, Sir, I am concerned with the living present. It is not for me to peep into the future and to shape my conduct at this moment by a consideration of what judgment may be passed by my fellow-subjects in England or in this country upon our action. We have a very clear issue before us. Have we got any evidence before this House to support the view that in spite of the additions of salaries given in 1919-1920, there is justification for the further increases which are asked for ? Such evidence has not been placed before us. One gentleman said, and I may join with Dr. Datta in congratulating him on his fine speech, though I do not agree with him in many points,—Colonel Crawford told us that Pandit Motilal Nehru would not place his domestic affairs before any Committee and he should not expect European Members of the Service to place evidence relating to their domestic affairs before this House. I am sure if Pandit Motilal Nehru wanted the House to increase the emoluments which he might be getting as the Legal Adviser of the Government of India or in any other capacity, on grounds similar to those which have been urged in the case under consideration, he would certainly have to submit facts to support his case to the Committee which might be appointed to go into the matter. No one would like to peep into.....

Pandit Motilal Nehru : I would double my fees instead of submitting my accounts.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : We have no wish to peep into the private affairs of any of our fellow-subjects. But when they ask for increases in salaries, or allowances on the ground of difficulties in making the two ends meet, when they present a budget in which they show the number of servants they employ and the salaries which they have to give to these servants, when they show what amount they have to spend over the education of their children and so on, they must submit evidence in support of their case to those who are required to vote the increases asked for. Of course it is open to the Government as it is constituted to accept the recommendations of the Lee Commission. The Secretary of State has got powers under which he can do almost anything he likes in relation to the finances of India. It is very kind courtesy that he has asked us to express an opinion on the recommendations of the Commission. He can overrule us. But if he will overrule us, he will be acting upon his own responsibility. He may be satisfied upon the evidence that he has looked into or he may look into that the claims of the Services are just and reasonable, and that, even in the present condition of the people of India, the recommendations of the Commission should be accepted. But we are not given the opportunity to be so satisfied. We are not put in a position to know the facts and to base our judgment upon them. In this situation what do we urge ? What we urge is not that we should turn a deaf ear to all representations regarding increases in salaries but that we should act as any sensible private individual would. Suppose there is a private individual whose income is limited, even as a Member of the Government of India, to Rs. 6,666 a month. He finds that he has got several servants in his employ and that he cannot, owing to his limited means, keep all these servants satisfied. What will he decide ? He will decide that instead of keeping all the servants dissatisfied he should give notice to two of them and be content with two less, or engage others on cheaper terms in their places. That is the proposal which has been put before this Assembly for the consideration of the Government. What we say is this. If you are so thoroughly satisfied that the Services need some further relief, then act fairly by the Services and by the people, and earn the gratitude of both. Agree to stop further recruitment in England in the future. What is the good of going on adding to the number of discontented men in the Services ? What is the good of adding to the volume of discontent that must prevail in this country if you give these increases over the heads of the people in spite of the opposition of the representatives of the people ? Clearly, you and we ought to agree that justice should be done to the existing members of the Services. I think from all that has been said every Member of this House is satisfied that we are prepared to consider any legitimate grievances which any member of the Services may have. These members are our fellow-subjects and our brethren. I do not wish to speak of them as servants, though we all are servants of the public. I do not wish that there should be the smallest feeling in the mind of any member of the Civil Service that it is a pleasure to us to criticise them or to oppose their claims. We value the work that they have done. We appreciate it. We honour them for their work, though we regret also that there is another side of the picture to which we have to draw their attention. But we agree that if they have a just grievance, that grievance should be considered in the fairest possible manner.

(At this stage Mr. President resumed the Chair.)

What do we suggest ? What does the amendment suggest ? It suggests that the further recruitment of Europeans in England should be stopped. That will enable us to effect some saving. We do not want to appropriate that saving to the general revenues. Being assured of it we wish to consider what we must give to our European friends of the Indian Services in order that they should be reasonably satisfied. We do not want any member of the Indian Services to have a reasonable cause for discontent or dissatisfaction. We do not want any member of the Civil Service to think that, if we Indians have a voice in the settlement of their claims, we are determined to use that voice against them. If they should take that view, let me tell my friends that they will be doing a great injustice to us. We wish to be just to them. We only desire that they too should be just to us and to the people, whom both they and we are bound in honour and in duty to serve.

That, Sir, is the first reason, for the proposal which has been put forward on this occasion to stop the future recruitment of the Services in England. The primary consideration is to find both a justification and the means for the giving of the relief which is asked for. Do not let any Member think that this proposal is put forward as a dodge to delay the giving of relief. My Honourable friend, the last speaker, thought that the amendment was a delaying amendment. It is not so. Speaker after speaker on this side of the House has stated that we are prepared at once to go into a consideration of the claims of the Services. But our proposal has not commended itself to the Honourable the Commerce Member, and the Honourable the Finance Member has joined him in rejecting it instead of helping him to consider it more carefully. I regret it, Sir, I regret that a proposal which has been put forward in all earnestness, in all honesty of purpose, should not have received a more favourable consideration from my esteemed friends on the Government Benches. I do not make light of their difficulties. I know what their difficulties are. But this is an occasion on which the difficulties of our position ought to be placed before the Government in England to be considered along with the difficulties of which the Services complain. But there are other reasons, Sir, why this proposal has been put forward. It has been pointed out that English youths are not willing to offer themselves for the Indian Services in large numbers because of the changed circumstances. One of these circumstances, as mentioned in the book from which I quoted, is the altered outlook brought about by the proposal for the Indianisation of the Services. To my mind many of them desire to be assured that certain positions in the Indian Civil Service shall be reserved for them in the future, and that is the reason why in the warrant of appointment of the Commission the language used was entirely different from the language used in that of any previous Commission relating to the Public Services. From the time the Act of 1833 was passed, the English Government had avoided the use of the words Europeans and Indians in the Statutes and Orders they had passed. The Act of 1833 laid down that no distinction would be made between Indians and Europeans, as such that no Indian would be debarred from holding any appointment for which he may be qualified merely by reason of his race. For the first time in the warrant of appointment of the Royal Commission with which we are dealing, it was said that it should inquire into the "recruitment of Europeans and Indians respectively for which provision should be made under the constitution established by the Act of 1919." Now, I submit, Sir, this was a regrettable departure. In 1861 when the Indian Councils Bill and the Services Bills were under consideration in Parliament, a proposal was made that it should be specifically provided that Indians would be represented in the Councils. Sir Charles Wood, the then Secretary of State, refused to do so on the ground which he explicitly stated that "to hold the perfect equality before the law of all Her Majesty's subjects" and that there was no distinction, such as European and Indian, among the subjects of the Queen, whatever might be their differences of birth, or race or religion. This departure, I submit, was regrettable, but there it was, and the Commission has made its recommendations for dividing the posts between Indians and Europeans. Well, if on account of the fear of the diminution of prospects which is felt by the members of the Indian Civil Service, they want to be assured that certain posts in the Civil Service shall in future be reserved for them, that is exactly the constitutional objection which arises so far as we are concerned. We do not want to create a further super. class in the ruling class which has existed so long in this country. We want that members of the Indian Civil Service should come into the service by virtue of their merit and not as Europeans or Indians. That is another reason why we object to these proposals of the Commission.

Lastly, Sir, we want that the recruitment for the Indian Civil Services should stop in England also in order that Indians should have a fair chance of filling up the higher appointments in their country. India has not had a chance during all these many years of building up a public service of its own, nor shall it have it until recruitment in England is stopped. I agree with my Honourable friend, the Member for Commerce, in desiring that we should have an honest, strong and efficient public service. I agree with the proposals of the Commission, that we should have a Public Services Commission and Public Service Acts. We desire that we should pass such Acts as early as we can in this Assembly and take action upon them. But we want that we should consider the matter on a correct basis and under fair conditions. So long as the recruitment and control of such a large number of important appointments will remain with the Secretary of State, the building up of a really efficient Indian public service will be practically impossible. The presence of what will be regarded as a superior service will act like a Upas tree, and it will not allow any healthy plant to grow under it. We therefore desire that the primary question of the control of the Services should be settled in our favour, and that we should be given a fair chance of building up a real, honest, efficient Indian Civil Service of our own. As my English friends know, the building up of a public service is not a thing which can be effected in a day. Their own Civil Service is not more than a century old. Up to the middle of the last century there was no organised Civil Service in England. Commenting on the Civil Service of the day in 1849, Sir Charles Treveleyan described it as " inactive, incompetent and overstaffed in numbers."

" There is a general tendency,"—he complained,—" to look to the public establishments as a means of securing a maintenance for young men who have no chance of success in the open competition of the legal, medical and mereantile professions. There being no limitation in regard to the age of admission in the great offices of State, the dregs of all other professions are attracted to the public service as to a secure asylum, in which although prospects are moderate, failure is impossible, provided the most ordinary attention be paid to the rules of the Department."

This was the state of things in England in 1849. On the recommendation of Sir Charles Treveleyan and Sir Stafford Northcote the Civil Service Commission was organised, and it is only since then that the English people have had the benefit of being served by an excellent Civil Service. The Civil Service of India was constituted a few years later ; and we know that unless a Civil Service Commission like that is constituted, and the Service properly organised and controlled, we cannot expect the Service to be honest, efficient, and impartial. We know that in the days of Clive the servants of the Company were not of the type of which Englishmen could be proud, and we know that their emoluments were fixed at high figures in order to fortify them against temptation and to enable them to act with a sense of decorum and to build up honourable traditions of the Service. The present Service is the result of sixty years of regulation. We honour it for its incorruptibility. As the Honourable Sir Charles Innes put it, we want that the Services in India should be as honest, as efficient and as incorruptible as the present Civil Service is, if not even better. (A Voice : " But are they incorruptible ? ") There may be exceptions, but exceptions should not be noticed, when the bulk of the Service is, undoubtedly, honest, efficient and incorruptible. We desire, Sir, to develop such a Service and we feel that if we stop further recruitment in England we shall be able to build up such a Service. If we do not do so, we are also exposed to a new danger. The recommendations of the Lee Commission distinctly provide that if certain subjects, at present reserved, are transferred in future to Ministers, a member of the Civil Service who is serving in the reserved field may retire on a proportionate pension. Now, Sir, this possibility has come into existence in the past ;—suppose Parliament should see the wisdom and justice of introducing provincial autonomy within the next twelve months or two years in this country—just think how many retirements may possibly take place. And if at the same time there is responsibility introduced into the Central Government, as we, Indians, earnestly desire it should be introduced and as we hope it will be introduced, then imagine how many retirements there might be. And if many members of the Civil Service should in those circumstances suddenly retire from the Service, shall we not be left in the lurch to find men to take their places? It will not be at our initiative that they will retire, but suppose they are allowed the privilege of retiring in those conditions and suppose they do retire, we shall then certainly be left in the lurch. Therefore let us look facts straight in the face. The facts are that the introduction of responsible government, even to the extent to which it has been carried out in India, has altered the aspect of the Services. There are Englishmen who are willing to reconcile themselves to the new state of things. We honour them; we are grateful to them. There are other Englishmen who do not find it compatible with their temperaments or their ideas to continue to work under the new conditions. We do not quarrel with them. They are entitled to hold those opinions. But if they want to retire, we do not want to be exposed to the situation that after we have paid for their services all these years, they should leave us when the country may be most in need of their services. For this reason also is our proposal for stopping recruitment in England put before the Government. I beg the Government to consider it seriously. Let them not be under any misapprehension that by stopping recruitment in England there will be a disaster brought on this country. My Honourable friend, Mr. Willson, asked that there should be a stable Government. Certainly there will be a stable Government. The Honourable Sir Charles Innes said that the one thing which he and his friends wanted really to hand over to India was a strong, efficient, incorruptible Service when the time came to hand over the power to Indians. At least that is how I understood him. Now, Sir, we are at one with these Honourable Members. We also want a stable Government. Will these friends allow me to say, without meaning any disrespect, that our anxiety for a stable Government is certainly not less than that of either my esteemed friend, Mr. Willson, or of the Honourable Sir Charles Innes. We have a deeper stake, if I may say so, in the country, and we are not altogether devoid of commonsense that we should like to disturb a stable Government without having the power to establish stability and carry it on. Let there also be no apprehension that any vested interests will suffer. My friend, Mr. Willson, spoke of British vested interests. I know them, we have no quarrel with them; I assure my friend that no vested interest will suffer if my friends will also be just to us and let us have an opportunity of promoting our own interests at the same time. We know that the Indian Civil Service has done a good deal; I agree with my other friends who have spoken before me about the highly meritorious work done by that Service. I acknowledge with gratitude their work in the field of education—though we wanted more and wider education; I acknowledge the general high standard of justice which they have established; I acknowledge the many other institutions of a beneficial character which they have brought into existence. I acknowledge with gratitude what has been done in the Punjab in the field of irrigation. But at the same time let my friends not misunderstand us if we also point out to them that we have laboured under certain serious disadvantages because of the preponderance of our English fellow-subjects in the Civil Service. While we feel grateful to them for what they have done, we feel that a great deal more would have been done if Indians had been associated in a much larger measure in the Services.

My Honourable friend, the Home Member, though he put the whole case for the Government and the Services in an admirable manner, unfortunately referred to the communal differences which divide us. My friend, Sir Charles Innes, emphasised that point. Now, I want to put it to them, without the least intention to offend any member of the Indian Civil Service, if it is not a great condemnation of the work of the Civil Service that after the seventy years that they have been in full power in this country it should be possible to have such unfortunate, regrettable, deplorable differences as arise from time to time between Hindus and Muhammadans. Is it possible that if the education of the masses had been undertaken on the right scale, such strifes and such deplorable riots of which unfortunately we have had too many, recently, would have ceased to happen ? Now, Sir, we Indians have been pressing for forty years that the masses should be educated ; every sensible man knows that the education of the masses is the one lever which lifts them up in judgment and in restraint of temperament. Even in England when the masses were uneducated, there were most deplorable riots, and to-day riots take place, they are due to want of education among the masses. (An Honourable Member : " What about Ulster ? ") There has been a perversion of human nature owing to certain conditions in Ulster. For forty years we have pleaded, implored the Government to introduce universal primary education. The Government have not listened to our request. In January 1912 when His Majesty the King-Emperor was in India he expressed his desire that there should be a net-work of schools and colleges spread over the whole of the country, and he said that it was by education alone that the condition of his subjects could be lifted. A few months later in the same year, my dear departed brother, Gopal Krishna Gokhale, brought forward a Bill of a permissive character to allow compulsory primary education to be introduced in certain selected areas. Unfortunately the members of the Civil Service along with others opposed it, and the Bill was not passed. Years have gone by ; crores upon crores of rupees have been found for the military requirements of the country ; crores of rupees have been found for everything which the Government decided to do ; but education has not yet been brought home to the people to one-fourth, or one-fifth or even one-sixth of the extent to which it ought to be done. I submit there should be a little searching of heart among my friends of the Indian Civil Service to see if they are not responsible for the present deplorable state of things, when they speak of communal differences. I submit, Sir, that, if the right kind of education had been provided, even my Honourable friend, Mr. Abul Kasem, would have looked at the question before us in a different spirit and would have spoken in a different spirit. It is a matter of severe distress of mind to us Indians—I cannot believe that it can be a matter of satisfaction to any sober-minded member of the Indian Civil Service,—that after so many decades of the existence of such a fine service in this country, an Indian of the education of my friend, Mr. Abul Kasem, should still not be able to take the correct view in regard to national questions. The conditions created are not healthy.

Let me now come, Sir, to the question of the depressed classes. I was more surprised even than by the reference to communal differences, when my esteemed friend, the Honourable the Home Member,—I am sorry to say so, because I have real respect for him—Oh, I beg his pardon,

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

it was the Honourable Sir Charles Innes, the Member for Commerce—when he reminded us of the depressed classes in Madras and elsewhere. Now, Sir, I make a bet that, if a verdict of any three impartial Englishmen selected by common consent by Sir Charles Innes and those who think with him and my friends on this side will express the opinion that the Indian Civil Service have not failed in their duty to the depressed classes, I will certainly not vote for the amendment of my friend, Pandit Motilal Nehru. Let me say this, Sir, that while there has been a great deal of lip sympathy expressed by many of my friends among the European members of the Civil Service with the depressed classes, they have not used all the opportunity and power they had to lift them up by the strong hand of fellowship, beyond and above their present economic condition, which is at the root of all the degradation they still suffer. If education had been promoted among them, if they had been given the same equality of opportunity which has been available to members of other communities, a great deal of difference would have been made in their condition. I recognise that some schools have been opened in every province for the depressed classes. I recognise that some encouragement has been given to them. I express gratitude for that which has been done. But I say, Sir, with great confidence and deliberation that the problem of the depressed classes would be solved if Government would set apart a few crores of rupees every year in order to promote education among them. A member of the depressed class who has read up to the Entrance examination comes and sits with the sons of the most orthodox Hindu in the Hindu University of Benares and in Hindu assemblies. The question of untouchability is a question to a large extent of education and economic condition, and I say with great regret that my friends of the Civil Service have not done for the depressed class all that it was possible for them to do. We want an opportunity to do so. The Assembly is aware, Sir, that at this moment a very strong effort is being made in all parts of the country, under the inspiration of my esteemed brother, Mahatma Gandhi, to lift up the depressed classes. A great deal has been done and I expect that in twelve months or so we shall have solved the problem of the depressed classes by universal education for all people in India: that will improve the depressed classes also. And I suggest conscription, or military training, for all who wish to take it. I guarantee, Sir, that there will not be a Hindu of the orthodox type who will not sit with a member of the depressed classes as a brother and a fellow-citizen if he has been educated. I submit that at least the responsibility for these shortcomings which exist at this present moment in the administration of this country should not be thrown upon our shoulders only, that it should be recognised that we have not had the opportunity or the power to remove them. We have tried to do so. We have passed Resolutions year after year and we have put them before the Government. Government have not done their part. Now we want that we should have our innings. Our friends have had a very long innings. I ask in fairness that they should play the game, that they should like true sportsmen concede that we should now be put in power and that we should be trusted and tried. If we fail, it will be open to Parliament, while our relations last as they are at present, to withdraw the powers that have been conceded. No one has suggested that India should become separated from the British Crown on responsible government being established here. We are asking for responsible government under the Crown. We want Dominion status and not the status of a separate Commonwealth, or a separate State. We do not want that any single member of the Indian Civil Service at present working in the Service should retire. We do not contemplate that there should be no Englishmen left in the Services as soon as the recruitment is stopped. If the recruitment is stopped all the present members of the Services will continue in office and we are sincere when we say that we should take in Europeans whose services we may require in the future on shorttime contracts. For a long time, for nearly 150 years, the Englishman and the Indian have lived together in this country. We are not anxious to separate from the Englishmen in this country and part company with them ; but we are anxious that Englishmen should treat us Indians as equal fellow-subjects, and let me assure them that if they will do so there will be no occasion for them to complain. This is the position. It is therefore that we urge that the Government should agree to recommend to the Secretary of State, in view of the unanimous feeling in this House, the almost unanimous feeling among Indians, that recruitment in England on the present system should stop. I hope the Government have taken note of the fact that my Honourable friend, Sir, Sivaswamy Aiyer, my Honourable friend, Sir Chimanlal Setalvad, and we of the Swaraj and Independent parties, and my Honourable friend, Dr. Datta, who made a very fine speech to-day in the presentation of the Indian case,—that we are all agreed about one thing, namely, that future recruitment in England should be stopped, and I hope that the Honourable the Home Member will be good enough to represent this unanimous feeling to the Secretary of State on this question of further recruitment. The second point of which I hope the Honourable the Home Member has taken note is that we are all willing that if this recruitment is stopped and thereby financial relief is given to the tax-payer of India, we shall go into any legitimate complaints or representations which the members of the Civil Services may make. And if we do not accept the Resolution of the Honourable the Home Member to-day, let it not be said that we have thrown out the proposals altogether. If our position is represented correctly, I hope the members of the Civil Services will not have much reason to grumble and complain. My Honourable friend, Mr. Hudson, said that our amendment will delay the matter. Delay it will, but it should be remembered that the members of the Civil Services are not starved. They have got very handsome salaries, they are enjoying the additional salaries given to them in 1919-1920. Some of them may be inconvenienced for a time, but I am sure that if the matter is looked into by a committee of this House relief can be given at an early date and they will not have to wait long if the matter is agreed upon between Government and this House. I hope that the Honourable the Home Member will be good enough to represent our case fully and strongly to His Majesty's Secretary of State and the British Cabinet. But, of course, Sir, we cannot be sure what the response to it will be and what consideration our representations will receive from His Majesty's Secretary of State. We are at present in this unfortunate position that, though we vote the taxes by which the administration of this country is carried on, we have no power to prevent a large addition being made to the burdens of the people by the powers which the Secretary of State enjoys. This is an anomaly, an injustice.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

Whatever may have been the justification for it in the early days of British rule, there is absolutely no justification for it when a representative Assembly has been constituted, and therefore it is desirable in the interests of justice that the Secretary of State should agree to transfer the powers of appointment and control over all the All-India Services to the Government of India acting in consultation with this Assembly. I hope that our proposals will be regarded as reasonable by the Government of India as well as by the Secretary of State. But whether they are or not, I hope we have made our attitude clear, and the whole of India will know it, the whole of the civilised world will know it, and we are content to stand by the verdict of the country and of all impartial critics.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : It is three days since I last addressed this House and during that period the House has been considering the amendment of my Honourable friend opposite. The hour is now late. I therefore do not propose to detain the House very long, more particularly as the Government have been largely represented in this debate and there is really very little for me to say in winding it up. First of all, however, I should like to say that I have been struck by the tone of most of the speeches. The subject is one that might lead to an embittered debate but I certainly think that on the whole, with one or two exceptions, the debate has been continued in a very good spirit. I am not very familiar with this House but I understand it is sometimes less calm than it has been during this debate. In the first place I have to answer a question which was put to me by Colonel Gidney and Colonel Crawford. It was as to whether we intended to include in the word "Indians" all statutory natives of India. Well, Sir, that is our intention. It was so intended. Now this debate has proceeded so long that I think the House may perhaps almost have forgotten the terms of my Resolution. The weight of the debate appears to me to have been directed to this point. It has been contended that these proposals of the Lee Commission in so far as they relate to the statutory control of the Services constitute not merely no progress but a definite obstacle to progress in the way of constitutional reform. That, I submit, is not right. You cannot fairly say that. They go a long way in the matter of constitutional reform. They transfer to the Provincial Governments and the Provincial Governments on the transferred side, that is to say, the responsible Ministers, a large number of these Services. You cannot say that it is not progress. In the Educational service, and I observe that that is the department of Government to which my Honourable friend, the Pandit, particularly invited my attention since he charged the I. C. S. with not having care for Education, you will be master in your own house. It will be for you to appoint such officials and of such kind as you think fit. Whatever may have been the faults of the I. C. S., and I will not weary the House with instances to the contrary, I contend the education of India has not suffered from the malignant influence of the I. C. S. Still whatever in my Honourable friend's opinion those faults might have been in the past, that at any rate is remedied. You will have your own officers and such as you desire. Similarly in the other transferred Services. Therefore, it is not really fair to say that this is no progress. Then I ask in what way does the Report block constitutional reform ? The objection of the House, as I gather it, is that the control, of the Secretary of State is maintained. What other position is possible under the laws as they stand now ? Moreover that, I submit, clearly has established my point, that these proposals of the Lee Commission with regard to the control of the Services are an advance, not, I admit, as large an advance as the House wants but still a great advance. Nor do they offer any obstacle to further constitutional reform. I shall refer to the question of Indianisation. I gave the House some figures on this and possibly the House has forgotten them. There are roughly 4,000 All-India appointments at present. Of these 1,300 will be provincialised. Now, from the tone of the House and the debate it seems to me quite clear that in the future those 1,300 appointments will be filled by Indians. That seems to be the general view of the House. I gather you would only employ such Europeans in these Services as you could not obtain in the country, presumably experts mainly. However, I am not quite so sure about that. When the Ministers come to formulate their own policy they may possibly take a different view. Still, that is 1,300, on your own showing, that will be Indianised. Then what about the remainder ? There will be 50 per cent. at least and generally more. That is a big increase, a great increase. It is no use blinking the facts. It is a great step forward from your point of view.

Then the next point made in the debate as far as I can recall was this question of the stoppage of European recruitment. It was said, and I felt it would be said, that we should stop this to accelerate Indianisation. Well, Sir, if you stop it at all you have to stop it altogether. Now I submit that in the present state of India a certain number of Europeans are essential. I speak as the representative of the Government of India. We are responsible for the efficiency of the Services. We have the lamp to carry on. We have to hand it on to our successors. If they do not want Europeans, and if any new constitution gives them the power of decision, they will not have them; but as far as our responsibility is concerned, as long as we stand here, we cannot take any step which in our opinion would be either dangerous to the Services by proceeding with too rapid Indianisation—we are Indianising rapidly—or which would produce any deleterious or dangerous effect upon the country. That is my position. It is not our wish, and I tried to make it clear at the first,—we do not want Europeans in India in order to find jobs for them. I tried to make that perfectly clear. We want them, because we consider, rightly or wrongly, that they are necessary in the best interests of the country. It was said that you have enough Europeans in the Services and you can carry on with them. Now if you stop European recruitment—and I have not heard a single answer on this one point—you very seriously affect the European still in the service. Some one asked the question of one of my Honourable Colleagues as to how many retirements on proportionate pension there had been, and I think he suggested that there had been 20. The number is actually 324 in the four years 1921—1925. That is a very big proportion indeed. (A Voice : " Outside the normal retirements ?") Yes, outside the normal retirements.

Now I wish particularly to mention the speech by my Honourable friend, Sir Chimanlal Setalvad. He has worked with the Services and recognized, if I may say so, in very warm terms the relations that had existed between him and his subordinates. He further made a proposal which is in many ways attractive, at any rate to the Services themselves. But the Government of India cannot consider it for it is not possible to shut down your services. If you stop recruitment you finish with it. You cannot reopen it. It is no use arguing that you can.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : I am loath to interrupt the Honourable Member, but so far as I am concerned I did not say that. My point....

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : It was Sir Chimanlal Setalvad I was referring to.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : I know, but I want to make my position clear so that the Honourable the Home Member may reply to it. My point was, stop further recruitment under the present system and you can employ Europeans if necessary by short period contracts.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I am glad the Honourable Member has raised that point. Now short period contracts may be quite excellent for experts. They are quite useless in a service. What is your short-time man going to do employed as a policeman. When he has done his five years here he is valueless except in the job which he holds. The only asset an administrative officer has got is his experience, and his experience in India is of no use elsewhere and indeed that is often a positive disqualification. It is perfectly true you can have these contracts with a railway man or a man in a technical job ; you cannot do that with the ordinary Services.

Now, Sir, the only other point I wish to refer to in this debate is this—the question of the pay, passages and pensions of the Services ; that really has been more discussed than anything else. It has been recognized by many speakers that there is a case for the Services—one or two speakers said that the Services should get what is recommended. But the bulk of the debate has really been on this—whether you are going to do anything at this stage without another inquiry, whether you are going to treat the Report of the Royal Commission as merely prima facie ground for holding an inquiry. Well, Sir, I have a great faith in the wisdom of the Indian Legislature, a great faith in the wisdom of the Members who compose it ; but I do not believe that a Committee drawn from that body, is likely to come to more wise conclusions than a Royal Commission which has already sat. That Commission, as we have been told, spent 5½ months in interviewing officers and went all over the place : and as this House, I am quite sure, would not hold a less rigorous inquiry, a less careful inquiry, and would insist on evidence and would require to take evidence, it would therefore occupy indeed at least as long, and probably longer, for it has been one of the charges against the Royal Commission that its inquiry was held too rapidly and in too summary a manner. The case of the Services has been admirably stated in several quarters. My Honourable friend, the Finance Member, in very eloquent terms has shown that the redress of their grievances has been long delayed. Now Finance Members are rarely to be found in that mood ; and on this occasion it suggests itself to me, it may suggest itself to the House, that the case of the Services is a very strong one. Now I notice my Honourable friend, Pandit Motilal Nehru, recognised that if one goes into Government service, some special attraction is necessary. Did I not hear him say that ? If he took Government service he would claim double fees.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : I had in mind the profession of the law and was referring to professional fees.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I wish I was in the profession, Sir. I am not going to enter into the question at this late hour of the night, as to the failure of the British Government to educate my Honourable friend opposite or even to touch on the question of the depressed classes.

I feel a member of a depressed class myself. I would merely ask the House to remember what Mr. Patel said. What are we going to vote now ? With his usual bluntness, he explained to me and to the House generally, exactly what this amendment means. Now if you vote for it you are going to vote against provincialization, against such measure of Indianization as the Report recommends, and against the relief of the Services. On that, Sir, I am prepared to take the judgment of this House.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : We are willing that the House should vote on measures of Indianization ; we have formulated our own measures, our own proposals, in clauses (1), (2) and (3) of Part I of the amendment.

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I agree, Sir. I accept the correction. I should have said such measure of Indianization and provincialization as is recommended in the Report.

Mr. President : The original question was :

" This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council :

(1) That the following recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India be in principle approved :

(a) that while the existing system of appointment and control of the All-India Services should, in present conditions, be maintained in reserved fields, the following services operating in transferred fields, namely, the Indian Educational Service, the Indian Agricultural Service, the Indian Veterinary Service, the Buildings and Roads Branch of the Indian Service of Engineers in those provinces in which the two branches have been separated, and the Indian Forest Service in Bombay and Burma, should so far as future recruits are concerned be appointed and controlled by Local Governments ;

(b) that recruitment of Indians for the Services in reserved fields should be increased as recommended ;

(c) that, having particular regard to recommendation (a), early steps be taken to constitute the Public Service Commission contemplated by section 96-C. of the Government of India Act, and to enact such legislation as may be necessary ;

(2) That pay, passage, concessions and pensions be granted to the officers of the Superior Civil Services in India approximately on the scale recommended ; and

(3) That the recommendation of the Royal Commission regarding the constitution of Provincial Medical Services in Governors' Provinces be accepted in principle subject to :

(a) the employment in the provinces of an adequate military reserve ;

(b) the provision of adequate medical attendance for British Officers in the Civil Services and their families ; and

(c) the further consideration of the conditions necessary to secure an adequate number of British medical recruits for the needs of the Army."

Since which an amendment has been moved :

" That for the original Resolution the following be substituted :

'PART I.

That having regard to the following among other facts, namely :

(a) That the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services in India was appointed and allowed to enter upon its functions in utter disregard of the Resolutions passed by the first Assembly.

(b) That all questions affecting the Civil Services are inseparably connected with and entirely dependent upon the larger question of the grant of responsible government to India and cannot be entertained and satisfactorily dealt with unless and until the Resolution of this House on responsible government adopted on 18th February 1924, is substantially complied with.

(c) That the terms of reference to the said Royal Commission and the recommendations made by it involve the perpetuation of an antiquated and anachronic system of public services without any attempt to reconstruct the administrative machinery to suit the present day conditions of India which are widely different from those prevailing when it was inaugurated.

(d) That the said terms of reference to the said Royal Commission and the recommendations made by it are based on the unwarranted assumption that the existing system of Government both Central and Provincial and the present position, powers and functions of the Secretary of State, the Governor General and the Governors of Provinces would continue indefinitely.

(e) That some of the recommendations of the Royal Commission are intended to deprive the Legislatures even of their existing powers by suggesting devices to transfer items of expenditure hitherto subject to the vote of the Assembly and the Provincial Councils to the head of non-votable items.

(f) That the said recommendations have introduced racial discriminations in the treatment of the All-India Services.

(g) That the said recommendations make the extraordinary provision that officers appointed to the All-India Services after 1919 as also those to be appointed hereafter shall have guarantees against and compensation for being transferred from the reserved to the transferred field of Service—a contingency which they must be taken to be well aware of when they were appointed.

(h) That the recommendations of the Commission regarding the Medical Services are entirely unsatisfactory in that (1) they seek to perpetuate the complicated system of interdependence of the Provincial Medical Services upon the irresponsible Military Department; (2) they introduce the objectionable principle and a costly scheme of provision for medical assistance to Europeans on a racial basis; (3) they do not recognise the necessity of the Indian units of the Army being officered by Indian medical officers; and (4) they propose to absorb the present Indian Medical Service into the Royal Army Medical Corps (India)—a step which will practically close the door to Indian medical men in the said corps and thereby also in civil employment.

(i) That the inquiry held by the Royal Commission has been unsatisfactory in that the bulk of the evidence on which the bald recommendations of the Commission are based was allowed to be tendered and accepted in camera and no material evidence is either indicated or made available to this Assembly.

This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that the recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services of India be not accepted'."

I propose to put that first. The question is that the substitution be made for the original Resolution.

7 P.M.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President: As the Government Resolution has now been defeated, it is not necessary to put the next four lines, and I will take the substantive proposal. Further question moved :

"This Assembly further recommends that the following steps be taken in respect of future recruitment and control of the Services, namely :

(i) That all further recruitment in England for the Civil Services in India including the Medical Service under the existing rules be stopped.

(ii) That a Public Services Commission be established in India and the constitution and functions of that Commission be determined on the recommendations of a committee elected by this Assembly.

(iii) That His Majesty's Government be requested to take the necessary steps for the purpose of transferring the powers of appointment and control of the Services now vested in the Secretary of State to the Government of India and the Local Governments, such powers to be exercised under laws to be passed by the Indian and Local Legislatures regulating the public services, including the classification of the Civil Services in India, the methods of their recruitment, their conditions of service, pay, and allowances and discipline and conduct."

The motion was put.

Mr. President : The " Ayes " have it.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : I ask for a division under Rule 53.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is challenging a division on an issue on which he has had the unanimous vote of the House.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : It was not a unanimous vote. I heard some " Noes ".

Mr. President : But a division has not been challenged.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : Further question proposed :

PART II.

" This Assembly is unable in view of the present financial condition of India and on the materials before it to satisfy itself as to the propriety and reasonableness of the recommendations of the Royal Commission in respect of the alleged grievances of those at present holding office in the Civil Services, and cannot with due regard to the interests of the tax-payer assent to the imposing of fresh burdens on the already overburdened finances of the country ;

But in view of the financial relief that will result from the stoppage of all recruitment outside India under the existing rules as recommended above in Part I ;

This Assembly is prepared to consider the alleged grievances of the present incumbents as regards pay, passages, concessions and pensions and recommends such measures of redress as may be found necessary and for that purpose it recommends to the Governor General in Council to take steps for the election of a committee by this House to enable them to go into the entire question on all the materials available to the Royal Commission including the evidence taken in camera or such other material as may be available and to make its recommendations to this House as early as possible."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The question is that this Resolution be the finding of the House.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : Sir, I want to ask whether the Honourable the Leader of the House will be prepared to say whether he can make up the time for questions, that was taken up by the debate to-day, on any other day and, if so, when ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I cannot say when, but on a short day.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Monday, the 15th September, 1924.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

ERECTION OF A PASSENGER SHED AT RASIDPUR ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

1842. *Mr. Ahmad Ali Khan : (a) Are Government aware that owing to the absence of a waiting room or shed of any kind at Rasidpur station (Assam Bengal Railway), passengers are compelled to wait in the open and thereby expose themselves to the inclemency of the weather at all seasons of the year ?

(b) Do Government propose to have a shed erected for the convenience of the passengers ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government understand that waiting accommodation for passengers at Rasidpur station is being provided and that the work will be put in hand shortly.

APPOINTMENT OF A COAL COMMISSION.

1843. *Mr. Ahmad Ali Khan : Is it a fact that a Coal Commission is going to be appointed in the near future ? If so, what will be the scope of the inquiry and the probable date of appointment ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : Government hope shortly to make an announcement on the subject.

FRACAS BETWEEN GURKHAS AND INDIAN EMPLOYEES OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1844. *Mr. Ahmad Ali Khan : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a serious affray at Howrah in which Indian employees of the East Indian Railway were attacked with kukries by some 200 Gurkhas of the watch and ward Department ?

(b) Will Government state if the Gurkhas are allowed to carry kukries even when they are employed in a civil capacity as watch and ward ?

(c) Will Government further state if any steps have been taken to prevent a similar occurrence in the future ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) No, they are forbidden to do so.

(c) Yes.

NUMBER OF QUESTIONS IN THE DELHI SESSION OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

1845. *Haji S. A. K. Jeelani : Will the Government be pleased to state the total number of questions received by the Legislative Department from the non-official Members of the Assembly at its Delhi session ?

Sir Henry Moncrieff Smith : Notice of 1,687 questions was received from non-official Members of the Assembly for the last Delhi session.

CONTRACT WITH THE MOND NICKEL COMPANY.

1845. Pandit Shamlal Nehru : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if any contract has been entered into by, or on behalf of, the Government of India with the Mond Nickel Company for the supply of all metal required for nickel coinage in use in India ? If so,

(b) for what period and at what rate has the said contract been entered into ?

(c) what was the market price of nickel at the date of the contract at the source of supply ?

(d) what is the said rate now ?

(e) was any attempt made to ascertain the market price of nickel in other markets and countries at the date of the contract ?

(f) what is the total quantity of nickel supplied annually by the Mond Co. since the commencement of the contract and the total amount paid by the Government therefor ?

(g) is it a fact that the Mond Nickel concern is wholly or partly owned by Sir Alfred Mond who was a member of Mr. Lloyd George's Cabinet ?

(h) what other interests have Sir Alfred Mond's firms acquired in India ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative. The subsequent portions do not therefore arise.

PROFITEERING BY DEALERS IN SALT.

1847. Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state since when the reduced rate of the salt tax, namely, Rs. 1-4-0 per maund has been in force ?

(b) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the fact that some dealers in salt continued to sell for a long time and at places are still selling salt at the enhanced rate of the year 1923 even after the restoration of the tax to its former level of Rs. 1-4-0 per maund ?

(c) Do the Government propose to take prompt steps to stop this sort of profiteering on the part of the salt dealers ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) From 1st March, 1924.

(b) Owing to the existence of duty paid stocks, the whole benefit of any reduction of duty does not immediately reach the consumer. This "lag" has varied in different places.

(c) Prices are now normal and there is no necessity for intervention by the Government.

FERRY SERVICE BETWEEN MONGHYR AND MONGHYR GHAT.

1848. Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : (a) With reference to the reply to a question by Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha given by Mr. A. A. L. Parsons on 1st February 1924, that the question of the dissatisfaction and hardship felt by the public owing to the perfunctory ferry arrangement between Monghyr and Monghyr Ghat would be referred to the Agent, East Indian Railway, will the Government be pleased to state what reply has been received from the Agent of the East Indian Railway Company ?

(b) Are the Government aware that the ferry rate charged at present is very high and that much public feeling exists on this matter at present ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Agent, East Indian Railway, states that he is not aware of dissatisfaction in the mind of the public regarding the present arrangements and he has received no complaints on the subject. The steamer can hold 761 passengers, whereas the maximum number carried during any one day of six months of last year was 742.

(b) No.

ABOLITION OF THE BRANCH POST OFFICE AT BETWAN BAZAR, MONGHYR.

1849. Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to inquire and state why the branch post office at Betwan Bazar within the town-area of Monghyr was discontinued some time ago ? Do the Government know that much inconvenience is felt by the public due to the discontinuance of the said branch office ?

(b) What is the reason that there should be no "second delivery" system in some of the quarters of the Monghyr town, e.g., Mirzapur, Bindwara, Mohaddipore and Kasim-Bazar ?

(c) Do the Government propose to remove this grievance of the Monghyr public at an early date ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) The post office, which was a sub-office—not a branch office—was closed because it was working at a substantial loss. A branch office has since been opened in the locality, as the result of representations made by the public to the Postmaster-General, Bihar and Orissa.

(b) There is no second delivery in any part of Monghyr town, since all mails (except those from one branch office), are received at 2-20 and 8-19 hours and are included in a single delivery which is issued at 10-30 hours.

(c) Government are of opinion that there is no grievance which calls for redress.

NAUTICAL SCHOOLS.

1850. Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : Will the Government be pleased to state how many nautical schools, if any, there are already in India to give training in the art of shipping to Indian youths ? When do the Government propose to give effect to the Report of the Mercantile Marine Committee ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : A school is maintained by Sir Mohamed Yusuf at Novha, Bombay, in which boys are trained in the handling of boats. The Bombay Government are also starting a school for lascars this month.

The Report of the Indian Mercantile Marine Committee is still under the consideration of Government.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Do Government propose to expedite action in the matter of the acceptance of the Resolution of this House under which a Committee was formed and has reported on this matter ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : Sir, I must ask the Honourable Member to repeat his question.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Will Government expedite that matter on which a report has already been submitted to this Assembly for a mercantile marine ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : I have already told the House that that Report is still under the consideration of Government. The House may depend upon it that we shall try to expedite consideration as much as possible.

AGREEMENT WITH THE MARCONI COMPANY FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF BEAM WIRELESS STATIONS.

1851. * Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether any agreement has been entered into with Marconis for the construction of beam wireless stations between the Dominions, Britain and India and whether the House of Commons approved of the agreement as announced by Reuter on the 1st August 1924 ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to place the agreement on the table and to state whether the Government of India intend seeking the approval of the Legislative Assembly in regard to the agreement so far as it relates to India ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. Chatterjee : (a) The Government of India understand that, with the approval of the House of Commons, the Imperial Government have entered into an agreement and contract with Marconis for the latter to erect such beam stations in the United Kingdom as the Imperial Government deem necessary, having regard to the extent to which beam stations are adopted in the Dominions and India.

(b) The agreement does not relate to India. The answer therefore is in the negative.

PRICE OF IMPORTED STEEL ON THE 1ST AUGUST 1924.

1852. * Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : Will the Government be pleased to state the price on the 1st of August 1924, of the various kinds of steel (per ton) mentioned in the Schedule to the Steel (Protection) Act, 1924 ?

The Honourable Sir Charles Innes : A statement is laid on the table showing the latest information available.

APPLICATIONS FROM CANDIDATES OF NON-ASIATIC DOMICILE FOR APPOINTMENTS IN THE ALL-INDIA SERVICES IN 1921, 1922 AND 1923.

1853. *Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : Will the Government be pleased to state (a) the number of applications received in England from applicants of non-Asiatic-domicile for appointments in the Indian Police Service in 1921, 1922, and 1923, and the number of vacancies filled up each year ? (b) The number of applicants of non-Asiatic-domicile who competed for the Indian Civil Service in 1921, 1922 and 1923 and the number of appointments made in England for the Service in each of those years ? (c) The number of applications received for each of the other All-India Services in England from applicants of non-Asiatic-domicile in 1921, 1922 and 1923 ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : Full particulars in respect of all the Services concerned are not available in India, but are being obtained from England.

MEMORANDA FURNISHED TO THE LEE COMMISSION BY THE CENTRAL AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS.

1854. *Diwan Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao : Will the Government be pleased to furnish the Members of the Assembly with the memoranda if any furnished to the Lee Commission by the various departments of the Local Governments in each province and by the departments of the Government of India and also the memoranda containing the views of the Local Governments and of the Government of India on the various points which formed the subject of enquiry by the Commission ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The Government of India understand that Local Governments did not furnish the Commission with departmental memoranda, but gave their opinions on the issues raised by the questionnaires. These opinions form part of the evidence of the Commission and cannot be published. The Government of India supplied the Commission with certain memoranda, but these were strictly confined to statements of fact and expressed no opinions. As however in many cases they contain correspondence with the Secretary of State which the Government of India are not authorised to publish, it is regretted that the memoranda cannot be supplied to Honourable Members.

RELEASE OF SARDAR KHARAK SINGH.

1855. *Lala Duni Chand: 1. (a) Will Government be pleased to state if an opinion has been asked from the Punjab Government on the subject of the case of Sardar Kharak Singh as promised by Sir Malcolm Hailey, the then Home Member, in reply to the Resolution regarding the release of Sardar Kharak Singh on 26th February 1924 ?

(b) If the reply to (a) be in the affirmative, will the Government please lay on the table the copy of the opinion received from the Punjab Government ?

2. Will Government be pleased to state the reasons for not giving effect to the Resolution regarding the release of Sardar Kharak Singh which was adopted by this House on 26th February 1924 ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : The Honourable Member is referred to the answer which I gave to Sardar Gulab Singh's unstarred question No. 306.

PERCENTAGE OF RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE ASSEMBLY TO WHICH EFFECT HAS BEEN GIVEN BY GOVERNMENT.

1856. *Lala Duni Chand : Will Government be pleased to inform the House what percentage of the Resolutions adopted by this House have been given effect to since the inauguration of the Reforms ?

Sir Henry Moncrieff Smith: The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the series of statements referred to in the answer given to Mr. K. V. Reddi's question No. 994 on the 24th March, 1924, which is printed at pages 2111 and 2112 of the Legislative Assembly Debates Volume IV, No. 37, and to the statement on pages 2261-2262 of the Assembly Debates dated the 27th May, 1924. The Honourable Member will doubtless be able to work out from these statements the percentage of the Resolutions given effect to by the Government since the inauguration of the Reforms.

RISE IN THE PRICE OF FOOD-STUFFS.

1857. *Lala Duni Chand: (a) Are Government aware that the prices of food-stuffs like wheat, gram, etc., have recently gone up very much and if so, is the rise of prices due to export to foreign countries ?

(b) If the facts stated in part (a) are correct, will Government be pleased to state to which countries food-stuffs are being exported, and in what quantity have they been exported so far, and how much more are they expected to be exported ?

2. Is it not a fact that the export of food-stuffs injuriously affects a large percentage of the poor population in this country and if so, what steps do Government propose to take to remove the sufferings of the poor population of this country caused by the export of food-stuffs ?

Mr. J. W. Bhore : (a) The Government are aware that the price of wheat has risen to some extent during recent months but the latest figures show a fall.

(b) Statistics of quantities of food-stuffs exported from India with their destination are to be found in the accounts of the Sea-borne Trade which are published monthly and are available in the Secretariat Library.

2. Government cannot subscribe to the suggestion contained in this part of the question. They see no grounds so far for taking any action in the direction indicated but are watching the situation.

FIXING OF PRICES OF COMMODITIES SOLD IN CANTONMENT BAZAARS.

1858. *Lala Duni Chand : (a) Are Government aware that the prices of various articles sold daily in the bazaar of Kasauli Cantonment are fixed for a fortnight and any person infringing the schedule of rates so fixed is invariably reported for action and punished ?

(b) Is it a fact that the same practice prevails more or less in other Cantonments also ?

(c) Are Government aware that there is generally a fluctuation in the prices of various articles in the Indian bazaars and the prices cannot remain stationary for a fortnight ?

(d) Is there any rule or law that authorizes the Cantonment authorities to fix prices in such a manner, and if so will the Government quote that rule or law ?

(e) If the facts, as stated in (a), (b) and (c) are correct, do the Government propose to take steps to redress this grievance of the persons concerned ?

Mr. E. Burdon : (a) Government understand that the Cantonment Authority, Kasauli, publishes at intervals a list of the prices of articles. It is reported that since the Cantonment Act, 1924, became law no action has been taken against anyone for selling articles at higher rates than those published.

(b) Government have no information on the point

(c) Government are aware that prices fluctuate.

(d) There is no rule or law authorising cantonment authorities to fix prices.

(e) Government propose to inform all cantonment authorities that any lists of prices that they may publish can only be regarded as a guide to intending purchasers and that action cannot be taken against vendors for selling at prices higher than those notified.

SUPPRESSION OF THE OPIUM TRAFFIC.

1859. Lala Duni Chand : 1. (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to an extract from a letter written by an American lady to Mahatma Gandhi, published in " The Young India " of 31st July 1924, in which she, on the strength of a quotation from a bulletin, issued by the British Society for the suppression of the opium trade, says :

" India is still permitted to supply five Eastern Governments with as much opium as they officially ask for, that in spite of the boasting that she does not sell the drug to private persons in those five countries, by agreement she drenches them with narcotics, which find their way by smugglers into China, and that while a Dangerous Drug Act forbidding the unlicensed possession of opium and its derivatives is passed for England, the British India Government yet maintains this scandalous and nefarious traffic " ?

(b) Are the facts stated in part (a) correct, and is the indictment brought by the British Society for the suppression of the opium trade against the Government of India true ?

2. Are Government prepared to take any steps or adopt measures to remove or extenuate the existing state of things in the matter of manufacture and export of opium to other countries ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : 1. (a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) No. The accusation is on the face of it a hysterical misrepresentation of the facts and entirely false both in its substance and in its implications.

2. The Government of India are strictly complying with their obligations under the Hague Opium Convention in the matter of export of opium and are not prepared to take further action independently of these obligations. If the importing Governments concerned decide to restrict the amount imported, the exports from India will be automatically reduced. The fact that this involves a further reduction in the revenues of the Government of India, which have already been greatly reduced by the action voluntarily taken by the Government of India, will not for a moment be allowed to affect the Government's attitude. But it is for the other Governments concerned, if they think that the opium imported is not being put to legitimate uses—of which I have no evidence—and not for the Government of India, to take action. Indeed action by the Government of India would seem to involve an unwarrantable slur on the good faith and capacity of the other Governments in question.

Dr. H. S. Gour : May I beg to inquire, in view of the fact that the Government of India adhere to the Hague Opium Convention, what steps they have taken to assure themselves of the fact that the non-export of Indian opium does not stop the consumption of opium and that there has not been a large production of indigenous opium in China which replaces exported Indian opium, thereby entailing upon the Indian revenue a considerable loss which is not justified by the correspondingly reduced consumption of opium in the countries to which exports from India were previously made ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I think that the Honourable gentleman is correct in suggesting that the results of the stoppage of export of opium from India hitherto have been somewhat disappointing. It is very doubtful if there has been any decrease in the consumption of opium in China and there has been a large increase in the exports of opium from Persia and Turkey.

Dr. H. S. Gour : And the local growth of opium, the local cultivation of opium reported in all the papers of India.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I implied that in my answer.

NUMBER OF WIDOWS IN INDIA.

1860. Dr. H. S. Gour : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the statement by Mrs. Wemyss Grant, M.D., and published in the Statesman of July 31, 1924, to the effect that no less than a million and a half of girls in each generation suffer from enforced widowhood at the age of ten ; and that five in every thousand of the female population are widows below the age of ten ; sixteen are widows between the ages of ten and fifteen ; and forty-one widows between the ages of fifteen and twenty ?

(b) Is the statement correct ?

(c) If not, what are the correct figures ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : (a) The answer is in the negative.

(b) and (c). The Honourable Member is referred to Table VII in Vol. I, Part II (Tables) Census of India, 1921, and to Chapter VII, Part I of the Report.

CONSTITUTIONAL REFORMS.

1861. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Will the Government be pleased to state, with reference to the answer to my supplementary question to question No. 1225 of the 4th June last whether they will lay on the table of the House :

(i) the Report of the Muddiman Committee referred to in the press communiqué of the 18th May last,

(ii) the Memorandum referred to in the press communique of the 23rd May last,

(iii) opinions submitted by the Local Governments called for by the Government of India upon the Resolution carried in the Assembly on 18th February last and in pursuance of the undertaking given by Sir Malcolm Hailey to the House at the time,

(iv) the further material placed before the Committee now sitting and the questionnaire calling for evidence and opinions of responsible and representative Indians ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : Government are at present unable to accede to the request of the Honourable Member.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know when it will be possible for the Government to accede to the request ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : When they have received the report of the Committee, they will be able to consider the question.

CONSULTATION WITH THE LEGISLATURE IN CASES OF ALTERATION OF THE STATUTORY RULES.

†1862. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(1) with reference to the reply of the Government to questions No. 1291 and No. 1350 on the 5th and 6th June last,

(i) whether the Secretary of State or the Government of India or both considered the " desirability of consulting the Indian Legislature " with reference to the new Statutory Rules contained in No. F.-76-I.|24-A., Legislative Department published in the Gazette Extraordinary of the 21st July in accordance with the procedure set out by the Under Secretary of State in the House of Commons in May last,

(ii) if so, what the result of that joint or separate consideration was;

(iii) and what the reasons, if any, were that induced the Government to ignore the Legislatures ;

(iv) whether it is to be understood as the Government's settled policy that the Legislatures should not in such case of alteration in Statutory Rules be consulted at all ?

NEW RULES RELATING TO SUPPLEMENTARY GRANTS.

1863. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : (1) Will the Government be pleased to state :

(i) whether they intend immediately to avail themselves of the new Rules as to supplementary grants in the Assembly in respect of any of the rejected or reduced grants which were expressly left unrestored by the Governor General in March last ? If so, what would be the heads of demands so dealt with ?

† For answer to this question—see below question No. 1663.

(ii) If not, what were the circumstances that necessitated the urgent framing of these new Rules and their notification in a Gazette Extraordinary and what were the reasons that induced the decision, if any, not to consult the Assembly before making them ?

(2) Will the Government be pleased to state whether before making the Rules they satisfied themselves that there was any parallel or precedent or support in principle in the practice and procedure of any other Legislatures within the Empire, for the making of such Rules, or that there was any instance in any of those Legislatures in which excess or supplementary grants were made to mean re-grants of grants once refused or reduced ; if not, do they now propose to do so and report the result to the Secretary of State for submission to Parliament ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I have nothing to add to the reply given by me to Mr. Neogy's question No. 1735, dated the 3rd September 1924, relating to the same subject. This reply also covers the Honourable Member's question No. 1863.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Question No. 1863.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member said that the answer to question No. 1862 covers also No. 1863.

THE KRISHNASAGARA AND METUR PROJECTS.

1864. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Will the Government be pleased to state with reference to their answers to my question No. 1345 on the 6th June last and the supplementary questions thereon :

(i) Whether the " necessary inquiry " promised in the last reply on the matter was made and if so, with what result ?

(ii) Whether the matter of the immediate publication of the agreement between the Mysore and Madras Government regarding the Krishnasagara Dam received " due consideration " at the hands of the Government of India as promised by Sir B. N. Mitra and if so, when and with what result ?

(iii) Whether the publication of the agreement was purposely delayed till the Secretary of State's assent was obtained and so as to put it beyond the power of the landholders concerned to make reasoned and renewed representations ; if not, what was the reason for delaying its publication till after the Secretary of State had signified his approval thereof ?

(iv) When the Government of India sanctioned the Metur Project and when they approved the estimates ?

(v) Whether they at any time applied or authorised the Madras Government to apply for permission to carry out this Project lower down the river Cauvery and within wholly British territory ?

BASIS OF THE RECRUITMENT CALCULATION SUPPLIED TO THE LEE COMMISSION.

1865. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar: (a) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the calculations which were supplied to the Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services referred to in paragraph 35 of their Report which would enable recruitment on the scale recommended by them of Indians and Europeans and produce a 50 to 50 cadre in about fifteen years ; and

(b) Will the Government be pleased to explain on what basis it has been assumed that there would be a future rate of retirement amongst officers, of not less than 10 per cent above the normal ; and will the Government also lay on the table of the House all the information upon which this assumption and the calculations referred to have been made ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman: The calculations referred to were not supplied by the Government of India to the Royal Commission and have not been communicated to the Government of India by the Royal Commission. The Government of India, however, have subsequently examined the question for themselves. Calculating on the basis of the number of officers now in the Indian Civil Service and the normal rate of retirement to be expected, it may be anticipated that 738 European officers out of a total of 1,111 will have retired after 15 years, leaving 373 still serving of those now in the Service. The full number of European recruits required on the proposals of the Lee Commission is about 22 annually, which would mean 330 in 15 years. But it is evident that this year we shall be about 15 short in European recruitment. Therefore assuming that in future our requirements are met in full we shall get about 315 recruits in 15 years. Some of these will become casualties, and the addition to our European strength at the end of 15 years would not be much above 300. Adding this to the 373 officers still expected to be serving, the total European strength after 15 years appears likely to be about 675 out of a sanctioned strength of 1350 or exactly one half. This, however, makes no allowance for the rate of retirement above the normal. It appears to the Government of India on the whole that the Royal Commission have understated rather than overstated the rapidity in the process of Indianization in the Indian Civil Service to be anticipated from their recommendations. The reference by the Commission to a rate of retirement 10 per cent. above the normal is understood by the Government of India to mean that instead of taking the normal rate of decrease of about 4 per cent. annually, they would have assumed a rate of about 4.4 per cent.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Are the Government of India in a position to state as to whether the assumption of retirements of 10 per cent. above the normal includes retirements which might take place on political grounds ?

The Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman : I think it is assumed to deal with the possibility of short recruitment.

(c) whether Government have abandoned the intention of punishing guilty parties if any in connection with the failure of the Alliance Bank of Simla ?
